Harvard College Library

FROM THE FUND GIVEN BY Stephen Salisbury
Class of 1817
OF WORCESTER, MASSACHUSETTS
For Greek and Latin Literature
JUPITER
(Vatican Museum, Rome)
OVID

Selected Works

WITH NOTES AND VOCABULARY

EDITED BY

FRANK J. MILLER, PH.D.
PROFESSOR OF LATIN IN THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

NEW YORK :: CINCINNATI :: CHICAGO
AMERICAN BOOK COMPANY
PREFACE

A statistical table furnished by the United States Commissioner of Education, covering the years 1889–1898, gives some interesting evidence as to the number and percentage of pupils studying Latin in the public and private secondary schools of the United States. In the year 1889–1890, 100,144 students, or 33.62 per cent of the whole number, studied Latin. During the succeeding period of eight years the number and percentage of Latin students steadily increased, until, in 1897–1898, 274,293 students, or 49.44 per cent of the above number, were studying Latin. This increase, in the face of the fact that the secondary curriculum has been enriched by other subjects which have justly claimed large attention from the schools, is cause for congratulations to classical scholars.

The same decade has witnessed the awakening of an unusual interest in the Latin program itself, and a widespread endeavor to enrich and render it more effective. This is especially evident in the work of the first year, the great importance of which to the succeeding work of the student is self-evident. Traditional books and methods have been challenged; and while neither the ideal method nor book has yet been put forth, a very substantial advance has been made toward the solution of the problem as to the best method of introducing the young student to the study of Latin. The latter half of the first year and the second of a four years' course have also claimed serious attention and revision. More reading, which shall be at the same time more interesting and less difficult, is demanded. As a consequence, the Latin program is providing more and more suitable reading supplementary to Caesar. The place of Cicero and Vergil in the third and fourth years has not been seriously questioned, although the same requirement for supplementary rapid reading has been made. This requirement has generally been met by selections from Ovid, whose poems, on account of their attractive interest and clear, easy style, are especially adapted to the needs of this grade.

Notwithstanding this progress, there still remains much to be desired in the study of Roman life and literature as such. The study of the Latin language needs to be vivified, on the one hand, by a knowledge of the life and manners of those who used it in their daily intercourse, and, on the other, by a larger acquaintance with the literature which grew out of this life, and which has been preserved to us. It is granted that these studies should not and cannot displace the study of the technique of the language in the early part of the course; but when it is remembered that a large percentage of secondary school pupils end their formal studies with graduation from these schools, it is plain that such a course should include a clear view, at least in the large, of Roman life and letters. This can be gained, without too great encroachment upon purely linguistic work, if the teacher seizes such opportunities for instruction in Roman life as present themselves in the class work itself; and if, in connection with each author studied, some attention is paid to the style and contents of his works as literature and to their place in the great body of Roman letters.

As to the works of Ovid, the writer is under the strong impression that they deserve a much larger place in the secondary curriculum than they have yet received. They abound in those old world stories of myth and tradition of which all literatures since their time are full, and ignorance of which makes many a page even of our own literature meaningless to the reader. These poems abound also in pictures of the poet's own life and the manners of his day, in allusion to his contemporaries, and pictures of his surroundings both in Italy and in the bleak land of his exile; they contain also a formal account of Roman festivals arranged in the order of their occurrence, with the traditional origin and meaning of these,—all told with an elegance of diction and a racy style that make the reading attractive and delightful to the student.

Any edition of selections from the works of an author is unsatisfactory, for it is possible for the student to read these without any knowledge, or at least a very hazy and insufficient one, of the setting of the selections and the contents and character of the whole work. And yet it would be manifestly impossible to present the complete works of Ovid as a text-book. The present edition strives to obviate this difficulty by two means. Selection is made from all the different works of the poet, with a preliminary note upon the character and contents of each work and a statement of the setting of each selection; in the case of the Metamorphoses, not only does an analysis in English precede the different selections, but all omitted parts are given in epitome, each in its proper place. The student has in his hands, therefore, a recapitulation of the whole series of stories, and is enabled to see, as would not be possible under another arrangement, how the poet has skillfully connected the long array of stories, reaching from the creation down to his own time.

The poetic form of Ovid's work is presented from the standpoint of the beginner, so that if these selections be taken up in the third or even the second year an easy introduction may be obtained to this important subject. On the other hand, the presentation is made full enough to be of profit to the advanced student who may desire to make a more intensive study of Ovid's poetic form.

The notes aim to give abundant assistance to the student in translation and syntax of more difficult passages, to give such explanation as is necessary of historical and archæological references, and to show by quotations from English literature something of the wide influence which Ovid has had upon the world of letters since his time. An attempt has also been made to trace the progress of the more important stories through their earlier presentations by the Greek authors, their Roman restatements, and their later revival by the English poets. Much of this material may be considered as in advance of the needs of the younger pupils of the secondary school, and as more pertinent to the uses of the college student. The writer, while conscious of this, is still of the opinion that young students often have a clearer insight and a larger appreciation than is usually credited to them; while, on the other hand, more advanced students may be led by these suggestions to further investigation along the same lines.

The vocabulary has been especially prepared for this edition, and contains both the literal meanings of the words and their various tropical meanings found in these selections. The indicated derivations will also be found helpful to the understanding of the words.

The illustrations are nearly all from ancient classical sources, and have been selected by the writer especially for this work from the galleries of Italy. Especial attention of the student is called to the mythological stories in stone as seen in the sarcophagi, showing how powerfully these stories took possession of the sculptor as well as the poet.

The writer takes this opportunity to express his obligation to Miss Eleanor Sherwin, formerly reader in Latin in the University of Chicago, for valuable assistance in the notes and vocabulary.

FRANK J. MILLER.
TABLE OF CONTENTS

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS .......................... 9
THE LIFE OF OVID (Tristia, IV, IO) ........... 11
NOTE ON HEROIDES ............................ 17
SELECTION FROM HEROIDES (X. Ariadne to Theseus) 18
NOTE ON AMORES .............................. 23
SELECTIONS FROM AMORES:
The poet's introduction to amatory verse (I, 1) .... 23
His impassioned wooing (I, III) .................. 24 Immortality of the poet's fame (I, XV) ........... 25
An elegy on a dead parrot (II, VI) ............... 26
To Corinna upon the dangers of a voyage at sea (II, XI) 29
To a swollen river which has stopped his journey (III, VI) 30
The poet's farewell to the loves (III, XV) ........ 32
NOTE ON ARS AMATORIA ....................... 34
SELECTIONS FROM ARS AMATORIA:
The poet is master of the art of love ............ 34
The story of the rape of the Sabine women .......... 34
A warning against jealousy; the story of Procris and Cephalus 36
NOTE ON REMEDIA AMORIS .................... 38
SELECTIONS FROM REMEDIA AMORIS ............ 38
NOTES ON TRAGEDY ............................ 42
NOTE ON FASTI ............................... 46
SELECTIONS FROM FASTI:
January: dedication to Germanicus; history, functions, and attributes of Janus .... 46
February: the derivation of the word; the setting of the Dolphin, and the story of Arion .... 50
March: sacred to Mars; March once the first month of the year; the fatal Ides .... 53
April: sacred to Venus; derivation of the word; the shepherd's prayer to Pales .... 56
May: the story of Chiron and Hercules .... 59
June: the feast and worship of Vesta, her temple and name .... 60
NOTE ON METAMORPHOSES ..................... 63
SELECTIONS FROM METAMORPHOSES:
The story of creation ............................ 64
The golden age and degeneration of man .... 67
TABLE OF CONTENTS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The destruction of man by flood</td>
<td>70</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The saved pair, and the repeopling of the earth</td>
<td>75</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Daphne is changed to a laurel tree</td>
<td>79</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Io is changed to a heifer</td>
<td>84</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The story of Phaëthon and the chariot of the sun</td>
<td>91</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cadmus founds the city of Thebes</td>
<td>103</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The story of Narcissus</td>
<td>109</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pyramus and Thisbe</td>
<td>113</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Juno visits the lower world</td>
<td>117</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Perseus and Andromeda</td>
<td>119</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Perseus slays his enemies with the Gorgon’s head</td>
<td>122</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The rape of Proserpina, and Ceres’ wanderings in search of her</td>
<td>124</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Arethusa is changed into a fountain</td>
<td>130</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Emathides are changed into magpies</td>
<td>132</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The impious pride of Niobe, and the destruction of her children</td>
<td>134</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jason wins the golden fleece through the aid of Medea</td>
<td>140</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Medea renews the youth of Jason’s father by her magic arts</td>
<td>146</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Daedalus and Icarus</td>
<td>151</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Philemon and Baucis, a proof of the prosperity of the righteous</td>
<td>155</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The battle of Hercules and Acheloüs</td>
<td>158</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The death and apotheosis of Hercules</td>
<td>162</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Orpheus and Eurydice</td>
<td>167</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Midas and the golden touch</td>
<td>170</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Iphigenia at Aulis</td>
<td>174</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The death of Achilles</td>
<td>176</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The contest of Ajax and Ulysses for the armor of Achilles</td>
<td>178</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The death of Polyxena</td>
<td>192</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Acis and Galatea; or, the Cyclops’ wooing</td>
<td>194</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Some tenets of the Pythagorean philosophy</td>
<td>201</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The death and apotheosis of Caesar</td>
<td>207</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Note on Tristia and Epistulæ ex Ponto  212

Selections from Tristia:

- The last sad night in Rome (I, III)                                  213
- A letter to his wife from the poet’s sick chamber (III, III)         216
- His gratitude to a faithful friend at Rome (V, IX)                   219

Selection from Epistulæ ex Ponto (I, II)                           221

The Poetic Form of Ovid’s Works                                    227

Notes upon the Selections                                          243

Vocabulary                                                         417
LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS

JUPITER, from a bust in the Vatican Museum at Rome .... Frontispiece

CUPID AND BOW, from a painting by Franceschini (1648–1729) in the Uffizi Gallery at Florence .... 33

MELPOMENE, MUSE OF TRAGEDY, from a statue in the Vatican Museum at Rome .... Facing 42

TRAGIC AND COMIC MASKS, from a mosaic in the Capitoline Museum
at Rome .... 45

A VESTAL VIRGIN, from a statue of a Vestalis Maxima found in the House of the Vestals at Rome .... 62

THE CREATION OF MAN, from a sarcophagus in the National Museum
at Naples .... 67

MERCURY, from a bronze statue in the National Museum at Naples
Facing 87

JUNO, from a statue in the National Museum at Naples .... Facing 117

MINERVA, from a statue in the National Museum at Naples .... Facing 133

THE DESTRUCTION OF THE CHILDREN OF NIobe, from a sarcophagus
in the Vatican Museum at Rome .... 136

THE GODDESS BONA COPIA, from a statue in the Vatican Museum at Rome .... Facing 161

A PROCESSION OF BACCHANALS, from a sarcophagus in the National Museum at Naples .... 170

A BATTLE WITH THE AMAZONS, from a sarcophagus in the Vatican Museum at Rome .... 177

AESCULAPIUS, from a statue in the Vatican Museum at Rome Facing 206

THE CALYDONIAN HUNT, from a sarcophagus in the Capitoline Museum
at Rome .... 211

9
THE LIFE OF OVID

[Probably no Roman writer has revealed himself more frankly in his works than has Publius Ovidius Naso. Indeed, the greater part of our knowledge of him is gained from his writings. References to his parentage, his early education, his friends, his work, his manner of life, his reverses,—all lie scattered freely through his pages. And, not content with this, he has taken care to leave to posterity a somewhat extended and formal account of his life, an example which we cannot but wish that all our favorite Roman authors had followed. This account, which he wrote during his period of exile (Tristia, IV. 10), is here given, that thus our poet may tell to his readers his own story,—a story which is made all the more enjoyable since we find ourselves personally addressed in the opening lines:]

Illae ego qui fuerim, tenerorum lusor amorum,
Quem legis, ut noris, accipe posteritas.

[We next are told the place and time of the poet's birth, his social rank, and something of his family.]

Sulmo mihi patria est, gelidis uberrimus undis, Milia qui novies distat ab Urbe decem.
5 Editus hic ego sum; nec non ut tempora noris,
Cum cecidit fato consul uterque pari.
Siquid id est, usque a proavis vetus ordinis heres,
Non modo fortunae munere factus eques.
Nec stirps prima fui; genito sum fratre creatus,
10 Qui tribus ante quater mensibus ortus erat.
Lucifer amborum natalibus adfuit idem;
Una celebrata est per duo liba dies:
Haec est armiferae festis de quinque Minervae,
Quae fieri pugna prima cruenta solet.
The Life of Ovid

[His early bent was towards poetry; but this was opposed by his practical father, who desired that both his sons should prepare for the profession of the law.]

15 Protinus excolimur teneri, curaque parentis
   Imus ad insignes Urbis ab arte viros.
   Frater ad eloquium viridi tendebat ab aevo,
   Fortia verbosi natus ad arma fori;
   At mihi iam puero caelestia sacra placebant,
   20 Inque suum furtim Musa trahebat opus.
   Saepe pater dixit ‘Studium quid inutile temptas?
   Maeonides nullas ipse reliquit opes.’
   Motus eram dictis, totoque Helicone relictto Scribere temptabam verba soluta modis.
   25 Sponte sua carmen numeros veniebat ad aptos,
   Et quod temptabam scribere, versus erat.

[The two brothers came to the age of manhood, and shortly thereafter the elder died. Our poet now assumed the garb and duties of a Roman citizen.]

Interea tacito passu labentibus annis Liberior fratri sumpta mihique toga est,
   Induiturque umeris cum lato purpura clavo,
   30 Et studium nobis quod fuit ante, manet.
   Iamque decem vitae frater geminaverat annos,
   Cum perit, et coepi parte carere mei.
   Cepimus et tenerae primos aetatis honores,
   Eque viris quondam pars tribus una fui.

[But, to a man of Ovid’s tastes and temperament, the life of a statesman was utterly distasteful; and, now that he was his own master, he gave loose rein to his poetic fancy.]

35 Curia restabat. Clavi mensura coacta est:
   Maius erat nostris viribus illud onus.
THE LIFE OF OVID

Nec patiens corpus, nec mens fuit apta labori,
Sollicitaeque fugax ambitionis eram,
Et petere Aoniae suadebant tuta sorores
40 Otia, iudicio semper amata meo.

[He soon gained admission to the choice circle of the poets of his day, paying unlimited devotion to the masters of his art, and quickly becoming himself the object of no small admiration on the part of younger poets.]

Temporis illius colui fovique poëtas,
Quotque aderant vates, rebar adesse deos.
Saepe suas volucres legit mihi grandior aevo,
Quaeque nocet serpens, quae iuvat herba, Macer.
45 Saepe suos solitus recitare Propertius ignes, Iure sodalicio qui mihi iunctus erat.
Ponticus heroë, Bassus quoque clarus iambis Dulcia convictus membra fuere mei;
Et tenuit nostras numerosus Horatius aures, 50 Dum ferit Ausonia carmina culta lyra.
Vergilium vidi tantum; nec amara Tibullo
Tempus amicitiae fata dedere meae.
Successor fuit hic tibi, Galle; Propertius illi;
Quartus ab his serie temporis ipse fui.
55 Utque ego maiores, sic me coluere minores,
Notaque non tarde facta Thalia mea est.

[His youthful poems soon gained fame among the people also, and his love songs became the popular lyrics of the street.]

Carmina cum primum populo iuvenilia legi,
Barba resecta mihi bisve semelve fuit.
Moverat ingenium totam cantata per Urbem
60 Nomine non vero dicta Corinna mihi.
Multa quidem scripsi; sed quae vittiosa putavi,
Emendaturis ignibus ipse dedi.
Tunc quoque, cum fugerem, quaedam placitura crèmavi,
Iratus studio carminibusque meis.

[Though extremely susceptible to the influences of love, he could proudly boast that his name was above reproach. He contracted two unhappy marriages in his youth, but his third marriage was a lasting joy to him.]

65 Molle Cupidineis nec inexpugnabile telis
   Cor mihi, quodque levis causa moveret, erat.
   Cum tamen hic essem, minimoque accenderer igni,
   Nomine sub nostro fabula nulla fuit.
   Paene mihi puero nec digna nec utilis uxor
   Est data, quae tempus per breve nupta fuit.
   Ilii successit, quamvis sine crimine coniunx,
   Non tamen in nostro firma futura toro.
   Ultima, quae mecum seros permansit in annos,
   Sustinuit coniunx exsulis esse viri.
70 Filia mea mea bis prima fecunda iuventa,
   Sed non ex uno coniuge, fecit avum.

[And now his father and his mother died. The poet, while deeply mourning their loss with true filial devotion, still cannot but rejoice that they died before that disgrace came upon him which was to darken his own life and the lives of all whom he loved.]

Et iam compleverat genitor sua fata, novemque
Addiderat lustris altera lustra novem.
Non aliter flevi, quam me fleturus ademptum
80 Ille fuit. Matri proxima iusta tuli.
Felices ambo tempestiveque sepulti,
   Ante diem poenae quod periere meae!
   Me quoque felicem, quod non viventibus illis
   Sum miser, et de me quod doluere nihil!
85 Si tamen extinctis aliquid nisi nomina restant,
   Et gracilis structos effugit umbra rogos:
THE LIFE OF OVID 15

Fama, parentales, si vos mea contigit, umbrae,
   Et sunt in Stygio crimina nostra foro:
Scite, precor, causam — nec vos mihi fallere fas est —
90   Errorem iussae, non scelus, esse fugae.

[For now, as the frosts of age were beginning to whiten his locks, a sudden calamity fell upon him, no less than an imperial decree against him of perpetual banishment to the far off shores of the Euxine sea. The cause of this decree he only hints at, as being already well known to his friends; but he gives us to understand (l. 90) that it is an error of judgment and not of the heart.]

Manibus hoc satis est. Ad vos, studiosa, revertor, Pectora, quae vitae quaeeritis acta meae.
Iam mihi canities pulsis melioribus annis
   Venerat, antiquas miscueratque comas,
95 Postque meos ortus Pisaea vinctus oliva
   Abstulerat decies praemia victor equus,
Cum maris Euxini positos ad laeva Tomitas
   Quaeerere me laesi principis ira iubet.
Causa meae cunctis nimium quoque nota ruinæ
100   Indicio non est testificanda meo.
Quid referam comitumque nefas famulosque nocentes?

[And now, far from home and friends and the delights of his beloved Rome, he was forced to live in a rigorous climate, an unlovely land, and amidst a society of uncultured semi-savages.]

Ipsa multa tuli non leviara fuga.
Indignata malis mens est succumbere, seque
   Praestitit invictam, viribus usa suis;
105 Oblitusque mei ductaeque per otia vitae
   Insolita cepi temporis arma manu.
Totque tuli casus pelago terraque, quot inter
   Occultum stellae conspicuumque polum.
Tacta mihi tandem longis erroribus acto
110   Iuncta pharetratis Sarmatis ora Getis.
Hic ego finitimis quamvis circumsoner armis,
Tristia, quo possum, carmine fata levo.
Quod quamvis nemo est, cuius referatur ad aures,
Sic tamen absumo decipioque diem.

Ergo quod vivo, durisque laboribus obsto,
Nec me sollicitae taedia lucis habent,
Gratia, Musa, tibi! nam tu solacia praebes,
Tu curae requies, tu medicina venis.

Tu dux et comes es; tu nos abducis ab Histro,

In mediique mihi das Helicone locum.

Tu mihi, quod rarum est, vivo sublime dedisti
Nomen, ab exsequiis quod dare fama solet.
Nec qui detractat praesentia, Livor iniquo
Ullum de nostris dente momordit opus.

Nam tulerint magnos cum saecula nostra poëtas,
Non fuit ingenio fama maligna meo.
Cumque ego praeponam multos mihi, non minor illis
Dicor et in toto plurimus orbe legor.

Si quid habent igitur vatrum praesagia veri,

Protinus ut moriar, non ero, terra, tuus.
Sive favore tuli, sive hanc ego carmine famam,
Iure tibi grates, candide lector, ago.

[Though Ovid says (ii. 103 seq.) that he strove to bear his misfortunes with a manly fortitude, the poems of his exile, the Tristia and Epistles from Pontus, abound in plaintive lamentations at his hard lot, petitions to his friends in Rome, and unmanly subserviency to Augustus, and later to Tiberius, in the hope of gaining his recall. These, however, were all in vain, and he died at Tomi, his place of exile, in A.D. 18, after a banishment of nine years.]
[The works of Ovid may be broadly divided into three classes, corresponding to three periods in his life: the works of his youth, of the prime of his life prior to his banishment, and of his last years spent in exile.

His earlier works are all in the elegiac measure and amatory in character. The order of these cannot be determined with exactness. It is possible that he may have been working upon them all at intervals during this period. However this may be, it has been thought that the Heroides, or 'Epistles of Heroines,' are his earliest work. They are a series of fictitious letters, purporting to be written by certain love-lorn princesses of the mythical age to the estranged objects of their affections. They are pervaded with a spirit of ideality, and are full of the fresh vigor of youth. While the general situation in all is the same, still the details are as varied as the characters. It is as if the poet would present ideal pictures of all possible phases of a "great love despised." These letters are highly polished in style; and, although the somewhat unnatural prolongation of the woes of the heroines detracts from their interest, still these letters have always been the most popular of Ovid's works. This is without doubt owing to their highly dramatic character, and to the romantic nature of their subject, a theme which has never failed to claim the sympathetic interest of the reader.

The epistles are twenty-one in number, six of which are of doubtful authenticity. Those which are considered as undoubtedly from Ovid's hand are as follows:

Penelope to Ulysses, Phillis to Demophoön, Briseis to Achilles, Phaedra to Hippolytus, Oenone to Paris, Hypsipyle to Jason, Dido to Aeneas, Hermione to Orestes, Deianira to Hercules, Ariadne to Theseus, Canace to Macareus, Medea to Jason, Laodamia to Protesilaüs, Hypermnestra to Lyceus, and Sappho to Phaon.

The tenth letter, purporting to be sent from Ariadne to Theseus, is sufficiently representative of the whole series.

OVID — 2

17
Ariadne was the daughter of Minos, king of Crete. This monarch, in vengeance for the death of his son Androgeos, had exacted from the Athenians a tribute of seven youths and seven maidens who were to be sent every nine years to Crete, to be devoured by the monster Minotaur. Theseus, son of Aegeus, king of Athens, offered himself to be of this number of youths, and went to Crete with the purpose of slaying the Minotaur. This object he accomplished, and made his way in safety out of the mazy labyrinth in which the monster was confined, by the aid of a clew which Ariadne had given him. For she had seen and loved the Athenian hero when he was presented among the others at her father’s court. Theseus, promising marriage to the princess, fled with her from Crete. But landing at Naxos or Dia, he deserted her in the night and sailed away to Athens. In the gray dawn she discovers that she is alone, and descries his sail just vanishing on the distant horizon. This crisis is the setting of the letter which follows.

Mitius inveni quam te genus omne ferarum:
Credita non ulli quam tibi peius eram.
Quae legis, ex illo, Theseu, tibi litore mitto,
Unde tuam sine me vela tulere ratem,
5 In quo me somnusque meus male prodidit et tu,
Per facinus somnis insidiate meis.
Tempus erat, vitrea quo primum terra pruina
Spargitur et tectae fronde queruntur aves;
Incertum vigilans a somno languida movi
10 Thesea prenuras semisupina manus:
Nullus erat! referoque manus iterumque retempto
Perque torum moveo brachia: nullus erat!
Excussero metus somnum; conterrata surgo,
Membraque sunt viduo praecipitata toro.
15 Protinus adductis sonuerunt pectora palmis,
Utque erat e somno turbida, raptà coma est.
Luna fuit: specto, siquid nisi litora cernam;
Quod videant oculi, nil nisi litus habent.
Nunc huc, nunc illuc, et utroque sine ordine curro;
20 Alta puellares tardat harena pedes.
Interea toto clamavi in litore 'Theseu!'
Reddebant nomen concava saxa tuum,
Et quotiens ego te, totiens locus ipse vocabat:
Ipse locus miserae ferre volebat opem.

Mons fuit: apparent frutices in vertice rari;
Nunc scopulus raucis pendet adesus aquis:
Ascendo (viros animus dabat) atque ita late Aequora prospectu metior alta meo.
Inde ego (nam ventis quoque sum crudelibus usa)

Vidi praecipiti carbasa tenta Noto:
Aut vidi aut tamquam quae me vidisse putarem —
Frigidior glacie semiaminisque fui.
Nec languere diu patitur dolor; excitor illo, Excitor et summa Thesea voce voco.

'Quo fugis?' exclamo 'scelerate reverttere Theseu, Flecte ratem! numerum non habet illa suum.'
Haec ego; quod voci deerat, plangore replebam:
Verbera cum verbis mixta fuere meis.
Si non audieres, ut saltem cernere posses,

Iactatae late signa dedere manus,
Candidaque imposui longae velamina virgae,
Scilicet oblitos admonitura mei.
Iamque oculus ereptus eras: tum denique flevi;
Torpuerant molles ante dolore genae.

Quid potius facerent, quam me mea lumina flerent,
Postquam desierant vela videre tua?
Aut ego diffusis erravi sola capillis,
Qualis ab Ogygio concita Baccha deo,
Aut mare prospiciens in saxo frigida sedi,

Quamque lapis sedes, tam lapis ipsa fui.
Saepe torum repeto, qui nos acceperat ambos,
Sed non acceptos exhibiturus erat,

Et tua, quae possum, pro te vestigia tango
Strataque, quae membris intepuere tuis.

Incumbo lacrimisque toro manante profusis
   'Pressimus' exclamo 'te duo: rede duos!
Venimus huc ambo: cur non discedimus ambo?
   Perfide, pars nostri, lectule, maior ubi est?'
   Quid faciam? quo sola ferar? vacat insula cultu:
   Non hominum video, non ego facta boum.
   Omne latus terrae cingit mare; navita nusquam,
   Nulla per ambiguas puppis itura vias.
   Finge dari comitesque mihi ventosque ratemque.
   Quid sequar? accessus terra paterna negat.

Ut rate felici pacata per aequora labar,
   Temperet ut ventos Aeolus, exsul ero!
Non ego te, Crete centum digesta per urbes, Aspiciam, puero cognita terra Iovi.
At pater et tellus iustoregnata parenti

Prodita sunt facto, nomina cara, meo,
   Cum tibi, ne victor tecto morerere recurvo,
   Quae regerent passus, pro duce filae dedi,
   Cum mihi dicebas 'per ego ipsa pericula iuro,
   Te fore, dum nostrum vivet uterque, meam.'

Vivimus, et non sum, Theseu, tua, si modo vivit
   Femina periuri fraude sepulta viri.
Me quoque qua fratrem, mactasses, improbe, clava;
   Esset, quam dederas, morte soluta fides.
Nunc ego non tantum, quae sum passura, recordor,
   Sed quaecumque potest ulla relicta pati.
Occurrunt animo pereundi mille figurae,
   Morsque minus poenae quam mora mortis habet.
Iam iam venturos aut hac aut suspicor illac,
   Qui lanient avido viscera dente, lupos.
Forsitan et fulvos tellus alat ista leones;
   Quis scit, an et saevam tigrida Dia ferat?
HEROIDES

Et freta dicuntur magnas expellere phocas!
Quis vetat et gladios per latus ire meum?
Tantum ne reliquer dura captiva catena,
Neve traham serva grandia pensa manu,
Cui pater est Minos, cui mater filia Phoebi,
Quodque magis memini, quae tibi pacta fui!
Si mare, si terras porrectaque litora vidi,
Multa mihi terrae, multa minvantur aquae.
Caelum restabat: timeo simulacra deorum!
Destituor rapidis praeda cibusque feris;
Sive colunt habitantque viri, diffidentis illis:
Externos didici laesa timere viros.
Viveret Androgeos utinam! nec facta luisses Impia funeribus, Cecropi terra, tuis;
Nec tua mactasset nodoso stipite, Theseu,
Ardua parte virum dextera, parte bovem;
Nec tibi, quae reditus monstrarent, fila deditsem,
Fila per adductas saepe recepta manus.
Non equidem miror, si stat victoria tecum,
Strataque Cretaeam belua stravit humum.
Non poterant figi praecordia ferrea cornu;
Ut te non tegeres, pectore tutus eras.
Illic tu silices, illic adamanta tulisti,
Illic qui silices, Thesea, vincat, habes.
Crudeles somni, quid me tenuistis inertem?
Aut semel aeterna nocte premenda fui.
Vos quoque crudeles, venti, nimiumque parati,
Flaminaque in lacrimas officiosa meas.
Dextera crudelis, quae me fratremque necavit,
Et data poscenti, nomen inane, fides!
In me iurarunt somnus ventusque fidesque:
Prodita sum causis una puella tribus.
Ergo ego nec lacrimas matris moritura videbo,
22

THE WORKS OF OVID

120 Nec mea qui digitis lumina condat, erit?
Spiritus infelix peregrinas ibit in auras,
Nec positos artus unguet amica manus?
Ossa superstabant volucres inhumata marinae?
Haec sunt officiis digna sepulcræ meis!
125 Ibis Cecropios portus, patriaque receptus
Cum steteris turbæ celsus honore tuae
Et bene narraris letum taurique virique
Sectaque per dubias saxa tecta vias,
Me quoque narrato solam tellure relictam!
130 Non ego sum titulis subripienda tuis.
Nec pater est Aegeus, nec tu Pittheidos Aethrae Filius: auctores saxa fretumque tui!
Di facerent, ut me summa de puppe videres:
Movisset vultus maesta figura tuos.
135 Nunc quoque non oculis, sed, qua potes, aspice ment
Haerentem scopulo, quem vaga pulsat aqua;
Aspice demissos lugentis more capillos
Et tunicas lacrimis sicut ab imbre graves!
Corpus, ut impulsae segetes aquilonibus, horret, 140 Litteraque articulo pressa tremente labat.
Non te per meritum, quoniam male cessit, adoro:
Debita sit facto gratia nulla meo,
Sed ne poena quidem! si non ego causa salutis,
Non tamen est, cur sis tu mihi causa necis.
145 Has tibi plangendo lugubria pectora lassas
Infelix tendo trans freta longa manus,
Hos tibi, qui superant, ostendo maesta capillos!
Per lacrimas oro, quas tua facta movent:
Flecte ratem, Theseu, versoque relabere vento!
150 Si prius occidero, tu tamen ossaferes.
AMORES

[As the Heroides are pictures of ideal situations, so the Amores are full of the real personality of the poet, and abound in descriptions of scenes, experiences, and incidents so vividly presented that one does not stop to question their reality. We feel that the poet is no longer relating the love stories of mythical personages, but is telling episodes from his own life. Many of these episodes, it must be admitted, are offensive to modern taste. But because of this the whole work should by no means be passed over, since in it many interesting and beautiful poems may be found.]

In a prefatory epigram Ovid tells us that there were originally five books of the Amores, but that these have been reduced to three.

At the outset he describes how he was engaged upon a more severe theme, when he was forced against his will into the field of amatory verse.]

I. 1. Arma gravi numero violentaque bella parabam Edere, materiā conveniente modis;
Par erat inferior versus: risisse Cupido
Dictur atque unum subripuisse pedem.

5 'Quis tibi, saeve puer, dedit hoc in carmina iuris?
Pieridum vates, non tua turba sumus.
Quid, si praeerpiat flavae Venus arma Minervae, Ventilet accensas flava Minerva faces?
Quis probet in silvis Cererem regnare iugosis,
Lege pharetratae virginis arva coli?
Crinibus insignem quis acuta cuspidae Phoebum Instruat, Aoniam Marte movente lyram?
Sunt tibi magna, puer, nimiumque potentia regna:
Cur opus affectas, ambitiose, novum?
10 An, quod ubique, tuum est? tua sunt Heliconia Tempe?
Vix etiam Phoebó iam lyra tuta sua est?
Cum bene surrexit versus nova pagina primo,
\textit{Attenuat nervos proximus ille neos;}
Nec mihi materia est numeris levioribus apta, \textit{Aut puer aut longas compta puellà comas.}
Questus eram, pharetra cum protinus ille soluta
\textit{Legit in exitium spiculà factà meum}
\textit{Lunavitque genu sinuosum fortiter arcum}
\textit{‘Quod’ que ‘canas, vates, accipe’ dixit ‘opus!’}
\textit{Me miserum! certas habuit puer ille sagittas:}
\textit{Uror, et in vacuo pectore regnat Amor.}
\textit{Sex mihi surgat opus numeris, in quinque residat:}
\textit{Férra cum vestris bellà valete modis!}
\textit{Cingere litorea flaventia tempora myrto,} \textit{Musa, per undenos emodulanda pedes!}

[The next selection illustrates the impassioned wooing of the youthful poet, revealing a fervor and an abandon, a real personal interest in the case, which the more polished love songs of Horace nowhere approach.]

I. iii. Iusta precor: quae me nuper praedata puella est, \textit{Aut amet aut faciat, cur ego semper amem!}
\textit{A, nimium volui! tantum patiatur amari:}
\textit{Audierit nostras Cytherea preces!}
\textit{Accipe, per longos tibi qui deserviat annos,} \textit{Accipe, qui pura norit amare fide!}
\textit{Si me non veterum commendant magna parentum} \textit{Nomina, si nostri sanguinis auctor eques,}
\textit{Nec meus innumeris renovatur campus aratris,} \textit{Temperat et sumptus parcus uterque parentis:}
\textit{At Phoebus comitesque novem vitisque repertor}
\textit{Hinc faciunt, at me qui tibi donat, Amor,} \textit{At nulli cessura fides, sine crimine mores}
\textit{Nudaque simplicitas purpureusque pudor.
Non mihi mille placent, non sum desultor amoris:
Tu mihi, siqua fides, cura perennis eris;
Tecum, quos dederint annos mihi fila sororum,
Vivere contingat teque dolente mori;
Te mihi materiem feci secum in carmina praebec:
Provenient causa, carmina digna sua.

Carmine nomen habent exterrita cornibus Io
Et quam flumina lusit adulter ave
Quaeque super pontum simulato vecta iuvencio
Virginea tenuit cornua vara manu:
Nos quoque per totum pariter cantabimur orbem,
Iunctaque semper erunt nomina nostra tuis.

[The hope of literary immortality, everywhere so dear to the Roman poets, is expressed again and again by Ovid himself. He predicts this immortality in the following poem, and that not only for himself but for all the great bards of Greece and Rome.]

I. xv. Quid mihi, Livor edax, ignavos obicis annos, Ingeniique vocas carmen inertis opus;
Non me more patrum, dum strenua sustinet aetas,
Praemia militiae pulverulenta sequi

Nec me verbosas leges ediscere nec me
Ingrato vocem prostituisses foro?
Mortale est, quod quaeris, opus; mihi fama perennis
Quaeritur, in toto semper ut orbe canar.

Vivet Maeonides, Tenedos dum stabit et Ide,

Vivet et Ascræus, dum mustis uva tumebit,
Dum cadet incurva falce resecta Ceres.
Battiaides semper toto cantabitus orbe:
Quamvis ingenio non valet, arte valet.

Nulla Sophocleo veniet iactura cothurno;
Cum sole et luna semper Aratus erit;
Dum fallax servus, durus pater, improba lena Vivent et meretrix blanda, Menandros erit;
Ennius arte carens animosique Accius oris

Casurum nullo tempore nomen habent.
Varronem primamque ratem quae nesciet aetas,
Aureaque Aesonio terga petita duci?
Carmina sublimis tunc sunt peritura Lucreti, Exitio terras cum dabit una dies;

Tityrus et segetes Aeneiaque arma legentur,
Roma triumphati dum caput orbis erit;
Donec erunt ignes arcusque Cupidinis arma, Discentur numeri, culte Tibulle, tui;
Gallus et Hesperiis et Gallus notus Eois,
Et sua cum Gallo nota Lycoris erit.

Ergo, cum silices, cum dens patientis aratri
Depereaet aevo, carmina morte carent:
Cedant carminibus reges regumque triumphi,
Cedat et auriferi ripa benigna Tagi!

Vilia miretur vulgus; mihi flavus Apollo
Pocula Castalia plena ministret aqua,
Sustineamque coma metuentem frigora myrtum
Atque ita sollicito multus amante legar!
Pascitur in vivis Livor, post fata quiescit,
Cum suus ex merito quemque tuetur honos.

Ergo etiam cum me supremus adederit ignis,
Vivam, parsque mei multa superstes erit.

[The following whimsical and exaggerated lament over the death of a parrot, the pet of his mistress Corinna, is one of the most famous poems of the Amores. It exhibits the charming, half-playful, half-plaintive spirit which pervades our poet’s elegies. The poem also illustrates one of the most prominent faults of Ovid’s style,—its too large use of mythological allusion, which tends to conventionality.]

II. vi. Psittacus, Eois imitatrix ales ab Indis, Occidit: exequias ite frequenter, aves;
AMORES

Ite, piae volucres, et plangite pectora pinnis
Et rigido teneras ungue notate genas;
5 Horrida pro maestis lanietur pluma capillis,
Pro longa resonent carmina vestra tuba!
Quod scelus Ismarii quereris, Philomela, tyranni, Expleta est annis ista querela suis;
Alitis in rarae miserum devertere funus:
10 Magna, sed antiqua est causa doloris Itys.
Omnes, quae liquido libratis in ære cursus,
Tu tamen ante alios, turtur amice, dole!
Plena fuit vobis omni concordia vita,
Et stetit ad finem longa tenaxque fides:
15 Quod fuit Argolico iuvenis Phoceus Orestae,
Hoc tibi, dum licuit, psittace, turtur erat.
Quid tamen ista fides, quid rari forma coloris,
Quid vox mutandis ingeniosa sonis,
Quid iuvat, tu datus es, nostrae placuisse puellae?
20 Infelix, avium gloria, nempe iaces!
Tu poteras fragiles pinnis hebetare zmaragdos
Tincta gerens rubro Punica rostra croco.
Non fuit in terris vocum simulantior ales:
Reddebas blaeso tam bene verba sono!
25 Raptus es invidia: non tu fera bella movebas;
Garrulus et placidae pacis amator eras.
Ecce, coturnices inter sua proelia vivunt,
Forsitan et fiant inde frequenter anus.
Plenus eras minimo nec prae sermonis amore
30 In multos poteras ora vacare cibos;
Nux erat esca tibi causaeque papavera somni,
Pellebatque sitim simplicis umor aquae.
Vivit edax vultur ducensque per æra gyros
Muluus et pluviae graculus auctor aquae;
35 Vivit et armiferae cornix invisa Minervae,
Illa quidem saeclis vix moritura novem:
Occidit illa loquax humanae vocis imago,
Psittacus, extremo munus ab orbe datum!
Optima prima fere manibus rapiuntur avaris,
Implentur numeris deteriora suis:
Tristia Phylacidae Thersites funera vidit,
Iamque cinis vivis fratribus Hector erat.
Quid referam timidae pro te pia vota puellae,
Vota procelloso per mare rapta Noto?
Septima lux venit non exhibitura sequentem,
(Ex tabat vacuo iam tibi Parca colo)
Nec tamen ignavo stupuerunt verba palato:
Clamavit moriens lingua 'Corinna, vale!'
Colle sub Elysio nigra nemus ilice frondet, Udaque perpetuo gramine terra viret:
Sigua fides dubiis, volucrum locus ille piarum
Dicitur, obscenae quo prohibentur aves;
Illic innocui late pascuntur olores
Et vivax phoenix, unica semper avis;
Explicat ipsa suas ales Iunonia pinnas,
Oscula dat cupidus blandus columba mari.
Psittacus has inter nemorali sede receptus
Convertit voluces in sua verba pias.
Ossa tegit tumulus, tumulus pro corpore magnus,
Quo lapis exiguus par sibi carmen habet:
CONSIGOR EX IPSO DOMINAE PLACUISSE SEPULCRO;
ORA FUERE MIHI PLUS AVE DOCTA LOQUI.

[The one who seems to have exercised the most powerful influence over Ovid's youthful affections, and whose name was most frequently found in his love songs, which he tells us in his Life were the popular songs of the street, was that Corinna who has already been mentioned in these pages. In the following poem he strives to dissuade her from a proposed journey by sea; failing in this, he prays for her safe return.]
II. xi. Prima malas docuit mirantibus aequoris undis Peliaeco pinus vertice caesa vías,
   Quae concurrentes inter temeraria cautes
   Consipuam fulvo vellere vexit ovem.
5 O utinam, nequis remo freta longa moveret,
   Argo funestas pressa bibisset aquas!
   Ecce, fugit notumque torum sociosque Penates Fallacesque vias ire Corinna parat.
   Quid tibi, me miserum, Zephyros Eurosque timebo
10  Et gelidum Borean egelidumque Notum?
   Non illic urbes, non tu mirabere silvas:
   Una est injusti caerula forma maris;
   Nec medius tenues conchas pictosque lapillos
   Pontus habet: bibuli litoris illa mora est.
15 Litora marmoreis pedibus signate, puellae:
   Hactenus est tutum; cetera caeca via est.
   Et vobis aliis ventorum proelia narrent,
   Quas Scylla infestet, quasve Charybdis aquas,
   Et quibus emineant violenta Ceraunia saxis,
20  Quo lateant Syrtes magna minorque sinu!
   Haec alii referant ad vos; quod quisque loquetur,
   Credite! quarenti nulla procella nocet.
   Sero respicitur tellus, ubi fune soluto
   Currit in immensum panda carina salum,
25 Navita sollicitus cum ventos horret iniquos
   Et prope tam letum, quam prope cernit aquam.
   Quod si concussas Triton exasperet undas,
   Quam tibi sit toto nullus in ore color!
   Tum generous voces fecundae sidera Ledae
30  Et 'felix,' dicas 'quem sua terra tenet!'
   Tutius est fovisse torum, legisse libellos,
   Threiciam digitis increpuisse lyrum.
   At, si vana ferunt voluces mea dicta procellae,
Aequa tamen puppi sit Galatea tuae!
35 Vestrum crimen erit talis iactura puellae, Nereidesque deae Nereidumque pater.
Vade memor nostri vento reditura secundo,
Impleat illa tuos fortior aura sinus!
Tum mare in haec magnus proclinet litora Nereus, 40 Huc venti spirent, huc agat aestus aquas!
Ipsa roges, Zephyri veniant in lintea soli,
Ipsa tua moveas turgida vela manu.
Primus ego aspiciam notam de litore puppim,
Et dicam 'nostros advehit illa deos,'
45 Excipiamque umeris et multa sine ordine carpam
Oscula: pro redivo victima vota cadet,
Inque tori formam molles sternentur harenae,
Et tumulus mensae quilbet instar erit.
Illic apposito narrabis multa Lyaeo :
50 Paene sit ut mediis obruta navis aquis, Dumque ad me properas, neque iniquae tempora
noctis
Nec te praecipites extimuisse Notos.
Omnia pro veris credam, sint ficta licebit :
Cur ego non votis blandiar ipse meis?
55 Haec mihiquamprimum caelo nitidissimus alto
Lucifer admissoss tempora portet equo!

[In the next selection our poet is seen hastening on his way to join his sweetheart, when his progress is stopped by a small stream that has been swollen to a torrent. He addresses the stream in the language now of remonstrance now of wheedling persuasion.]

III. vi. Amnis harundinibus limosas obsite ripas, Ad dominam propero: siste parumper aquas!
Nec tibi sunt pontes nec quae sine remigis ictu
Concava traiecto cumba rudente vehat.
AMORES

5 Parvus eras, memini, nec te transire refugi,
    Summaque vix talos contigit unda meos;
Nunc ruis apposito nivibus de monte solutis
    Et turpi crassas gurgite volvis aquas.
Quid properasse iuvat, quid parca dedisse quieti
10 Tempora, quid nocti consuerisse diem,
    Si tamen hic standum est, si non datur artibus ullis
Ulterior nostro ripa premenda pedi?
Nunc ego, quas habuit pinnas Danæius heros, Terribili densum cum tulit angue caput,
15 Nunc opto currum, de quo Cerealia primum
    Semina venerunt in rude missa solum.
    Prodigiosa loquor veterum mendacia vatum,
Nec tulit haec umquam nec feret ulla dies;
    Tu potius, ripis effuse capacitibus amnis,
20 (Sic aeternus eas!) labere fine tuo!
Non eris invidiae, torrens, mihi crede, ferendae,
    Si dicar per te forte retentus amans.
Flumina deberent iuvenes in amore iuvare;
    Flumina senserunt ipsa, quid esset amor.

[Here follows a long catalogue, in Ovid’s worst manner, of those river gods of mythology who had themselves felt the pangs of love.

This stream, too, like those, shall become famous in song, if only it will yield to the poet’s request. It will not? Then let it be accursed with drought, as it deserves.]

85 Dum loquor, increscis latis spatiósior undis,
    Nec capít admissas alveus altus aquas:
    Quid mecum, furiose, tibi? quid mutua differs Gaudia? quid coeptum, rustice, rumpis iter?
Quid, si legitimum flueres, si nobile flumen,
90 Si tibi per terras maxima fama foret?
    Nomen habes nullum, rivis conlecte caducis,
    Nec tibi sunt fontes nec tibi certa domus;
Fontis habes instar pluviamque nivesque solutas,
Quas tibi divitas pigra ministrat hiems;
95 Aut lutulentus agis brumali tempore cursus,
Aut premis aretem pulverulentus humum:
Quis te tum potuit sitiens haurire viator?
Quis dixit grata voce ‘perennis eas’?
Damnosus pecori curris, damnosior agris;
100 Forsitan haec alios, me mea damna movent.
Huic ego vae! demens narrabam fluminum amores!
Iactasse indigna nomina tanta pudet;
Nescio quem hunc spectans Acheloon et Inachon amnem
Et potui nomen, Nile, referre tuum!
105 At tibi pro meritis, opto, non candide torrens,
Sint rapidi soles siccaque semper hiems!

[At the end of this work, the poet bids farewell to the Loves, with the evident intention of passing on to higher themes; with the boldness of youth, he takes his place beside Vergil and Catullus, and complacently plumes himself upon the renown which he has conferred upon the humble place of his birth.]

III. xv. Quaere novum vatem, tenerorum mater Amorum:
Raditur hic elegis ultima meta meis;
Quos ego composui, Paeligni ruris alumnus, (Nec me deliciae dedecuere meae)
5 Siquid id est, usque a proavis vetus ordinis heres,
Non modo militiae turbine factus eques.
Mantua Vergilio, gaudet Verona Catullo; Paelignae dicar gloria gentis ego,
Quam sua libertas ad honesta coegerat arma,
10 Cum timuit socias anxia Roma manus.
Atque aliquis spectans hospes Sulmonis aquosi
Moenia, quae campi iugera paucu tenent, ‘Quae tantum’ dicat ‘potuistis ferre poetam,
Quantulacumque estis, vos ego magna voco.’
AMORES

15 Culte puer puerique parens Amathusia culti, Aurea de campo vellite signa meo!
Corniger increpuit thyrso graviore Lyaeus:
Pulsanda est magnis area maior equis.
Imbelles elegi, genialis Musa, valete,
20 Post mea mansurum fata superstes opus!

OMNIA VINCIT AMOR

(From a painting by Franceschini, in the Uffizi Gallery in Florence)

OVID—3
ARS AMATORIA

[This work is, as its name implies, a set of rules for the government of affairs of love. The work is in three books,—the first two addressed to men, the last to women. Ovid, who by experience was a past master in this art, offers minute instructions as to methods of procedure. Others may be leaders and instructors in other arts, but he is the master of the art of love.]

I. Siquis in hoc artem populo non novit amandi, Hoc legat et lecto carmine doctus amet!
Arte citae veloque rates remoque moventur,
Arte leves currus: arte regendus Amor.
5 Curribus Automedon lentisque erat aptus habenis,
Tiphys in Haemonia puppe magister erat:
Me Venus artificem tenero praefecit Amori;
Tiphys et Automedon dicar Amoris ego.

[The poet recommends the theater as the best field of observation of the fair sex, who, from the days of the Sabine women down, have thronged that place of popular resort.]

Ut redit itque frequens longum formica per agmen, Graniferu solitum cum vehit ore cibum,
95 Aut ut apes saltusque suos et olentia nactae
Pascua per flores et thyma summa volant,
Sic ruit in celebres cultissima femina ludos:
Copia iudicium saepe morata meum est.
Spectatum veniunt; veniunt spectentur ut ipsae:
100 Ille locus casti damna pudoris habet.
Primos sollicitos fecisti, Romule, ludos,

34
Cum iuvit viduos rapta Sabina viros.
Tunc neque marmoreo pendebant vela theatro,
Nec fuerant liquido pulpita rubra croco;
Illic, quas tulerant nemorosa Palatia, frondes
Simpliciter positae, scaena sine arte fuit;
In gradibus sedit populus de caespite factis,
Qualibet hirsutas fronde tegente comas.
Respiciunt oculisque notant sibi quisque puellam,
Quam velit, et tacito pectore multa movent.
Dumque rudem praebente modum tibicine Tusco
Ludius aequantam ter pede pulsat humum,
In medio plausu (plausus tunc arte carebant)
Rex populo praedae signa petita dedit.
Protinus exsilient animum clamore fatentes
Virginibus cupidas inicuientque manus:
Ut fugiunt aquilas, timidissima turba, columbae,
Utque fugit visos agna novella lupos,
Sic illae timuere viros sine more ruentes;
Constitit in nulla, qui fuit ante, color.
Nam timor unus erat, facies non una timoris:
Pars laniat crines, pars sine mente sedet;
Altera maesta silet, frustra vocat altera matrem;
Haec queritur, stupet haec; haec manet, illa fugit.
Ducentur raptae, genialis praeda, puellae,
Et potuit multas ipse decere timor.

[It would be profitless to follow Ovid through the tangled maze of precept and illustration. The whole work shows the extremely low ideal of morality which existed in the society of the time. No more striking commentary upon this society can be made than that such a work as this should have been put forth by a popular poet in the confident expectation that it would meet with a popular response.

This work, like all of Ovid's works, abounds in mythological illustrations. One of the best of these is the following selection from the third book, illustrating the folly of the too hasty judgment of jealousy.]
III. Nec cito credideris! quantum cito credere laedat, Exemplum vobis non leve Procris erit.

Est prope purpureos colles florentis Hymetti
Fons sacer et viridi caespite mollis humus:
Silva nemus non alta facit; tegit arbutus herbam;

Ros maris et lauri nigraque myrtus olent;

Nec densum foliis buxum fragilesque myricae
Nec tenues cytisi cultaque pinus abest;

Lenibus impulsae Zephyris auraque salubri
Tot generum frondes herbaque summa tremit.

Grata quies Cephalo; famulis canibusque relictis
Lassus in hac iuvenis saepe resedit humo,

‘Quae’ que ‘meos releves aestus,’ cantare solebat
‘Accipienda sinu, mobilis aura, veni!’

Coniugis ad timidas aliquis male sedulus aures

Auditos memori rettulit ore sonos:

Procris ut accepit nomen, quasi paelicis, Aurae, Excidit et subito muta dolore fuit:

Palluit, ut serae lectis de vite racemis
Pallescunt frondes, quas nova laesit hiems,

Quaque suos curvant matura Cydonia ramos, Cornaque adhuc nostris non satis apta cibis.

Ut rediit animus, tenues a pectore vestes
Rumpit et indignas sauciat ungue genas;

Nec mora, per medias passis furibunda capillis

Evolat, ut thyrsi concita Baccha, vias.

Ut prope perventum, comites in valle relinquit,
Ipsa nemus tacito clam pede fortis init.

Quid tibi mentis erat, cum sic male sana lateres,

Procri? quis atttoni pectoris ardor erat?

Iam iam venturam, quaecumque erat Aura, putabas

Scilicet atque oculis probra videnda tuis.

Nunc venisse piget (neque enim deprendere velles),
Nunc iuvat: incertus pectora versat amor;
Credere quae iubeant, locus est et nomen et index,
Et quia amans semper, quod timet, esse putat.
Vidit ut oppressa vestigia corporis herba,
Pulsantur trepidi corde micante sinus;
Iamque dies medius tenues contraxerat umbras,
Inque pari spatio vesper et ortus erant:

Ecce, redit Cephalus silvis, Cyllenia proles, Oraque fontana fervida pulsat aqua.
Anxia, Procri, lates; solitas iacet ille per herbas,
Et 'Zephyri molles auraque' dixit 'ades!'
Ut patuit miserae iucundus nominis error,
Et mens et rediit verus in ora color:
Surgit et oppositas agitato corpore frondes
Movit in amplexus uxor itura viri;
Ille feram vidisse ratus iuvenaliter artus
Corripit: in dextra tela fuere manu.

Quid facis, infelix? non est fera; supprime tela!
Me miserum! iaculo fixa puella tuo est.
'Ei mihi!' conclamat 'fixisti pectus amicum:
Hic locus a Cephalo vulnera semper habet.
Ante diem morior, sed nulla paelice laesa:

Hoc faciet postae te mihi, terra, levem.
Nomine suspectas iam spiritus exit in auras:
Labor, io! cara lumina conde manu!
Ille sinu dominae morientia corpora maesto
Sustinet et lacrimis vulnera saeva lavat:
Exit et incauto paulatim pectore lapsus
Excipitur miseri spiritus ore viri.
REMEDIA AMORIS

[This poem is designed as a book of advice for those who would be delivered from the snares of love. In the opening lines, Ovid apologizes to Cupid for his seeming desertion from the standard of that youthful god, implied in the title of his poem; and explains that his 'remedy' is only for those who are entangled in the meshes of unhappy or unworthy love.]

Legerat huius Amor titulum nomenque libelli:
'Bella mihi, video, bella parantur' ait.
'Parce tuum vatem sceleris damnare, Cupido, Tradita qui toties te duce signa tuli.
5 Non ego Tydides, a quo tua saucia mater
In liquidum rediit aethera Martis equis.
Saepe tepent alii iuvenes; ego semper amavi:
Et si, quid faciam nunc quoque, quaeris, amo.
Quin etiam docui, qua posses arte parari,
10 Et quod nunc ratio est, impetus ante fuit.
Nec te, blandae puere, nec nostras prodimus artes,
Nec nova praeteritum musa rexit opus.
Siquis amat quod amare iuvat, feliciter ardet:
Gaudeat, et vento naviget ille suo.
15 At siquis male fert indignae regna puellae,
Ne pereat, nostrae sentiat artis opem.'

[The poet moralizes upon the dangers of delay.]

Nam mora dat vires: teneras mora percoquit uvas
Et validas segetes, quod fuit herba, facit.
REMEDIA AMORIS

85 Quae praebet latas arbor spatiantibus umbras,
     Quo posita est primum tempore, virga fuit:
     Tum poterat manibus summa tellure revelli;
     Nunc stat in immensum viribus acta suis.
     Quale sit id, quod amas, celeri circumspice mente

90     Et tua laesuro subtrahe colla iugo.
     Principiis obsta: sero medicina paratur,
     Cum mala per longas convaluere moras.
     Sed propera nec te venturas differ in horas:
     Qui non est hodie, cras minus aptus erit.

95     Verba dat omnis amor reperitque alimenta morando:
     Optima vindictae proxima quaeque dies.
     Flumina pausa vides de magnis fontibus orta:
     Plurima conlectis multiplicantur aquis;
     Si cito sensisses, quantum peccare parares,

100     Non tegeres vultus cortice, Myrrha, tuos.

[Above all things, the mind must be wholesomely occupied with war, farming, the chase, foreign travel,—anything that may furnish a healthy activity. It is the empty mind that is most subject to temptation. The poet takes occasion here to give a charming picture of country life.]

Rura quoque oblectant animos studiumque colendi:

170     Quaelibet huic curae cedere cura potest.
     Colla iube domitos oneri supponere tauros,
     Sauciet ut duram vomer aduncus humum;
     Obrue versata Cerealis terra semina terra,
     Quae tibi cum multo faenore reddat ager.

175     Aspice curvatos pomorum pondere ramos,
     Ut sua, quod peperit, vix ferat arbor onus;
     Aspice labentes iucundo murmure rivos;
     Aspice tondentes fertile gramen oves!
     Ecce, petunt rupes praeruptaque saxa capellae:

180     Iam referent haedis ubera plena suis.
Pastor inaequali modulatur harundine carmen,
   Nec desunt comites, sedula turba, canes.
Parte sonant alia silvae mugitibus altae,
   Et queritur vitulum mater abesse suum.
185 Quid, cum suppositos fugiunt examina fumos,
   Ut relevent dempti vimina curva favi?
Poma dat autumnus; formosa est messibus aetas;
   Ver praebet flores; igne levatur hiems.
Temporibus certis maturam rusticus uvam
190 Deligit, et nudo sub pede musta fluunt;
Temporibus certis desectas adligat herbas,
   Et tonsam raro pectine verrit humum.
Ipse potes riguis plantam deponere in hortis,
   Ipse potes rivos ducere lenis aquae.
Venerit insitio: fac, ramum ramus adoptet,
200 Stetque peregrinis arbor operta comis.
Cum semel haec animum coepit mulcere voluptas,
   Debilibus pennis inritus exit Amor.
Vel tu venandi studium cole: saepe recessit
Turpiter a Phoebi victa sorore Venus;
Nunc leporem pronum catulo sectare sagaci,
205 Nunc tua frondosis retia tende iugis;
Aut pavidos terre varia formidine cervos,
   Aut cadat adversa cupside fossus aper.

[And let no one think that magic arts can avail. Their uselessness is proved by the fact that famous professors of these arts have been unable by their aid to help themselves.]

   Me duce non tumulo prodire iubebitur umbra,
Non anus infami carmine rumpet humum,
255 Non seges ex aliis alios transibit in agros,
   Nec subito Phoebi pallidus orbis erit;
Ut solet, aequoreas ibit Tiberinus in undas,
   Ut solet, in niveis Luna vehetur equis.
Nulla recantatas deponent pectora curas,
Nec fugiet vivo sulphure victus amor.
Quid te Phasiacae iuverunt gramina terrae,
Cum cuperes patria, Colchi, manere domo?
Quid tibi profuerunt, Circe, Perseides herbae, Cum sua Neritias abstulit aura rates?
Omnia fecisti, ne callidus hospes abiret:
Ille dedit certae lintea plena fugae.
Omnia fecisti, ne te ferus ureret ignis:
Longus et invito pectore sedit amor.
Vertere tu poteras homines in mille figuras:
Non poteras animi vertere iura tui.
*   *   *   *   *   *   *   *
Ardet et adsuetas Circe decurrit ad artes,
Nec tamen est illis attenuatus amor.
Ergo, quisquis opem nostra tibi poscis ab arte,
Deme veneficiis carminibusque fidem!

[In an interesting digression Ovid makes answer to those critics who chide him for devoting himself entirely at this period to poetry of love. 'Let them carp,' says he, 'so long as my name resounds throughout the world."

Nuper enim nostros quidam carpsere libellos,
Quorum censura Musa proterva mea est:
Dummodo sic placeam, dum toto canter in orbe,
Quod volet, impugnet unus et alter opus!
Ingenium magni livor detractat Homeri.

[He boasts that, though he is still only on the upward slope of the hill of Fame, elegiac poetry owes as much to him as epic to Vergil.]

Principio clivi noster anhelat equus;
Tantum se nobis elegi debere fatentur,
Quantum Vergilio nobile debet epos.
Hactenus invidiae respondimus: attrahi lora
Fortius et gyro curre, poeta, tuo!
TRAGEDY

[It was quite to be expected that Ovid, in the fervor of his youthful genius, would make some attempts in the field of tragedy, a form of literature which, it would seem, in all periods was popular among the Romans. He himself makes several allusions to these attempts. In the Amores (II. xviii. 11–18) he describes how he had forced himself for a time to give up the writing of mere love poems, and to assume the more noble work of tragedy.]

Vincor, et ingenium sumptis revocatur ab armis, Resque domi gestas et mea bella cano.
Sceptra tamen sumpsi, curaque tragoedia nostra
Crevit, et huic operi quamlibet aptus eram:
15 Risit Amor pallamque meam pictosque cothurnos
Sceptraque privata tam cito sumpta manu;
Hinc quoque me dominae numen deduxit iniquae,
Deque cothurnato vate triumphat Amor.

[Again (Amores, III. i.), under the form of an allegorical strife between Elegeia (or Love) and Tragoedia, he represents the conflicting influences under which he wrought.]

Stat vetus et multos incaedua silica per annos:
Credibile est illi numen inesse loco;
Fons sacer in medio speluncaque pumice pendens,
Et latere ex omni dulce queruntur aves.
5 Hic ego dum spator tectus nemoralibus umbris,
(Quod mea, quaerebam, Musa moveret opus)
Venit odoratos Elegeia nixa capillos,
Et, puto, pes illi longior alter erat:

42
Melpomene, Muse of Tragic Poetry
(From the Vatican Museum)

To face p. 42
TRAGEDY

Forma decens, vestis tenuissima, vultus amantis;
Et pedibus vitium causa decoris erat.
Venit et ingenti violenta Tragoedia passu.
Fronte comae torva, palla iacebat humi;
Laeva manus sceptrum late regale movebat,
Lydius alta pedum vincla cothurnus erat.

Et prior ‘ecquis erit’ dixit ‘tibi finis amandi,
O argumenti lente poeta tui?’
Nequitiam vinosa tuam convivia narrant,
Narrant in multas compita secta vias.
Saepe aliquid digito vatem designat euntem,

Atque ait ‘hic, hic est, quem ferus urit Amor.’
Fabula, nec sentis, tota iactaris in Urbe,
Dum tua praeterito facta pudore referis.

Tempus erat, thyrso pulsum graviore moveri;
Cessatum satis est: incipe maius opus!

Materia premis ingenium; cane facta virorum.
‘Haec animo’ dices ‘area facta meo est.’
Quod tenerae cantent, lusit tua Musa, puellae, Primaque per numeros acta iuventa suos;

Nunc habeam per te Romana Tragoedia nomen!

Implebit leges spiritus iste meas.’
Hactenus, et movit pictis innixa cothurnis
Denum caesarie terque quaterque caput.

Altera, si memini, limis subrisit ocellis;
(Fallor, an in dextra myrtea virga fuit?)

‘Quid gravibus verbis, animosa Tragoedia,’ dixit
‘Me premis? an numquam non gravis esse potes?
Imparibus tamen es numeris dignata moveri:
In me pugnasti versibus usa meis.

Non ego contulerim sublimia carmina nostris:

Obruit exiguas regia vestra fores.
Sum levis, et mecum levis est, mea cura, Cupido:
Non sum materia fortior ipsa mea;
Et tamen emerui plus, quam tu, posse ferendo
Multa supercilio non patienda tuo.

45 Rustica sit sine me lascivi mater Amoris:
Huic ego proveni lena comesque deae;
Quam tu non poteris duro reserare cothurno,
Haec est blanditiis ianua laxa meis;
Per me decepto didicit custode Corinna

50 Liminis astricti sollicitare fidem
Delabique toro tunica velata soluta Atque impercussos nocte movere pedes.
Vel quotiens foribus duris inlisa pependi,
Non verita a populo praetereunte legi;

55 Quin ego me memini, dum custos saevus abiret,
Ancillae missam delituisses sinu;
Quid, cum me munus natali mittis, at illa
Rumpit et apposita barbara mersat aqua?
Prima tuae movi felicia semina mentis:

60 Munus habes, quod te iam petit ista, meum.'
Desierat; coepi 'per vos utramque rogamus,
In vacuas aures verba timentis eant.
Alterae me sceptrro decoras altoque cothurno:
Iam nunc contacto magnus in ore sonus;

65 Altera das nostro victorum nomen amori:
Ergo ades et longis versibus addes breves!
Exiguum vati concede, Tragoedia, tempus:
Tu labor aeternus; quod petit illa, breve est.'
Mota dedit veniam: teneri properentur Amores,

70 Dum vacat; a tergo grandius urget opus.

[That the tragic Muse did win a temporary sway, and that the poet did write at least one play, on the theme of Medea, is attested by Quintilian (X. 1, 98), who speaks of the tragedy in terms of praise:}
Ovidii Medea videtur mihi ostendere, quantum ille vir praestare poterit, si ingenio suo imperare quam indulgere maluisset.

Tacitus also (Dialogus, 12) bears testimony to the popularity of this play in his time:

Plures hodie reperies, qui Ciceronis gloriam quam qui Vergillii detrectent: nec ullus Asinii aut Messallae liber tam inlustris est quam Medea Ovidii aut Varii Thyestes.

The play is again mentioned in the fifth century A.D. in a letter of Valerius to Rufinus, containing a caution against marriage: Lege Mediam Nasonis, et vix pauca invenies impossibilia mulieri.

When we consider the masterly way in which the poet has treated this same theme in the seventh book of the Metamorphoses, we cannot but regret the almost utter loss of this tragedy. Of the whole play one line alone remains, quoted by Quintilian (VIII. 5, 6) as an example of a 'sententia':

Vehementius apud Ovidium Medea dicit, Servare potui; perdere an possim, rogas?

The works of the second period of Ovid's life are two in number: the Fasti and the Metamorphoses. Both were written, but neither was published before the banishment of the poet, which so suddenly interrupted his prosperous career at Rome.]

TRAGIC AND COMIC MASKS
(From a Mosaic preserved in the Capitoline Museum at Rome)
FASTI

[The Fasti, or Calendar enumerates the various religious festivals of the Romans in their chronological order, and narrates the traditional events which are connected with these holidays. The poet undertakes an explanation of the names of the various months, and accounts for the origin of many Roman customs and festivals. It is a poem of times and places, which makes the work of great value to the student of Roman antiquities. The plan of the work included twelve books, one for each month; and while there is evidence that the poet completed his first sketch of the whole work, the first six books only have come down to us. These were finished in their original form before Ovid’s banishment in A.D. 9, and were addressed to Augustus; but they remained unpublished until the death of Augustus in A.D. 14. At this time the poet revised his first book, and, dedicating it to Germanicus, the adopted son of Tiberius, sent the whole to Rome in the vain hope that by this means he might gain the favor of the new Emperor. This book, like all the previous poems of Ovid, is in the elegiac measure. A selection of typical passages is here presented.]

BOOK I. JANUARY

[The poet dedicates his revised work to Germanicus.]

Tempora cum causis Latium digesta per annum
Lapsaque sub terras ortaque signa canam.
Excipe pacato, Caesar Germanice, vultu
Hoc opus et timidae dirige navis iter;

5 Officioque, levem non aversatus honorem,
Huic tibi devoto numine dexter ades.
Sacra recognosces annalibus eruta priscis,
Et quo sit merito quaeque notata dies.
Invenies illic et festa domestica vobis:
FASTI

Saepe tibi pater est, saepe legendus avus.
Quaeque ferunt illi pictos signantia fastos,
Tu quoque cum Druso praemia fratre feres.
Caesaris arma canant alii: nos Caesaris aras,
Et quoscumque sacris addidit ille dies.

Annue conanti per laudes ire tuorum,
Deque meo pavidos excute corde metus.
Da mihi te placidum, dederis in carmina vires:
Ingenium vultu statque caditque tuo.
Pagina iudicium docti subitura movetur

Principis, ut Clario missa legenda deo.
Quae sit enim culti facundia sensimus oris,
Civica pro trepidis cum tulit arma reis.
Scimus et, ad nostras cum se tulit impetus artes,
Ingenii currant flumina quanta tui.

Si licet et fas est, vates rege vatis habenas,
Auspicio felix totus ut annus eat.

[January first. Janus, his festival, history, functions, and attributes.]

Ecce tibi faustum, Germanice, nuntiat annum,
Inque meo primus carmine Ianus adest.

Iane biceps, anni tacite labentis origo,
Solus de superis qui tua terga vides,
Dexter ades ducibus, quorum secura labore
Oitia terra ferax, oitia pontus habet:
Dexter ades patribusque tuis populoque Quirini,

Et resera nutu candida templar tuo.
Prospera lux oritur. Linguis animisque favete!
Nunc dicenda bona sunt bona verba die.
Lite vacent aures, insanaque protinus absint
Iurgia; differ opus, livida turba, tuum.

Cernis, odoratis ut luceat ignibus aether,
Et sonet accensis spica Cilissa focis?
Flamma nitore suo templorum verberat aurum,
Et tremulum summa spargit in aede iubar.
Vestibus intactis Tarpeias itur in arces,
80 Et populus festo concolor ipse suo est.
Iamque novi praeuent fasces, nova purpura fulget,
Et nova conspicuum pondera sentit ebur.
Colla rudes operum praebent ferienda iuvenci,
Quos aluit campis herba Falisca suis.
85 Iuppiter arce sua totum cum spectet in orbem,
Nil nisi Romanum, quod tueatur, habet.
Salve, laeta dies, meliorque revertere semper,
A populo rerum digna potente coli.
Quem tamen esse deum te dicam, Iane biformis?
90 Nam tibi par nullum Graecia numen habet.
Ede simul causam, cur de cælestibus unus
Sitque quod a tergo, sitque quod ante, vides?
Haec ego cum sumptis agitarem mente tabellis, Lucidior visa est, quam fuit ante, domus.
95 Tunc sacer ancipiti mirandus imagine Ianus
Bina repens oculis obtulit ora meis.
Extimui sensique metu riguisse capillos,
Et gelidum subito frigore pectus erat.
Ille tenens baculum dextra clavemque sinistra
100 Edidit hos nobis ore priore sonos:
‘Disce, metu posito, vates operose dierum,
Quod petis, et voces percipe mente meas.
Me Chaos antiqui — nam sum res prisca — vocabant.
Aspice, quam longi temporis acta canam.
105 Lucidus hic aër et quae tria corpora restant,
Ignis, aquae, tellus, unus acervus erat.
Ut semel haec rerum secessit lite suarum,
Inque novas abiiit massa soluta domos,
Flamma petit altum, proprior locus aëra cepit,
Sederunt medio terra fretumque solo.
Tunc ego, qui fueram globus et sine imagine moles,
In faciem redii dignaque membra deo.
Nunc quoque, confusae quondam nota parva figureae,
Ante quod est in me postque, videtur idem.
Accipe, quaesitae quae causa sit altera formae,
Hanc simul ut noris officiumque meum.
Quidquid ubique vides, caelum, mare, nubila, terras
Omnia sunt nostra clausa patentque manu.
Me penes est unum vasti custodia mundi,
Et ius vertendi cardinis omne meum est.
Cum libuit Pacem placidis emittere tectis,
Libera perpetuas ambulat illa vias.
Sanguine letifero totus miscebitur orbis,
Ni teneant rigidae condita bella serae.
Praesideo foribus caeli cum mitibus Horis:
It, reedit officio Iuppiter ipse meo.
Inde vocor Ianus. Cui cum Cereale sacerdos Imponit libum farraque mixta sale,
Nomina ridebis: modo namque Patulcius idem
Et modo sacrifico Clusius ore vocor.
Scilicet alterno voluit rudis illa vetustas
Nomine diversas significare vices.
Vis mea narrata est. Causam nunc disce figureae:
Iam tamen hanc aliqua tu quoque parte vides.
Omnis habet geminas, hinc atque hinc, ianua frontes,
E quibus haec populum spectat, at illa Larem.
Utque sedens primi vester prope limina tecti
Ianitor egressus introitusque videt,
Sic ego perspicio, caelestis ianitor aulae,
Eoas partes Hesperiasque simul.
Ora vides Hecates in tres vertentia partes, Servet ut in ternas compita secta vias.

OVID — 4
THE WORKS OF OVID

Et mihi, ne flexu cervicis tempora perdam, Cernere non moto corpore bina licet.'

Dixerat: et vultu, si plura require re vellem,
Difficilem mihi se non fore fassus erat.

[Why the temple of Janus is shut in time of peace but open in war

'At cur pace lates, motisque recluderis armis?'
Nec mora, quaesiti reddita causa mihi est.
'Ut populo reditus pateant ad bella prorecto, Tota patet dempta Ianua nostra sera.
Pace fores obdo, ne qua discedere possit:
Caesareaque diu nomine clusus ero.'

Dixit, et attollens oculos diversa tuentes,
Aspexit toto quidquid in orbe fuit.

Pax erat, et vestri, Germanice, causa triumphi,
Tradiderat famulas iam tibi Rhenus aquas.
Iane, fac aeternos pacem pacisque ministros,
Neve suum, praesta, deserat auctor opus.
Quod tamen ex ipsis licuit mihi discere fastis,
Sacrabere patres hac duo templ a die.
Accept Phoebo nymphaque Coronide natum
Insula, dividua quam premit amnis aqua:
Iuppiter in parte est. Cepit locus unus utrumque Iunctaque sunt magno templo nepotis avo.

BOOK II. FEBRUARY

[The introduction addressed to Augustus.—The derivation of the word February.]

Ian us habet finem. Cum carmine crescit et annus:
Alter ut hic mensis, sic liber alter eat.
Nunc primum velis, elegi, maioribus itis:
Exiguum, memini, nuper eratis opus.
5 Ipse ego vos habui faciles in amore ministros,
   Cum lusit numeris prima iuventa suis.
Idem sacra cano signataque tempora fastis:
   Ecquis ad haec illinc crederet esse viam?
Haec mea militia est. Ferimus quae possimus, arma,
10 Dextraque non omni munere nostra vacat.
   Si mihi non valido torrentur pila lacerto,
   Nec bellatoris terga premuntur equi,
   Nec galea tegimur, nec acuto cingimur ense,—
   His habilis telis quilibet esse potest—
15 At tua prosequimur studioso pectore, Caesar, Nomina, per titulos ingredimurque tuos.
   Ergo ades et placido paulum mea munera vultu
   Respice, pacando siquid ab hoste vacas.
   Februa Romani dixere piamina patres:
20 Nunc quoque dant verbo plurima signa fidem.
   Pontifices ab rege petunt et flameae lanas,
   Quia veterum lingua februa nomen erat.
   Quaeque capit lictor domibus purgamina certis,
   Torrida cum mica farra, vocantur idem.
25 Nomen idem ramo, qui caesus ab arbore pura
   Casta sacerdotum tempora fronde tegit.
   Ipse ego flaminicam poscentem februa vidi,
   Februa poscenti pinea virga data est.
20 Denique quodcumque est, quo corpora nostra piantur,
30 Hoc apud intonsos nomen habebat avos.
   Mensis ab his dictus, secta quia pelle Luperci
   Omne solum lustrant, idque piamen habent:
   Aut quia placatis sunt tempora pura sepulcris,
   Tunc cum ferales praeteriere dies.
35 Omne nefas omnemque mali purgamina causam
   Credebant nostri tollere posse senes.
Quem modo caelatum stellis Delphina videbas,
Is fugiet visus nocte sequente tuos:
Seu fuit occultis felix in amoribus index,
Lesbida cum domino seu tuit ille lyram.
Quod mare non novit, quae nescit Ariona tellus?
Carmine currentes ille tenebat aquas.
Saepe sequens agnam lupus est a voce retentus,
Saepe avidum fugiens restitit agna lupum:
Saepe canes leporesque umbra cubuere sub una,
Et stetit in saxo proxima cerva leae:
Et sine lite loquax cum Palladis alite cornix
Sedit, et accipitri iuncta columba fuit.
Cynthia saepe tuis fertur, vocalis Arion,
Tamquam fraternis obstipuisse modis.
Nomen Arionium Siculas impleverat urbes, Captaque erat lyricis Ausonis ora sonis.
Inde domum repetens puppem conscendit Arion,
Atque ita quaesitas arte ferebat opes.
Forsitan, infelix, ventos undasque timebas:
At tibi nave tua tutius aequor erat.
Namque gubernator destricto constitit ense
Ceteraque armata conscia turba manu.
Quid tibi cum gladio? Dubiam rege, navita, puppem!
Non haec sunt digitis arma tenenda tuis.
Ille, metu viduus, 'mortem non deprecor' inquit,
'Sed liceat sumpta paucia referre lyra.'
Dant veniam, ridentque moram. Capit ille coronam, Quae possit crines, Phoebe, decere tuos.
Induerat Tyrio bis tintam murice pallam;
Reddidit icta suos pollice chorda sonos:
Flebilibus numeris veluti canentia dura.
Traiectus pinna tempora cantat olor.
Protinus in medias ornatus desilit undas,
Spargitur impulsa caerula puppis aqua.
Inde — fide maius — tergo delphina recurvo
Se memorant oneri supposuisse novo.
Ille sedens citharamque tenet, pretiumque vehendi,
Cantat et aequoreas carmine mulcet aquas.
Di pia facta vident: astris delphina recepit
Iuppiter et stellas iussit habere novem.

Book III. March

[This month is sacred to Mars and derives its name from him.]

Bellice, depositis clipeo paulisper et hasta,
Mars, ades et nitidas casside solve comas.
Forsitan ipse roges, quid sit cum Marte poetae?
A te, qui canitur, nomina mensis habet.

Ipse vides manibus peragi fera bella Minervae:
Num minus ingenuis artibus illa vacat?
Palladis exemplo ponendae tempora sume
Cuspidis. Invenies et quod inermis agas.

[While many other tribes of Italy had a month of March, Romulus paid the god special honor by placing his month first in the Roman year.]

Iam, modo qua fuerant silvae pecorumque recessus, Urbs erat, aeternae cum pater Urbis ait:
‘Arbiter armorum, de cuius sanguine natus
Credor, et ut credar, pignora multa dabo,
A te principium Romano dicimus anno:
Primus de patrio nomine mensis erit.’
Vox rata sit, patrioque vocat de nomine mensem.
Dicitur haec pietas grata fuisse deo.
THE WORKS OF OVID

Et tamen ante omnes Martem coluere priores.

80 Hoc dederat studiis bellica turba suis.
Pallada Cecropidae, Minota Creta Dianam, Vulcanum tellus Hypsipylea colit;
Iunonem Sparte Pelopetadesque Mycenae, Pinigerum Fauni Maenalis ora caput:

85 Mars Latio venerandus erat, quia praesidet armis.
Arma ferae genti remque decusque dabant.
Quod si forte vacas, peregrinos inspice fastos:
Mensis in his etiam nomine Martis erit.
Tertius Albanis, quintus fuit ille Faliscis;

90 Sextus apud populos, Hernica terra, tuos.
Inter Aricinos Albanaque tempora constat
Factaque Telegoni moenia celsa manu.
Quintum Laurentes, bis quintum Aequiculus acer,
A tribus hunc primum turba Curensis habet.

95 Et tibi cum proavis, miles Peligne, Sabinis
Convenit; hic genti quartus utrique deus.
Romulus hos omnes ut vinceret ordine saltem,
Sanguinis auctori tempora prima dedit.

[The poet adduces certain proofs of the fact that March was once the first month of the year.—Numa Pompilius inaugurated the change to the present order, but Julius Caesar completed it.]

135 Neu dubites, primae fuerint quin ante Kalendae Martis, ad haec animum signa referre potes:
Laurea, flaminibus quae toto perstittit anno,
Tollitur, et frondes sunt in honore novae.
Ianua tunc regis posita viret arbore Phoebi:

140 Ante tuas fit idem, curia prisca, fores.
Vesta quoque ut folio niteat velata recenti,
Cedit ab Iliacis laurea cana focis.

Adde, quod arcana fieri novus ignis in aede
Dicitur, et vires flamma refecta capit.

Nec mihi parva fides, annos hinc isse priores,
Anna quod hoc coepta est mense Perenna coli.
Hinc etiam veteres initi memorantur honores
Ad spatium belli, perfide Poene, tui.
Denique quintus ab hoc fuerat Quintilis, et inde

Incipit, a numero nomina quisquis habet.

Primus, oliviferis Romam deductus ab arvis,
Pompilius menses sensit abesse duos:
Sive hoc a Samio doctus, qui posse renasci
Nos putat, Egeria sive monente sua.

Sed tamen errabant etiam nunc tempora, donec
Caesarius in multis haec quoque cura fuit.
Non haec ille deus tantaeque propaginis auctor
Creditit officiis esse minora suis,
Promissumque sibi voluit praenoscere caelum,

Nec deus ignotas hospes inire domos.
Ille moras solis, quibus in sua signa rediret,
Traditur exactis disposuisse notis.
Is decies senos tercentum et quinque diebus
Iunxit, et e pleno tempora quarta die.

Hic anni modus est: in lustrum accedere debet,
Quae consummatur partibus, una dies.

[The Ides of March are memorable for the assassination of Caesar. But in reality he was not slain, as men think. Vesta snatched him away, and substituted a phantom in his stead.]

Praeteritus eram gladios in principe fixos,
Cum sic a castis Vesta locuta focis:
‘Ne dubita meminisse! meus fuit ille sacerdos.

Sacrilegiae telis me petiere manus.
Ipsa virum rapui, simulacraque nuda reliqui;
Quae cecidit ferro, Caesaris umbra fuit.
Ille quidem caelo positus Iovis atria vidit,
   Et tenet in magno templo dicata foro.
At quicumque nefas ausi, prohibente deorum
   Numine, polluerant pontificale caput, Morte iacent merita. Testes estote Philippi,
   Et quorum sparsis ossibus albet humus.
Hoc opus, haec pietas, haec prima elementa fuerunt
   Caesaris, ulcisci iusta per arma patrem.'

Book IV. April

[This is the month sacred to Venus, whose favoring presence is here invoked.]

'Alma, fave,' dixi 'geminorum mater Amorum!'
   Ad vatem vulitus rettulit illa suos,
'Quid tibi' ait 'mecum? certe maiora canebas.
   Num vetus in molli pectore vulnus habes?'
'scis dea,' respondi 'de vulnere.' Risit, et aether Protinus ex illa parte serenus erat.
'Saucius, an sanus, numquid tua signa reliqui?
   Tu mihi propositum, tu mihi semper opus.
Quae decuit, primis sine crimine lusimus annis:
   Nunc teritur nostris area maior equis.
Tempora cum causis, annalibus eruta priscis,
   Lapsaque sub terras ortaque signa cano.
Venimus ad quartum, quo tu celeberrima, mensem.
   Et vatem et mensem scis, Venus, esse tuos.'
Mota Cytheriaca leviter mea tempora myrto Contigit, et 'coemptum perfice' dixit 'opus.'
Sensimus, et causae subito patuere dierum.
   Dum licet et spirant flamina, navis eat.

[One suggested derivation for the word April. Thoughts on the universal sway of Venus.]
85 Quo non livor adit?  Sunt qui tibi mensis honorem Eripuisset velint invideantque, Venus.
Nam quia ver aperit tunc omnia, densaque cedit
Frigoris asperitas, fetaque terra patet,
Aprilem memorant ab aperto tempore dictum:
90 Quem Venus iniecta vindicat alma manu.
Illa quidem totum dignissima temperat orbem;
Illa tenet nullo regna minora deo,
Iuraque dat caelo, terrae, natalibus undis,
Perque suos initus continet omne genus.
95 Illa deos omnes — longum est numerare — creavit:
Illa satis causas arboribusque dedit:
Illa rude animos hominum contraxit in unum,
Et docuit iungi cum pare quemque sua.
Quid genus omne creat volucrum, nisi blanda voluptas?
100 Nec coeant pecudes, si levis absit amor.
Cum mare trux aries cornu decertat; at idem
Frontem dilectae laedere parcit ovis.
Depositam sequitur taurus feritate iuvencam,
Quem toti saltus, quem nemus omne tremit.
105 Vis eadem lato quodcumque sub aequore vivit,
Servat, et innumeris piscibus implet aquas.
Prima feros habitus homini detraxit: ab illa
Venerunt cultus mundaque cura sui.
Primus amans carmen vigilatum nocte negata
110 Dicitur ad clausas concinuisse fores:
Eloquiumque fuit duram exorare puellam,
Proque sua causa quizes disertus erat.
Mille per hanc artes motae; studioque placendi
Quae latuere prius, multa reperta ferunt.
115 Hanc quisquam titulo mensis spoliare secundi
Audeat?  A nobis sit furor iste procul.
‘Consule’ dic ‘pecori pariter pecorisque magistris:
Effugiat stabulis noxa repulsa meis.
Sive sacro pavi, sedive sub arbore sacra,
Pabulaque e bustis inscia carpsit ovis:
Si nemus intravi vetitum, nostrisve fugatae
Sunt oculis nymphae semicaperve deus:
Si mea falx ramo lucum spoliavit opaco,
Unde data est aegrae piscina frondis ovi:
Da veniam culpae. Nec, dum degradinat, obsit Agresti fano supposuisse pecus.
Nec noccat turbasse lacus. Ignoscite, nymphae, Mota quod obscuras ungula fecit aquas.
Tu, dea, pro nobis fontes fontanaque placa
Numina, tu sparsos per nemus omne deos.
Nec Dryadas, nec nos videamus labra Dianae,
Nec Faunum, medio cum premit arva die.
Pelle procul morbos. Valeant hominesque gregesque,
Et valeant vigiles, provida turba, canes.
Neve minus multos redigam, quam mane fuerunt,
Neve gemam referens vellera rapta lupo.
Absit iniqua fames. Herbae frondesque supersint, Quaeque lavent artus, quaeque bibantur, aquae,
Ubera plena premam, referat mihi caseus aera,
Dentque viam liquido vimina rara sero;
Lanaque proveniat nullas laesura puellas,
Mollis et ad teneras quamlibet apta manus.
Quae precor, eveniant, et nos faciamus ad annum
Pastorum dominae grandia liba Pali.’
His dea placanda est: haec tu conversus ad ortus
Dic quater, et vivo perlue rore manus.
Tum licet apposita, veluti cratere, camella
780 Lac niveum potes purpureamque sapam:
Moxque per ardentes stipulæ crepitantis acervos
Traicias celeri strenua membra pede.

BOOK V. MAY

[May third. The constellation Centaurus rises. This suggests the story of Chiron and Hercules.]

Nocte minus quarta promet sua sidera Chiron
380 Semivir et flavi corpore mixtus equi.
Pelion Haemoniae mons est obversus in austros:
    Summa virent pinu, cetera quercus habet.
Phillyrides tenuit. Saxo stant antra vetusto, Quae iustum memorant incoluisse senem.
385 Ille manus olim missuras Hectora leto
    Creditur in lyricis detinuisse modis.
Venerat Alcides exhausta parte laborum, Iussaque restabant ultima paene viro.
Stare simul casu Troiae duo fata videres:
390 Hinc puer Aeacides, hinc Ioae natus erat.
Excipit hospitio iunctum Philyretus heros,
    Et causam adventus hic rogat, ille docet.
Perspicit interea clavam spoliwmque leonis,
    'Vir'que ait 'his armis, armaque digna viro!'
395 Nec se, quin horrens auderent tangere saetis
    Vellus, Achilleae continuere manus.
Dumque senex tractat squalentia tela venenis,
    Excidit et laevo fixa sagitta pede est.
Ingemuit Chiron, traxitque e corpore ferrum:
400 Et gemit Alcides Haemoniusque puer.
Ipse tamen lectas Pagasaeis collibus herbas
    Temperat, et vana vulnera mulcet ope.
Virus edax superabat opem, penitusque recepta
Ossibus et toto corpore pestis erat.
Sanguine Centauri Lernaeae sanguis echidnae MIXTUS AD AUXILIUM TEMPORA NULLA DABAT.
Stabat, ut ante patrem, lacrimis perfusus Achilles.
Sic flendus Peleus, si moreretur, erat.
Saepe manus aegras manibus fingebat amicis;
Morum, quos fecit, praemia doctor habet.
Oscura saepe dedit, dixit quoque saepe iacenti:
‘Vive, precor, nec me care relinque pater!’
Nona dies aderat, cum tu, iustissime Chiron,
Bis septem stellis corpora cinctus eras.

BOOK VI. JUNE

[June ninth. The feast of Vesta. Her temple and worship. Her name.]

Vesta, fave! tibi nunc operata resolvimus ora,
Ad tua si nobis sacra venire licet.
In prece totus eram: caelestia numina sensi,
Laetaque purpurea luce refulsit humus.
Non equidem vidi — valeant mendacia vatum —
Te, dea; nec fueras aspicienda viro.

Sed quae nescieram, quorumque errore tenebar,
Cognita sunt nullo praecipiente mihi.
Dena quater memorant habuisse Palilia Romam,
Cum flammae custos aede recepta dea est,
Regis opus placidi, quo non metuentius ullum
Numinis ingenium terra Sabina tulit.
Quae nunc aere vides, stipula tum tecta videres,
Et paries lento vinime textus erat.
Hic locus exiguum, qui sustinet Atria Vestae, Tunc erat intonsi regia magna Numae.
Forma tamen templi quae nunc manet, ante fuisse
Dicitur; et formae causa probanda subest.
Vesta eadem, quae terra. Subest vigil ignis utrique;
Significant sedem terra focusque suam.
Terra pilae similis, nullo fulcimine nixa,
Aëre subiecto tam grave pendet onus.

Arte Syracosia suspensus in aëre clauso
Stat globus, immensi parva figura poli,
Et quantum a summis, tantum secessit ab imis
Terra; quod ut fiat, forma rotunda facit:
Par facies templi; nullus procurrit in illo
Angulus, a pluvio vindicat imbre tholus.

Esse diu stultus Vestae simulacra putavi,
Mox didici curvo nulla subesse tholo.
Ignis inextinctus templo celatur in illo.
Effigiem nullam Vesta nec ignis habet.
Stat vi terra sua: vi stando Vesta vocatur;
Causaque par Grai nominis esse potest.
At focus a flammis et quod fovert omnia, dictus;
Qui tamen in primis aedibus ante fuit.
Hinc quoque vestibulum dici reor: inde precando
Praefamur Vestam, quae loca prima tenet.
Ante focus olim scannis considere longis
Mos erat, et mensae credere adesse deos.
Nunc quoque, cum fiunt antiquae sacra Vacunae,
Ante Vacunales stantque sedentque focos.
Venit in hos annos aliquid de more vetusto:
Fert missos Vestae pura patella cibos.
Ecce coronatis panis dependet asellis,
Et velant scabras florida serta molas.
Sola prius furnis torrebant farra coloni,
Et Fornacali sunt sua sacra deae:
Suppositum cineri panem focus ipse parabat
Strataque erat tepido tegula quassa solo.
Inde focum servat pistor dominamque focorum
Et quae pumiceas versat asella molas.

PORTRAIT STATUE OF A VESTALIS MAXIMA (Found in the Atrium Vestae at Rome)
METAMORPHOSES

[Ovid's greatest work, the fruit of the best years of the prime of his life, when his imagination had ripened and his poetic vigor was at its height, was the Metamorphoses. Unlike all his other works, this is written in Dactylic Hexameter, and approaches the epic in form and dignity of treatment. In this great poem he attempts no less a task than the linking together into one artistically harmonious whole all the stories of classical mythology. And this he accomplishes, advancing in mighty strides, until the whole range of wonders is passed in review, from the dawn of creation, when chaos became the orderly universe, down to the very age of the poet himself, when the soul of Julius Caesar was changed to a star and set in the heavens among the immortals. Every important myth is at least touched upon, and though they differ widely in place and circumstance, there is no break. The poet has seized upon every possible thread of connection as he passes on from cycle to cycle of story; and where this connection is lacking, by various ingenious and artistic devices, a connecting link is found. As a result, the poem is an unbroken account of the ancient world from the time of the creation, being a strange blending of pure myth, tradition, and actual history.

The poem forms a more or less complete manual of classical mythology, and is, perhaps, the most important source of wonder stories for all writers since Ovid's time. This is the real, tangible service which he has done the world, a service which no one, who considers the immense value of these old yet ever new tales that had their origin in the childhood of the world, will be inclined to underrate. Many of these stories could be now obtained from the sources whence Ovid himself drew them — from Homer, Hesiod, the Greek tragedians, and the later Alexandrine poets. And yet many, but for him, would have been entirely lost to us; and all he has so vivified by his strong poetic imagination that they come down to us with an added freshness and life.

63
THE WORKS OF OVID

The most interesting parts of the Metamorphoses have been selected for the present edition of the poet and the omitted portions are given in outline, so that the student may not only have the substance of the whole work in hand, but may be able to see the methods by which Ovid has united and harmonized the various cycles of stories.

Book I

[May the gods, who themselves have wrought all changes, aid me as I shall attempt to describe them.]

In nova fert animus mutatas dicere formas Corpora. Di, coceptis—nam vos mutastis et illas—
Aspirate meis, primaque ab origine mundi
Ad mea perpetuum deducite tempora carmen.

[In the beginning Chaos reigned, a universe of warring elements in one shapeless mass.]

5 Ante mare et terras et, quod tegit omnia, caelum
Unus erat toto naturae vultus in orbe,
Quem dixere Chaos; rudis indigestaque moles,
Nec quicquam nisi pondus iners congestaque eodem
Non bene iunctarum discordia semina rerum.

10 Nullus adhuc mundo praebebat lumina Titan,
Nec nova crescendo reparabat cornua Phoebe,
Nec circumfuso pendebat in aëre tellus
Ponderibus librata suis, nec bracchia longo
Margine terrarum porrexerat Amphitrite.

15 Utque erat et tellus illic et pontus et aër,
Sic erat instabilis tellus, innabilis unda,
Lucis egens aër. Nulli sua forma manebat, Obstabatque aliis alijud, quia corpore in uno
Frigida pugnabant calidis, uementia siccis,
20 Mollia cum duris, sine pondere habentia pondus.
METAMORPHOSES

[These elements were at length separated and allotted to their proper places in the Cosmos, or orderly universe.]

Hanc deus et melior litem natura diremit;
Nam caelo terras et terris abscidit undas,
Et liquidum spisso secrevit ab aëre caelum.
Quae postquam evolvit caecoque exemit acervo,
Dissociata locis concordi pace ligavit.
Ignea convexi vis et sine pondere caeli
Emicuit summaque locum sibi fecit in arce.
Proximus est aër illi levitate locoque;
Densor his tellus, elementaque grandia traxit
Et pressa est gravitate sua. Circumfluos umor Ultima possedit solidumque coërcuit orbem.

[Then was the earth itself molded into shape and its various surface features formed. The five terrestrial zones also were established, corresponding to similar divisions of the heavens.]

Sic ubi dispositam, quisquis fuit ille deorum, Congeriem secuit sectamque in membra redegit,
Principio terram, ne non aequalis ab omni
Parte foret, magni speciem glomeravit in orbis.
Tum freta diffundi rapidisque tumescere ventis
Iussit et ambitae circumdare litora terrae.
Addidit et fontes et stagna immensa lacusque,
Fluminaque obliquis cinxit declivia ripis,
Quae, diversa locis, partim sorbentur ab ipsa,
In mare perveniunt partim, campoque recepta
Liberioris aquae pro ripis litora pulsant.
Iussit et extendit campos, subsidere valles,
Fronde tegi silvas, lapidosos surgere montes.
Utque duae dextra caelum totidemque sinistra
Parte secant zonae, quinta est ardentior illis;
Sic onus inclusum numero distinxit eodem

OVID — 5
Cura dei, totidemque plagae tellure premuntur.
Quarum quae media est, non est habitabilis aestu;
50 Nix tegit alta duas: totidem inter utramque locavit, Temperiemque dedit mixta cum frigore flamma.

[The atmosphere, with its mists and clouds, thunders and winds;
the highest spaces of pure, weightless aether.]

Imminet his ær; qui, quanto est pondere terrae
Pondus aquae levius, tanto est onerosior igni.
Illic et nebulas, illic consistere nubes
55 Iussit, et humanas motura tonitrua mentes
Et cum fulminibus facientes frigora ventos.
His quoque non passim mundi fabricator habendum
Æra permisit. Vix nunc obsistitur illis,
Cum sua quisque regant diverso flamina tractu,
60 Quin lanient mundum; tanta est discordia fratum.
Eurus ad auroram Nabataeaeque regna recessit
Persidaque et radiis iuga subdita matutinis.
Vesper et occiduo quae litora sole tepescunt,
Proxima sunt Zephyro; Scythiam septemque trionem
65 Horrifer invasit Boreas. Contraria tellus Nubibus assiduis pluvioque madescit ab Austro.
Haec super imposuit liquidum et gravitate carentem
Aethera nec quicquam terrenae faecis habentem.

[Then appeared the heavenly lights; and earth, water, air and sky were filled with forms of life.]

Vix ita limitibus dissaepserat omnia certis,
70 Cum, quae pressa diu massa latuere sub illa,
Sidera coeperunt toto effervescere caelo.
Neu regio foret ulla suis animantibus orba,
Astra tenent caeleste solum formaeque deorum,
Cesserunt nitidis habitandae i—cibus undae,
75 Terra feras cepit, volucres agi illis ær.
[And last came man, instinct with life divine, and set to rule all creatures of the earth.]

Sanctius his animal mentisque capacius altae
Decrat adhuc, et quod dominari in cetera posset.
Natus homo est: sive hunc divino semine fecit
Ille opifex rerum, mundi melioris origo,
80 Sive recens tellus seductaque nuper ab alto
Aethere cognati retinebat semina caeli,
Quam satus Iapeto mixtam fluvialibus undis Finxit in effigiem moderantum cuncta deorum;

THE CREATION OF MAN
(From a sarcophagus in the National Museum at Naples)

Prōnaque cum spectent animalia cetera terram,
85 Os homini sublīne dedit, caelumque videre
Iussit et erectos ad sidera tollere vultus.
Sic, modo quae fuerat rudis et sūne imagine, tellus
Induit ignotas hominum conversa figuras.

[The first, or Golden Age of the world was marked by universal sinlessness of man; hence sprung his peace and freedom from the necessity of toil.]

Aurea prima sata est aetas, quae vindice nullo
90 Sponte sua, sine lege fidem rectumque colebat.
Poena metusque aberant, nec verba minacia fixo
Aere legebantur, nec supplex turba timebat
Iudicis ora sui, sed erant sine vindice tuti.
Nondum caesa suis, peregrinum ut viseret orbem,
Montibus in liquidas pinus descenderat undas,
Nullaque mortales praeter sua litora norant.
Nondum praecipites cingebant oppida fossae:
Non tuba directi, non aeris cornua flexi,
Non galeae, non ensis erant: sine militia usu
Mollia securae peragebant otia gentes.
Ipsa quoque immunis rastroque intacta nec ullis
Saucia vomeribus per se dabat omnia tellus;
Contentique cibis nullo cogente creatis
Arbuteos fetus montanaque fraga legebant
Cornaque et in duris haerentia mora rubetis
Et quae deciderant patula Iovis arbores, glandes.
Ver erat aeternum, placidique tepentibus auris
Mulcebant zephyri natos sine semine flores.
Mox etiam fruges tellus inarata ferebat,
Nec renovatus ager gravidis canebat aristis:
Flumina iam lactis, iam flumina nectaris ibant,
Flavaque de viridi stillabant ilice mella.

[The Silver Age saw the establishment of the seasons and the consequent need by man of houses and the tilling of the soil.]

Postquam Saturno tenebrosa in Tartara misso
Sub Iove mundus erat, subiit argentea proles, Auro deterior, fulvo pretiosior aere,
Iuppiter antiqui contraxit tempora veris,
Perque hiemes aestusque et inaequales autumnos
Et breve ver spatiis exegit quattuor annum.
Tum primum siccis aër fervoribus ustus
Canduit, et ventis glacies stricte pendidit.
METAMORPHOSES

Tum primum subiere domus. Domus antra fuerunt Et densi frutices et vinctae cortice virgae.
Semina tum primum longis Cerealia sulcis
Obruta sunt, pressique iugo gemuere iuvenci.

[During the Brazen and the Iron Ages, the degeneracy of mankind was gradual but complete, and all the gods in anger left the earth.]

125 Tertia post illam successit aënea proles,
Saevior ingeniis et ad horrida promptior arma,
Non scelerata tamen. De duro est ultima ferro.
Protinus irrupit venae peioris in aevum
Omne nefas: fugere pudor verumque fidesque;

130 In quorum subiere locum fraudesque dolique
Insidiaque et vis et amor sceleratus habendi.
Vela dabant ventis, nec adhuc bene noverat illos
Navita; quaeque diu steterant in montibus altis, Fluctibus ignotis insultavere carinae.

Communemque prius ceu lumina solis et auras
Cautus humum longo signavit limite mensur.
Nec tantum segetes alimentaque debita dives
Poscebatur humus, sed itum est in viscera terrae:
Quasque reconderat Stygiisque admovoret umbris,

140 Effodiuntur opes, inritamenta malorum.
Iamque nocens ferrum ferroque nocentius aurum
Prodierat: prodit bellum, quod pugnat utroque, Sanguineaque manu crepitantia concutit arma.
Vivitur ex rapto; non hospes ab hospite tutus,

145 Non socer a genero; fratrum quoque gratia rara est
Imminet exitio vir coniugis, illa mariti;
Lurida terribiles miscent aconita novercae;
Filius ante diem patrios inquirit in annos.
Victa iacet pietas, et virgo caede madentes,

150 Ultima caelestum, terras Astraea reliquit.
Neve foret terris securior arduus aether,
Adfectasse ferunt regnum caeleste Gigantas, Altaque congestos struxisse ad sidera montes.
Tum pater omnipotens misso perfregit Olympum

Fulmine et excussit subiecto Pelion Qssae.
Obruta mole sua cum corpora dira iacerent,
Perfusam multo natorum sanguine Terram
Immaduisset ferunt calidumque animasse cruorem,
Et, ne nulla suae stirpis monumenta manerent,

In faciem vertisse hominum. Sed et illa propago
Contemptrix superum saevaeque avidissima caedis
Et violenta fuit: scires e sanguine natos.

[Then were the gods convoked by Jove in council on the heavenly Palatine.]

Quae pater ut summa vidit Saturnius arce, Ingemit et, facto nondum vulgata recenti,

Foeda Lycaonieae referens convivia mensae, Ingentes animo et dignas Iove concipit iras, Conciliumque vocat. Tenuit mora nulla vocatos.
Est via sublimis, caelo manifesta sereno;
Lactea nomen habet, candore notabilis ipso.

Hac iter est superis ad magni tecta Tonantis
Regalemque domum. Dextra laevaque deorum Atria nobilium valvis celebrantur apertis.
Plebs habitat diversa locis; hac fronte potentes
Caelicolae clarique suos posuere penates.

Hic locus est, quem, si verbis audacia detur,
Haud timeam magni dixisse Palatia caeli.
Ergo ubi marmoreo superi sedere recessu,
Celsior ipse loco sceptroque innixus eburno
Terrificam capitis concussit terque quaterque

Caesariem, cum qua terram mare sidera movit.
METAMORPHOSES

[Jove pronounces the doom of utter destruction which impends over sinful man.]

Talibus inde modis ora indignantia solvit:
' Non ego pro mundi regno magis anxius illa
Tempestate fui, qua centum quisque parabat Inicere anguipedum captivo bracchia caelo.

Nam quamquam ferus hostis erat, tamen illud ab uno
Corporre et ex una pendebat origine bellum.
Nunc mihi qua totum Nereus circumsonat orbem, Perdendum est mortale genus. Per flumina iuro Infera sub terra Stygii labentia luco,

Cuncta prius temptata. Sed immedicabile vulner Ense recidendum est, ne pars sincera trahatur.
Sunt mihi semidei, sunt rustica numina, nymphae
Faunique satyrique et monticola Silvani:
Quos quoniam caeli nondum dignamur honore,

Quas dedimus, certe terras habitare simus.
An satis, o superi, tutos fore creditis illos,
Cum mihi, qui fulmen, qui vos habeoque regoque, Struxerit insidias notus feritate Lycaon?'

[At the request of the assembled gods their king narrates the impiety of Lycaon, and his metamorphosis into a wolf.]

Confremuere omnes, studiiisque ardentibus ausum.

Talia deposcunt. Sic, cum manus impia saevit Sanguine Caesareo Romanum exstinguere nomen, Attonitum tanto subitae terrore ruinae
Humanum genus est totusque perhorruit orbis.
Nec tibi grata minus pietas, Auguste, tuorum est,

Quam fuit illa Iovi. Qui postquam voce manueque Murmura compressit, tenuere silentia cuncti:
Substitit ut clamor, pressus gravitate regentis,
Iuppiter hoc iterum sermone silentia rupit:
Ille quidem poenas, curam hanc dimittite, solvit.
Quod tamen admissum, quae sit vindicta, docebo.
Contigerat nostras infamia temporis aures:
Quam cupiens falsam, summo delabor Olympo
Et deus humana lustro sub imagine terras.
Longa mora est, quantum noxae sit ubique repertum, Enumerare. Minor fuit ipsa infamia vero.
Maenalae transieram latebris horrenda ferarum
Et cum Cyllene gelidi pineta Lycaei:
Arcadis hinc sedes et inhospita tecta tyranni
Ingredior, traheant cum sera crepuscula noctem.
Signa dedi, venisse deum, vulgusque precari Coeperat. Inrident primo pia vota Lycaon, Mox ait "experiar, deus hic, discrimine aperto,
An sit mortalis. Nee erit dubitabile verum."
Nocte gravem somno necopina perdere morte
Me parat: haec illi placet experientia veri.
Nec contentus eo, missi de gente Molossa
Obsidis unius iugulum mucrone resolvit,
Atque ita semineces partim ferventibus artus
Mollit aquis, partim subiecto torruit igni.
Quos simul imposuit mensis, ego vindice flamma
In dominum dignosque everti tecta Penates.
Territus ipse fugit, nactusque silentia ruris
Exululat, frustraque loqui conatur; ab ipso
Conligito as rabiem, solitaeque cupidine caedis
Vertitur in pecudes, et nunc quoque sanguine gaudet;
In villos abeunt vestes, in crura lacerti:
Fit lupus, et veteris servat vestigia formae.
Canities eadem est, eadem violentia vultus,
Idem oculi lacent, eadem feritatis imago.
Occidit una domus: sed non domus una perire
Digna fuit: qua terra patet, fera regnat Erinys;
METAMORPHOSES

In facinus iurasse putes. Dent ocius omnes Quas meruere pati, sic stat sententia, poenas.'

[Jove promises the gods a better race of worshipers, and considers the best method for the destruction of the world.]

Dicta Iovis pars voce probant stimulosque frementi 245 Adiciunt, alii partes adsensibus implent.
Est tamen humani generis iactura dolori
Omnibus, et, quae sit terrae mortalibus orbae
Forma futura, rogant: quis sit laturus in aras
Tura? ferisne paret populandás tradere terras?
250 Talia quaerentes, sibi enim fore cetera curae,
Rex superum trepidare vetat, subolemque priori
Dissimilem populo promittit origine mira.
Iamque erat in totas sparsurus fulmina terras:
Sed timuit, ne forte sacer tot ab ignibus aether
255 Conciperet flammás, longusque ardesceret axis.
Esse quoque in fatis reminiscitur, adfore tempus,
Quo mare, quo tellus correptaque regia caeli
Ardeat et mundi moles operosa labore.
Tela reponuntur manibus fabricata Cyclopum.
260 Poena placet diversa, genus mortale sub undis
Perdere et ex omni nimbos demittere caelo.

[Jove determines to destroy mankind by universal flood.]

Protinus Aeoliiis Aquilonem claudit in antris
Et quaecumque fugant inductas flamina nubes, Emittitque Notum. Madidis Notus evolat alis, 265 Terribilem picea tectus caligine vultum:
Barba gravis nimbis, canis fluit unda capillis,
Fronte sedent nebulae, rorant pennaeque sinusque
Utque manu lata pendentia nubila pressit,
Fít frágor; hinc densi funduntur ab aethere nimbì.
74 THE WORKS OF OVID

270 Nuntia Iunonis varios induta colores
Concipit Iris aquas, alimentaque nubibus adfert.
Sternuntur segetes et deplorata coloni
Vota iacent, longique perit labor inritus anni.
Nec caelo contenta suo est Iovis ira, sed illum 275 Caeruleus frater iuvat auxiliaribus undis.
Convocat hic amnes. Qui postquam tecta tyranni Intravere sui, ‘non est hortamine longo
Nunc’ ait ‘utendum. Vires effundite vestras, Sic opus est. Aperite domos, ac mole remotas
280 Fluminibus vestris totas im mittite habenas.’
Iussarat. Hi redeunt, ac fontibus ora relaxant, Et defrenato volvuntur in aequora cursu.
Ipse tridentes suo terram percussit. At illa Intremuit motuque vias patefecit aquarum.
285 Exspatiata ruunt per apertos flumina campos,
Cumque satis arbusta simul pecudesque virosque
Tectaque, cumque suis rapiunt penetralia sacris.
Siqua domus mansit potuitque resistere tanto
Indicta malo, culmen tamen altior huius
290 Unda tegit, pressaeque latent sub gurgite turres.
Iamque mare et tellus nullum discrimen habebant:
Omnia pontus erant. Deerant quoque litora ponto.
Occupat hic collem: cumba sedet alter adunca
Et ducit remos illic ubi nuper ararat;
295 Ille super segetes aut mersae culmina villae
Navigat, hic summa piscem deprendit in ulmo;
Figitur in viridi, si fors tuit, ancora prato,
Aut subiecta terunt curvae vineta carinae.
Et, modo qua graciles gramen carpserae capellae,
300 Nunc ibi deformes ponunt sua corpora phocae.
Mirantur sub aqua lucos urbesque domosque.
Nereides. Silvasque tenent delphines, et altis Incursant ramis agitataque robora pulsant.
Nat lupus inter oves, fulvos vehit unda leones,
Unda vehit tugres. Nec vires fulminis apro, Crura nec ablato prosunt velocia cervo.
Quaesitisque diu terris, ubi sistere detur,
In mare laevas volucris vaga decidit alis.
Obruerat tumulos immensa licentia ponti,
Pulsabantque novi montana cacumina fluctus.
Maxima pars unda rapitur: quibus unda pepercit,
Illos longa domant inopi ieiunia victu.

[Pyrrha and Deucalion alone survive. Their boat finds resting place on Mount Parnassus, and the floods are recalled from the face of the earth.]

Separat Aonios Oetaeis Phocis ab arvis,
Terra ferax, dum terra fuit: sed tempore in illo
Pars maris et latus subitarum campus aquarum.
Mons ibi verticibus petit arduus astra duobus,
Nomine Parnasus, superantque cacumina nubes.
Hic ubi Deucalion, nam cetera texerat aequor,
Cum consorte tori parva raete vectus adhaesit,

Corcydas nymphas et numina montis adorant,
Fatidicamque Themis, quae tunc oracula tenebat.
Non illo melior quisquam nec amantior aequi
Vir fuit, aut illa metuentior ulla deorum.
Iuppiter ut liquidis stagnare paludibus orbem,

Et superesse virum de tot modo milibus unum,
Et superesse videt de tot modo milibus unam,
Innocuos ambos, cultores numinis ambos,
Nubila disiarcit, nimbisque aquilone remotis
Et caelo terras ostendit et aethera terris.

Nec maris ira manet, positoque tricuspide telo
Mulcet aquas rector pelagi, supraque profundum
Exstantem atque umeros innato murice tectum
THE WORKS OF OVID

Caeruleum Tritona vocat, conchaeque sonanti Inspirare iubet, fluctusque et flumina signo.
Iam revocare dato. Cava bucina sumitur illi Tortilis, in latum quae turbine crescit ab imo, Bucina, quae medio concepit ubi æëra ponto,
Litora voce replet sub utroque iacentia Phoebi.
Tunc quoque, ut ora dei madida sorantia barba
Contigit, et eccinit iussos inflata receptus,
Omnibus audita est telluris et aequoris undis,
Et quibus est undis audita, coœrcuit omnes.
Flumina subsidunt, collesque exire videntur:
Iam mare litus habet, plenos capitis alveus amnes,
Surgit humus; crescent loca decrescentibus undis.
Postque diem longam nudata cacumina silvae
Ostendunt, limunque tenent in fronde relictum.

[In mutual grief for lost humanity, they inquire of the oracle how the earth may again be peopled.]

Redditus orbis erat. Quem postquam vidit inanem Et desolatas agere alta silentia terras, Deucalion lacrimis ita Pyrrham adfatur obortis:
'O soror, o coniunx, o femina sola superstes,
Quam commune mihi genus et patruelis origo,
Deinde torus iunxit, nunc ipsa pericula iungunt:
Terrarum, quascunque vident occasus et ortus,
Nos duo turba sumus: possedit cetera pontus.
Haecc quoque adhuc vitae non est fiducia nostrae Certa satis. Terrent etiamnunc nubila mentem.
Quis tibi, si sine me fatis erepta fuisses,
Nunc animus, miseranda, forct? Quo sola timorem Ferre modo posses? Quo consolante doleres?
Namque ego, crede mihi, si te quoque pontus haberet.
Te sequeret, coniunx, et me quoque pontus haberet.
METAMORPHOSES

O utinam possem populos reparare paternis
Artibus atque animas formatae infundere terrae!

Nunc genus in nobis restat mortale duobus;
Sic visum est superis: hominumque exempla manemus.'
Dixerat, et flebant. Placuit caeleste precari Numen, et auxilium per sacras quaerere sortes.
Nulla mora est, adeunt pariter Cephisidas undas,

Ut nondum liquidas, sic iam vada nota secantes.
Inde ubi libatos inroravere liquores
Vestibus et capiti, flectunt vestigia sanctae
Ad delubra deae, quorum fastigia turpi
Pallebant musco stabantque sine ignibus arae.

Ut templi tetigere gradus, procumbit uterque
Pronus humi, gelidoque pavens dedit oscula saxo.
Atque ita 'si precibus' dixerunt 'numina iustis
Victa remollescunt, si flectitur ira deorum, Dic, Themi, qua generis damnnum reparable nostri

Arte sit, et mersis fer opem, mitissima, rebus.'

[Bidden to cast behind them their parent's bones, they are horrified stil the meaning of the oracle flashes upon Deucalion.]

Mota dea est sortemque dedit, 'discedite templo,
Et velate caput, cinctasque resolvite vestes,
Ossaque post tergum magnae iactate parentis.'
Obstipuere diu, rumpitque silentia voce

Pyrrha prior, iussisque deae parere recusat,
Detque sibi veniam, pavido rogat ore, pavetque
Laedere iactatis maternas ossibus umbras.
Interea repetunt caccis obscura latebris
Verba datae sortis secum, inter seque volutant;

Unde Promethides placidis Epimethida dictis
Mulcet et 'aut fallax' ait 'est sollertia nobis,
Aut pia sunt nullumque nefas oracula suadent.
Magna parens terra est: lapides in corpore terrae
Ossa reror dici: iacere hos post terga iubemur."

[S: then they throw behind them the stones of mother earth, which are straightway metamorphosed into men and women, and thus was the world reperplexed.]

Coniugis augurio quamquam Titania mota est,
Spes tamen in dubio est: adeo caelestibus ambo
Diffidunt monitis. Sed quid temptare nocebit?
Descendunt velantque caput tunicasque recingunt
Et iussos lapides sua post vestigia mittunt.

Saxa — quis hoc credat, nisi sit pro teste vetustas?
Ponere duritiem coeperu suumque rigorem,
Mollirique mora, mollitaque ducere formam.
Mox ubi creverunt, naturaque mitior illis
Contigit, ut quaedam, sic non manifesta, videri

Forma potest hominis, sed uti est de marmore coeptis
Non exacta satis rudibusque simillima signis.
Quae tamen ex illis aliquo pars umida suco
Et terrena fuit, versa est in corporis usum:
Quod solidum est flectique nequit, mutatur in ossa:

Quae modo vena fuit, sub eodem nomine mansit:
Inque brevi spatio superorum numine saxa
Missae viri manibus faciend traxere virorum,
Et de femineo reparata est femina iactu.
Inde genus durum sumus experiensque laborum,

Et documenta damus, qua simus origine nati.

[But the lower forms of life were recreated by spontaneous genera tion from the earth.]

Cetera diversis tellus animalia formis
Sponte sua peperit, postquam vetus umor ab igne
Percaluit solis, caenumque udaeque paludes
Intumueret aestu, fecundaque semina rerum
Vivaci nutrita solo, ceu matris in alvo,
Creverunt faciemque aliquam cepere morando.
Sic ubi deseruit madidos septemfluus agros
Nilus et antiquo sua flumina reddidit alveo,
Ætherioque recens exarsit sidere limus,
Plurima cultores versis animalia glaebis
Inveniunt, et in his quaedam modo coepta sub ipsum
Nascendi spatium, quaedam imperfecta suisque
Trunca vident numeris, et eodem in corpore saepe
Altera pars vivit, rudis est pars altera tellus.
Quippe ubi temperiem sumpsere umorque calorque,
Concipiunt, et ab his oriuntur cuncta duobus.
Cumque sit ignis aquae pugnax, vapor umidus omnes
Res creat, et discors concordia fetibus apta est.
Ergo ubi diluvio tellus lutulenta recenti
Solibus aetheriiis almoque recanduit aequu,
Edidit innumeris species, partimque figuras
Rettulit antiquas, partim nova monstra creavit.

[Now, among these creatures was the monster serpent, Python, which Apollo slew; and in commemoration of this deed he established the Pythian Games.]

illa quidem nollet, sed te quoque, maxime Python,
Tum genuit, populisque novis, incognite serpens,
Terror eras; tantum spatii de monte tenebas.
Hunc deus arcitenens, et numquam talibus armis
Ante nisi in dammis capreisque fugacibus usus,
Mille gravem telis, exhausta paene pharetra,
Perdidit effuso per vulnera nigra veneno.
Neve operis famam possit delere vetustas
Instituit sacros celebri certamine ludos
Pythia perdomitae serpentis nomine dictos.
His iuvenum quicumque manu pedibusve rotave
Vicerat, aesculeae capiebat frondis honorem.
Nondum laurus erat, longoque decentia crine
Tempora cingebat de qualibet arbore Phoebus.

[Stung by the taunts of Apollo, Cupid, in revenge, inspires the archer god with a mad passion for Daphne, while the latter is made proof against all approach of love.]

Primus amor Phoebi Daphne Peneia, quem non Fors ignara dedit, sed saeva Cupidinis ira.
Delius hunc nuper, victo serpente superbus,
Viderat adducto flectentem cornua nervo,
'Quid que tibi, lascive puer, cum fortibus armis?'
Dixerat; 'ista decent umeros gestamina nostros,
Qui dare certa ferae, dare vulnera possimus hosti,
Qui modo pestiferum tot ingera ventre prementem Stravimus innumeris tumidum Pythona sagittis.
'Tu face nescio quos esto contentus amores
Inritare tua, nec laudes adseres nostras.'
Filius huic Veneris 'figat tuus omnia, Phoebi,
Te meus arcus;' ait 'quantoque animalia cedunt
Cuncta deo, tanto minor est tua gloria nostra.'
Dixit, et eliso percussis aëre pennis
Impiger umbrosa Parnasi constitit arce
Eque sagittifera prompitis duo tela pharetra
Diversorum operum; fugat hoc, facit illud amorem.
Quod facit, hamatum est et cuspide fulget acuta:
Quod fugat, obtusum est et habet sub harundine plumbum.
Hoc deus in nympha Peneide fixit; at illo Laesit Apollineas traiecta per ossa medullas.
Protinus alter amat; fugit altera nomen amantis,
Silvarum tenebris captivaruemque ferarum
Exuvius gaudens innuptaeque aemula Phoebes.
Vitta coercerbat positos sine lege capillos.
ti illam petiere, illa aversata petentes atiens expersque viri nemorum avia lustrat, quid Hymen, quid amor, quid sint conubia, curat \[\text{pater dixit ‘generum mihi, filia, debes.’}\]
\[\text{Saepe pater dixit ‘debes mihi, nata, nepotes.’}\]
illa, velut crimen taedas exosa iugales
Pulchra verecundo suffunditur ora rubore,
\[\text{Inque patris blandis haerens cervice lacertis}\]
\[\text{‘Da mihi perpetua, genitor carissime,’ dixit}\]
\[\text{‘Virginitate frui. Dedit hoc pater ante Dianae.’}\]
\[\text{Ille quidem obsequitur. Sed te decor iste quod optas}\]
Esse vetat, votoque tuo tua forma repugnat.
\[\text{Phoebus amat, visaeque cupit conubia Daphnes,}\]
\[\text{Quodque cupit, sperat; suaque illum oracula fallunt.}\]
\[\text{Utque leves stipulae demptis adolentur aristis,}\]
\[\text{Ut facibus saepes ardent, quas forte viator}\]
\[\text{Vel nimis admovit, vel iam sub luce reliquit;}\]
\[\text{Sic Deus in flammas abiiit, sic pectore toto}\]
\[\text{Uritur et sterilem sperando nutrit amorem.}\]
\[\text{Spectat inornatos collo pendere capillos,}\]
\[\text{Et ‘quid, si comantur?’ ait. Videt igne micantes}\]
\[\text{Sideribus similes oculos, videt oscula, quae non}\]
\[\text{Est vidisse satis; laudat digitosque manusque}\]
\[\text{Bracchiaque et nudos media plus parte lacertos:}\]
\[\text{Si qua latent, meliora putat. Fugit oior aura}\]
\[\text{Illae levi, neque ad haec revocantis verba resistit:}\]

\[\text{[Apollo pleads his cause to the fleeing nymph, but in vain.]}\]
\[\text{‘Nympha, precor, Penel, mane! non sequor hostis:}\]
\[\text{Nympha, mane! sic agna lupum, sic cerva leonem,}\]
\[\text{Sic aquilam penna fugiunt trepidante columbae,}\]
\[\text{Hostes quaeque suos. Amor est mihi causa sequendi.}\]
\[\text{Me miserum! ne prona cadas, indignave laedi}\]
\[\text{Ovid — 6}\]
Crura notent sentes, et simul tibi causa doloris.

Cui placeas, inquire tamen. Non incola montis,
Non ego sum pastor, non hic armenta gregesque Horridus observo. Nescis, temeraria, nescis,

515 Quem fugias, ideoque fugis. Mihi Delphica tellus Et Claros et Tenedos Patareaque regia servit.
Iuppiter est genitor. Per me quod eritque fuitque Estque, patet: per me concordant carmina nervis.
Certa quidem nostra est, nostra tamen una sagitta

520 Certior, in vacuo quae vulnera pectore fecit.
Inventum medicina meum est, opiferque per orbem
Dicor, et herbarum subiecta potentia nobis.
Ei mihi, quod nullis amor est sanabilis herbis,
Nec prosunt domino quae prosunt omnibus artes!

[Unable to escape, Daphne invokes the aid of her father, the river god Peneus, and by him is changed into a laurel tree.]

525 Plura locuturum timido Penea cursu
Fugit cunque ipso verba imperfecta reliquit,
Tum quoque visa decens. Nudabant corpora venti, Obviaque adversas vibrabant flamina vestes,
Et levis impulsos retro dabat aura capillos;

530 Auctaque forma fuga est. Sed enim non sustinet ultra Perdere blanditiæ juvenes deus, utque movebat
Ipse amor, admisso sequitur vestigia passu.
Ut canis in vacuo leporem cum Gallicus arvo
Vidit, et hic praedam pedibus petit, ille salutem;

535 Alter inhaesuro similis iam iamque tenere
Sperat, et extento stringit vestigia rostro;
Alter in ambiguo est, an sit compressus, et ipsis
Morsibus eripitur tangentiaque ora relinquit:
METAMORPHOSES

Sic deus et virgo, est hic spe celer, illa timore.
540 Qui tamen sequitur, pennis adiutus amoris
Ocior est requiemque negat tergoque fugacis
Imminet et crinem sparsum cervicibus adflat.
Viribus absuntis expalluit illa, citaque
Victrabore fugae, spectans Peneidas undas, 545 'Fer pater' inquit 'opem! Tellus,' ait, 'hisce, vel istam, Quae facit, ut laedar, mutando perde figuram!'
Vix prece finita, torpor gravis occupat artus,
Molilia cinguntur tenui praecordia libro,
550 In frondem crines, in ramos brachia crescunt:
Pes modo tam velox pigris radicibus haeret,
Ora cacumem obit. Remanet nitor unus in illa.

[Apollo embraces the tree and vows that hereafter the laurel shall be sacred to him.]

Hanc quoque Phoebus amat, positaque in stipite dextra
Sentit adhuc trepidae novo sub cortice pectus, 555 Complexusque suis ramos, ut membra, lacertis
Oscula dat ligno: refugit tamen oscula lignum.
Cui deus 'at quoniam coniunx mea non potes esse, Arbor eris certe' dixit 'mea. Semper habebunt
Te coma, te citharae, te nostrae, laure, pharetrae.
560 Tu ducibus Latiiis aderis, cum laeta Triumphum
Vox canet et visent longas Capitolia pompas.
Postibus Augustis eadem fidissima custos
Ante fores stabis, mediamque tuebère quercum.
Utque meum intonsis caput est iuvenale capillis,
565 Tu quoque perpetuos semper gere frondis honores.'
Finierat Paean. Factis modo laurea ramis
Adnuit, utque caput visa est agitasse cacumen.

[Now come the tributary river gods to condole with Peneus upon the loss of his daughter; all save Inachus, who himself bemoans the loss of his own daughter Io.]
THE WORKS OF OVID

Est nemus Haemoniae, praerupta quod undique claudit
Silva, vocant Tempe, Per quae Penēus ab imo
Effusus Pindo spumosis volvitur undis
Deiectuque gravi tenues agitantia fumos
Nubila conducit, summisque aspergine silvis
Impluit et sonitu plus quam vicina fatigat.
Haec domus, haec sedes, haec sunt penetralia magni
Amnis. In his, residens facto de cautibus antro, Undis iura dabat nymphisque co lentibus undas.
Conveniunt illuc popularia flumin a primum,
Nescia, gratentur consolenturne parentem,
Populi fer Spercheos et irrequietus Enipeus

Apidanusque senex lenisque Amphrysos et Aenas, Moxque amnes alii, qui, qua texit impetus illos,
In mare deducunt fessas erroribus undas.
Inachus unus abest imoque reconditus antro
Fletibus auget aquas, natamque miserrimus Io

Luget ut amissam. Nescit, vitane fruatur,
An sit apud manes. Sed quam non inventit usquam, Esse putat nusquam atque animo peiora veretur.

[For Io. beloved of Jove, had been transformed by him into a heifer in order to elude the jealous watchfulness of Juno. But the goddess, suspecting the truth, begged the heifer as a gift, and placed her under the watchful care of Argus.]

Viderat a patrio redeunte Iuppiter illum
Flumine et ‘o virgo Iove digna tuoque beatum
Nescio quem factura toro, pete’ dixerat ‘umbras
Altorum nemorum,’ et nemorum monstraverat umbras, ‘Dum calet et medio sol est altissimus orbe.
Quodsi sola times latebras intrare ferarum,
Praeside tuta deo nemorum secreta subibus,
Nec de plebe deo, sed qui caelestia magna Sceptra manu teneo, sed qui vaga fulmina mitto.
Ne fuge me!’ fugiebat enim. Iam pascua Lernae Consitaque arboribus Lyrcea reliquerat arva, Cum deus inducta latas caligine terras

Occuluit tenuitque fugam rapuitque pudorem.
Interea medios Iuno despexit in Argos;
Et noctis faciem nebulas fecisse voluces
Sub nitido mirata die; non fluminis illas
Esse, nec uamenti sensit tellure remitti,

Atque suus coniunx ubi sit, circumspicit, ut quae
Deprensi totiens iam nosset furtâ mariti.
Quem postquam caelo non repperit, ‘aut ego fallor,
Aut ego laedor’ ait, delapsaque ab aethere summo
Constitit in terris, nebulasque recedere iussit.

Coniugis adventum praesenserat, inque nitentem
Inachidis vultus mutaverat ille iuvencam.
Bos quoque formosa est. Speciem Saturnia vaccae Quamquam invita, probat nec non et cuius, et unde, Quove sit armento, veri quasi nescia quaerit.

Iuppiter e terra genitam mentitur, ut auctor

Desinat inquiri. Petit hanc Saturnia munus.
Quid faciat? crudele, suos addicere amores;
Non dare, suspectum. Pudor est qui suadeat illinc, Hinc dissuadet amor. Victus pudor esset amore:

Sed leve si munus sociae generisque torique
Vacca negaretur, poterat non vacca videri.
Paelice donata non protinus exuit omnem
Diva metum, timuitque Iovem et fuit anxia furti, Donec Arestoridae servandam tradidit Argo.

[Now Argus is a monster equipped with a hundred eyes, and all efforts of Io to escape him are in vain. Her identity is at last discovered by her father, who bewails her with unavailing grief.]
Centum luminibus cinctum capuṣ Argus habebat:
Inde suis vicibus capiebant bina quietem,
Cetera servabat atque in statione manebant.
Constiterat quocumque modo, spectabat ad Io:
Ante oculos Io quamvis aversus habebat.

Luce sinit pasci. Cum sol tellure sub alta est,
Claudit et indigno circumdat vincula collo.
Frondibus arbores et amara pascitur herba,
Proque toro terrae non semper gramen habenti
Incubat infelix, limosaque flumina potat.

Illa etiam supplex Argo cum brachchia vellet
Tendere, non habuit quae brachchia tenderet Argo;
Conatoque queri mugitus edidit ore,
Pertimuitque sonos propriaque exterrita voce est.
Venit et ad ripas, ubi ludere saepe solebat,

Inachidias: rictus novaque ut conspexit in unda
Cornua, pertimuit seque externata refugit.
Naides ignorant, ignorat et Inachus ipse, Quae sit. At illa patrem sequitur sequiturque sorores, Et patitur tangi seque admirantibus offert.

Decerptas senior porrexerat Inachus herbas:
Illa manus lambit patriisque dat oscula palmis,
Nec retinet lacrimas et, si modo verba sequuntur,
Oret opem nomenque suum casusque loquatur.
Littera pro verbis, quam pes in pulvere duxit,

Corporis indicium mutati triste peregit.
'Me miserum!' ex clamavit pater Inachus, inque gementis Cornibus et niveae pendens cervice iuvencae
'Me miserum!' ingeminat, 'tune es quaesita per

Nata, mihi terras? tu non inventa reperta

Luctus eras levior. Retices, nec mutua nostris Dicta referes, alto tantum suspiria ducis
MERCURY
(From the National Museum at Naples)

To face p. 87
METAMORPHOSES

Pectore, quodque unum potes, ad mea verba remugis.
At tibi ego ignarus thalamos taedasque parabam,
Spesque fuit generi mihi prima, secunda nepotum.
660 De greges nunc tibi vir, nunc de greges natus habendus.
Nec finire licet tantos mihi morte dolores:
Sed nocet esse deum, praecususque ianua leti
Aeternum nostros luctus extendit in aevum.’
Talia maerentes stellatus submovet Argus,
665 Ereptamque patri diversa in pascua natam
Abstrahit. Inde procul montis sublime cacumen Occupat, unde sedens partes speculatur in omnes.

[Jove in pity sends Mercury to slay Argus and release the hapless Io.
Mercury approaches the monster in the disguise of a shepherd, playing upon his pipes.]

Nec superum rector mala tanta Phoronidos ultra Ferre potest, natumque vocat, quem lucida partu 670 Pleis enixa est, letoque det, imperat, Argum.
Parva mora est alas pedibus virgamque potenti
Somniferam sumpsisse manu tegumenque capillis:
Haec ubi disposit, patria Iove natus ab arce
Desiliet in terras, illic tegumenque removit 675 Et posuit pennas: tantummodo virga retenta est.
Hae agit ut pastor per devia rura capellas,
Dum venit, abductas, et structis cantat avenis.
Voce nova captus custos Iunonius. ‘At tu,
Quisquis es, hoc poteras mecum considere saxo,’ 680 Argus ait, ‘neque enim pecori fecundior ullo
Herba loco est, aptamque vides pastoribus umbram.’
Sedit Atlantiades, et euntem multa loquendo
Detinuit sermone diem, iunctisque canendo
Vincere harundinibus servantia lumina temptat.
685 Ille tamen pugnat molles evincere somnos
Et, quamvis sopor est oculorum parte receptus,
Parte tamen vigilat. Quaerit quoque—namque reperta
Fistula nuper erat—qua sit ratione reperta.

[At the request of Argus, the seeming shepherd recounts the origin of the pipes; how the nymph Syrinx, beloved of Pan, endeavoring to escape, was changed into whispering reeds. These the god, in memory of her, had fashioned into the Syrinx, or pipes of Pan.]

Tum deus 'Arcadiae gelidis in montibus' inquit
690 'Inter hamadryadas celeberrima Nonacrinas
Naias una fuit; nymphae Syringa vocabant.
Non semel et satyros eluserat illa sequentes
Et quoscumque deos umbrosave silva feraxve
Rus habet. Ortygiam studiis ipsaque colebat 695 Virginitate deam. Ritu quoque cincta Dianae Falleret, et credi posset Latonia, si non Corneus huic arcus, si non foret aureus illi.
Sic quoque fallebat. Redeuntem colle Lycaeo
Pan videt hanc, pinoque caput praecinctus acuta 700 Talia verba refert'—restabat verba referre,
Et precibus spretis fugisse per avia nympha,
Donec harenosi placidum Ladonis ad amnem
Venerit. Hic illam, cursum impedientibus undis, Ut se mutarent liquidas orasse sorores:
705 Panaque cum prensam sibi iam Syringa putaret, Corpore pro nymphae calamos tenuisse palustres.
Dumque ibi suspirat, motos in harundine ventos
Effecisse sonum tenuem similemque querenti;
Arte nova vocisque deum dulcedine captum
710 'Hoc mihi concilium tecum' dixisse 'manebit!'
Atque ita disparibus calamis compagine cerae
Inter se iunctis nomen tenuisse puellae.

[Argus, having fallen asleep meanwhile, is slain by Mercury; and his hundred staring eyes are placed by Juno in her peacock's tail.]
Talia dicturus vidit Cyllenius omnes
Succubuisse oculos adopertaque lumina somno.

Supprimit extemplo vocem, firmatque soporem
Languida permulcens medicata lumina virga:
Nec mora, falcato nutantem vulnerat ense
Qua collo est confine caput, saxoque cruentum
Deicit et maculat praeruptam sanguine rupem.

Arge, iaces. Quodque in tot lumina lumen habebas, Exstinctum est, centumque oculos nox occupat una.
Excipit hos volucrisque suae Saturnia pennis
Conlocat et gemmis caudam stellantibus implet.

[Juno, in a rage, drives the heifer, Io, by a gadfly’s sting through many lands, until at length she comes to Egypt. Here Jove, to whom she appeals in her helpless flight, restores her to her own form, and in this form she is worshiped as a goddess by the Egyptians.]

Protinus exarsit, nec tempora distulit irae,

Horriferamque oculis animoque obiecit Erinyn
Paelicis Argolicae, stimulusque in pectore caecos Condidit, et profugam per totum terruit orbem.
Ultimus immenso restabas, Nile, labori.
Quem simulac tetigit, positis in margine ripae

Procubuit genibus, resupinoque ardua collo
Quos potuit solos tollens ad sidera vultus,
Et gemitu et lacrimis et luctisono mugitu
Cum Iove visa queri est finemque orare malorum.
Coniugis ille suae complexus colla lacertis,

Finiat ut poenas tandem, rogat, ‘in’ que ‘futurum
Pone metus,’ inquit, ‘numquam tibi causa doloris
Haec erit,’ et Stygias iubet hoc audire paludes.
Ut lenita dea est, vultus capit illa prioris,
Fitque quod ante fuit. Fugiunt e corpore saetae,

Cornua decrescunt, fit luminis artior orbis,
Contrahitur rictus, redeunt umerique manusque,
Ungulaque in quinos dilapsa absimitur ungues.
De bove nil superest, formae nisi candor, in illa.
Officioque pedum nympe contenta duorum
745 Ergititur, metuitque loqui, ne more iuvencae
Mugiat, et timide verba intermissa retemptat.
Nunc dea linigera colitur celeberrima turba.

Now Epaphus, the son of Io, had among his companions one Phaëthon, who claimed to be the son of Phoebus. Epaphus tauntingly disputes this claim. Whereupon Phaëthon seeks out his mother, Clymene, and begs for a confirmation of his parentage. Clymene sends him to Phoebus himself for proof of her assertion.

Huic Epaphus magni genitus de semine tandem Creditur esse Iovis, perchque urbes iuncta parenti 750 Templa tenet. Fuit huic animis aequalis et annis Sole satus Phaëthon. Quem quondam magna loquentem
Nec sibi cedentem Phoeboque parente superbum
Non tulit Inachides, 'matri' que ait 'omnia demens Credis, et es timidus genitoris imagine falsi.'
755 Erubuit Phaëthon, iramque pudore repressit, Et tulit ad Clymenem Epaphi convicia matrem:
'Quoque magis doleas, genetrix,' ait 'ille ego liber, Ille ferox tacui. Pudet haec opprobria nobis Et dici potuisse et non potuisse refelli.
760 At tu, si modo sum caelesti stirpe creatus,
Ede notam tanti generis, meque adsere caelo.'
Dixit et implicuit materno brachia collo,
Perque suum Meropisque caput taedasque sororum, \[\text{\textasciitilde} \]
Traderet, oravit, veri sibi signa parentis.
765 Ambiguum, Clymene, precibus Phaëthontis, an ira Mota magis dicti sibi criminis, utraque caelo
Brachia porrexit, spectansque ad lumina solis
'Per iubar hoc' inquit 'radiis insigne coruscis,
METAMORPHOSES

Nate, tibi iuro, quod nos auditque videtque,
Hoc te, quem spectas, hoc te, qui temperat orbem,
Sole satum. Si dicta loquor, neget ipse videndum
Se mihi, sitque oculis lux ista novissima nostris.
Nec longus patrios labor est tibi nosse penates.
Unde oritur, domus est terrae contermina nostrae.

Si modo fert animus, gradere, et scitabere ab ipso.'
Emicat extemplo laetus post talia matris
Dicta suae Phaëthon et concipit aethera mente, Aethiopasque suos positosque sub ignibus Indos Sidereis transit patriosque adit impiger ortus.

Book II

[Phaëthon comes to the palace of the sun god, and is lost in wonder at its magnificence.]

Regia Solis erat sublimibus alta columnis,
Clara micante auro flammisque imitante pyropo;
Cuius ebur nitidum fastigia summa tegebat,
Argenti biformes radiabant lumine valvae.

Materiam superabat opus. Nam Mulciber illic
Aequora caelarat medias cingentia terras
Terrarumque orbem caelumque, quod imminet orbi.
Caeruleos habet unda deos, Tritona canorum,
Proteaque ambiguum, ballaenarumque prementem

Aegaeona suis immania terga lacertis,
Doridaque et natas, quarum pars nare videtur,
Pars in mole sedens virides siccare capillos, Pisce vehi quaedam. Facies non omnibus una,
Nec diversa tamen; qualem decet esse sororum.

Terra viros urbesque gerit silvasque ferasque
Fluminaque et nymphae et cetera numina ruris.
Haec super imposita est caeli fulgentis imago,
Signaque sex foribus dextris, totidemque sinistris.
Quo simul acclivo Clymenea limite proles
20 Venit et intravit dubitati tecta parentis,
Protinus ad patrios sua fert vestigia vultus
Consistitque procul: neque enim propiora ferebat
Lumina. Purpura velatus veste sedebat
In solio Phoebus claris lucente smaragdis.

A dextra laevaque Dies et Mensis et Annus Saeculaque et posita spatiis aequalibus Horae, Verque novum stabat cinctum florente corona.
Stabat nuda Aestas et spicua serta gerebat,
Stabat et Autumnus calcatis sordidus uvis
30 Et glacialis Hiems canos hirsuta capillos.

[Seeking Phoebus, he asks for proofs of his sonship. Obtaining in proof of this the promise of any boon which he may ask, he at once claims the privilege of driving for a single day the glorious chariot of the sun.]

Inde loco medius rerum novitate paventem
Sol oculis iuvenem, quibus aspicit omnia, vidit, ‘Quae’ que ‘viae tibi causa? Quid hac’ ait ‘arce petisti, Progenies, Phaëthon, haud inftianda parenti?’

Ille refert ‘o lux immensi publica mundi,
Phoebe pater, si das huius mihi nominis usum,
Nec falsa Clymene culpam sub imagine celat:
Pignera da, genitor, per quae tua vera propago
Credar, et hunc animis errorem detrahe nostris.’

Dixerat. At genitor circum caput omne micantes Deposit radios, propiusque accedere iussit,
Amplexuque dato ‘nec tu meus esse negari
Dignus es, et Clymene veros’ ait ‘edidit ortus.
Quoque minus dubites, quodvis pete munus, ut illud
METAMORPHOSES

45 Me tribuente feras. Promissis testis adesto Dis iuranda palus, oculis incognita nostris.'
Vix bene desierat, currus rogat ille paternos
Inque diem alipedum ius et moderamen equorum.

[Phoebus attempts to dissuade him from this by narrating the difficulties and dangers of such a task.]

Paenituit iurasse patrem. Qui terque quaterque Concitiens inlustre caput 'temeraria' dixit
'Vox mea facta tua est. Utinam promissa liceret
Non dare! confiteor, solum hoc tibi, nate, negarem.
Dissuadere licet. Non est tua tuta voluntas.
Magna petis, Phaëthon, et quae nec viribus istis Munera convenient nec tam puerilibus annis.
Sors tua mortalis. Non est mortale quod optas.
Plus etiam, quam quod superis contingere fas est,
Nescius adfectas. Placeat sibi quisque licebit,
Non tamen ignifer o quisquam consistere in axe

50 Me valet excepto. Vasti quoque rector Olympi, Qui fera terribili iaculatur fulmina dextra,
Non agat hos currus. Et quid Iove maius habemus?
Ardua prima via est et qua vix mane recentes
Enitantur equi. Medio est altissima caelo,

55 Unde mare et terras ipsi mihi saepe videre
Fit timor, et pavida trepidat formidine pectus.
Ultima prona via est et eget moderamine certo:
Tunc etiam quae me subiectis excipit undis,
Ne ferar in praeceps, Tethys solet ipsa vereri.

60 Adde quod adsidua rapitur vertigine caelum
Sideraque alta trahit celerique volumine torquet.
Nitor in adversum, nec me qui cetera, vincit
Impetus, et rapido contrarius evehor orbi.
Finge datos currus: quid ages? Poterisne rotatis Obvius ire polis, ne te citus auferat axis?
Forsitan et lucos illic urbesque deorum
Concipias animo delubraque ditia donis
Esse? Per insidias iter est formasque ferarum.
Utque viam teneas nulloque errore traharis,

Per tamen adversi gradieris cornua Tauri
Haemoniosque arcus violentique ora Leonis
Saevaque circitu curvantem brachia longo
Scorpion atque aliter curvantem brachia Cancrum.
Nec tibi quadrupedes animosos ignibus illis,

Quos in pectore habent, quos ore et naribus efflant,
In promptu regere est. Vix me patiuntur, ubi acres
Incaluere animi, cervixque repugnat habenis.
At tu, funesti ne sim tibi muneris auctor,
Nate, cave, dum resque sinit, tua corrige vota.

Scilicet ut nostro genitum te sanguine credas,
Pignera certa petis? Do pignera certa timendo,
Et patrio pater esse metu probor. Aspice vultus Ecce meos. Utinamque oculos in pectora posses Inserere, et patrias intus deprehendere curas!

Denique quicquid habet dives, circumpierce, mundus,
Eque tot ac tantis caeli terraeque marisque
Posce bonis aliquid. Nullam patiere repulsam.
Deprecor hoc unum, quod vero nomine poena,
Non honor est. Poenam, Phaëthon, pro munere poscis.

Quid mea colla tenes blandis, ignore, lacertis?
Ne dubita, dabitur — Stygias iuravimus undas! — Quodcumque optaris. Sed tu sapientius opta.'

[But Phaëthon persists in his request, and at the appointed hour the shining chariot, with its fiery, unmanageable steeds, is brought forth.]

Finierat monitus. Dictis tamen ille repugnat, Propositumque premit flagratque cupidine currus.
Ergo qua licuit, genitor cunctatus, ad altos
Deducit iuvenem, Vulcania munera, currus.
Aureus axis erat, temo aureus, aurea summae
Curvatura rotae, radiorum argenteus ordo.
Per iuga chrysolithi positaque ex ordine gemmae
Clara repercusso reddabant lumina Phoebo.
Dumque ea magnanimus Phaëthon miratur opusque
Perspicit, ecce vigil rutilo patefecit ab ortu
Purpureas Aurora fores et plena rosarum
Atria. Diffugiunt stellae, quarum agmina cogit Lucifer, et caeli statione novissimus exit.
Quem petere ut terras mundumque rubescere vidit,
Cornuaque extremae velut evanescere lunae:
Iungere equos Titan velocibus imperat Horis.
Iussa deae celeres peragunt, ignemque vomentes
Ambrosiae suco saturos praesepibus altis
Quadrupedes ducent adduntque sonantia frenae.

[The father, with many misgivings, prepares his son for the journey, and gives him much parting advice and many directions.]

Tum pater ora sui sacro medicamine nati
Contigit et rapidae fecit patientia flammae, Imposuitque comae radios, praesagaque luctus
Pectore sollicito repetens suspiria dixit:
‘Si potes his saltem monitis parere paternis,
Parce, puer, stimuliis, et fortius utere loris.
Sponte sua properant: labor est inhibere volentes.
Nec tibi directos placeat via quinque per arcus:
Sectus in obliquum est lato curvamine limes,
Zonarumque trium contentus fine polumque Effugit australarem iunctamque aquilonibus Arcton.
Hac sit iter. Manifesta rotae vestigia cernes.
Utque ferant aequos et cælum et terra calores,
Nec preme, nec summum molire per aethera currsum.
Altius egressus caelestia tecta cremabis,
Inferius terras: medio tutissimus ibis.
Neu te dexterior tortum declinet ad Anguem,
Neve sinisterior pressam rota ducat ad Aram:
Inter utrumque tene. Fortunae cetera mando,
Quae iuvet et melius quam tu tibi, consulat opto.
Dum loquor, Hesperio positas in litore metas.
Umida nox tetigit. Non est mora libera nobis;
Poscimur: effulget tenebris aurora fugatis.
Corripie lora manu! — vel, si mutabile pectus
Est tibi, consiliis, non curribus utere nostris,
Dum potes, et solidis etiamnunc sedibus astas,
Dumque male optatos nondum premis inscius axes.
Quae tutus spectes, sine me dare lumina terris!

[Phaëthon speedily loses control over the horses, who now rush at will through the heavens.]

Occupat ille levem iuvenali corpore currum,
Statque super, manibusque datas contingere habenas
Gaudet, et invito grates agit inde parenti.
Interea volucres Pyrois et Eous et Aethon,
Solis equi, quartusque Phlegon hinnitibus auras
Flammiferis implet pedibusque repagula pulsant.
Quae postquam Tethys, fatorum ignara neporis,
Reppulit, et facta est immensi copia mundi,
Corripuere viam pedibusque per aëra motis
Obstantes scindunt nebulas pennisque levati
Praetereunt ortos isdem de partibus Euros.
Sed leve pondus erat, nec quod cognoscere possent
Solis equi, solitaque iugum gravitate carebat.
Utque labant curvae inusto sine pondere naves
Perque mare instabiles nimia levitate feruntur, 165 Sic onere adsueto vacuus dat in aëra saltus
   Succutiturque alte similisque est currus inani.
   Quod simulac sensere, ruunt tritumque relinquent
   Quadriugi spatium nec quo prius, ordine currunt.
   Ipse pavet. Nec qua commissas flectat habenas, 170 Nec scit, qua sit iter; nec, si sciat, imperet illis.
   Tum primum radiis gelidi caluere Triones
   Et vetito frustra temptarunt aequore tingui.
   Quaeque polo posita est glaciali proxima Serpens,
   Frigore pigra prius nec formidabilis ulli,
175 Incaluit sumpsitque novas fervoribus iras.
   Te quoque turbatum memorant fugisse, Boote,
   Quamvis tardus eras et te tua plastra tenebant.
   Ut vero summo despexit ab aethere terras
   Infelix Phaëthon penitus penitusque iacentes, 180 Palluit, et subito genua intremuere timore,
   Suntque oculis tenebrae per tantum lumen obortae.
   Et iam mallet equos numquam teligisse paternos,
   Iam cognosse genus piget, et valuisse rogando;
   Iam Merops dici cupiēns ita fertur, ut acta
185 Praecipiti pinus borea, cui victa remisit
   Frena suus rector, quam dis votisque reliquit.
   Quid faciat? multum caeli post terga relictum,
   Ante oculos plus est. Animo metitur utrumque.
   Et modo quos illi fatum contingere non est,
190 Prospicit occasus, interdum respicit ortus.
   Quidque agat, ignarus stupet et nec frena remittit,
   Nec retinere valet, nec nomina novit equorum.
   Sparsa quoque in vario passim miracula caelo
   Vastarumque videt trepidus simulacra ferarum.
195 Est locus, in geminos ubi brachia concavat arcus
   Scorpius, et cauda flexisque utrimque lacertis
   Porrigit in spatium signorum membra duorum.
Hunc puer ut nigri madidum sudore veneni
Vulnera curvata minitantem cuspide vidit,
Mentis inops gelida formidine lora remisit.
Quae postquam summo tetigere iacentia tergo,
Exspatiantur equi, nulloque inhibente per auras
Ignotae regionis cunct, quaque impetus egit,
Hac sine lege ruunt, altoque sub aethere fixis
Incurvant stellis, rapiuntque per avia currum.

[A universal conflagration threatens by reason of the too near approach of the fiery chariot.]

Et modo summa petunt, modo per decline viasque
Praccipites spatio terrae propiore feruntur.
Inferiusque suis fraternos currere Luna
Admiratur equos, ambustaque nubila fumant.
Corripitur flammis ut quaeque altissima, tellus,
Fissaque agit rimas et sucis aret ademptis.
Pabula canescunt, cum frondibus uritur arbor,
Materiamque suo praebet seges arida damno.
Parva queror. Magnae pereunt cum moenibus urbes,
Cumque suis totas populis incendia gentes
In cinerem vertunt. Silvae cum montibus ardent,
Ardet Athos Taurusque Cilix et Tmolus et Oete
Et tum sicca, prius creberrima fontibus Ide Virgineusque Helicon et nondum Oeagrius Haemos.
Ardet in immenso geminatis ignibus Aetne, Parnasusque biceps et Eryx et Cynthus et Othrys,
Et tandem nivibus Rhodope caritura, Mimasque
Dindymaque et Mycale natusque ad sacra Cithaeron.
Nec prosunt Scythiae sua frigora: Caucasus ardet, Ossaque cum Pindo maiorque ambobus Olympus, Aeriaeque Alpes et nubifer Appenninus.
Tum vero Phaethon cunctis e partibus orbem
METAMORPHOSES

Aspicit accensum nec tantos sustinet aestus,
Ferventesque auras velut e fornace profunda
230 Ore trahit, currusque suos candescere sentit;
Et neque iam cineres eiecatamque favillam
Ferre potest, calidoque involvitur undique fumo, Quoque eat, aut ubi sit, picea caligine tectus
Nescit, et arbitrio volucrum raptatur equorum.

235 Sanguine tunc credunt in corpora summa vocato
Aethiopum populos nigrum traxisse colorem.
Tum facta est Libye raptis umoribus aestu
Arida. Tum nymphae passis fontesque lacusque Deflevere comis. Quaerit Boeotia Dircen, 240 Argos Amymonen, Ephyre Pirenidas undas.

Nec sortita loco distantes flumina ripas
Tuta manent. Mediis Tanais fumavit in undis, Peneosque senex, Teuthranteusque Caicus,
Et celer Ismenos cum Phegiaco Erymantho,

245 Arsurusque iterum Xanthus, flavusque Lycormas, Quique recurvatis ludit Maecandros in undis, Mygdoniusque Melas et Taenarius Eurotas.
Arsit et Euphrates Babylonius, arsit Orontes, Thermodonque citus, Gangesque, et Phasis, et Hister.

250 Aestuat Alpheus, ripae Spercheides ardent:
Quodque suo Tagus amne vehit, fluit ignibus, aurum:
Et quae Maeonias celebrabant carmine ripas
Flumineae volucres, medio caluere Caystro.
Nilus in extremum fugit perterritus orbem

255 Occuluitque caput, quod adhuc latet. Ostia septem Pulverulenta vacant, septom sine flumine valles.
Fors eadem Ismarios, Hebrum cum Strymone siccat, Hesperiosque amnes, Rhenum Rhodanumque Padum-que,
Cuique fuit rerum promissa potentia, Thybrin.
Dissilīt omne solum, penetratque in Tartara rimis
Lumen et infernum terret cum coniuge regem.
Et mare contrahitur, siccaeqe est campus harenæ
Quod modo pontus erat; quosque altum texerat aequor, Exsistunt montes et sparsas Cycladas augent.

Ima petunt pisces, nec se super aequora curvi
Tollere consuetas audent delphines in auras.
Corpora phocarum summo resupina profundo
Exanimata natant. Ipsum quoque Nerea fama est
Doridaque et natas tepidis latuisse sub antris.

Ter Neptunus aquis cum torvo brachia vultu
Exserere ausus erat; ter non tult aëris ignes.

[The Earth, parched with the heat, prays to Jove for relief.]

Alma tamen Tellus, ut erat circumdata ponto,
Inter aquas pelagi, contractos undique fontes,
Qui se condiderant in opacæ viscera matris,

Sustulit oppressos collo tenus arida vultus,
Opposuitque manum fronti, magnoque tremore
Omnia concutien s paulum subsedit et infra
Quam solet esse, fuit; sacraque ita voce locuta est:
'Si placet hoc, meruique, quid o tua fulmina cessant,

Summe deum? liceat perituræ viribus ignis
Igne perire tuo, clademque auctore levare.
Vix equidem fauces haec ipsa in verba resolvo'—
Presserat ora vapor—'tostos en aspice crines,
Inque oculis tantum, tantum super ora favillae.

Hosne mihi fructus, hunc fertilitatis honorem
Officiique referes, quod adunci vulnera aratri Rastrorumque fero totoque exercerceor anno,
Quod pecori frondes alimentaque mitia, fruges
Humano generi, vobis quoque tura ministro?

Sed tamen exitium fac me meruisse, quid undæ,
Quid meruit frater? cur illi tradita sorte
Aequora decrescunt et ab aethere longius absunt?
Quodsi nec fratris, nec te mea gratia tangit,
At caeli miserere tui. Circumspice utrumque,

Fumat uterque polus. Quos si vitiaverit ignis, Atria vestra ruent. Atlas en ipse laborat, Vixque suis umeris candentem sustinet axem.
Si freta, si terrae Pereunt, si regia caeli,
In chaos antiquum confundimur. Eripe flammis

Siquid adhuc superest, et rerum consule summæ.

[Jove hears her prayer, and sends forth a thunderbolt which demolishes the flying chariot, and hurls Phaëthon himself down to the river Po, where his charred corpse is buried by the Hesperian Nymphs.]

Dixerat haec Tellus: neque enim tolerare vaporem
Ulterius potuit nec dicere plura, suumque
Rettulit os in se propioraque manibus antra.
At pater omnipotens, superos testatus et ipsum,

Qui dederat currus, nisi opem ferat, omnia fato
Interitura gravi, summam petit arduus arcem,
Unde solet latis nubes inducere terris,
Unde movet tonitrus vibrataque fulmina iactat.
Sed neque quas posset terris inducere nubes

Tunc habuit, nec quos caelo dmitteret imbres.
Intonat et dextra libratum fulmen ab aure
Misit in aurigam pariterque animaque rotisque
Expulit, et saevis compescuit ignibus ignes.
Conternantur equi et saltu in contraria facto

Colla iugo eripiunt abruptaque lora relinquunt.
Illic frena iacent, illic temone revulsus
Axis, in hac radii fractarum parte rotarum, Sparsaque sunt late laceri vestigia currus.
At Phaëthon, rutilos flamma populante capillos,
Voluitur in praeceps longoque per aëra tractu
Fertur, ut interdum de caelo stella sereno
Etsi non ceedit, potuit cecidisse videri.
Quem procul a patria diverso maximus orbe
Excipit Eridanus, fumantiaque abluit ora.
Naiades Hesperiae trifida fumantia flamma
Corpora dant tumulo, signant quoque carmine saxum:
Hic situs est Phaëthon, currus auriga paterni;
Quem si non tenuit, magnis tamen excidit ausis.

[Phaëthon’s mother and sisters, after a world-wide search, find his tomb; here they lament with inordinate grief, until the sisters are turned into poplar trees. Cycnus, also, a friend and relative of Phaëthon, in the midst of his grief is changed into a swan (329-380). But Phoebus, filled with wrath because of the destructive thunderbolt of Jove, vows that he will never again drive the chariot of the sun. This vow, however, is recalled at the earnest prayer of the gods (381-400). Jove now wanders over the earth, restoring her fields and woods to their wonted verdure. In his wanderings, he is smitten with the charms of Callisto of Arcadia, a nymph of Diana’s train. The nymph, though transformed by Juno’s hate into a bear, is raised by her lover into the heavens, as the constellation of the Great Bear. Her son Arcas, who has been on the point of slaying his mother, is at the same time transformed into the constellation of the Little Bear. At this, Juno prays the powers of Ocean never to allow this constellation to pollute their sacred waters (401-530). Satisfied with this revenge, she returns to heaven, drawn by her peacocks, whose tails have recently been adorned by Argus’ eyes. The mention of this change suggests that of another bird, the raven, whose white plumage was changed by Apollo to black, because of the bird’s ungracious tattling upon Coronis, the favored mistress of the god. After her death, Coronis’ infant son, Aesculapius, is given by Apollo to Chiron the centaur, to rear (531-632). Now Chiron’s daughter, Ocyrrhoë, being gifted with the power of prophecy, on beholding the infant, foretells his fate; and for this presumption, Jove changes her into a mare (633-675). (Many years may be supposed to have elapsed. Aesculapius has become a very god of healing, and has power by his art to restore men even from the dead. To curb this power, Jove blasts him with a thunderbolt. Then Apollo, in rage at the destruction of his son, destroys the Cyclopes, who forged the bolts, and is for this act sentenced to serve a mortal for a year.) While Apollo, in fulfillment of this sentence, was tending the herds of Admetus, absorbed in meditation on the pipes, Mercury stole away his herds. The act was witnessed by an old peasant, Battus by name, who for his treachery in betraying it, though only to the god himself, in disguise, was changed into a touchstone (676-707). While Mercury, after this incident, was on his way back to Olympus, passing over Athens, he saw and was charmed by Herse, the daughter of Cecrops. On seeking to gain her presence, he was met by Aglaurus, her sister, who, in return for her aid, demanded large sums of money from the god. Minerva was enraged by the girl’s greed and presumption, and forthwith sent the hag Envy to torment the maiden. Under this influence, she opposed Mercury, and was by him changed to stone (708-832). Now Europa, the daughter of Agenor, King of Sidon, was beloved by Jove; he, seeing Mercury returned to heaven, claimed his assistance in his plan of action Jove straightway assumed the form of a snow-white bull, and disposed himself in the flowery meadows, until Europa at length, all fear dispelled, seated herself upon his back; whereupon the bull plunged into the sea, and swam to Crete. Here the god appeared before the astonished maiden in his true form (833-875).

Book III

[Agenor sends his son Cadmus in search of Europa, with the injunction that he is never to return to his father’s house until he has found his sister. Wearied by his fruitless search, Cadmus at last consults the Delphic oracle as to his future home.]

Iamque deus posita fallacas imagine tauri
Se confessus erat Dictaeaque rura tenebat:
Cum pater ignarus Cadmo perquirere raptam
Imperat, et poenam, si non invenerit, addit

5 Exsillium, facto pius et sceleratus eodem.

Orbe pererrato — quis enim depredare possit

Furta Iovis? — profugus patriamque iramque parentis

Vitat Agenorides, Phoebique oracula supplix
Consultit et, quae sit tellus habitanda, requirit.
10 'Bos tibi' Phoebus ait 'solis occurret in arvis, Nullum passa iugum, curvique immunis aratri.
Hac duce carpe vias et qua requieverit herba,
Moenia fac condas, Boeotiaque illa vocato.'

[Following the direction of the oracle, he is guided by a wandering heifer to his destined land, which, from his guide, he calls Boeotia.]

Vix bene Castalio Cadmus descenderat antro,
15 Incustodiam lente videt ire iuvencam
Nullum servitii signum cervice gerentem.
Subsequitur pressoque legit vestigia gressu,
Auctoremque viae Phoebum taciturnus adorat.
Iam vada Cephisi Panopesque evaserat arva:
20 Bos stetit et tollens speciosam cornibus altis
Ad caelum frontem mugitibus impulsit auras
Atque ita, respiciens comites sua terga sequentes, Procubuit teneraque latus submisit in herba.

[His servants, sent to search out springs of water, are devoured by a dragon which lies concealed in a neighboring cave.]

Cadmus agit grates, peregrinaeque oscula terrae 25 Figit, et ignotos montes agrosque salutat.
Sacra Iovi facturus erat. Iubet ire ministros Et petere e vivis libandas fontibus undas.
Silva vetus stabat nulla violata securi,
Et specus in media, virgis ac vimine densus,
30 Efficiens humilem lapidum compagibus arcum,
Uberibus fecundus aquis, ubi conditus antro
Martius anguis erat, cristiis praesignis et auro:
Igne micant oculi; corpus tumet omne veneno;
Tresque vibrant linguae; triplici stant ordine dentes.
35 Quem postquam Tyria lucum de gente profecti
Infausto tetingere gradu, demissaque in undas
Urna dedit sonitum, longo caput extulit antro
Caeruleus serpens horrendaque sibila misit.
Effluxere urnae manibus, sanguisque relinquit
40 Corpus, et attonitos subitus tremor occupat artus.
Ille volubilibus squamosos nexibus orbes
Torquet, et immensos saltu sinuatur in arcus,
Ac media plus parte leves erectus in auras
Despicit omne nemus, tantoque est corpore, quanto
45 Si totum spectes, geminas qui separat Arctos.
Nec mora, Phoenicas, sive illi tela parabant,
Sive fugam, sive ipse timor prohibebat utrumque,
Occupat. Hos morsu, longis amplexibus illos,
Hos necat adflati funesta tabe veneni.

[With this dragon Cadmus himself engages in conflict, and, after a fierce struggle, slays him.]

50 Fecerat exiguas iam sol altissimus umbras:
Quae mora sit sociis, miratur Agenore natus,
Vestigatque viros. Tegumen direpta leonis
Pellis erat, telum splendenti lancea ferro
Et iaculum, teloque animus praestantior omni.
55 Ut nemus intravit letataque corpora vidit,
Victoremque supra spatiosi corporis hostem
Tristia sanguinea lambentem vulnera lingua, ‘Aut ultor vestrae, fidissima corpora, mortis,
Aüt comes’ inquit ‘ero.’ Dixit, dextraque molarem
50 Sustulit et magnum magno conamine misit.
Illius impulsu cum turribus ardua celsis
Moenia mota forent: serpens sine vulnere mansit, Loricaeque modo squamis defensus et atrae
Duritia pellis validos cute repulit ictus.
65 At non duritia iaculum quoque vicit eadem,
Quod medio lentae spinae curvamine fixum
Constitit, et totum descendit in ilia ferrum.
Ille dolore ferox caput in sua terga retorsit,
Vulneraque aspexit, fixumque hostile momordit,
Idque ubi vi multa partem labefecit in omnem,
Vix tergo eripuit: ferrum tamen ossibus haesit.
Tum vero postquam solitas accessit ad iras
Causa recens, plenis tumuerunt guttura venis,
Spumaque pestiferos circumfluuit albida rictus,
Terraque rasa sonat squamis, quique halitus exit
Ore niger Stygio, vitiatas inficit auras.
Ipse modo immensum spiris facientibus orbem
Cingtur, interdum longa trabe rectior exstat,
Impete nunc vasto ceu concitus imbibus amnis
Fertur et obstantes proturbat pectore silvas.
Cedit Agenorides paulum, spolioque leonis
Sustinet incursus, instantiaque ora retardat Cuspide praetenta. Furit ille et inania duro Vulnera dat ferro, figitque in acumine dentes,
Iamque venenisero sanguis manare palato
Coeperat et virides aspergine tinxerat herbas:
Sed leve vulnus erat, quia se retrahebat ab ictu
Laesaque colla dabat retro, plagamque sedere
Cedendo arcebat, nec longius ire sinebat:
Donec Agenorides coniectum in guttura ferrum
Usque sequens pressit, dum retro quercus eunti
Obstitit, et fixa est pariter cum robore cervix.
Pondere serpentes curvata est arbor, et imae
Parte flagellari gemuit sua robora caudae.

[Cadmus, at the command of Pallas, sows the teeth of the conquered dragon in the earth; and these straightway produce a crop of armed men.]

Dum spatium victor victi considerat hostis,
Vox subito audita est; neque erat cognoscere promptum,
Unde sed audita est, 'quid, Agenore nate, peremptum
Serpentem spectas? et tu spectabere serpen.'
Ille diu pavidus pariter cum mente colorem
Perdiderat, gelidoque comae terrore rigebant.
Ecce viri fautrix superas delapsa per auras
Pallas adest, motaeque iubet supponere terrae
Vipercos dentes, populi incrementa futuri.
Paret et ut presso sulcum patefecit aratro,
Spargit humi iussos, mortalia semina, dentes.
Inde, fide maius, glæbae coepere moveri,
Primaque de sulcis acies apparuit hastae,
Tegmina mox capitum picto nutantia cono,
Mox umeri pectusque onerataque bracchia telis
Exsistunt, crescitque seges clipeata virorum,
Sic ubi tolluntur festis aulaea theatris,
Surgere signa solent, primumque ostendere vultus,
Cetera paulatim; placidoque ducta tenore
Tota patent imoque pedes in margine ponunt.

[These monsters all fall in mutual strife save five, one of whom is Echion; these form an alliance with Cadmus and help him to build the city of Thebes. Here the hero lives and reigns in seeming blessedness.]

Territus hoste novo Cadmus capere arma parabat.
'Ne cape,' de populo, quem terra creaverat, unus Exclamat 'nec te civitiis insere bellis.'
Atque ita terrigenis rigido de fratribus unum
Comminus ense ferit: iaculo cadit eminus ipse.

Hic quoque qui leto dederat, non longius illo
Vivit, et exspirat modo quas acceperat auras.
Exemploque pari fuit omnis turba, suoque
Marte cadunt subiti per mutua vulnera fratres.
Iamque brevis vitae spatium sortita iuventus
Sanguineo tepidam plangebat pectore matrem,
Quinque superstibus: quorum fuit unus Echion.
Is sua iecit humo monitu Tritonidis arma,
Fraternaeque fidem pacis petitque deditque.
Hos operis comites habuit Sidonius hospes,
Cum posuit iussam Phoebēis sortibus urbem.
Iam stabant Thebae. Poteras iam, Cadme, videri
Exsilio felix: soceri tibi Marsque Venusque Contigerant. Huc adde genus de coniuge tanta, Tot natos natasque et, pignera cara, nepotes,
Hos quoque iam iuvenes. Sed scilicet ultima semper
Exspectanda dies homini, dicique beatus
Ante obitum nemo supremaque funera debet.

[But now begins the story of the woes of the house of Cadmus. And first Actaeon, grandson of the king, chanced to behold Diana and her nymphs bathing. For this mischance he was changed by the angry goddess into a stag, and was pursued and devoured by his own dogs (138-252). The gods questioned the justice of Actaeon's punishment, but Juno rejoiced in his fate, for was he not related to her hated rival Europa? Again the house of Cadmus suffered from the jealousy of Juno. For Semele, the daughter of the king, was loved of Jove; and she, through a ruse of Juno, was consumed by the fiery manifestation of the Thunderer's real presence. Of this union was born the infant Bacchus, whom Jove rescued from destruction and gave to Ino, the sister of Semele, to rear as her foster child (253-315). It was at this time that Tiresias was both smitten with blindness by Juno, and gifted with prophecy by Jove. He became famous as a seer, and many sought his prophetic aid. Among these was Liriope, who sought to know her son Narcissus' fate. The seer replied that he would live to old age "if he ne'er knew himself." With this Narcissus Echo fell in love, but he was deaf to her and all advances (316-401).

Narcissus at last beholds his own face in a pool, and pines away with a hopeless passion for the beautiful reflection; and then is fulfilled the prophecy of Tiresias, for the sight of his own beauty brings him to his death.]
Sic hanc, sic alias undis aut montibus ortas
Luserat hic nymphas, sic coetus ante viriles.
Inde manus aliquis despectus ad aethera tollens

405 'Sic amet ipse licet, sic non potiatur amato!'
Dixerat: adsensit precibus Rhamnusia iustis.
Fons erat inlimis, nitidis argenteus undis,
Quem neque pastores neque pastae monte capellae
Contigerant aliudve pecus, quem nulla volucris

410 Nec fera turbarat nec lapsus ab arbore ramus.
Gramen erat circa, quod proximus umor alcebat,
Silvaque sole locum passura tepescere nullo.
Hic puer et studio venandi lassus et aestu
Procubuit, faciemque loci fontemque secutus.

415 Dumque sitim sedere cupit, sitis altera crevit.
Dumque bibit, visae corректus imagine formae Spem sine corpore amat, corpus putat esse, quod umbra est.

Astupet ipse sibi, vultuque immotus eodem
Haeret, ut e Pario formatum marmore signum.

420 Spectat humi positus geminum, sua lumina, sidus,
Et dignos Baccho, dignos et Apolline crines,
Impubesque genas, et eburnea colla, decusque
Oris, et in niveo mixtum candore ruborem;
Cunctaque miratur, quibus est mirabilis ipse.

425 Se cupit imprudens et qui probat, ipse probatur, Dumque petit, petitur, pariterque accendit et ardet.
Irrita fallaci quotiens dedit oscula fonti!
In medias quotiens visum captantia collum
Brachia mersit aquas, nec se deprendit in illis!

430 Quid videat, nescit: sed quod videt, uritur illo,
Atque oculos idem, qui decipit, incitat error.
Credule, quid frustra simulacra fugacia captas?
Quod petis, est nusquam. Quod amas, avertere, perdes.
Ista repercussae, quam cernis, imaginis umbra est:
Nil habet ista sui. Tecum venitque, manetque;
Tecum discedet, si tu discedere possis.
Non illum Cereris, non illum cura quietis
Abstrahere inde potest: sed opaca fusus in herba
Spectat inexpleto mendacem lumine formam, Perque oculos perit ipse suos. Paulumque levatus,
Ad circumstantes tendens sua bracchia silvas, ‘Ecquis, io silvae, crudelius’ inquit ‘amavit?
Scitis enim et multis latebra opportuna fuistis.
Ecquem, cum vestrae tot agantur saecula vitae,
Qui sic tabuerit, longo meministis in aevo?
Et placet et video: sed quod videoque placetque,
Non tamen invenio: tantus tenet error amantem.
Quoque magis doleam, nec nos mare separat ingens,
Nec via, nec montes, nec clausis moenia portis:
Exigua prohibemur aqua. Cupit ipse teneri:
Nam quotiens liquidis porreximus oscula lymphis,
Hic totiens ad me resupino nititur ore.
Posse putes tangi: minimum est, quod amantibus obstat.
Quisquis es, huc exi! quid me, puer unice, fallis,
Quove petitus abis? certe nec forma nec aetas
Est mea, quam fugias, et amarunt me quoque nymphae.
Spem mihi nescio quam vultu promittis amico,
Cumque ego porrexi tibi bracchia, porrigis ul tro:
Cum risi, adrides: lacrimas quoque saepe notavi
Me lacrimante tuas: nutu quoque signa remittis:
Et, quantum motu formosi suspicor oris,
Verba referes, aures non pervenientia nostras —
Iste ego sum! sensi; nec mea fallit imago.
Uror amore mei, flammas moveoque feroque.
Quid faciam? roger, anne rogem? quid deinde rogabo?
METAMORPHOSES

Quod cupio mecum est: inopem me copia fecit.
O utinam a nostro secedere corpore possem!
Votum in amante novum, vellem quod amamus abs- set! — Iamque dolor vires admit, nec tempora vitae
Longa meae superant, primoque extinguor in aevō.
Nec mihi mors gravis est, posituro morte dolores:
Hic, qui diligitor, vellem diuturnior esset.
Nunc duo concordes anima moriēmur in una.'
Dixit, et ad speciem rediit male sanus eandem,
Et lacrimis turbavit aquas, obscuraque moto Reddita forma lacu est. Quam cum vidisset abire,
'Quo refugis? remane, nec me, crudelis, amantem
Desere!' clamavit; 'liceat quod tangere non est
Aspicere et misero praebere alimenta furori.'
Dumque dolet, summa vestem diduxit ab ora,
Nudaque marmoreis percussit pectora palmīs.
Pectora traxerunt tenuem percussa ruborem,
Non aliter quam poma solent, quae candida parte
Parte rubent, aut ut variis solet uva racemis
Ducere purpureum, nondum matura, colorēm.
Quae simul aspexit liquefacta rursus in unda,
Non tulit ulterius: sed ut intabescere flavae
Igne levī cerai matutinæque pruinæ
Sole tepente solent, sic attenuatus amore
Liquitur et caeco paulatim carpitur igni.
Et neque iam color est mixto candore rubori,
Nec vigor et vires et quae modo visa placebant,
Nec corpus remanet, quondam quod amaverat Echō.
Quae tamen ut vidit, quamvis irata memorque,
Indoluit, quotiensque puer miserabilis 'eheu!'
Dixerat, haec resonis iterabat vocibus 'eheu!'
Cumque suos manibus percusserat ille lacertos,
Haec quoque reddebat sonitum plangoris eundem.
Ultima vox solitam fuit haec spectantis in undam,
500 'Heu frustra dilecte puer!' totidemque remisit
Verba locus; dictoque vale 'vale!' inquit et Echo.
Ille caput viridi fessum submisit in herba,
Lumina nox clausit domini mirantia formam.
Tum quoque se, postquam est inferna sede receptus,
505 In Stygia spectabat aqua. Planxere sorores Naiides et sectos fratri posuere capillos;
Planxerunt dryades: plangentibus adsonat Echo.
Iamque rogum quassasque faces feretrumque parabant:
Nusquam corpus erat. Croceum pro corpore florem 510 Inveniunt foliis medium cingentibus albis.

[Thus was the seer’s fame established. But Pentheus, king of Thebes, son of Echion and Agave, the daughter of Cadmus, only scoffs at the blind old prophet. The latter warns him that it were better to be blind than, seeing, not to know the fate that shall soon be his unless he receives with reverence the advent of the young god Bacchus.
Now all Greece is ringing with the praises of this young god, and in his progress he comes to Thebes. But Pentheus in his madness not only himself refuses to acknowledge the divinity, but forbids his subjects to do so. He orders the impostor to be brought into his presence (511-576). The god comes in disguised as Acetes, the pilot of the ship which brought the infant Bacchus from the island of Naxos.
Being asked to give an account of himself, he relates how he and his sailors had picked up the young Bacchus in their voyage, and how for their impiety all but himself had been changed by the god into dolphins. Pentheus is only hardened by this account, and orders his prisoner away to torture and death (577-700). The king now determines to hunt out the pretended god for himself and visits in person the slopes of Cithaeron, where the Theban women, his own mother and sisters among them, are celebrating the rites of Bacchus. Here the women, in their frenzy mistaking him for a wild boar, rend him in pieces (701-733).]
METAMORPHOSES

BOOK IV

[Alcithoë and her sisters, the daughters of Minyas, undeterred by the fate of Pentheus, contemn the orgies of Bacchus, and on a day set apart for his worship, remain ostentatiously at home, employed in weaving and spinning. Here, to while away the time, they agree each to tell a tale (1–54).

And the first sister tells the tragic tale of Pyramus and Thisbe.]

55 'Pyramus et Thisbe, iuvenum pulcherrimus alter, Altera, quas oriens habuit, praelata puellis,
    Contiguas tenuere domos, ubi dicitur altam
    Coctilibus muris cinxisse Semíramis urbem.
    Notitiam primosque gradus vicinia fecit:
60 Tempore crevit amor. Taedae quoque iure coissent:
    Sed vetuere patres. Quod non potuere vetare,
    Ex aequo captis ardebant mentibus ambo.
    Consicius omnis abest, nutu signisque loquuntur,
    Quoque magis tegitur, tectus magis aestuat ignis.
65 Fissus erat tenui rima, quam duxerat olim
    Cum fieret, paries domui communis utrique.
    Id vitium nulli per saecula longa notatum —
    Quid non sentit amor? — primi vidistis amantes,
    Et vocis fecistis iter; tutaque per illud
70 Murmúre blanditiae minimo transire solesbant.
    Saepe, ubi constiterant, hinc Thisbe, Pyramus illinc, Inque vices fuerat captatus anhelitus oris,
    "Invide" dicebant "paries, quid amantibus obstas?
    Quantum erat, ut sineres toto nos corpore iungi,
75 Aut hoc si nimium, vel ad oscula danda pateres!
    Nec sumus ingrati: tibi nos debere fatemur,
    Quod datus est verbis ad amicas transitus aures."
    Talia diversa nequiquam sede locuti
    Sub noctem dixere vale, partique dedere

OVID — 8
Oscula quique suae non pervenientia contra.
Postera nocturnos aurora removerat ignes,
Solque pruinosas radiis siccaverat herbas:
Ad solitum coiere locum. Tum murmure parvo
Multa prius questi, statuunt ut nocte silenti
Fallere custodes foribusque excedere temptent,
Cumque domo exierint, urbis quoque tecta reliquunt;
Neve sit errandum lato spatiantibus arvo,
Convenient ad busta Nini, lateantque sub umbra
Arboris. Arbor ibi niveis uberrima pomis Ardua morus erat, gelido contermina fonti.
Pacta placent, et lux tarde discedere visa est.
Praecipitatur aquis, et aquis nox exit ab isdem.
Callida per tenebras versato cardine Thisbe
Egreditur fallitque suos, adopertaque vultum
Pervenit ad tumulum, dictaque sub arbore sedit.
Audacem faciebat amor. Venit ecce recenti
Caede leaena boum spumantes oblita rictus, Depositura sitim vicini fontis in unda.
Quam procul ad lunae radios Babyloniam Thisbe
Vidit, et obscurum trepido pede fugit in antrum,
Dumque fugit, tergo velamina lapsa reliquit.
Ut lea saeva sitim multa compescuit unda,
Dum redit in silvas, inventos forte sine ipsa
Ore cruentato tenues laniavit amictus.
Scrius egressus vestigia vidit in alto
Pulvere certa ferae, totoque expalluit ore
Pyramus. Ut vero vestem quoque sanguine tintam Repperit, "una duos" inquit "nox perdet amantes:
E quibus illa fuit longa dignissima vita,
Nostra nocens anima est. Ego te, miseranda, peremi,
In loca plena metus qui iussi nocte venires,
Nec prior huc veni. Nostrum divellite corpus,
METAMORPHOSES

Et scelerata fero consumite viscera morsu,
O quicumque sub hac habitatis rupe, leones.
115 Sed timidi est optare necem”—velamina Thisbes
Tollit, et ad pactae secum fert arboris umbram.
Utque dedit notae lacrimas, dedit oscula vesti, “Accipe nunc” inquit “nostri quoque sanguinis haustus!”
Quoque erat accinctus, demisit in illa ferrum,
120 Nec mora, ferventi moriens e vulnere traxit.
Ut iacuit resupinus humo, cruor emicat alte:
Non aliter, quam cum vitiato fistula plumbo
Scinditur, et tenui stridente foramine longas
Eiaculatur aquas atque ictibus aëra rumpit.
125 Arborei fetus aspergine caedis in atram
Vertuntur faciem. Madefactaque sanguine radix Puniceo tinguit pendentia mora colore.
Ecce metu nondum posito, ne fallat amantem,
Illa redit, iuvenemque oculis animoque requirit,
130 Quantaque vitarit narrare pericula gestit.
Utque locum et visa cognoscit in arbore formam,
Sic facit incertam pomi color. Haeret, an haec sit Dum dubitat, treme bunda videt pulsare cruentum
Membra solum, retroque pedem tulit, oraque buxo 135 Pallidiora gerens exhorruit aequoris instar,
Quod tremit, exigua cum summum stringitur aura._
Sed postquam remorata suos cognòvit amores,
Percutit indignos claro plangore lacertos,
Et laniata comas amplexaque corpus amatum
140 Vulnera suppllevit lacrimis fletumque cruori
Miscuit, et gelidis in vultibus oscula figens “Pyrame,” clamavit “quis te mihi casus ademit?
Pyrame, responde: tua te carissima Thisbe Nominat. Exaudi, vultusque attolle iacentes!”
Ad nomen Thisbes oculos iam morte gravatos Pyramus erexit, visaque recondidit illa.
Quae postquam vestemque suam cognovit, et ense
Vidit ebur vacuum, "tua te manus" inquit "amorque Perdidit, infelix. Est et mihi fortis in unum
Hoc manus, est et amor: dabit hic in vulnera vires.
Persequar extinctum, letique miserrima dicar
Causa comesque tuì. Quique a me morte revelli Hec sola poteras, poteris nec morte revelli.
Hoc tamen amborum verbis estote rogati,
O multum miseri, meus illiusque parentes,
Ut quos certus amor, quos hora novissima iunxit,
Componi tumulo non invideatis eodem.
At tu, quae ramis arbor miserabile corpus Nunc tegis unius, mox es tectura duorum,
Signa tene caedis, pullosque et luctibus aptos
Semper habe fetus, gemini monumenta cruoris."
Dixit, et aptato pectus murcore sub imum
Incubuit ferro, quod adhuc a caede tepebat.
Vota tamen tetigere deos, tetigere parentes.
Nam color in pomo est, ubi permuturuit, ater:
Quodque rogis superest, una requiescit in urna.'

[The second sister tells of the sun god's passion for Leucothoë. Her father, hearing of this amour through the information of her jealous rival, Clytie, buries Leucothoë alive. Apollo, unable to save his mistress, causes to spring from her grave a beautiful incense-bearing tree; while Clytie, scorned by the god, is changed into a heliotrope, which ever turns its face towards the sun (167–270). Alcithoë herself tells the next tale of how the maid Salmacis and the youth Hermaphroditus were changed by the gods into one body (271–388). But while the sisters thus beguile the time, the presence and power of Bacchus are manifested in that their threads are suddenly changed to ivy and vines, and they themselves become bats and seek the darkest caves (389–415).]
JUNO
(From the National Museum at Naples)

To face p. 117
The power of Bacchus is now fully acknowledged in Thebes. But the boastful pride of his foster mother, Ino, once more arouses Juno’s hate (416–431). In quest of vengeance she proceeds to the lower world to fetch one of the Furies for the destruction of Ino’s house.]

Est via declivis funesta nubila taxo,
Ducit ad infernas per muta silentia sedes.
Styx nebulas exhalat iners, umbraeque recentes
435 Descendunt illac simulacraque functa sepulcris
Fallor hiemsque tenent late loca senta. Novique Quae sit iter, manes, Stygiam qua ducat ad urbem, Ignorant, ubi sit nigri fera regia Ditis.
Mille capax aditus et apertas undique portas 440 Urbs habet. Utque fretum de tota fluamina terra, Sic omnes animas locus accipit ille, nec ulli
Exiguus populo est, turbamve accedere sentit.
Errant exsangues sine corpore et ossibus umbrae,
Parsque forum celebrant, pars imi tecta tyranni,
445 Pars aliaquas artes, antiquae imitamina vitae.
447 Sustinet ire illuc caelesti sede relicta,
Tantum odiis iraeque dabat, Saturnia Iuno.
Quo simul intravit, sacroque a corpore pressum
450 Ingemuit limen, tritia Cerberus extulit ora
Et tres latratus simul edidit. Illa sorores Nocte vocat genitas, grave et implacabile numen:
Carceris ante fores clausas adamante sedebant,
Cumque suis atros pectebant crinibus angues.
455 Quam simul agnorunt inter caliginis umbras,
Surrexere deae: sedes Scelerata vocatur.
Viscera praebebat Tityos lanianda, novemque Iugeribus distinctus erat. Tibi, Tantale, nullae Deprenduntur aquae; quaeque imminet, effugit arbos.
460 Aut petis, aut urges ruiturum, Sisyphe, saxum.
Volvitur Ixion et se sequiturque fugitque.
Molirique suis letum patruelibus ausae
Adsiduae repetunt quas perdant, Belides undas.
Quos omnes acie postquam Saturnia torva
465 Vidit, et ante omnes Ixiona, rursus ab illo Sisyphon aspiciens 'cur hic e fratribus' inquit
'Perpetuas patitur poenas, Athamanta superbum
Regia dives habet, qui me cum coniuge semper Sprevit?' Et exponit causas odiique viaeque, 470 Quidque velit. Quod vellet, erat, ne regia Cadmiae Staret, et in facinus traherent Athamanta sorores.
Imperium, promissa, preces confundit in unum, Solicitatque deas. Sic haec Iunone locuta,
Tisiphone canos, ut erat, turbata capillos
475 Movit et obstantes reiecit ab ore colubras, Atque ita 'non longis opus est ambagibus,' inquit
'Facta puta, quaecumque iubes: inamabile regnum
Desere, teque refer caeli melioris ad auras.'
Laeta redit Iuno. Quam caelum intrare parantem 480 Roratis lustravit aquis Thaumantias Iris.

[By the Fury's influence Ino's husband, Athamas, is driven mad, the king fancying that his wife and sons are a lioness and her whelps.
The king slays one son, while the mother with her other son, Melicerta, plunges in her flight from a cliff into the sea. She is changed by Neptune into a sea divinity, Leucothoë, and Melicerta becomes a sea god, Palaemon. Then the Theban matrons, companions of Ino, because of their grief at their mistress' fate, are changed by Juno into stones and birds (481–562). Now Cadmus and his queen, worn with age and grief at the misfortunes of their house, fly from Thebes to Illyricum, and there, at their own request, are changed to serpents (563–603). All Greece now acknowledges the divinity of Bacchus, except Acrisius, king of Argos, whose daughter Danaë had given birth to the Jove-begotten Perseus. Acrisius is at length led to acknowldge the divinity both of Bacchus and of his grandson Perseus. The latter, returning from the conquest of the Gorgons, passes the country of Atlas, from whom he claims hospitality. Upon the refusal of this
METAMORPHOSES

Request, the giant Atlas is changed into a mountain of stone by a sight of the Medusa's head which Perseus bears (604–662).

Perseus, returning past the shores of Ethiopia, sees Andromeda chained to a rock and exposed to a monster of the sea, by order of the god Ammon. The hero proposes to the maiden's father to rescue her, on condition that she be given to him as his wife. The father joyfully consents.

Clauserat Hippotades aeterno carcere ventos,
Admonitorque operum caelo clarissimus alto

Lucifer ortus erat. Pennis ligat ille resumptis Parte ab utraque pedes, teloque accingitur unco,
Et liquidum motis talaribus aëra findit.
Gentibus innumeris circumque infraque relictis,
Aethiopum populos Cepheaque conspicit arva.

Illic immeritam maternae pendere linguae
Andromedan poenas immitis iuserat Ammon.
Quam simul ad duras religatam bracchia cautes
Vidit Abantiades, — nisi quod levis aura capillos
Moverat, et tepido manabant lumina fletu,

Marmoreum ratus esset opus — trahit inscius ignes
Et stupet. Eximiae correptus imagine formae Paene suas quater est oblitus in ære pennas.
Ut stetit, 'o' dixit 'non istis digna catenis,
Sed quibus inter se cupidi iunguntur amantes,

Pande requirenti nomen terraeque tuumque,
Et cur vincla geras.' Primo silet illa, nec audet Appellare virum virgo; manibusque modestos
Celasset vultus, si non religata fuisset.
Lumina, quod potuit, lacrimis implevit obortis.

Saepius instanti, sua ne delicta fateri
Nolle videretur, nomen terraeque suumque,
Quantaque maternae fuerit fiducia formae,
Indicat. Et nundum memoratis omnibus unda
Insonuit, veniensque immenso belua ponto
Imminet et latum sub pectore possidet aequor.
Conclamat virgo. Genitor lugubris et una Mater adest, ambo miserī, sed iustus illa.
Nec secum auxilium, sed dignos tempore fletus
Plangoremque ferunt, vincitoque in corpore adhaerent:
Cum sic hospes ait: 'lacrimarum longa manere Tempora vos poterunt; ad opem brevis hora ferendum
est.
Hanc ego si peterem Perseus Iove natus et illa,
Quam clausam implevit fecundo Iuppiter auro,
Gorgonis anguicomaes Perseus superator, et alis
Aērias ausus iactatis ire per auras, Praeferrer cunctis certe gener. Addere tantis Dotibus et meritum, faveant modo numina, tempto.
Ut mea sit servata mea virtute, paciscor.'
Accipiunt legem — quis enim dubitaret? — et orant, Promittuntque super regnum dotale parentes.

[Perseus engages in conflict with the monster, and slays him.]

Ecce velut navis praefixo concita rostro
Sulcat aquas, iuvenum sudantibus acta lacertis,
Sic fera dimotis impulsu pectoris undis
Tantum aberat scopulis, quantum Balearica torto
Funda potest plumbo medii transmittere caeli:
Cum subito iuvenis pedibus tellure repulsa
Arduus in nubes abiit. Ut in aequore summo Umbra viri visa est, visam fera saevit in umbram.
Utque Iovis praepes, vacuo cum vidit in arvo
Praebentem Phoebō liventia terga draconem, Occupat aversum; neu saeva retorqueat ora,
Squamigeris avidos figit cervicibus ungues:
Sic celeri missus praeceps per inane volatu
Terga ferae pressit, dextroque frementis in armo
Inachides ferrum curvo tenus abdidit hamo.
Vulnere laesa gravi modo se sublimis in auras
Attollit, modo subdit aquis, modo more ferocis
Versat apri, quem turba canum circumsona terret.
Ille avidos morsus velocibus effugit alis:
Quaque patent, nunc terga cavis super obsita conchis,
Nunc laterum costas, nunc qua tenuissima cauda
Desinit in piscem, falcato verberat ense.
Belua puniceo mixtos cum sanguine fluctus
Ore vomit. Maduere graves aspergine pennae;
Nec bibulis ultra Perseus talaribus ausus
Credere, conspexit scopolum, qui vertice summo
Stantibus existat aquis, operitur ab aequore moto.
Nixus eo rupisque tenens iuga prima sinistra
Ter quater exegit repetita per ilia ferrum.
Litora cum plausu clamor superasque deorum
Implevere domos. Gaudent, generumque saluant Auxiliumque domus servatoremque patentur
Cassiope Cepheusque pater. Resoluta catenis Incedit virgo, pretiumque et causa laboris.
Ipse manus hausta victrices abluit unda:
Anguiferumque caput dura ne laedat harena,
Mollit humum foliis, natasque sub aequore virgas
Sternit, et imponit Phorcynidos ora Medusae.
Virga recens bibulaque etiamnum viva medulla
Vim rapuit monstri, tactuque induruit huius,
Percepitque novum ramis et fronde rigorem.
At pelagi nymphae factum mirabile temptant
Pluribus in virgis, et idem contingere gaudent,
Semenaque ex illis iterant iactata per undas.
Nunc quoque curaliis eadem natura remansit,
Duritiam tacto capiant ut ab aëre, quodque
Vimen in aequore erat, fiat super aequora saxum.
[Then ensues the wedding of Perseus and Andromeda. During the wedding feast the hero tells how he won the Medusa’s head (753–803).]

Book V

[While the wedding festivities are in progress, Phineus, the brother of king Cepheus, to whom Andromeda had been betrothed, breaks into the hall at the head of a large band of companions. These fiercely attack Perseus, who, with the aid of the courtiers who are friendly to him, defends himself as long as possible, and slays many of his foes (1–176).

At last, overwhelmed by numbers, Perseus calls upon his friends to avert their gaze, and holds aloft the Gorgon’s head. At sight of this, his foes one and all turn to statues of stone, in the various postures of the fight.]

Verum ubi virtutem turbae succumbere vidit, ‘Auxilium,’ Perseus ‘quoniam sic cogitis ipsi,’ Dixit ‘ab hoste petam. Vultus avertite vestros, Squis amicus adest!’ Et Gorgonis extulit ora.
‘Quaere alium, tua quem moveant miracula’ dixit
Thescelus; utque manu iaculum fatale parabat
Mittere, in hoc haesit signum de marmore gestu.
Proximus huic Ampyx animi plenissima magni
Pectora Lyncidae gladio petit; inque petendo Dextera diriguit, nec citra mota nec ultra.
At Nileus, qui se genitum septemplice Nilo
Ementitus erat, clipeo quoque flumina septem
Argento partim, partim caelaverat auro, ‘Aspice,’ ait ‘Perseu, nostrae primordia gentis:
Magna feres tacitas solacia mortis ad umbras,
A tanto cecidisse viro’—pars ultima vocis
In medio suppressa sono est, adapertaque velle
Ora loqui credas, nec sunt ea pervia verbis.
Increpat hos ‘vitio’ que ‘animi, non viribus’ inquit
METAMORPHOSEIS

‘Gorgoneis torpetis’ Eryx; ‘incurrite mecum
Et prosternite humi iuvenem magica arma moventem!’
Incursurus erat: tenuit vestigia tellus,
Immutusque silex armataque mansit imago.

200 Hi tamen ex merito poenas subiere. Sed unus Miles erat Persei, pro quo dum pugnat, Aconteus, Gorgone conspecta saxo concrevit oberto.
Quem ratus Astyages etiamnum vivere, longo Ense ferit. Sonuit tinnitibus ensis acutis.

205 Dum stuptet Astyages, naturam traxit eandem
Marmoreoque manet vultus mirantis in ore.
Nomina longa mora est media de plebe virorum
Dicere. Bis centum restabant corpora pugnae, Gorgone bis centum riguerunt corpora visa.

210 Paenitet inusti tunc denique Phinea belli.
Sed quid agat? Simulacra videt diversa figuris,
Agnoscitque suos, et nomine quemque vocatum
Poscit opem, credensque parum, sibi proxima tangit
Corpora: marmor erant. Avertitur, atque ita supplex

215 Confessasque manus obliquaque brachia tendens
‘Vincis,’ ait ‘Perseu: remove tua monstra, tuaeque Saxifcos vultus, quaecumque ea, tolle Medusae:
Tolle, precor. Non nos odium regnique cupido Compulit ad bellum: pro coniuge movimus arma.

220 Causa fuit meritis melior tua, tempore nostra.
Non cessisse piget. Nihil, o fortissime, praeter Hanc animam concede mihi: tua cetera sunto.’
Talia dicenti neque eum, quem voce rogabat,
Respiciere audenti ‘quod,’ ait ‘timidissime Phineu,

225 Et possum tribuisse et magnum est munus inerti,
Pone metum, tribuam. Nullo violabere ferro.
Quin etiam mansura dabo monumenta per aevum;
Inque domo soceri semper spectabere nostris,
Ut mea se sponsi soletur imagine coniunx.'

Dixit, et in partem Phorcynida transtulit illam,
Ad quam se trepido Phineus obverterat ore.
Tum quoque conanti sua vertere lumina cervix
Deriguit, saxoque oculorum induruit umor.
Sed tamen os timidum vultusque in marmore supplex

Submissaeque manus faciesque obnoxia mansit.

[Perseus now proceeds to his native city and reinstates his grandsire, Acrisius, upon his throne, which Proetus, the king's brother, had usurped (236-248). During all these adventures, Minerva had been the companion of Perseus, and his helper. She now leaves him for Mt. Helicon, where she is entertained by the Muses. While one of the sisters is relating the impiety and punishment of Pyreneus, king of Thrace, nine magpies suddenly alight in a tree near at hand, and speak with human voices. In answer to Minerva's question as to this wonder, the Muses relate how the nine daughters of Pierus, proud of their skill in song, had challenged them to a contest in music. The Muses had accepted the challenge, with the nymphs as judges. The Pierides sang first, taking as their subject the rebellion of the Giants, and the forms which the various Gods assumed to escape their rage (250-340).

Then followed the song of the Muses, which now, at the request of Minerva, Calliope rehearses in full. This song, opening in praise of Ceres, then describes the arts of Venus by which Pluto is inflamed with love for Proserpina, the virgin daughter of Ceres and Jove.]

'Prima Ceres unco glaebam dimovit aratro,
Prima dedit fruges alimentaque mitia terris,
Prima dedit leges: Cereris sunt omnia munus.
Illa canenda mihi est. Utinam modo dicere possem

Carmina digna dea: certe dea carmine digna est.
Vasta Giganteis ingesta est insula membris
Trinacris, et magnis subiectum molibus urguet
Aetherias ausum sperare Typhoëa sedes.
Nititur ille quidem, pugnatque resurgere saepe:

Dextra. sed Ausonio manus est subiecta Peloro, Laeva, Pachyne, tibi: Lilybaeo crura premuntur:
DEGRAVAT AETNA CAPUT.
Sub qua resupinus harenas
Eiectat, flammamque ferox vomit ore Typhoeus.
Saepe remoliri luctatur pondera terrae,

Oppidaque et magnos devolvere corpore montes:
Inde tremit tellus et rex pavet ipse silentum,
Ne pateat latoque solum retegatur hiatu,
Immissusque dies trepidantes terreat umbras.
Hanc metuens cladem tenebrosa sede tyrannus

Exierat, curruque atrorum vectus equorum
Ambibat Siculae cautus fundamina terrae.
Postquam exploratum satis est, loca nulla labare,
Depositique metus, videt hunc Erycina vagantem
Monte suo residens, natumque amplexa volucrem

"Arma manusque meae, mea, nate, potentia," dixit
"Illa, quibus superas omnes, cape tela, Cupido, Inque dei pectus celeres molire sagittas,
Cui triplicis cessit fortuna novissima regni.
Tu superos ipsumque Iovem, tu numina ponti

Victa domas ipsumque, regit qui numina ponti.
Tartara quid cessant? Cur non matrisque tuumque Imperium profers? Agitur pars tertia mundi.
Et tamen in caelo, quae iam patientia nostra est,
Spernimur ac mecum vires minuuntur Amoris.

Pallada nonne vides iaculatoricemque Dianam Abscessisse mihi? Cereris quoque filia virgo,
Si patiemur, erit: nam spes adspectat easdem.
At tu pro socio, siqua est ca gratia, regno Iunge deam patruo." Dixit Venus. Ille pharetram

Solvit et arbitrio matris de mille sagittis
Unam seposuit, sed qua nec acutior ulla
Nec minus incerta est, nec quae magis audiat arcus;
Oppositeque genu curvavit flexile cornum
Inque cor hamata percussit harundine Ditem.
[Proserpina, while gathering flowers in the vale of Henna in Sicily, is seized by Pluto and taken to his infernal home. The nymph Cyane, attempting to stop the god, is changed by him into a fountain.]

385 Haud procul Hennaeis lacus est a moenibus altae, Nomine Pergus, aquae. Non illo plura Castrros Carmina cycnorum labentibus audit in undis.
Silva coronat aquas cingens latus omne, suisque
Frondibus ut velo Phoebeos submovet ignes.
390 Frigora dant rami, Tyrios humus umida flores:
Perpetuum ver est. Quo dum Proserpina luco Ludit, et aut violas aut candida lilia carpit,
Dumque puellari studio calathosque sinunque
Implet, et aequales certat superare legendo, 395 Paene simul visa est dilectaque raptaque Diti:
Usque adeo est properatus amor. Dea territa maesto
Et matrem et comites, sed matrem saepius, ore
Clamat; et ut summa vestem laniiarat ab ora,
Collecti flores tunicis cecidere remissis.
400 Tantaque simplicitas puerilibus adfuit annis,
Haec quoque virgineum movit iactura dolorem.
Raptor agit currus, et nomine quemque vocatos
Exhortatur equos, quorum per colla iubasque
Excuit obscura tinctas ferrugine habenas;
405 Perque lacus sacros et olentia sulphure fertur
Stagnas Palicorum, rupta ferventia terra,
Et qua Bacchiadae, bimari gens orta Corintho,
Inter inaequalis posuerunt moenia portus.
Est medium Cyanes et Pisaee Arethusaes, 410 Quod coit angustis inclusum cornibus aequor.
Hic fuit, a cuius stagnum quoque nomine dictum est,
Inter Sicelidas Cyane celeberrima nymphas,
Gurgite quae medio summa tenus exstitit alvo,
Agnovitque deam. "Nec longius ibitis!" inquit “Non potes invita cereris gener esse: roganda,
Non rapienda fuit. Quodsi componere magnis
Parva mihi fas est, et me dilexit Anapis;
Exorata tamen, nec, ut haec, ’exterrata nupsi’.”
Dixit, et in partes diversas bracchia tendens

Obstitit. Haud ultra tenuit Saturnius iram, Terribilesque hortatus equos in gurgitis ima
Contortum valido sceptrum regale lacerto
Conditit. Icta viam tellus in Tartara fecit Et pronos currus medio cratere receptit.

At Cyane raptamque deam contemplaque fontis
Iura sui maerens, inconsolabile vulnus
Mente gerit tacita, lacrimisque absumitur omnis:
Et quorum fuerat magnum modo numen, in illas
Extenuatur aquas. Molliri membra videres,

Ossa pati flexus, ungues possuisse rigorem:
Primaque de tota tenuissima quaeque liquescunt,
Caerulei crines digitique et crura pedesque;
Nam brevis in gelidas membris exilibus undas
Transitus est. Post haec umeri tergusque latusque

Pectoraque in tenues abeunt evanida rivos.
Denique pro vivo vitiatas sanguine venas
Lymphha subit, restatque nihil, quod prendere possis.

[Ceres wanders over the earth, night and day, in search of her daughter. Stopping at a humble cottage for a draught of water, she turns a youth who mocked at her into a lizard (438–461).
At last, in her wanderings, she comes to the fountain of Cyane, whose waters lift into her view the girdle of her lost daughter. Enraged, she lays a curse upon the whole earth, and especially upon Sicily, as most responsible for her daughter’s loss.]

Quas dea per terras et quas erraverit undas, Dicere longa mora est. Quaerenti defuit orbis.
Sicaniam repetit: dumque omnia lustrat eundo,
465 Venit et ad Cyanen. Ea ni mutata fuisset, Omnia narrasset. Sed et os et lingua volenti Dicere non aderant, nec quo loqueretur, habebat.
    Signa tamen manifesta dedit, notamque parenti
    Illo forte loco delapsam in gurgite sacro
470 Persephones zonmis summis ostendit in undis.
    Quam simul agnovit, tamquam tunc denique raptam
    Scisset, inornatos laniavit diva capillos,
    Et repetita suis percussit pectora palmis.
    Nescit adhuc ubi sit: terras tamen increpat omnes
475 Ingratasque vocat nec frugum munere dignas, Trinacriam ante alias, in qua vestigia damnii
    Recessit. Ergo illic saeva vertentia glaebas Fregit aratra manu, parilique irata colonos Ruricolasque boves leto dedit, arvaeque iussit 480 Fallere depositum, vitiataque semina fecit.
    Fertilitas terrae latum vulgata per orbem
    Falsa iacet: primis segetes moriuntur in herbis,
    Et modo sol nimiis, nimiis modo corripit imber;
    Sideraque ventique nocent, avidaeque volucres
485 Semina iacta legunt; lolium tribulique fatigant
    Triticcas messes et inexpugnabile gramen.

[The nymph Arethusa relates to Ceres how, in gliding under the sea, she saw Proserpina in Hades, now become the wife of Pluto.]

    Tum caput Eleis Alphēias extulit undis, Rorantesque comas a fronte removit ad aures,
    Atque ait "ο toto quaesitae virginis orbe
490 Et frugum genetrix, immensos siste labores,
    Neve tibi fidae violenta irascere terrae.
    Terra nihil meruit, patuitque invita rapinae.
    Nec sum pro patria supplex: huc hospita veni.
    Pisa mihi patria est, et ab Elide ducimus ortus:
495 Sicaniam peregrina colo. Sed gravior omni
Haec mihi terra solo est. Hos nunc Arethusa penates, Hanc habeo sedem: quam tu, mitissima, serva.
Mota loco cur sim tantique per aequoris undas
Advehar Ortygiam, veniet narratibus hora

500 Tempestiva meis, cum tu curaque levata
Et vultus melioris eris. Mihi pervia tellus Praebet iter, subterque imas ablata cavernas
Hic caput attollo desuetaque sidera cerno.
Ergo dum Stygio sub terris gurgite labor,

505 Visa tua est oculis illic Proserpina nostris:
Illa quidem tristis, neque adhuc interrita vultu,
Sed regina tamen, sed opaci maxima mundi,
Sed tamen inferni pollens matrona tyranni.”

[Ceres appeals to Jove for their common daughter’s release. Jove declares that this may be accomplished if, in Hades, Proserpina has tasted no food.]

Mater ad auditas stupuit ceu saxea voces,

510 Attonitaeque diu similis fuit. Utque dolore
Pulsa gravi gravis est amentia, curribus oras
Exit in aetherias. Ibi toto nubila vultu
Ante Iovem passis stetit invidiosa capillis, “Pro” que “meo veni supplex tibi, Iuppiter,” inquit

515 “Sanguine, proque tuo. Si nulla est gratia matris, Nata patrem moveat. Neu sit tibi cura, precamur, Vilior illius, quod nostro est edita partu.
En quaesita diu tandem mihi nata reperta est:
Si reperire vocas amittere certius, aut si

520 Scire ubi sit, reperire vocas. Quod rapta, feremus, Dummodo reddat eam. Neque enim praedone marito Filia digna tua est — si iam mea filia non est.”
Iuppiter excepit “commune est pignus onusque

OVID — 9
Nata mihi tecum. Sed si modo nomina rebus Addere vera placet, non hoc iniuria factum, Verum amor est. Neque erit nobis gener ille pudori,
Tu modo, diva, velis. Ut desint cetera, quantum est
Esse Iovis fratrem! quid quod non cetera desunt
Nec cedit nisi sorte mihi. Sed tanta cupido
Si tibi discidii est, repetet Proserpina caelum,
Lege tamen certa, si nullos contigit illic
Ore cibos: nam sic Parcarum foedere cautum est.”

[But Proserpina had already eaten seven seeds of a pomegranate, and this act was witnessed by Ascalaphus alone. For reporting this he is changed by the angry queen of Hades into an owl. In order to soothe the grief of Ceres, Jove now decrees that her daughter shall remain one half of the year in Pluto’s realm, and the other half upon the earth (533–571).

Ceres, now appeased, begs Arethusa to tell the story of her change from a maiden follower of Diana into a fountain. Accordingly the nymph relates her tale.]

Exigit alma Ceres, nata secura recepta,
Quae tibi causa fugae, cur sis, Arethusa, sacer fons?
Conticuere undae, quaram dea sustulit alto
Fonte caput, viridesque manu siccata capillos Fluminis Elei veteres narravit amores.
“Pars ego nympharum, quae sunt in Achaïde,” dixit
“Una fui: nec me studiosius altera saltus
Legit, nec posuit studiosius altera casses.
Sed quamvis formae numquam mihi fama petita est,
Quamvis fortis eram, formosae nomen habebam.
Nec mea me facies nimium laudata iuvabat;
Quaque aliae gaudere solent, ego rustica dote
Corporis erubui, crimenque placere putavi.
Lassa revertetebar, memini, Stymphalide silva:
Aestus erat, magnumque labor geminaverat aestum.
Invenio sine vertice aquas, sine murmure euntes,
Perspicuas ad humum, per quas numerabilis alte
Calculus omnis erat, quas tu vix ire putares.

590 Cana salicta dabant nutritaque populus unda
Sponte sua natas ripis declivibus umbras.
Accessi, primumque pedis vestigia tinxii,
Poplite deinde tenus: neque eo contenta, recingor,
Molliaque impono salici velamina curvae,

595 Nudaque mergor aquis. Quas dum ferioque trahoque
Mille modis labens, excussaque brachia iacto,
Nescio quod medio sensi sub gurgite murmur,
Territaque insisto proprioris margine ripae.
‘Quo properas, Arethusa?’ suis Alpheus ab undis,

600 ‘Quo properas?’ iterum rauco mihi dixerat ore.
Sicut eram, fugio sine vestibus: altera vestes
Ripa meas habuit. Tanto magis instat et ardet.
Sic ego currebam, sic me ferus ille premebat,

605 Ut fugere accipitrem penna trepidante columbae,
Ut solet accipiter trepidas urguere columbas.
Usque sub Orchomenon Psophidaque Cyllenense Maenaliosque sinus gelidumque Erymanthon et Elin Currere sustinui; nec me velocior ille.

610 Sed tolerare diu cursus ego, viribus impar,
Non poteram: longi patiens erat ille laboris.
Per tamen et campos, per opertos arbore montes,
Saxa quoque et rupes et qua via nulla, curru.
Sol erat a tergo: vidi praecedere longam

615 Ante pedes umbram — nisi si timor illa videbat—
Sed certe sonitusque pedum terrebat, et ingens
Crinales vittas adflabat anhelitus oris.
Fessa labore fugae ‘fer opem, deprendimur,’ inquam,
‘Armigerae, Dictynna, tuae, cui saepe dedisti

620 Ferre tuos arcus inclusaque tela pharetara.’
Mota dea est, spissisque ferens e nubibus unam
Me super iniecit. Lustrat caligine tectam
Amnis, et ignarus circum cava nubila quaerit:
Bisque locum, quo me dea texerat, inscius ambit,
625 Et bis ‘io Arethusa, io Arethusa!’ vocavit.
Quid mihi tunc animi miserae fuit? anne quod agnae
est,
Siqua lupos audit circum stabula alta frementes?
Aut lepori, qui vepre latens hostilia cernit
Ora canum, nullasque audet dare corpore motus?
630 Non tamen abscedit; neque enim vestigia cernit
Longius ulla pedum: servat nubemque locumque.
Occupat obsessos sudor mihi frigidus artus,
Caeruleaeque cadunt toto de corpore guttae:
Quaque pedem movi, manat lacus, eque capillis
635 Ros cadit; et citius, quam nunc tibi facta renarro,
In latices mutor. Sed enim cognoscit amatas
Amnis aquas, positoque viri, quod sumpserat, ore
Vertitur in proprias, ut se mihi misceat, undas.
Delia rupit humum, caecisque ego mersa cavernis
640. Advehor Ortygiam, quae me, cognomine divae Grata meae, superas eduxit prima sub auras.”

[Ceres now flies away in her dragon-drawn car to Athens, where she presents her magic car to Triptolemus, giving him seeds and bidding him to instruct the nations in the arts of agriculture. In the performance of his mission the youth comes to Lyncus, king of Scythia, who attempts to assassinate his guest, and is for this act of impiety changed into a wolf (642-661).

Here ends Calliope’s story of the contest in song between the Muses and the Pierides, at the conclusion of which, they inform Minerva, the maidens had been transformed into magpies in punishment of their presumption.]

Finierat dictos e nobis maxima cantus:
At nymphae vicisse deas Helicona colentes
MINERVA
(From the National Museum at Naples)

To face p. 133
Concordi dixere sono. Convicia victae

Cum iacerent, "quoniam" dixit "certamine vobis
Supplicium meruisse parum est, maledictaque culpae
Additis, et non est patientia libera nobis, Ibimus in poenas, et qua vocat ira, sequemur."
Rident Emathides, spernuntque minacia verba:

Conataeque loqui et magno clamore protervas
Intentare manus, pennas exire per ungues
Aspexere suos, operiri brachia plumis:
Alteraque alterius rigido concrescere rostro
Ora videt, volucesque novas accedere silvis.

Dumque volunt plangi, per brachia mota levatae
Aëre pendebant, nemorum convicia, picae.
Nunc quoque in alibus facundia prisca remansit
Raucaque garrulitas studiumque immane loquendi.'

Book VI

[Minerva, hearing this story of the punishment which the Muses had inflicted upon the Pierides for daring to challenge them in song, is reminded that her own divinity has been slighted by Arachne, who, wonderfully skilled in the arts of the loom, has challenged the goddess herself to a contest. This challenge the goddess now accepts, and both sit down to their looms. Minerva portrays a council of the twelve great gods, each represented with his own proper symbol. In the four corners of her web the goddess pictures incidents of warning to those who dare to challenge the gods. Arachne in her web pictures the various amours of Jove and other gods. She acknowledges herself defeated in the contest, and in despair hangs herself to a beam. But Minerva changes her into a spider doomed to spin and weave as before (1–144).

Unwarned by the fate of Arachne, Niobe, daughter of Tantalus and queen of Thebes, boasts of her seven sons and seven daughters over Latona, the mother of two children only, Apollo and Diana, and forbids her country-women to worship Latona.]
Lydia tota fremit, Phrygiaeque per oppida facti
Rumor it et magnum sermonibus occupat orbem.
Ante suos Niobe thalamos cognoverat illam,
Tum cum Maeceniam virgo Sipylumque colebat:
Nec tamen admonita est poena popularis Arachnes
Cedere caelitibus, verisque minoribus uti.
Multa dabant animos. Sed enim nec coniugis artes
Nec genus amborum magnique potentia regni
Sic placuere illi, quamvis ea cuncta placent,
Ut sua progenies. Et felicissima matrum
Dicta foret Niobe, si non sibi visa fuisset.
Nam sata Tiresia venturi praescia Manto
Per medias fuerat, divino concita motu,
Vaticinata vias, 'Ismenides, ite frequentes
Et date Latonae Latonigenisque duobus
Cum prece tura pia, lauroque innectite crinem:
Ore meo Latona iubet.' Paretur, et omnes
Thebaides iussis sua tempora frondibus ornant,
Turaque dant sanctis et verba precantia flammis.
Ecce venit comitum Niobe celeberrima turba,
Vestibus intexto Phrygiis spectabilis auro
Et, quantum ira sinit, formosa movensque decoro
Cum capite immissos umerum per utrumque capillos.
Constitit: utque oculos circumfulsit alta superbos,
'Quis furor, auditos' inquit 'praeponere visis Caclestes? Aut cur colitur Latona per aras, Numen adhuc sine ture meum est? Mihi Tantalus auctor,
Cui licuit soli superorum tangere mensas.
Pleiadum soror est genetrix mea. Maximus Atlas
Est avus, aetherium qui fert cervicibus axem:
Iuppiter alter avus. Socero quoque glorior illo.
Me gentes metuunt Phrygiae, me regia Cadmi
METAMORPHOSES

Sub domina est, fidibusque mei commissa mariti
Moenia cum populis a meque vireoque reguntur.

180 In quamcumque domus adverti lumina partem, Immensae spectantur opes. Accedit eodem Digna dea facies. Huc natas adice septem
Et totidem iuvenes, et mox generosque nurusque.
Quaerite nunc, habeat quam nostra superbia causam,

185 Nescio quoque audete satam Titanida Coeo
Latonam praeferre mihi, cui maxima quondam
Exiguam sedem pariturae terra negavit.
Nec caelo nec humo nec aquis dea vestra recepta est.
Exsul erat mundi, donec miserata vagantem

190 "Hospita tu terris erras, ego" dixit "in undis," Instabilemque locum Delos dedit. Illa duorum
Facta pares: uteri pars haec est septima nostri.
Sum felix: quis enim neget hoc? Felixque manebo;
Hoc quoque quis dubitet? Tutam me copia fecit.

195 Maior sum, quam cui possit Fortuna nocere;
Multaque ut eripiat, multo mihi plura relinquet.
Excessere metum mea iam bona. Fingite demi Huic aliquid populo natorum posse meorum.
Non tamen ad numerum redigar spoliata duorum

200 Latonae turbam: qua quantum distat ab orba?
Ite, satis, properate, sacri est; laurumque capillis
Ponite.' Deponunt, infectaque sacra reliquunt, Quodque licet, tacito venerantur murmure numen.

[Latona, enraged, seeks out Apollo and Diana and prays them to avenge her slighted divinity.]

Indignata dea est, summoque in vertice Cynthi

205 Talibus est dictis gemina cum prole locuta:
‘En ego vestra pares, vobis animosa creatis,
Et, nisi Iunoni, nulli cessura dearum,
An dea sim, dubitor. Perque omnia saecula cultis Arceor, o nati, nisi vos succurritis, aris.
210 Nec dolor hic solus: diro convicia facto
Tantalis adiecit, vosque est postponere natis
Ausa suis, et me, quod in ipsam recidat, orbam
Dixit, et exhibuit linguam scelerata paternam.’
Adiectura preces erat his Latona relatis:
215 ‘Desine!’ Phoebus ait ‘poenae mora longa querella est.’
Dixit idem Phoebe. Celerique per æra lapsu Contigerant tecti Cadmeæda nubibus arcem.

[The two gods take their stand near the Theban plain, and slay with their arrows, one by one, the seven sons of Niobe, who are exercising there.]
METAMORPHOSES

‘Ei mihi!’ conclamat, medioque in pectore fixa
Tela gerit, frenisque manu moriente remissis
In latus a dextro paulatim defluit armo.

Proximus, audito sonitu per inane pharetrae,
Frena dabat Sipylus: veluti cum praescius imbris
Nube fugit visa, pendentiaque undique rector
Carbasā deducit, ne qua levis effluat aura.
Frena dabat: dantem non evitabile telum

Consequitur, summaque tremens cervice sagitta
Haesit, et exstabat nudum de gutture ferrum.
Ille, ut erat, pronus per crura admissa iubasque
Volvitur, et calido tellurem sanguine foedat.
Phaedimus infelix et aviti nominis heres

Tantalus, ut solito finem imposuere labori
Transierant ad opus nitidae iuvenale palaestrae:
Et iam contulerant arto lactantia nux
Pectora pectoribus, cum tento concita nervo,
Sicut erant iuncti, tràiecit utrumque sagitta.

Ingemuere simul, simul incurvata dolore
Membra solo posuere; simul suprema iacentes
Lumina versarunt, animam simul exhalarunt.
Aspicit Alphenor, laniataque pectora plangens
Advolat, ut gelidos complexibus adlevet artus,

Inque pio cadit officio; nam Delius illi

Intima fatiferō rupit praecordia ferro.
Quod simul eductum, pars est pulmonis in hamis
Eruta, cumque anima cruor est effusus in auras.
At non intonsum simplex Damasichthona vulnus

Adficit. Ictus erat, qua crus esse incipit, et qua Mollia nervosus facit internodia poples.
Dumque manu temptat trahere exitiabile telum,
Altera per iugulum pennis tenus acta sagitta est.
Expulit hanc sanguis, seque eiaculatus in almum
Emicat, et longe terebrata prosilit aura.
Ultimus Ilioneus non profectura precando
Bracchia sustulerat, 'di' que 'o communiter omnes,'
Dixerat, ignarus non omnes esse rogandos,
'Parcite!' Motus erat, cum iam revocabile telum
Non fuit, arcitenens. Minimo tamen occidit ille
Vulnere, non alte percusso corde sagitta.

[Niobe hastens to the scene, and, though grieving over her sons, is still impenitent, and again defies Latona, since still her children outnumber those of the goddess. Then, one by one, her daughters also perish by the darts of the hidden archers. The wretched Niobe, now frozen in despair, is changed to stone.]

Fama mali populique dolor lacrimaeque suorum
Tam subitae matrem certam fecere ruinae
Mirantem potuisse, irascentemque, quod ausi

Hoc essent, superi quod tantum iuris haberent.
Nam pater Amphion ferro per pectus adacto
Finierat moriens pariter cum luce dolorem.
Heu quantum haec Niobe Niobe distabat ab illa,
Quae modo Latois populum submoverat aris

Et mediam tulerat gressus resupina per urbem,
Invidiosa suis; at nunc miseranda vel hosti.
Corporibus gelidis incumbit, et ordine nullo
Oscula dispensat natos suprema per omnes.
A quibus ad caelum liventia bracchia tollens

'Pascere, crudelis, nostro, Latona, dolore, Pascere' ait, 'satiaque meo tua pectora luctu:
Corque ferum satia!' dixit 'per funera septem
Efferor. Exsulta, victrixque inimica triumpha.
Cur autem victrix? miserae mihi plura supersunt,

Quam tibi felici. Post tot quoque funera vinco.'
Dixerat, et sonuit contento nervus ab arcu:
Qui praeter Nioben unam conterruit omnes.
Illa malo est audax. Stabant cum vestibus atris
Ante toros fratrum demisso crine sorores:

E quibus una trahens haerentia viscere tela
Imposito fratri moribunda relanguit ore:
Altera solari miseram conata parentem
Conticuit subito, duplicataque vulnere caeco est:
Oraque compressit, nisi postquam spiritus ibat.

Haec frustra fugiens conlabitur: illa sorori
Immortitur: latet haec: illam trepidare videres.
Sexque datis leto diversaque vulnera passis
Ultima restabat: quam toto corpore mater,
Tota veste tegens 'unam minimamque relinque!

De multis minimam posco' clamavit 'et unam.'
Dumque rogat, pro qua rogat, occidit. Orba resedit
Exanimes inter natos nataque virumque,
Deriguitque malis. Nullos movet aura capillos,
In vultu color est sine sanguine, lumina maestis

Stant immota genis: nihil est in imagine vivum.
Ipsa quoque interius cum duro lingua palato
Congelat, et venae desistunt posse moveri;
Nec flecti cervix nec bracchia reddere motus
Nec pes ire potest: intra quoque viscera saxum est.

Flet tamen, et validi circumdata turbine venti
In patriam rapta est. Ibi fixa cacumine montis
Liquitur, et lacrimas etiam nunc marmora manant.

[This terrible event leads to a great revival among men of reverence for the gods; and they relate other instances of punishment of similar impiety. One tells how some Lycian peasants had been changed to frogs by Latona, because they had refused her a draught of water; another tells how Apollo flayed Marsyas, who had dared to challenge the god to a trial of skill in music (313-411).]

All the neighboring states now send messages of condolence to Thebes for the fate that has befallen the royal house. Athens alone, being girt with siege, sends no message. Now Tereus, king of Thrace, Emicat, et longe terebrata prosilit aura.
Ultimus Ilioneus non profectura precando
Bracchia sustulerat, 'di' que 'o communiter omnes,'
Dixerat, ignarus non omnes esse rogandos,
'Parcite!' Motus erat, cum iam revocabile telum
Non fuit, arcitenens. Minimo tamen occidit ille
Vulnere, non alte percusso corde sagitta.

[Niobe hastens to the scene, and, though grieving over her sons, is still impenitent, and again defies Latona, since still her children outnumber those of the goddess. Then, one by one, her daughters also perish by the darts of the hidden archers. The wretched Niobe, now frozen in despair, is changed to stone.]

Fama mali populique dolor lacrimaeque suorum
Tam subitae matrem certam fecere ruinae
Mirantem potuisse, irascentemque, quod ausi
Hoc essent, superi quod tantum iuris haberent.
Nam pater Amphion ferro per pectus adacto
Finierat moriens pariter cum luce dolorem.
Heu quantum haec Niobe Niobe distabat ab ulla,
Quae modo Latois populum submoverat aris
Et mediam tulerat gressus resupina per urbem,
Invicta suis: ut nunc miseranda vel hosti.
Corporibus gellidis incumbit: et ordine nullo
Oscilla dispensat manos suprema per omnes.
Vulnus ad caelestia brentia brachia tollens
Passum et additis modestia Latoe dolore,
Pascerem int. vinctaque metu praeca terra luctu:
Passa tamen stat aula per funera septem
Incipe. Pasca vinctaque tea inaestimabilix triumpha.
In populo pectoris intempesti dea plana supersunt,
Passum est ex. Dies me quoque funera vinco.'
Illa malo est audax. Stabant cum vestibus atris
Ante toros fratrum demisso crine sorores:
E quibus una trahens haerentia viscere tela
Imposito fratri moribunda relanguit ore:
Altera solari miseram conata parentem
Conticuit subito, duplicataque vulnere caeco est:
Oraque compressit, nisi postquam spiritus ibat.

Haec frustra fugiens conlabitur: illa sorori
Immoritur: latet haec: illam trepidare videres.
Sexque datis leto diversaque vulnera passis
Ultima restabat: quam toto corpore mater,
Tota veste tegens 'unam minimamque relinque!

De multis minimam posco' clamavit 'et unam.'
Dumque rogat, pro qua rogat, occidit. Orba resedit
Exanimes inter natos natasque virumque,
Deriguitque malis. Nullos movet aura capillos,
In vultu color est sine sanguine, lumina maestis

Stant immota genis: nihil est in imagine vivum.
Ipsa quoque interius cum duro lingua palato
Congelat, et venae desistunt posse moveri;
Nec flecti cervix nec brachia reddere motus
Nec pes ire potest: intra quoque viscera saxum est.

Flet tamen, et validi circumdata turbine venti
In patriam rapta est. Ibi fixa cacumine montis
Liquitur, et lacrimas etiam nunc marmora manant.

[This terrible event leads to a great revival among men of reverence for the gods; and they relate other instances of punishment of similar impiety. One tells how some Lycian peasants had been changed to frogs by Latona, because they had refused her a draught of water;
another tells how Apollo flayed Marsyas, who had dared to challenge the god to a trial of skill in music (313–411).

All the neighboring states now send messages of condolence to Thebes for the fate that has befallen the royal house. Athens alone, being girt with siege, sends no message. Now Tereus, king of Thrace, with his own and auxiliary forces, frees Athens from this siege, and for his service obtains in marriage Procne, the daughter of King Pandion.
Carried by her lord to Thrace, the queen longs for her sister Philomela; Tereus undertakes to carry this request to King Pandion, and prevails upon him to allow his remaining daughter to visit Thrace. The story further relates the horrible crime of Tereus, and his more horrible punishment (412–674). Pandion, moreover, in grief for the calamities of his house, slays himself, and Erechtheus rules in Athens in his stead.
One of the daughters of this king, Orithyia by name, is beloved by Boreas, and is by this bluff lover carried away against her will. Of these parents two winged sons are born, Zethes and Calais, who, when they come to manhood, engage among other heroes with Jason in the famous Argonautic expedition (675–721).]

Book VII

[Now Jason had been sent by Pelias, the usurping king of Iolchos in Thessaly, in quest of the golden fleece which was held by King Aeetes of Colchis. All the heroes of antiquity flocked to Jason to secure a part in this expedition. Through the aid of Minerva a ship for the expedition had been built, and this was named from its human designer, the Argo.
The Argonauts, after many adventures, come to Colchis, and demand the golden fleece. This is promised upon the fulfillment by Jason of certain terrible labors.]

Iamque fretum Minyae Pagasae puppe secabant:
Perpetuaque trahens inopem sub nocte senectam
Phineus visus erat, iuvenesque Aquilone creati
Virgineas volucres miseri senis ore fugarant:
5 Multaque perpessi claro sub Iasone tandem Contigerant rapidas limosi Phasidos undas.
Dumque adeunt regem Phrixeaque vellera poscunt, Lexque datur numeris magnorum horrenda laborum.

[Medea, the daughter of the king, struggles within herself against a growing passion.]

Concipit interea validos Aetias ignes.
Et luctata diu, postquam ratione furorem
Vincere non poterat, 'frustra, Medea, repugnas:
Nescio quis deus obstat'; ait 'mirumque, nisi hoc est,
Aut aliquid certe simile huic, quod amare vocatur.
Nam cur iussa patris nimum mihi dura videntur?
Sunt quoque dura nimis. Cur, quem modo denique vidi,
Ne pereat, timeo? Quae tanti causa timoris?
Excute virgineo conceptas pectore flammatas,
Si potes, infelix. Si possem, sanior essem.
Sed gravat invitam nova vis. Aliudque cupidó,
Mens aliud suadet. Video meliora proboque, Deteriora sequor. Quid in hospite, regia virgo, Urérís, et thalamos alieni concipis orbis?
Haec quoque terra potest, quod ames, dare. Vivat, an ille
Occidat, in dis est. Vivat tamen: idque precari Vel sine amore licet. Quid enim commisit Iason?
Quem, nisi crudélem, non tangat Iasonis actas
Et genus et virtus? quem non, ut cetera desint,
Ore movere potest? Certe mea pectora movit.
At nisi opem tulero, taurorum adflabítur igne,
Concurrentque suæ segetis tellure creatis
Hostibus, aut avido dabitur fera praedá draconí.
Hoc ego si patiar, tum me de tigride natam,
Tum ferrum et scopulos gestare in corde fatebor.
Cur non et specto pereuntém, oculosque videndo
Conscelero? Cur non tauros exhortor in illum Terrigenasque feros insopitumque draconem?
Di meliora velint. Quamquam non ista precanda,
Sed facienda mihi. Prodamne ego regna parentís, Atque ope nescio quis servabitur advena nostrá.
Ut per me sospes sine me det lintea ventis,
Virque sit alterius, poenae Medea relinquir?
Si facere hoc, aliamve potest praeponere nobis,
Occidat ingratus. Sed non is vultus in illo,
Non ea nobilitas animo est, ea gratia formae,
Ut timeam fraudem meritiique oblivia nostri.
Et dabit ante fidem. Cogamque in foedera testes
Esse deos. Quin tuta times! Accingere et omnem Pelle moram! Tibi se semper deebit Iason,
Te face sollemni iunget sibi, perque Pelasgas
Servatrix urbes matrum celebrabere turba.
Ergo ego germanam fratremque patremque deosque
Et natale solum, ventis ablata, relinquam?
Nempe pater saevis, nempe est mea barbara tellus,
Frater adhuc infans. Stant mecum vota sororis:
Maximus intra me deus est. Non magna relinquam:
Magna sequar: titulum servatae pubis Achivae,
Notitiamque loci melioris, et oppida, quorum
Hic quoque fama viget, cultusque artesque locorum;
Quemque ego cum rebus, quas totus possidet orbis,
Aesoniden mutasse velim, quo coniuge felix
Et dis cara ferar et vertice sidera tangam.
Quid, quod nescio qui mediis incurrere in undis
Dicuntur montes, ratibusque inimica Charybdis
Nunc sorbere fretum, nunc reddere, cinctaque saevis
Scylla rapax canibus Siculo latrare profundo?
Nempe tenens quod amo, gremioque in Iasonis haerens
Per freta longa ferar. Nihil illum amplexa verebor;
Aut, siquid metuam, metuam de coniuge solo.
Coniugiumne putas, speciosaque nomina culpae
Imponis, Medea, tuae? quin aspice, quantum
Aggrediare nefas, et dum licet, effuge crimen.’
Dixit: et ante oculos rectum pietaque pudorque
Constiterant, et victa dabat iam terga Cupido.
METAMORPHOSEES

[In the sacred grove she meets the hero, who entreats her assistance in his dangerous undertakings, and, on the promise of this, enters into a solemn pledge of marriage.]

Ibat ad antiquas Hecates Perséidos aras, 75 Quas nemus umbrosum secretaque silva tegebat.
   Et iam fortis erat, pulsusque recesserat ardur :
   Cum videt Aesoniden, extinctaque flamma reluxit.
   Erubuere genae, totoque recanduit ore,
   Utque solet ventis alimenta adsumere, quaeque
Parva sub inducta latuit scintilla favilla,
   Crescere et in veteres agitata resurgere vires,
   Sic iam lentus amor, iam quem languere putares,
   Ut vidit iuvenem, specie praesentis inarsit.
   Et casu solito formosior Aeson natus
85 Illa luce fuit : posses ignoscere amanti.
   Spectat, et in vultu veluti tum denique viso
   Lumina fixa tenet, nec se mortalia demens
   Ora videre putat, nec se declinat ab illo.
   Ut vero coepitque loqui dextramque prehendit
Hospes, et auxilium submissa voce rogavit,
90 Promisitque torum, lacrimis ait illa profusis :
   'Quid faciam, video: nec me ignorantia veri
   Decipiet, sed amor. Servabere munere nostro:
   Servatus promissa dato.' Per sacra triformis
Ille deae, lucoque foret quod numem in illo,
95 Perque patrem soceri cernentem cuncta futuri,
   Eventusque suos et tanta pericula iurat.
   Creditus accepit cantatas protinus herbas,
   Edidicitque usum, laetusque in tesca recessit.

[The first labor. Protected by Medea's magic, Jason yokes the brazen fire-breathing bulls, and plows the field of Mars.]

100 Postera depulerat stellas aurora micantes:
Convenient populi sacrum Mavortis in arvum,
Consistuntque iugis. Medio rex ipse resedit
Agmine purpureus sceptroque insignis eburno.
Ecce adamanteis vulcanum naribus efflant
Aeripedes tauri, tactaeque vaporibus herbae
Ardent. Utque solent pleni resonare camini,
Aut ubi terrena silices fornace soluti
Concipiunt ignem liquidarum aspergine aquarum;
Erecta sic intus clausas volventia flammam.

Gutturaque usta sonant. Tamen illis Aesone natus
Obvius it. Vertere truces venientis ad ora
Terribiles vultus praefixaque cornua ferro,
Pulverumque solum pede pulsavere bisulco,
Fumificisque locum mugitibus impleverunt.

Deriguere metu Minyae. Subit ille, nec ignes
Sentit anhelatos — tantum medicamina possunt —
Pendulaque audaci mulcet palearia dextra,
Suppositosque iugo pondus grave cogit aratri
Ducere et insuetum ferro proscindere campum.

[The second labor. The hero now sows in the plowed field the dragon’s teeth, which immediately spring up into a crop of armed giants. These attack Jason, but are turned against one another by a stone which he, taught by Medea, throws into their midst.]

Mirantur Colchi: Minyae clamoribus augent
Adiciuntque animos. Galea tum sumit äëna
Vipereos dentes, et aratos spargit in agros.
Semina mollit humus valido praetincta veneno,
Et crescent fiuntque sati nova corpora dentes.

Utque hominis speciem materna sumit in alvo,
Perque suos intus numeros componitur infans,
Nec nisi maturus communes exit in auras:
Sic ubi visceribus gravidae telluris imago
Effecta est hominis, feto consurgit in arvo;
130 Quodque magis mirum est, simul edita concutit arma.
Quos ubi viderunt praecutae cuspidis hastas
In caput Haemonii iuvenis torquere parantes,
Demiseret metu vultumque animumque Pelasgi.
Ipsa quoque extimuit, quae tutum fecerat illum,
135 Utque peti vidit iuvenem tot ab hostibus unum,
Palluit et subito sine sanguine frigida sedit;
Neve parum valeant a se data gramina, carmen
Auxiliare canit, secretasque advocat artes.
Ille gravem medios silicem iacobatus in hostes
140 A se depulsam Martem convertit in ipsos.
Terrigenae pereunt per mutua vulnera fratres,
Civilique cadunt acie. Gratantur Achivi,
Victoremque tenent avidisque amplexibus haerent.
Tu quoque victorem complecti, barbara, velles;
145 Obstatit incepto pudor. At complexa fuisses;
Sed te, ne faceres, tenuit reverentia famae.
Quod licet, aspectu tacito laetaris, agisque
Carminibus grates et dis auctoribus horum.

[The third labor. Jason now puts to sleep by Medea’s drugs the ever-watchful dragon which guards the golden fleece; he secures the prize, and returns to Greece with Medea as his bride.]

Pervigilem superest herbis sopire draconem,
150 Quo crista linguisque tribus praesignis et uncis
Dentibus horrendus custos erat arboris aureae.
Hunc postquam sparsit Lethaei gramine suci
Verbaque ter dixit placidos facientia somnos,
Quae mare turbatum, quae concita flumina sistunt,
155 Somnus in ignotos oculos sibi venit, et auro
Heros Aesonius potitur. Spolioque superbis
Muneris auctorem secum, spolia altera, portans
Victor Iolciacos tetigit cum coniuge portus.

OVID — 10
Haemoniae matres pro natis dona receptis
Grandaevique ferunt patres, congestaque flamma
Tura liquefaciunt, inductaque cornibus aurum
Victima vota litat. Sed abest gratantibus Aeson,
Iam propior leto fessusque senilibus annis.
Cum sic Aesonides: ‘O cui debe re salutem
Confiteor, coniunx, quamquam mihi cuncta dedisti, Excessitque fidem meritorum summa tuorum:
Si tamen hoc possunt,—quid enim non carmina possunt?—
Deme meis annis, et demptos adde parenti.’
Nec tenuit lacrimas. Mota est pietate rogantis, Dissimilemque animum subiit Aeeta relictus.
Nec tamen adfectus tales confessae ‘quod inquit
‘Excidit ore tuo, coniunx, scelus? ergo ego cuquam
Posse tuae videor spatium transcribere vitae?
Nec sinat hoc Hecate, nec tu petis aequa. Sed isto,
Quod petis, experiar maius dare munus, Iason.
Arte mea soceri longum temptabimus aevum,
Non annis renovare tuis; modo diva triformis
Adiuvet et praesens ingentibus adnuat ausis.’
Tres aberant noctes, ut cornua tota coirent
Efficerentque orbem. Postquam plenissima fulsit
Ac solida terras spectavit imagine luna,
Egreditur tectis vestes induta recinctas,
Nuda pedem, nudos umeros infusa capillis,
Fertque vagos mediae per muta silentia noctis
Incomitata gradus. Homines volucresque ferasque Solverat alta quies: nullo cum murmure saepes,
Immotaque silent frondes; silet umidus aer:
Sidera sola micant. Ad quae sua bracchia tendens
METAMORPHOSES

Ter se convertit, ter sumptis flumine crinem
190 Inroravit aquis, ternisque ululatibus ora
Solvit, et in dura submissa poplite terra ‘Nox’ ait ‘arcanis fidissima, quaque diurnis
Aurea cum luna succeditis ignibus, astra,
Tuque triceps Hecate, quae coeptis conscia nostris
195 Adiutrixque venis, cantusque artesque magorum,
Quaeque magos, Tellus, pollentibus instruis herbis,
Auraeque et venti montesque amnesque lacusque,
Dique omnes nemorum, dique omnes noctis adeste:
Quorum ope, cum volui, ripis mirantibus amnes
200 In fontes rediere suos, concussaque sisto,
Stantia concutio cantu freta, nubila pello
Nubilaque induco, ventos abigoque vocoque,
Vipereas rumpo verbis et carmine fauces,
Vivaque saxa sua convulsaque robora terra
205 Et silvas moveo, iubeoque tremescere montes
Et mugire solum, manesque exire sepulcris.
Te quoque, Luna, traho, quamvis Temesaea labores
Aera tuos minuant: currus quoque carmine nostro
Pallet avi; pallet nostris Aurora venenis.
210 Vos mihi taurorum flammis hebetastis, et unco
Impatiens oneris collum pressistis aratro.
Vos serpentina genis in se fera bella dedistis,
Custodemque rudem somni sopistis, et aurum
Vindice decepto Graias misistis in urbes.
215 Nunc opus est sucis, per quos renovata senectus
In florem redeat, primosque reconligat annos.
Et dabitis. Neque enim micuerunt sidera frustra,
Nec frustra volucrum tractus cervice draconum
Currus adest.’ Aderat demissus ab aethere currus.
220 Quo simul ascendit, frenataque colla draconum
Permulsit, manibusque leves agitavit habenas, Sublimis rapitur, subiectaque Thessala Tempe
Dispict, et Threcis regionibus applicat angues;
Et quas Ossa tulit, quas altum Pelion herbas,
Othrys quas Pindusque et Pindo maior Olympus,
Perspicit, et placitas partim radice revellit,
Partim succidit curvamine falcis aenae.
Multa quoque Apidani placuerunt gramina ripis,
Multa quoque Amphrysi; neque eras immunis, Enipeu;
Nec non Penèus, nec non Sperchetdes undae Contribuere aliquid, iuncosaque litora Boebes.
Carpsit et Eubota viyax Anthedone gramen,
Nondum mutato vulgarum corpore Glauci.
Et iam nona dies curru pennisque draconum
Nonaque nox omnes lustrantem viderat agros,
Cum redii. Neque erant tacti, nisi odore, dracones,
Et tamen annosae pellem posuere senectae.
Constitit adveniens citra limenque foresque,
Et tantum caelo tegitur: refugitque viriles
Contactus. Statuitque aras e caespite binas, Dexteriore Hecates, ast laeva parte Iuventae.
Has ubi verbenis silvaque incinxit agresti,
Haud procul egesta scrobibus tellure duabus
Sacra facit, cultrosque in guttura velleris atri
Conicit, et patulas perfundit sanguine fossas.
Tum super invergens liquidi carchesia bacchi
Aeneaque invergens tepidi carchesia lactis
Verba simul fudit, terrenaque numina civit,
Umbrarumque rogat rapta cum coniuge regem,
Ne prooperent artus anima fraudare senili.
Quos ubi placavit precibusque et murmurare longo,
Aesonis effectum proferri corpus ad auras
Iussit, et in plenos resolutum carmine somnos
Exanimi similem stratis porrexit in herbis.
Hinc procul Aesoniden, procul hinc iubet ire ministros,
Et monet arcanis oculos removere profanos.
Diffugiunt iussi. Passis Medea capillis
Bacchantum ritu flagrantes circuit aras,
Multifidasque faces in fossa sanguinis atra
Tinguit, et infectas geminis accendit in aris:
Terque senem flamma, ter aqua, ter sulphure lustrat.
Interea validum posito medicamen æno
Fervet et exsultat spumisque tumentibus albet.
Illic Haemonia radices Valle resectas
Seminaque floresque et sucos incoquit acres.
Adicit extremo lapides oriente Petitos
Et quas Oceani refluum mare lavit, harenas;
Addit et exceptas luna pernocte Pruinas
Et strigis infames ipsis cum carnivus alas,
Inque virum soliti vultus mutare ferinos
Ambigui prospecta luni; nec defuit illic
Squamea Cinyphii tenuis membrana chelydri
Vivacisque iecur cervi, quibus insuper addit
Ora caputque novem cornicis saecula passae.
His et mille aliis postquam sine nomine rebus
Propositum instruxit remorari Tartara munus, Arenti ramo iampridem mitis olivae
Omnia confudit summisque immiscit ima.
Ecce vetus calido versatus stipes æno
Fit viridis primo, nec longo tempore frondes
Induit, et subito gravis in oneratur olivis.
At quacumque cavo spumas eiecit æno
Ignis, et in terram guttae cecidere calentes,
Vernat humus, floresque et mollia pabula surgunt.
Quae simul ac vidit, stricto Medea recludit
Ense senis iugulum, veteremque exire cruorem
Passa, replet sucis. Quos postquam combibit Aeson Virque sit alterius, poenae Medea relinquar?
Si facere hoc, aliamve potest praeponere nobis,
Occidat ingratus. Sed non is vultus in illo,
Non ea nobilitas animo est, ea gratia formae,
Ut timeam fraudem meritique oblivia nostri.
Et dabit ante fidem. Cogamque in foedera testes
Esse deos. Quin tuta times! Accingere et omnem
Pelle moram! Tibi se semper debibit Iason,
Te face sollemni iunget sibi, perque Pelasgas
Servatrix urbes matrum celebrabere turba.
Ergo ego germanam fratremque patremque deosque
Et natale solum, ventis ablata, relinquam?
Nempe pater saevus, nempe est mea barbara tellus,
Frater adhuc infans. Stant mecum vota sororis:
Maximus intra me deus est. Non magna relinquam:
Magna sequar: titulum servatae pubis Achivae,
Notitiamque loci melioris, et oppida, quorum
Hic quoque fama viget, cultusque artesque locorum;
Quemque ego cum rebus, quas totus possidet orbis,
Aesoniden mutasse velim, quo coniuge felix
Et dis cara ferar et vertice sidera tangam.
Quid, quod nescio qui mediis incurrere in undis
Dicuntur montes, ratibusque inimica Charybdis
Nunc sorbere fretum, nunc reddere, cinctaque saevis
Scylla rapax canibus Siculo latrare profundo?
Nempe tenens quod amo, gremioque in Iasonis haerens
Per freta longa ferar. Nihil illum ampla verebor;
Aut, siquid metuam, metuam de coniuge solo.
Coniugiumne putas, speciosaque nomina culpae
Imponis, Medea, tuae? quin aspice, quantum
Aggrediare nefas, et dum licet, effuge crimen.’
Dixit: et ante oculos rectum pietasque pudorque
Constiterant, et victa dabat iam terga Cupido.
METAMORPHOSES

[In the sacred grove she meets the hero, who entreats her assistance in his dangerous undertakings, and, on the promise of this, enters into a solemn pledge of marriage.]

Ibat ad antiquas Hecates Perseridos aras, Quas nemus umbrosum secretaque silva tegebant.
Et iam fortis erat, pulsusque recesserat ardor:
Cum videt Aesoniden, extinctaque flamma reluxit.
Erubuere genae, totoque recanduit ore,
Utque solet ventis alimenta adsumere, quaeque
Parva sub inducta latuit scintilla favilla,
Crescere et in veteres agitata resurgere vires,
Sic iam lentus amor, iam quem languere putares,
Ut vidit iuvenem, specie praesentis inarsit.
Et casu solito formosior Aesone natus

Illa luce fuit : posses ignoscere amanti.
Spectat, et in vultu veluti tum denique viso
Lumina fixa tenet, nec se mortalia demens
Ora videre putat, nec se declinat ab illo.
Ut vero coepitque loqui dextramque prehendit

Hospes, et auxilium submissa voce rogavit,
Promisitque torum, lacrimis ait illa profusis:
‘Quid faciam, video: nec me ignorantia veri
Decipiet, sed amor. Servabere munere nostro:
Servatus promissa dato.’ Per sacra triformis

Ille deae, lucoque foret quod numen in illo,
Perque patrem soceri cernentem cuncta futuri,
Eventusque suos et tanta pericula iurat.
Creditus accepit cantatas protinus herbas,
Edidicitque usum, laetusque in tesca recessit.

The first labor. Protected by Medea’s magic, Jason yokes the brazen fire-breathing bulls, and plows the field of Mars.]

Postera depulerat stellas aurora micantes:
Conveniunt populi sacrum Mavortis in arvum,
Consistuntque iugis. Medio rex ipse resedit
Agnine purpureus sceptroque insignis eburno.
Ecce adaman teis vulcanum naribus efflant
105 Aeripedes tauri, tactaeque vaporibus herbae
Ardent. Utque solent pleni resonare camini,
Aut ubi terrena silices fornace soluti
Concipiunt ignem liquidarum aspergine aquarum;
Pectora sic intus clausas volventia flammas
110 Gutturaque usta sonant. Tamen illis Aeson e natus
Obvius it. Vertere truces venientis ad ora
Terribiles vultus praefixaque cornua ferro,
Pulveremque solum pede pulsavere bisulco,
Fumificisque locum mugitibus impleverunt.
115 Deriguere metu Minyae. Subit ille, nec ignes
Sentit anhelatos — tantum medicamina possunt —
Pendulaque audaci mulcet paleriae dextra,
Suppositosque iugo pondus grave cogit aratri
Ducere et insuetum ferro proscindere campum.

[The second labor. The hero now sows in the plowed field the dragon’s teeth, which immediately spring up into a crop of armed giants. These attack Jason, but are turned against one another by a stone which he, taught by Medea, throws into their midst.]

120 Mirantur Colchi: Minyae clamoribus augent
Adicientque animos. Galea tum sumit aëna
Vipereos dentes, et aratos spargit in agros.
Semina mollit humus valido praetincta veneno,
Et crescut funtque sati nova corpora dentes.
125 Utque hominis speciem materna sumit in alvo,
Perque suas intus numeros componitur infans,
Nec nisi maturus communes exit in auras:
Sic ubi visceribus gravidae telluris imago
METAMORPHOSES

Effecta est hominis, feto consurgit in arvo;

130 Quodeaque magis mirum est, simul edita concutit arma.
Quos ubi viderunt praeacutae cuspidis hastas
In caput Haemonii iuvenis torquere parantes,
Demisere metu vultumque animumque Pelasgi.
Ipsa quoque extimuit, quae tutum fecerat illum,

135 Utque peti vidit iuvenem tot ab hostibus unum,
Palluit et subito sine sanguine frigida sedit;
Neve parum valeant a se data gramina, carmen
Auxiliare canit, secretasque advocat artes.
Ille gravem medios silicem iaculatus in hostes

140 A se depulsum Martem convertit in ipsos.
Terrigenae pereunt per mutua vulnera fratres,
Civilique cadunt acie. Gratantur Achivi,
Victoremque tenent avidisque amplexibus haerent.
Tu quoque victorem complecti, barbar, velles;

145 Obstiti incepto pudor. At complexa fuisses;
Sed te, ne faceres, tenuit reverentia famae.
Quod licet, aspectu tacito laetaris, agisque
Carminibus grates et dis auctoribus horum.

[The third labor. Jason now puts to sleep by Medea's drugs the ever-watchful dragon which guards the golden fleece; he secures the prize, and returns to Greece with Medea as his bride.]

Pervigilem superest herbis sopire draconem,

150 Qui crista linguisque tribus praesignis et uncis
Dentibus horrendus custos erat arboris aureae.
Hunc postquam sparsit Lethaei gramine suci
Verbaque ter dixit placidos facientia somnos,
Quae mare turbatum, quae concita flumina' sistunt,

155 Somnus in ignotos oculos sibi venit, et auro
Heros Aesonius potitur. Spolioque superbus
Muneris auctorem secum, spolia altera, portans
Victor Iolciacos tetigit cum coniuge portus.
Quae favet ingeniis, except Pallas, avemque
Redditit, et medio velavit in ære pennis.
Sed vigor ingeni quondam velocis in alas
\[255\] Inque pedes abiit: nomen quod et ante, remansit.
Non tamen haec alte volucris sua corpora tollit,
Nec facit in ramis altoque cacumine nidos;
Propter humum volitat, ponitque in saepibus ova,
Antique memor metuit sublimia casus.

[Theseus, on the death of his father, now succeeds to the throne of Athens, and his fame fills the whole land. He is next summoned with all the great heroes of Greece to Aetolia to assist in the hunt of the Calydonian boar, which Diana, in punishment for the neglect of her worship by Oeneus, the king of Aetolia, had sent to ravage the country. Among the others comes Atalanta, the maiden huntress, who is the first to wound the boar. After many incidents, Meleager, the king's son, and leader in the chase, slays the boar, and cutting off his head presents it to Atalanta, on the ground that she has been the first to wound the beast. Meleager's two maternal uncles dispute this award, and in the quarrel are both slain by their nephew (260-444). Upon learning of this disaster to her brothers, Althaea, Meleager's mother, in grief and rage casts into the fire the brand upon the preservation of which the continuation of her son's life depends. There is a mighty struggle in Althaea's heart between maternal and sisterly affection. With the death of Meleager, the royal house of Aetolia falls in ruins, and Diana's vengeance is appeased (445-546).

Theseus, having borne his part in the Calydonian hunt, now directs his way to Athens, but is stopped on the way and entertained by the river god Acheloüs, who relates how in rage at a slight put upon his divinity he had turned five naiads into islands, and how Neptune had turned another nymph into a rock (547-610).

One of the guests here expresses his skepticism as to these metamorphoses, and even as to the very existence of the gods themselves. In reply old Lelex tells the beautiful story of Philemon and Baucis, who entertained Jupiter and Mercury unawares. These gods, pleased with the piety of the aged pair, after granting them many blessings in life, gave them a common death, and transformed them into trees.]
Multifidasque faces ramaliaque arida tecto
Detulit et minuit, parvoque admovit æno.
Quodque suus coniunx riguo conlegerat horto,
Truncat holus foliis. Furca levat ille bicorni Sordida terga suis nigro pendentia tigno,
Servatoque diu resecat de tegore partem
Exiguam, sectamque domat ferventibus undis.
Interea medias fallunt sermonibus horas,
Concutiuntque torum de molli fluminis ulva
Impositum lecto, sponda pedibusque salignis.
Vestibus hunc velant, quas non nisi tempore festo
Sternere consuerant: sed et haec vilisque vetusque
Vestis erat, lecto non indignanda saligno.
Accubuere dei. Mensam succincta tremensque Ponit anus. Mensae sed erat pes tertius impar:
Testa parem fecit. Quae postquam subdita clivum Sustulit, aequatam mentae tersere virentes.
Ponitur hic bicolor sincerae baca Minervae,
Conditaque in liquida corna autumnalia faece,
Intibaque et radix et lactis massa coacti,
Ovaque non acri leviter versata favilla,
Omnia fictilibus. Post haec caelatus codem
Sistitur argento crater fabricataque fago
Pocula, qua cava sunt, flaventibus inlita ceris.
Parva mora est, epulasque foci misere calentes,
Nec longae rursus referuntur vina senectae,
Dantque locum mensis paulum seducta secundis.
Hic nux, hic mixta est rugosis carica palmis
Prunaque et in patulis redolentia mala canistris
Et de purpureis conlectae vitibus uvae.
Candidus in medio favus est. Super omnia vultus Accessere boni nec iners pauperque voluntas.
Interea totiens haustum cratera repleri
Sponte sua, per seque vident succrescere vina:
Attoniti novitate pavent, manibusque supinis
Concipiunt Baucisique preces timidusque Philemon,
Et veniam dapibus nullisque paratibus orant.
Unicus anser erat, minimae custodia villae,
Quem dis hospitibus domini mactare parabunt.
Ille celer penna tardos aetate fatigat,
Eluditque diu, tandemque est visus ad ipsos Confugisse deos. Superi vetuere necari:
"Di" que "sumus, meritasque luet vicinia poenas
Impia" dixerunt; "vobis immunibus huius
Esse mali dabitur. Modo vestra reliquitque tecta
Ac nostros comitate gradus et in ardua montis
Ite simul." Parent ambo, baculisque levati Nituntur longo vestigia ponere clivo.
Tantum aberant summo, quantum semel ire sagitta
Missa potest: flexere oculos, et mersa palude
Cetera prospiciunt, tantum sua tecta manere.
Dumque ea mirantur, dum deflent fata suorum,
Illa vetus, dominis etiam casa parva duobus
Vertitur in templum: furcas subiere columnae,
Stramina flavescunt aurataque tecta videntur,
Caelataeque fores, adopertaque marmore tellus.
Talia tum placido Saturnius edidit ore:
"Dicite, iuste senex et femina coniuge iusto Digna, quid optetis." Cum Baucide paucia locutus, Judicium superis aperit commune Philemon:
"Esse sacerdotes delubraque vestra tueri
Poscimus; et quoniam concordes egimus annos,
Auferat hora duos eadem, nec coniugis umquam
Busta meae videam, nee sim tumulandus ab illa."
Vota fides sequitur. Templi tutela fuere, Donec vita data est. Annis aevoque soluti
Ante gradus sacros cum starent forte locique
Navarent curas, frondere Philemona Baucis, Baucida conspexit senior frondere Philemon.
Iamque super geminos crescente cacumine vultus
Mutua, dum licuit, reddebant dicta “vale” que
“O coniunx” dixere simul, simul abdita texit
Ora frutex. Ostendit adhuc Cibyretus illic Incola de gemino vicinos corpore truncos.
Haec mihi non vani, neque erat cur fallere vellent, Narravere senes. Equidem pendentia vidi
Serta super ramos, ponensque recentia dixi
“Cura pii diis sunt, et qui coluere coluntur.”

[After the story of Philemon and Baucis, Acheloüs tells of the various changes of Proteus; of the impiety of Erisichthon, who scoffed at the worship of Ceres and cut down her sacred grove, for which the goddess had afflicted him with unappeasable hunger. Acheloüs then relates the various transformations of Erisichthon’s daughter, and explains what forms he himself is able to assume. He ends his story with a groan at the memory of certain unhappy experiences of his own (725–884).]

Book IX

[Theseus asks Acheloüs to tell the cause of his grief. Thereupon the god relates his contest with Hercules, his rival for the hand of Deianira, daughter of Oeneus, king of Aetolia. They long strive in their own proper shapes, but the advantage is with Hercules.]

Quae gemitus truncaque deo Neptunius heros
Causa rogat frontis. Cum sic Calydonius amnis Coepit, inornatos redimitus harundine crines:
‘Triste petis munus. Quis enim sua proelia victus Commemorare velit? Referam tamen ordine. Nec tam
Turpe fuit vinci, quam contendisse decorum est;
Magnaque dat nobis tantus solacia victor.
Nomine siqua suo tandem pervenit ad aures
Detanira tuas — quondam pulcherrima virgo
Multorumque fuit spes invidiosa procorum.
Cum quibus ut societ domus est intrata petiti,
Accipe me generum," dixi "Parthaone nate;"
Dixit et Alcides. Alii cessere duobus.
Ille Iovem socerum dare se, famamque laborum,
Et superata suae referebat iussa novercae.
Contra ego "turpe deum mortali cedere:" dixi —
Nondum erat ille deus — "regem me cernis aquarum
Cursibus obliquis inter tua regna fluentum.
Nec gener externis hospes tibi missus ab oris,
Sed popularis ero et rerum pars una tuarum.
Tantum ne noceat, quod me nec regia Iuno
Odit, et omnis abest iussorum poena laborum.
Nam, quo te iactas, Alcmena nate, creatum,
Iuppiter aut falsus pater est, aut crimen verus.
Matris adulterio patrem petis. Elige, fictum Esse Iovem malis, an te per dedecus ortum."
Talia dicentem iamdudum lumine torvo
Spectat, et accensae non fortiter imperat irae, Verbaque tot reddit: "Melior mihi dextera lingua.
Dummodo pugnando superem, tu vince loquendo," Congrediturque ferox. Puduit modo magna locutum Cedere: reieci viridem de corpore vestem,
Brachiaque opposui, tenuique a pectore varas
In statione manus et pugnae membra paravi.
Ille cavis hausto spargit me pulvere palmis,
Inque vicem fulvae tactu flavescit harenae.
Et modo cervicem, modo crura micantia captat,
Aut captare putes, omnique a parte lasssit.
Me mea defendit gravitas: frustraque petebas;
Haud secus ac moles, magno quam murmure fluctus
Oppugnant: manet illa, suoque est pondere tuta.
Digredimur paulum, rursusque ad bella coimus,
Inque gradu stetimus, certi non cedere; eratque
Cum pede pes iunctus, totoque ego pectore pronus
Et digitos digitis et frontem fronte premebam.
Non aliter vidi fortes concurrere tauros,
Cum pretium pugnae toto nitidissima saltu
Expeditur coniunx: spectant armenta paventque
Nescia, quem maneat tanti victoria regni.
Ter sine proiecto voluit nitentia contra Reicere Alcides a se mea pectora: quarto
Excitit amplexus, adductaque brachia solvit,
Impulsumque manu—certum est mihi vera fateri—
Protinus avertit, tergoque onerosus inhaesit.
Siqua fides, — neque enim facta mihi gloria voce
Quaeritur — imposito pressus mihi monte videbar.
Vix tamen inserui sudore fluentia multo
Brachia, vix solvi duros a pectore nexus.
Instat anhelanti, prohibetque resumere vires,
Et cervice mea potitur. Tum denique tellus Pressa genu nostro est, et harenas ore momordi.

[Acheloüs now has recourse to magic, changing first into a snake then into a bull; but he is conquered in these disguises also.]

Inferior virtute, meas divertor ad artes,
Elaborque viro longum formatus in anguem.
Qui postquam flexos sinuavi corpus in orbes,
Cumque fero movi linguam stridore bisulcam,
Risit, et in ludens nostras Tirynthius artes
"Cunaram labor est angues superare mearum," Dixit "et ut vincas alios, Acheloë, dracones,
Pars quota Lernaeæ serpens eris unus echidnae?
BONA COPIA WITH THE HORN OF ACHELOÜS
(From the Vatican Museum)

To face p. 161
Vulneribus fecunda suis erat illa, nec ullum
De centum numero caput est impune recisum,
Quin gemino cervix herede valentinor esset.
Hanc ego ramosam natis e caede colubris
Crescentemque malo domui, domitamque reclusi.

Quid fore te credas, falsum qui versus in anguem
Arma aliena moves? Quem forma precaria celat?"
Dixerat, et summò digitorum vincula collo
Inicit: angebar, ceu guttura forcipe pressus,
Rolicibusque meas pugnabam evellere fauces.

Sic quoque devicto restabat tertia tauri
Forma trucis. Tauro mutatus membra rebello.
Induit ille toris a laeva parte lacertos,
Admissumque trahens sequitur, depressaque dura
Cornua figit humo, meque alta sternit harena.

Nec satis hoc fuerat: rigidum fera dextera cornu
Diam tenet, infregit, truncaque a fronte revellit.
Naides hoc, pomis et odorò flore repletum,
Sacrarunt; divesque meo Bona Copia cornu est.'
Dixerat: et nymphe ritu succincta Dianae,

Una ministrarum, fusis utrimumque capillis,
Incessit totumque tulit praeedito cornu
Autumnum et mensas, felicia poma, secundas.
Lux subit; et primo feriente cacumina sole Discedunt iuvenes. Neque enim, dum flumina pacem

Et placidos habeant lapsus, totaeque residant, Oppriuntur, aquae. Vultus Achelouis agrestes
Et lacerum cornu mediis caput abdidit undis.

[The victorious Hercules journeys homeward with his bride. Coming to a swollen stream, he intrusts Deianira to the Centaur Nessus to carry across the stream, while he himself precedes. Nessus proves false to his charge, and is shot by the poisoned arrows of Hercules. The dying centaur, plotting revenge, presents to Deianira his tunic.

OVID—11]
dyed with his own life blood, which is now tainted with the Lernaean poison from the darts of Hercules. This tunic, he assures her, will have the power to recall her husband's affections should he ever prove faithless to her (98–133).

Now many years have passed, and Deianira hears a rumor that Hercules is smitten by the charms of Iole, a captive maiden. She believes the rumor, and, in a fit of jealousy, sends the poisoned tunic to her husband, who puts it on in the midst of a sacrifice of thanksgiving to Jove. As soon as the virulence of the poison is aroused by the heat, Hercules is seized with fearful sufferings.

Longa fuit medii mora temporis: actaque magni

135 Herculis implerant terras odiumque novercae.
Victor ab Oechalia Cenaeo sacra parabat
Vota Iovi, cum fama loquax praecessit ad aures, Deianira, tuas, quae veris addere falsa
Gaudet, et e minimo sua per mendacia crescit,

140 Amphitryoniaden Ioles ardore teneri.
Credit amans, venerisque novae perterrita fama
Indulsit primo lacrimis, flendoque dolorem Diffudit miseranda suum. Mox deinde 'quid autem Flemus?' ait 'paex lacrimis laetabitur istis.

145 Quae quoniam adveniet, properandum aliquidque
novandum est,
Dum licet, et nondum thalamos tenet altera nostros.
Conquerar, an sileam? Repetam Caulydona, moerne!
Excedam tectis? an, si nihil amplius, obstem?
Quid si me, Melagre, tuam memor esse sororem

150 Forte paro facinus, quantumque injuria possit
Femineusque dolor, ingulata paelice testor?
Incursus animus varios habet. Omnibus illis Praetulit imbutam Nesseo sanguine vestem
Mittere, quae vires defecto reddat amori.

155 Ignaroque Lichae, quid tradat, nescia, luctus
Ipsa suos tradit. Blandisque miserrima verbis, Dona det illa viro, mandat. Capit inscius heros, Induiturque umeris Lernaeae virus echidnae.
Tura dabat primis et verba precantia flammis, Vinaque marmoreas patera fundebat in aras:
Incaluit vis illa mali, resolutaque flammis
Herculeos abiit late diffusa per artus.
Dum potuit, solita gemitum virtute repressit.
Victa malis postquam est patientia, repulit aras,
Implevitque suis nemorosum vocibus Oeten.
Nec mora, letiferam conatur scindere vestem:
Qua trahitur, trahit illa cutem, foedumque relatu,
Aut haeret membris frustra temptata revelli,
Aut laceros artus et grandia detegit ossa.
Ipse cruor, gelido ceu quondam lamina candens
Tincta lacu, stridit coquiturque ardente veneno.
Nec modus est, sorbent avidae praecedinta flammae,
Caeruleusque fluit toto de corpore sudor,
Ambustique sonant nervi, caecaque medullis
Tabe liquefactis tendens ad sidera palmas
'Cladibus,' exclamat 'Saturnia, pascere nostris:
Pascere, et hanc pestem specta, crudelis, ab alto,
Corque ferum satia. Vel si miserandus et hosti,
Hoc est, si tibi sum, diris cruciatibus aegram
Invisamque animam natamque laboribus aufer.
Mors mihi munus erit. Decet haec dare dona novercam.
Ergo ego foedantem peregrino templo crure
Busirin domui? saevoque alimenta parentis
Antaeo eripui? nec me pastoris Hiberi
Forma triplex, nec forma triplex tua, Cerbere, movit?
Vosne, manus, validi pressistis cornua tauri?
Vestrum opus Elis habet, vestrum Stymphalides undae,
Partheniumque nemus? vestra virtute relatus
Thermodontiaco caelatus balteus auro,
190 Pomaque ab insomni concustodita dracone?
Nec mihi Centauri putuere resistere, nec mi
Arcadiae vastator aper? nec profuit hydrae
Crescere per damnun geminasque resumere vires?
Quid, cum Thracis equos humano sanguine pingues 195 Plenaque corporibus laceris praesepia vidi,
Visaque deieci, dominumque ipsosque peremi?
His elisa iacet moles Nemeaea lacertis:
Hac caelum cervice tuli. Defessa iubendo est
Saeva Iovis coniunx: ego sum indefessus agendo.
200 Sed nova pestis adest, cui nec virtute resisti
Nec telis armisque potest. Pulmonibus errat Ignis edax imis, perque omnes pascitur artus.
At valet Eurystheus! et sunt, qui credere possint
Esse deos?’ Dixit, perque altum saucius Oeten
205 Haud aliter graditur, quam si venabula taurus
Corpore fixa gerat, factique refugerit auctor.
Saepe illum gemitus edentem, saepe frementem,
Saepe retemptantem totas refringere vestes
Sternentemque trabes irascentemque videres
210 Montibus aut patrio tendentem bracchia caelo.

[Hercules, in his madness, hurls Lychas, the bearer of the fatal tunic, into the sea; the youth is changed into a rock (211–229).

The apotheosis of Hercules. The hero builds a mighty pyre on Mount Oete, and, after consigning his bow and arrows to his friend
Philoctetes, mounts the pyre and bids his friend apply the torch.
Meanwhile, in a council of the gods, it is decided that the long-suffering hero shall be enrolled among their number and have a place in heaven. It is elsewhere related that Deianira hanged herself through remorse.]

At tu, Iovis inclita proles,
230 Arboribus caesis, quas ardua gesserat Oete,
Inque pyram structis arcum pharetramque capacam
Regnaque visuras iterum Troiana sagittas
FERRE IUBES POEANTE SATUM, QUO FLAMMA MINISTRO
SUBLITA. DUMQUE AVIDIS COMPRENDITUR IGNIBUS AGGER, CONGERIEM SILVAE NEMEAEO VELLERE SUMMAM
STERNIS, ET IMPOSITA CLVAE CERVICE RECUMBIS, HAUD ALIO VULTU, QUAM SI CONVIVA IACERES
INTER PLAENA MERI REDIMITUS POCULA SERTIS.
IAMQUE VALENS ET IN OMNE LATUS DIFFUSA SONABAT, SECUROSQUE ARTUS CONTEMPTOREMQUE PETEBAT
FLAMMA SUUM. TIMUERE DEI PRO VINDICE TERRAE.
QUOS ITA, SENSIT ENIM, LAETO SATURNIUS ORE
IUPPITER ADLOQUITUR: 'NOSTRA EST TIMOR ISTE VOLUPTAS, O SUPERI, TOTOQUE LIBENS MIHI PECTORE GRATOR, QUOD MEMORIS POPULI DICOR RECTORQUE PATERQUE ET MEA PROGENIES VESTRO QUOQUE TUTA FAVORE EST.
NAM QUAMQUAM IPSIUS DATUR HOC IMMANIBUS ACTIS, OBLIGOR IPSE TAMEN. SED ENIM, NEPECTORA VANO
FIDA METU PAVEANT, OETAES SPERNITE FLAMMAS!
OMNIA QUI VICIT, VINCET, QUOS CERNITIS, IGNES;
NEC NISI MATERNA VULCANUM PARTE POTENTEM
SENTIET. AETERNUM EST A ME QUOD TRAXIT, ET EXPERS
ATQUE IMMUNE NECIS, NULLAQUE DOMABLE FLAMMA.
IDQUE EGO DEFUNCTUM TERRA CAELESTIBUS ORIS
ACCIPIAM, CUNCTISQUE MEUM LAETABILE FACTUM
DIS FORE CONFIDO. SQUIIS TAMEN HERCULE, SQUIIS
FORTE DEO DOLITURUS ERIT, DATA PRAEMIA NOLET, SED MERUINSE DARI SCIENT, INVITUSQUE PROBABIT.'
ADSENSERE DEI. CONIUNX QUOQUE REGIA VISA EST
CETERA NON DURIO, DURIO TAMEN ULTIMA VULTU
DICTA TULISSE IOVIS, SEQUE INDOLUISSE NOTATAM.
INTEREA QUODCUMQUE FUIT POPULABLE FLAMMAE, MULCI BER ABSTULERAT: NEC COGNOSCENDA REMANSIT
HERCULIS EFFIGIES, NEC QUICQUAM AB IMAGINE DUCTUM MATRIS HABET, TANTUMQUE IOVIS VESTIGIA SERVAT.
Utque novus serpens posita cum pelle senecta
Luxuriare solet, squamaque virere recenti:
Sic ubi mortales Tirythius exuit artus,
Parte sui meliore viget, maiorque videri
Coepit ct Augusta fieri gravitate verendus.
Quem pater omnipotens inter cava nubila raptum
Quadriiugo curru radiantis intulit astris.

[Iole, by Hercules' command, had been espoused to Hyllus, the hero's eldest son. After the death of Hercules, his mother Alcmena relates to Iole the story of the birth of her great son. And of the hostility of Juno, who changed her servant maid Galanthis, because of her fidelity to her mistress, into a wasel (273–323). Iole then relates how the nymph Dryope was changed into a tree by the angry deities of the woods because she picked a twig from the sacred lotus tree (324–393). While they are lamenting these sad chances, Iolaus suddenly appears among them in renewed youth, which Hebe, the goddess of eternal youth, had bestowed upon him at the request of Hercules (394–417). Over this event a great clamor arises among the gods for a like favor for those mortals whom they love. But Jove forbids the gift of immortality to be given to any but those to whom the fates have decreed it. He cites Aeacus, Rhadamanthus, and Minos (418–438) as mortals whom he would if he could restore to youth. Now Minos, in the prime of his power, had driven Miletus forth from Crete, who fled to Asia and there founded the town that bears his name. Here Miletus had a son and a daughter, Caunus and Byblis. The latter, filled with an unnatural love for Caunus is, in her despair, converted by the nymphs into a fountain (439–665). This story suggests the wonder of Crete, the metamorphosis of the maiden Iphis into a youth, whose union with Ianthe was honored by the presence of Venus, Juno, and Hymen, the god of marriage (666–797).]

Book X

[Hymen proceeds from Crete to Thrace to solemnize the nuptials of Orpheus and Eurydice. But the unfortunate bride is stung by a serpent and dies. Orpheus seeks her in the land of shades with the help
METAMORPHOSES

6 his lyre alone. By his sweet strains he wins the sympathy of all the pirit world, and even of the king and queen of Hades, who grant him is request that his wife return to earth with him, upon the one condion that he does not look back until he has regained the earth. This dition he fails to fulfill, and again Eurydice is lost to him.]

Inde per immensum croceo velatus amictu
Aethera digreditur, Ciconumque Hymenaeus ad oras Tendi, et Orphea nequiquam voce vocatur.
Adfuit ille quidem, sed nec sollemnia verba
5 Nec laetos vultus nec felix attulit omen.
Fax quoque, quam tenuit, lacrimoso stridula fumo
Usque fuit, nulloque invenit motibus ignes.
Exitus auspicio gravior. Nam nupta per herbas
Dum nova naiadum turba comitata vagatur,
10 Occidit in talum serpentis dente recepto.
Quam satis ad superas postquam Rhodoperus auras
Deflevit vates, ne non temptaret et umbras,
Ad Styga Taenaria est ausus descendere porta:
Perque leves populos simulacraque functa sepulcro
15 Persephonem adiit inamoenaque regna tenentem
Umbrarum dominum. Pulvisque ad carmina nervis
Sic ait: 'O positi sub terra numina mundi,
In quem recidimus, quicquid mortale creamur:
Si licet, et falsi positis ambagibus oris
20 Vera loqui sinitis, non huc, ut opaca viderem
Tartara, descend; nec uti villosa colubris
Terna Medusaei vincirem guttura monstri.
Causa viae coniunx, in quam calcata venenum
Vipera diffudit, crescentesque abstulit annos.
25 Posse pati volui, nec me temptasse negabo:
Vicit Amor. Supera deus hic bene notus in ora est:
An sit et hic, dubito; sed et hic tamen auguror esse,
Famaque si veteris non est mentita rapinae,
Vos quoque iunxit amor. Per ego haec loca plena timoris,

Per Chaos hoc ingens vastique silentia regni,
Eurydices, oro, properata retexite fata.
Omnia debentur vobis, paulumque morati
Serius aut citius sedem properamus ad unam.
Tendimus huc omnes, haec est domus ultima, vosque

Humani generis longissima regna tenetis.
Haec quoque, cum iustos matura peregerit annos,
Iuris erit vestri: pro munere poscimus usum.
Quod si fata negant veniam pro coniuge, certum est
Nolle redire mihi: leto gaudete duorum.'

Talia dicentem nervosque ad verba moventem
Exsangues flebant animae: nec Tantalus undam
Captavit refugam, stupuitque Ixionis orbis,
Nec carpsere iecur volucres, urnisque vacarunt
Belides, inque tuo sedisti, Sisyphe, saxo.

Tunc primum lacrimis victarum carmine fama est
Eumenidum maduisse genas. Nec regia coniunx
Sustinet oranti, nec qui regit ima, negare:
Eurydicenque vocant. Umbras erat illa recentes
Inter, et incessit passu de vulnere tardo.

Hanc simul et legem Rhodopeus accipit Orpheus,
Ne flectat retro sua lumina, donec Avernas
Exierit valles; aut inrita donautura.
Carpitur accliavis per muta silentia trames,
Arduus, obscurus, caligue densus opaca.

Nec procul afferunt telluris margine summae:
Hic, ne deficeret, metuens, avidusque videndi,
Flexit amans oculos: et protinus illa relapsa est,
Brachiaque intendens prendique et prendere certus
Nil nisi cedentes infelix adripit auras.

Iamque iterum moriens non est de coniugé quicquam
Questa suo: quid enim nisi se quereretur amatam?
Supremumque vale, quod iam vix auribus ille
Acciperet, dixit, revolutaque rursus eodem est.

[In despair at his second loss, Orpheus now disdains all woman-kind and retires to the woody slopes of Rhodope and Haemus, where he consoles himself upon the lyre. To these sweet strains all the trees of the forest throng around him to listen. Among these is the cypress, into which had been changed the youth Cyparissus, who pined away with grief because he had accidentally killed a favorite stag (64–142). Orpheus, in protracted song, relates how the beautiful youth Hyacinthus, beloved by Apollo, was accidentally slain by that god during a game of quoits, and was changed by the grieving god into the flower that bears his name (143–219); how Venus changed the Cerastae to oxen because of their desecration of the rites of hospitality (220–242); how Pygmalion, a celebrated artist, became enamored of a beautiful statue which he had made, and at his prayer Venus infused the breath of life into the ivory figure (243–297); how Venus herself was smitten with the charms of the beautiful youth Adonis, whom she warned against the savage wild beasts. For his entertainment she told him the story of the swift-footed maiden Atalanta, who put all her lovers to the test of a foot race with her, adding the condition that the unsuccessful competitors should be slain. The youth Hippomenes, by the use of the golden apples which Venus taught him, won the race, and so the maiden for his promised bride. These two, however, for polluting the sacred temple of Cybele, were changed by that goddess into lions, and tamed to draw her car. Adonis, unmindful of the warnings of Venus, attacked a savage wild boar, by which he was slain. The sorrowing goddess, in memory of him, caused the anemone to spring from his blood (503–739).]

Book XI

[As Orpheus thus sings to the enchanted woods, the Thracian women roving through the mountain in a bacchanalian revel espied him, and in their madness, calling him the despiser of their sex, tear him in pieces (1–66). Bacchus, offended by their wanton cruelty, changes them all into trees, and deserts their land. He selects for his favored haunts the mountains of Lydia. Here, pleased with the hospitality of King Midas toward his foster father Silenus, the god promises to grant whatever boon Midas may ask (1-101).

The foolish king prays that all which he touches may turn to gold. Returning to his palace, he is delighted to find that his prayer has been granted, and only realizes that he has attained a curse instead of blessing when he attempts to eat and drink. In his despair he prays again to Bacchus, who bids him bathe in the head waters of the river Pactolus, and thus be free from the fatal gift.

THE DRUNKEN SILENUS IN A PROCESSION OF BACCHANALS
(From a sarcophagus in the National Museum at Naples)

Ille, male usurus donis, ait 'effice quicquid
Corpore contigero fulvum vertatur in aurum.'
Adnuit optatis, nocituraque munera solvit
105 Liber, et indoluit, quod non meliora petisset.
Laetus abit gaudetque malo Bercyntius heros:
Pollicitique fidem tangendo singula temptat.
Vixque sibi credens, non alta fronde virentem
Ilice detraxit virgam: virga aurea facta est.
110 Tollit humo saxum: saxum quoque palluit auro.
Contigit et glæbam: contactu glæba potenti
Massa fit. Arentes Cereris decerpsit aristas:
Aurea messis erat. Demptum tenet arbore pomum.
Hesperidas donasse putes. Si postibus altis 115 Admovit digitos, postes radiare videntur.
Ille etiam liquidis palmas ubi laverat undis,
Unda fluens palmis Danaën eludere posset.
Vix spes ipse suas animo capit, aurea fingens
Omnia. Gaudenti mensas posuere ministri 120 Exstructas dapibus nec tostae frugis egentes:
Tum vero, sive ille sua Cerealia dextra
Munera contigerat, Cerealia dona rigebant;
Sive dapes avido convellere dente parabat,
Lamina fulva dapes, admo to dente, premebat.

125 Miscuerat puris auctorem muneres undis:
Fusile per rictus aurum fluitare videres.
Attonitus novitate mali, divesque miserque,
Effugere optat opes et quae modd voverat, odit.
Copia nulla famem relevat; sitis arida guttur

Urit, et inviso meritum torquetur ab auro.

Ad caelumque manus et splendida bracchia tollens
‘Da veniam, Lenaee pater! peccavimus;’ inquit
‘Sed miserere, precor, speciosoque eripe damno.’
Mite deum numen, Bacchus peccasse fatetem

135 Restituit, factique fide data munera solvit.
‘Neve male optato mancas circumlitis auro,
Vade’ ait ‘ad magnis vicinum Sardibus amnem,
Perque iugum montis labentibus obvius undis
Carpe viam, donec venias ad fluminis ortus;

140 Spumigeroque tuum fonti, qua plurimus exit,
Subde caput, corpusque simul, simul elue crimen.’
Rex iussae succedit aquae. Vis aurea tinxit Flumen, et humano de corpore cessit in amnem.
Nunc quoque iam veteris percepto semine venae

145 Arva rigent auro madidis pallentia glaebis.

[But Midas’ foolish character remains unchanged. Being one of the judges at a contest of musical skill between Pan and Apollo, he takes the side of Pan. Apollo, in disgust, causes a pair of ass’s ears to grow from Midas’ head.]

Ille, perosus opes, silvas et rura colebat,
Panaque montanis habitantem semper in antris.
Pingue sed ingenium mansit; nocituraque, ut ante,
Rursus erant domino stolidae praeordia mentis.

Nam freta prospeciens late riget arduus alto
Tmolus in ascensu, clivoque extensus utroque
Sardibus hinc, illinc parvis finitur Hypaepis.
Pan ibi dum teneris iactat sua carmina nymphis
Et leve cerata modulatur harundine carmen,

Ausus Apollineos prae se contemnere cantus,
Iudice sub Tmolo certamen venit ad impar.
Monte suo senior iudex consedit, et aures
Liberat arboribus; quercu coma caerula tantum
Cingitur, et pendent circum cava tempora glandes.

Isque deum pecoris spectans 'in iudice' dixit
'Nulla mora est.' Calamis agrestibus insonat ille:
Barbaricoque Midan — aderat nam forte canenti —
Carmine delenit. Post hunc sacer ora retorsit Tmolus ad os Phoebi; vultum sua Silva secuta est.

Ille caput flavum lauro Parnaside vinctus
Verrit humum Tyrrio saturata murice palla:
Instrictamque fidem gemmis et dentibus Indis
Sustinet a laeva: tenuit manus altera plectrim.
Artificis status ipse fuit. Tum stamina docto

Pollice sollicitat, quorum dulcedine captus
Pana iubet Tmolus citharae summittere cannas.
Iudicium sanctique placet sententia montis
Omnibus. Arguitur tamen atque iniusta vocatur Unius sermone Midae. Nec Delius aures

Humanam stolidas patitur retinere figuram:
Sed trahit in spatium, villisque alentibus implet,
Instabilesque imas facit et dat posse moveri.
Cetera sunt hominis: partem damnatur in unam,
Induiturque aures lente gradientis aselli.

Ille quidem celare cupid, turpique pudore
Tempora purpureis temptat velare tiaris.
Sed solitus longos ferro resecare capillos
Viderat hoc famulus. Qui cum nec prodere visum Dedecus auderet, cupiens efferre sub auras,
Nec posset reticere tamen, secedit, humumque
Effodit, et, domini quales aspexerit aures,
Voce refert parva, terraeque immurmurat haustae;
Indiciumque suae vocis tellure regesta
Obruìt, et scrobibus tacitus disserdit opertis.

Creber harundinibus tremulis ibi surgere lucus
Coepti, et, ut primum pleno maturuit anno, Prodit agricolam: leni nam motus ab austro Obruit verba refert, dominique coarguit aures.

[Apollo now goes to the neighborhood of the Hellespont, where he and Neptune engage to build the walls of Troy for King Leomedon for a certain reward. But when the work is done the king refuses to perform his part. For this, the land is deluged and a sea-monster is sent to ravage the country. The king has promised his daughter Hesione to the one who will rescue her from the monster, to whom she has been destined as an expiatory offering. She is rescued by Hercules, but the reward is again denied, and Hercules, with the assistance of the brothers Telamon and Peleus, sacks Troy in revenge. Hesione is given by the victorious hero to Telamon; for Peleus had already obtained the goddess Thetis for his bride (194–220).

This goddess had been assigned to Peleus as a reward for his virtuous life. After his pursuit of her through the many changes which she assumed in her endeavors to escape him, she finally yielded to his suit, and of this union was Achilles born (221–265).

But Peleus' happiness was not destined to continue. Having by accident slain his brother Phocus, he is driven from his native land.
He comes first to Trachinia, where Ceyx and Alcyone rule. Ceyx relates how his brother Daedalion had been changed into a hawk while in the act of throwing himself from a cliff through grief at his daughter Chione's death. A wolf now ravages the herds of Ceyx, and the monster is, at the prayer of Peleus, changed into marble. Peleus comes next to Magnesia, where he is cleansed from the stain of his crime by Acastus (266–409).]
Ceyx journeys by sea, against the urgent solicitation of Alcyone, to consult the oracle. During this voyage a terrible storm arises, and Ceyx is drowned. Juno, in pity for Alcyone, requires the god Somnus to send a dream to the queen which shall inform her of her husband's death. Accordingly, Morpheus, assuming the form of the dead Ceyx, presents himself before Alcyone, and reveals to her the disaster which has happened to her husband. The gods, pitying her grief, change both her and her husband to halcyons, the harbingers of calm weather (410-748).

An old man, seeing these birds in the air, is reminded of how Aesacus, a son of Priam, king of Troy, throwing himself into the sea because of his grief for his dead mistress, was changed into a cormorant (749-795).

Book XII

[Priam mourns Aesacus as dead, and all his sons join his mourning except Paris. He, by his impious deed, has brought upon Troy the avenging wrath of all Greece; and even now the hostile fleet lies at Aulis ready to sail. But first the winds must be appeased by the sacrifice of Iphigenia.]

Nescius adsumptis Priamus pater Aesacon alis
Vivere, lugebat. Tumulo quoque nomen habenti Inferias dedcrat cum fraternity Hector inanes.
Defuit officio Paridis praeentia tristi,
5 Postmodo qui rapta longum cum coniuge bellum
Attulit in patriam, coniurataeque sequuntur
Mille rates gentisque simul commune Pelasgae.
Nec dilata foret vindicta, nisi aequora saevi
Invia fecissent venti, Boeotaque tellus
Aulide piscosa puppes tenuisset ituras.
10 Hic patrio de more Iovi cum sacra parassent,
Ut vetus accensis incanduit ignibus ara,
Serpere caeruleum Danai videre draconem
In platanum, coeptis quae stabat proxima sacris.
15 Nidus erat volucrum bis quattuor arbore summa,
METAMORPHOSES

Quas simul et matrem circum sua damna volantem
Corripuit serpens avidoque abscondidit ore.
Obstipuere omnes. At veri providus augur Thistorides 'vincemus,' ait 'gaudete, Pelasgi.'

30 Troia cadet; sed erit nostri mora longa laboris';
Atque novem volucres in belli digerit annos.
Ille, ut erat, virides amplexus in arbores ramos
Fit lapis; et superat serpentis imagine saxum.
Permanet Aonis Nereus violentus in undis,

35 Bellaque non transfert; et sunt qui par cere Troiae
Neptunum credant, quia moenia fecerat urbi.
At non Thistorides. Nec enim nescive tacetve,
Sanguine virgineo placandam virginis iram
Esse deae. Postquam pietatem publica causa,

30 Rexque patrem vicit, castumque datura cruorem
Flentibus ante aram stetit Iphigenia ministris, Victa dea est, nubemque oculis obiecit, et inter
Officium turbamque sacri vocesque precantum
Supposita fertur mutasse Mycenida cerva.

35 Ergo ubi, qua decuit, lenita est caede Diana,
Et pariter Phoebes, pariter maris ira recessit,
Accipiunt ventos a tergo mille carinae,
Multaque perpessae Phrygia potiuntur harena.

[ Straightway rumor spreads over the world the news of the intended attack upon Troy. The Trojans prepare their defense. Protesilæus, the first Greek to land, is slain by Hector. In one of the many battles that ensue, Achilles engages with Cycnus, the son of Neptune. Finding his foe invulnerable to spear and sword, Achilles at length succeeds in strangling him. The fallen hero is changed by Neptune into a swan (39–145). These events are succeeded by a truce, during which Achilles pays the feast which he had vowed for the death of Cycnus. The chiefs discuss their various deeds of arms, and especially Cycnus' fate. Nestor recalls the similar case of Caeneus, who, once a beautiful maiden, Caenis, had been ravished by Neptune, and had been at her ] own request changed by the god into a man and made invulnerable (146-209). It was at this time that, at the marriage of Pirithoüs, king of the Lapithae, with Hippodamia, the famous contest of the centaurs with their hosts, the Lapithae occurred. Nestor, who also had been a guest at the marriage feast, now recites at great length the story of the bloody strife. The part of the invulnerable Caeneus in this fight was of especial interest. Many centaurs fell by his hands, but their spears and swords were ineffectual against him. He was finally overwhelmed by a mass of trees which they heaped upon him, and at the moment of his death he was changed into an eagle (210-535). As Nestor finishes his tale, Telepomus, the descendant of Hercules, chides the old man for omitting the deeds of his mighty ancestor. Nestor explains his personal reasons for animosity toward Hercules: how the latter had devastated his country and slain all of his brothers, one of whom, Periclemenus, Neptune had endowed with the power of assuming whatever shape he pleased. Assaulting Hercules in the form of an eagle, he was slain by the hero's dart (536-579).

At the close of Nestor's story, the Greeks withdraw to rest. Meanwhile, Neptune vows vengeance upon Achilles for the death of his son Cycnus. For nine years he remembers his vow, and at last, by the aid of Apollo, he secures its fulfillment through an arrow shot by Paris. The Greeks, after rendering the dead hero the due funeral honors, assemble to listen to the rival claims of Ajax and Ulysses for Achilles' armor.]

580 At deus aequoreas qui cuspide temperat undas,
In volucrem corpus nati Phaëthonida versum
Mente dolet patria; saeuvumque perosus Achillem Exercet memores plus quam civiliter iras.
Iamque fere tracto duo per quinquennia bello 585 Talibus intonsum compellat Sminthea dictis:
'O mihi de fratris longe gratissime natis,
Inrita qui mecum posuisti moenia Troiae,
Ecquid, ubi has iam iam casuras aspicis arces,
Ingemis? aut ecquid tot defendentia muros
590 Milia caesa doles? ecquid, ne persequar omnes,
Hectoras umbra subit circum sua Pergama tracti,
Cum tamen ille ferox belloque cruentior ipso
Vivit adhuc, operis nostri populator, Achilles?
Det mihi se, faxo, triplici quid cuspide possim,
Sentiat. At quoniam concurrere comminus hosti
Non datur, occulta necopinum perde sagitta!
Adnuit, atque animo pariter patruoque suoque
Delius indulgens nebula velatus in agmen
Pervenit Iliacum, mediaque in caede virorum
Rara per ignotos spargentem cernit Achivos
Tela Parin: fassusque deum, 'quid spicula perdis
Sanguine plebis?' ait. 'Siqua est tibi cura tuorum, Vertere in Aeaciden, caesoque ulciscere fratres!
Dixit, et ostendens sternentem Troica ferro
Corpora Peliden, arcus obvertit in illum, Certaque letifera direxit spicula dextra.
Quod Priamus gaudere senex post Hectora posset,
Hoc fuit. Ille igitur tantorum victor, Achille, Vinceris a timido Graiae raptore maritae!
At si feminine fuerat tibi Marte cadendum,
Thermodoniaca malles cecidisse bipenni.

A BATTLE WITH THE AMAZONS
(From a sarcophagus in the Vatican Museum)

OVID — 12
[Ajax, with overweening boastfulness and unrestrained passion, lays claim to the armor. He bases his claim first upon his noble descent, being in the third generation from Jove; second, upon the fact that he is next of kin to the dead Achilles; and finally he compares the cowardly, underhanded dealings of his rival with his own brave deeds and warlike prowess.]

Consedere duces et vulgi stante corona
Surgit ad hos clipei dominus septemplicis Aiax;
Utque erat impatiens irae, Sigela torvo
Litora respexit classemque in litore vultu,
Intendensque manus ‘agimus, pro Iuppiter!’ inquit ‘Ante rates causam, et mecum confertur Ulixes!
At non Hectoreis dubitavit cedere flammis,
Quas ego sustinui, quas hac a classe fugavi.
Tutius est igitur fictis contendere verbis,
Quam pugnare manu. Sed nec mihi dicere promptum,
Nec facere est isti: quantumque ego Marte feroci
Inque acie valeo, tantum valet iste loquendo.
Nec memoranda tamen vobis mea factura, Pelasgi,
Esse reor; vidisti enim. Sua narret Ulixes,
Quae sine teste gerit, quorum nox conscia sola est.
Praemia magna peti fatoer: sed demit honorem
Aemulus: Aiaci non est tenuisse superbam,
Sit licet hoc ingens, quicquid speravit Ulixes.
Iste tulit pretium iam nunc temptaminis huius,
Quo cum victus erit, mecum certasse feretur.
Atque ego, si virtus in me dubitabilis esset,
Nobilitate potens essem; Telamone creatus,
Moenia qui forti Troiana sub Hercule cepit, Litoraque intravit Pagasea Colcha carina.

Aeacus huic pater est, qui iura silentibus illic
Reddit, ubi Aeoliden saxum grave Sisyphon urget.
Aeacon agnoscit summus prolemque fatetur
Iuppiter esse suam. Sic ab Io ve tertius Aiax.
Nec tamen haec series in causam prosit, Achivi,
Si mihi cum magno non est communis Achille.
Frater erat; fraterna peto. Quid sanguine cretus Sisyphio, furtisque et fraude simillimus illi,
Inserit Aeacidis alienae nomina gentis?
An quod in arma prior nulloque sub indice veni,
Arma neganda mihi? potiorque videbitur ille,
Ultima qui cepit, detractavitque furore
Militiam facto, donec sollertior isto
Sed sibi inutilior timidii commenta rexit
Naupliades animi, vitataque traxit in arma?
Optima num sumat, quia sumere noluit ulla?
Nos inhonorati et donis patruelibus orbi,
Obtulimus quia nos ad prima pericula, simus?
Atque utinam aut verus furor ille, aut creditus
Nec comes hic Phrygias umquam venisset ad arc

Hortator scelerum! non te, Poeantia proles, Expositum Lemnos nostro cum crimine habere:
Qui nunc, ut memorant, silvestribus abditus an Saxa moves gemitu, Laëritiadaeque precaris
Quae meruit, quae, si di sunt, non vana precari

Et nunc ille eadem nobis iuratus in arma,
Heu! pars una ducum, quo successore sagittae
Herculis utuntur, fractus morboque fameque
Velaturque aliturque avibus, vulucesque peten
Debita Trojanis exercet spicula fatis.

Ille tamen vivit, quia non comitavit Ulixen.
Mallet et infelix Palamedes esse relictus,

Quem male convicti nimium memor iste furoris.
Prodere rem Danaam finxit, fictumque probavit

Crimen et ostendit, quod iam praefoderat, aurum.
Ergo aut exsilio vires subduxit Achivis,
Aut nece. Sic pugnat, sic est metuendus Ulixes.
Qui licet eloquio fidum quoque Nestora vincat,

Haud tamen efficiet, desertum ut Nestora crim

Esse rear nullum: qui cum imploraret Ulixen Vulnere tardus equi fessusque senilibus annis, Proditus a socio est. Non haec mihi crimina
Scit bene Tydides, qui nomine saepe vocatum Corripuit, trepidoque fugam exprobravit amico.

Aspiciunt oculis superi mortalia iustis:
En ceget auxilio, qui non tulit; utque reliquit,
Sic lingueundus erat: legem sibi dixerat ipse.
Conclamat socios. Adsum, videoque trementem Pallentemque metu et trepidantem morte futura.
75 Opposui molem clipei texique iacentem, Servavique animam — minimum est hoc laudis — inertem.
Si perstas certare, locum redeamus in illum:
Redde hostem vulnusque tuum solitumque timorem,
Post clipeumque late, et mecum contende sub illo.
80 At postquam eripui, cui standi vulnera vires
Non dederant, nullo tardatus vulnere fugit.
Hector adest, secumque deos in proelia ducit:
Quaque ruit, non tu tantum terreris, Ulixe,
Sed fortes etiam: tantum trahit ille timoris.
85 Hunc ego sanguineae successu caedis ovantem
Eminus ingenti resupinum pondere fudi:
Hunc ego poscentem, cum quo concurreret, unus
Sustinui: sortemque meam vovistis, Achivi,
Et vestrae valuer e preces. Si quaeritis huius 90 Fortunam pugnae, non sum superatus ab illo.
Ecce ferunt Troes ferrumque ignemque Iovemque
In Danaas classes. Ubi nunc facundus Ulixes?
Nempe ego mille meo protexi pectore puppes,
Spem vestri redivis. Date tot pro navibus arma.
95 Quod si vera licet mihi dicere, quae ritur istis, Quam mihi, maior honos, coniunctaque gloria nostra
est,
Atque Aiax armis, non Aiaci arma petuntur.
Conferat his Ithacus Rhesum imbellemque Dolona Priamidenque Helenum rapta cum Pallade captum.
100 Luce nihil gestum, nihil est Diomede remoto.
Si semel ista datis meritis tam vilibus arma,
Dividite, et pars sit maior Diomedis in illis.
Quo tamen haec Ithaco, qui clam, qui semper inermis
Rem gerit et furtis incautum decipit hostem?
105 Ipsa nitor galeae claro radiantis ab auro
Insidias prodet manifestabitque latentem.
Sed neque Dulichius sub Achillis casside vertex Pondera tanta feret, nec non onerosa gravisque
Pelias hasta potest imbellibus esse lacertis,

Nec cîpleus vasti concreitus imagine mundi
Conveniet timidae nataeque ad furta sinistrae.
Debilitaturum quid te petis, improbe, munus?
Quod tibi si populi donaverit error Achivi,
Cur spolieris, erit, non cur metuaris ab hoste;

Et fuga, qua sola cunctos, timidissime, vincis,
Tarda futura tibi est gestamina tanta trahenti.
Adde quod iste tuus, tam raro prolia passus,
Integer est cîpleus : nostro, qui tela ferendo
Mille patet plagis, novus est successor habendus.

Denique, quid verbis opus est? Spectemur agendo!
Arma viri fortis medios mittantur in hostes:
Inde iubete peti et referentem ornate relatis.”

[Ulysses next speaks, and with his well ordered words shows the superiority of reason and eloquence over brute force. He pleads that his gift of speech and shrewdness with which Ajax has taunted him may not be considered to his disadvantage, for by it he has often served the Greeks. By this he gave Achilles to the war.]

Finierat Telamone satus; vulgique secutum
Ultima murmur erat; donec Laërtius heros

Astitit, atque oculos paulum tellure moratos
Sustulit ad proceres, exspectatoque resolvit
Ora sono; neque abest facundis gratia dictis.
‘Si mea cum vestris valuissest vota, Pelasgi,
Non foret ambiguus tanti certaminis heres,

Tuque tuis armis, nos te poteremur, Achille.
Quem quoniam non aquea mihi vobisque negarunt
Fata,—manuque simul veluti lacrimantia tersit
Lumina—‘quis magno melius succedat Achilli,
METAMORPHOSES

Quam per quem magnum Danais successit Achilles?

Huic modo ne prosit, quod, uti est, hebes esse videtur;
Neve mihi noceat, quod vobis semper, Achivi,
Profuit ingenium: meaque haec facundia, siqua est,
Quae nunc pro domino, pro vobis saepe locuta est,
Invidia careat, bona nec sua quisque recuset.

[He contrasts his own descent with that of Ajax, and refutes the latter's claim to be next of kin to Achilles.]

Nam genus et proavos et quae non fecimus ipsi, Vix ea nostra voco. Sed enim quia rettulit Ajax
Esse Iovis pronepos, nostri quoque sanguinis auctor Iuppiter est, totidemque gradus distamus ab illo.

Nam mihi Laërtes pater est, Arcesius illi,

Iuppiter huic; neque in his quisquam damnatus et exsul.
Est quoque per matrem Cyllenius addita nobis Altera nobilitas. Deus est in utroque parente.

Sed neque materno quod sum generosior ortu,
Nec mihi quod pater est fraterni sanguinis insons,

Proposita arma peto. Meritis expendite causam;
Dummodo quod fratres Telamon Peleusque fuerunt
Aiacis meritum non sit, nec sanguinis ordo,
Sed virtutis honor spoliis quaeratur in istis.

Aut si proximitas primusque requiritur heres,

Est genitor Peleus, est Pyrrhus filius illi.
Quis locus Aiaci? Phthiam haec Scyrumve ferantur
Nec minus est isto Teucer patruelis Achilli.
Num petit ille tamen, num si petat, auferat illa?

[Basing his argument upon desert, Ulysses claims as his own all the mighty deeds of Achilles, for it was he who sent that hero to the war.]

Ergo operum quoniam nudum certamen habetur,

Plura quidem feci, quam quae comprehendere dictis
In promptu mihi sit. Rerum tamen ordine ducar.
Praescia venturi genetrix Nerei̧a leti Dissimulat cultu natum. Deceperat omnes,
In quibus Aiacȩm, summæae fallacia vestis.

Arma ego feminineis animum motura virilem
Mercibus inserui. Neque adhuc proiecerat heros Virgineos habitus, cum parvam hastamque tenenti
“Nate dea,” dixi “tibi se peritura reservant Pergama. Quid dubitas ingentȩm evertere Troiam?”

Inieci̧que manum, fortemque ad fortia̧e misi.
Ergo opera illius mea sunt. Ego Telephon hasta Pugnantem domui, victum orantemque refeci.
Quod Thebae cecidere, meum est. Me credite Lesbon, Me Tenedon Chrysenque et Cillan, Apollinis urbes.

Et Scyrum cepisse. Mea concussa putate
Procu̧buisse solo Lynnesia moenia dextra.
Utque alios taceam, qui saevum perdere posset
Hectora, nempe dedi. Per me iacet inclitus Hector.
Illis haec armis, quibus est inventus Achilles,

Arma peto: vivo dederam, post fata reposco.

[It was by his arguments at Aulis that Agamemnon had been prevailed upon to yield to fate and sacrifice his daughter to appease the winds. He also was the chosen ambassador of the Greeks sent to the court of Priam to demand the restoration of Helen.]

Ut dolor unius Danaos pervenit ad omnes, Aulidaque Eubocam complerunt mille carinae,
Exspectata diu, nulla aut contraria classi
Flamina erant: duraeque iubent Agamemnona sortes

Immeritam saevae natam mactare Dianae.
Denegat hoc genitor, divisque irascitur ipsis,
Atque in rege tamen pater est. Ego mite parentis Ingenium verbis ad publica commoda verti.
Nunc equidem fateor, fassoque ignoscat Atrides:
Difficilem tenui sub iniquo iudice causam.
Hunc tamen utilitas populi fraterque datique
Summa movet sceptri, laudem ut cum sanguine penset.
Mittor et ad matrem, quae non hortanda, sed astu
Decipienda fuit. Quo si Telamonius isset, Orba suis essent etiam nunc linea ventis.
Mittor et Iliacas audax orator ad arces,
Visaque et intrata est altae mihi curia Troiae:
Plenaque adhuc erat illa viris. Interritus egi
Quam mihi mandarat communis Graecia causam, Accusoque Parin praedamque Helenamque reposco,
Et moveo Priamum Priamoque Antenora iunctum.
At Paris et fratres et qui rapuere sub illo,
Vix tenuere manus — scis hoc, Menelaë! — nceandas:
Primaque lux nostri tecum fuit illa pericli.

Longa referre mora est quae consilioque manuque
Utiliter feci spatiosi tempore belli.
Post acies primas urbis se moenibus hostes
Continuere diu, nec aperti copia Martis
Ulla fuit: decimo demum pugnavimus anno.
Quid facis interea, qui nil, nisi proelia, nosti?
Quis tuus usus erat? Nam si mea facta requiris, Hostibus insidior, fossas munimine cingo,
Consolor socios, ut longi taedia belli
Mente ferant placida: doceo, quo simul alendi
Armandique modo; mittor, quo postulat usus.
Ecce Iovis monitu, deceptus imagine somni,
Rex iubet incepti curam dimittere belli.

[Here recounts his service in restraining the Greeks at the time when Ajax included, would have returned home leaving Troy untaken; the daring deeds which, in company with Diomede, he had done.]
Ille potest auctore suam defendere vocem.
Non sitat hoc Aix. debeendaque Pergama poscat, Quidque potest, pugnet. Cur non remoratur ituro
Cur non arma capiit unus, quod vaga turba sequatur
Non earat hoc nimium numquam nisi magna loquent
Quid quid et ipse fugit? Vidi, puduitque videre, Cum tu targa dares inhostestaque vela parares.
Nec mora, "quid facitis? Quae vos dementia" dixi
"Concitati, O soci, captam dimittere Troiam?
Quidve domum fertis decimo, nisi dedecus, anno?"
Satius atque aitis in quae dolor ipse disertum
Eccorat, aversos profuga de classe reduxi.
Convocat Atrides socios terrore paventes:
Nec Telamonides etiam nunc hiscere quicquam
Audet. At asem erat reges incessere dictis Thersites, etiam per me haud impune, protervis.
Erigor, et trepides cives exhortor in hostem,
Amissamque mea virtutem voce repono.
Tempore ab hoc, quodemque potest fecisse videri
Fortiter iste, meum est. qui dantem terga retraxi.
Denique de Danais quis te laudatve petitve?
At sua Tydides mecum communicat acta,
Me probat et socio semper confidit Ulixe.
Est alicuius, de tot Graiorum milibus unum
A Diomede legi: nec me sors ire iubebat.
Sic tamen et spreto noctisque hostisque periculo
Ausum eadem. quae nos, Phrygia de gente Dolona
Interimo: non ante tamen, quam cuncta coegi
Prodere, et edidici, quid perfida Troia pararet.
Omnia cognoram, nec, quod specularer, habebam,
Et iam promissa poteram cum laude reverti.
Haud contentus eo petii tentoria Rhesi,
Inque suis ipsum castris comitesque peremi:
Atque ita captivo victor votisque potitus
Ingredior curru laetos imitante triumphos.
Cuius equos pretium pro nocte poposcerat hostis,
Arma negate mihi. Fueritque benignior Aiax!

[His warlike deeds in open fight. It was he himself who rescued the body and armor of the fallen Achilles.]

255 Quid Lycii referam Sarpedonis arma ferro
Devastata meo? Cum multo sanguine fudi
Coeranoni Iphitiden et Alastoraque Chromiumque Alcandrumeque Haliumque Noëmonaque Prytaninque, Exitioque dedi cum Chersidamante Thoona

260 Et Charopem, fatisque inmitibus Ennomon actum, Quique minus celebres nostra sub moenibus urbis
Procubuere manu. Sunt et mihi vulnera, cives, Ipso pulchra loco: nec vanis credite verbis.
Aspicite en! vestemque manu diduxit et 'haec sunt

265 Pectora semper' ait 'vestris exercita rebus.
At nil impedit per tot Telamonius annos
Sanguinis in socios, et habet sine vulnere corpus.
Quid tamen hoc refert, si se pro classe Pelasga
Arma tulisse refert contra Troasque Iovemque?

270 Confiteorquque, tulit: neque enim benefacta maligne
Detractare meum est. Sed ne communia solus Occupet, atque aliquem vobis quoque reddat honorem.
Reppulit Actorides sub imagine tutus Achillis
Troas ab arsuris cum defensore carinis.

275 Asum etiam Hectoris solum concurrere telis
Se putat, oblitus regisque ducumque meique,
Nonus in officio, et praelatus munere sortis.
Sed tamen eventus vestrae, fortissime, pugnae
Quis fuit? Est Hector violatus vulnere nullo.

280 Me miserum, quanto cogor meminisse dolore
Temporis illius, quo Graium murus, Achilles
Procubuit! Nec me lacrimae luctusve timorve Tardarunt, quin corpus humo sublime referrem.
His umeris, his, inquam, umeris ego corpus Achillis,
Et simul arma tuli. Quae nunc quoque ferre laboro.
Sunt mihi, quae valeant in talia pondera, vires.
Est animus certe vestros sensurus honores.

[It would be a shame for Ajax to possess this heavenly armor, for he is too brutish and dull to appreciate its beauties.]

Seilicet idcirco pro gnato caerula mater
Ambitiosa suo fuit, ut caelestia dona,
Artis opus tantae, rudis et sine pectore miles
Inducet? Neque enim clipei caelamina norit, Oceanum et terras cumque alto sidera caelo,
Plethasique, Hydasque, immemque aequoris Arcton,
Diversasque urbes, nitidumque Orionis ensem.
Postulat ut capiat quae non intellegit arma.

[As to the taunt of Ajax that Ulysses had sought by strategy to avoid coming to the war, Achilles himself had done the same.]

Quid quod me duri fugientem munera belli
Arguit incepto serum accessisse labori,
Nec se magnanimo maledicere sentit Achilli?
Si simulasse vocas crimen, simulavimus ambo.
Si mora pro culpa est, ego sum maturior illo.
Me pia detinuit coniunx, pia mater Achillem;
Primaque sunt illis data tempora, cetera vobis.
Haud timeo, si iam nequeo defendere, crimen
Cum tanto commune viro. Deprensus Ulixis Ingenio tamen ille: at non Aiacis Ulixes.

[Not Ulysses alone but all the Greek chieftains are responsible for the fate of Palamedes and Philoctetes. Yet Philoctetes shall still be brought by Ulysses' wit to serve the Greeks at Troy, the same wit which] had learned of the Palladium and secured that aiding presence of the goddess for the Greeks.]

Ne ve in me stolidae convicia fundere linguae
Admiremur eum, vobis quoque digna pudore
Obicit. An falso Palameden crimine turpe Accusasse mihi, vobis damnasse decorum est?

Sed neque Naupliades facinus defendere tantum
Tamque patens valuit, nec vos audistis in illo
Crimina: vidistis, praestoque obiecta patebant.
Nec Poeantiaden quod habet Vulcania Lemnos,
Esse reus merui. Factum defendite vestrum;

Consensistis enim. Nec me suasisse negabo,
Ut se subtraheret bellicque viaeque labori,
Temptaretque feros requie lenire dolores.
Paruit, et vivit. Non haec sententia tantum
Fida, sed et felix; cum sit satis, esse fidelem.

Quem quoniam vates delenda ad Pergama poscunt,
Ne mandate mihi: melius Telamonius ibit,
Eloquioque virum morbis iraque furentem
Molliet, aut aliqua producit callidus arte.
Ante retro Simois fluet et sine frondibus Ide

Stabit, et auxilium promittet Achaia Troiae,
Quam, cessante meo pro vestris pectore rebus,
Aiaceis stolidi Danais sollertia prosit.
Sis licet infestus sociis regique mihique,
Dure Philoctete; licet exsecrere, meumque

Devoeas sine fine caput, cupiasque dolenti
Me tibi forte dari, nostrumque haurire cruorem,
Utque tui mihi, sic fiat tibi copia nostri:
Te tamen aggrediar, mecumque reducere nitar.
Tamque tuis potiar, faveat Fortuna, sagittis,
Quam sum Dardanio, quem cepi, vate potitus;
Quam responsa deum Troianaque fata retexti;
Quam rapui Phrygiae signum penetrale Minervae Hostibus e mediis. Et se mihi comparat Aiajax?
Nempe capi Troiam prohibebant fata sine illo.

Fortis ubi est Aiajax? Ubi sunt ingentia magni
Ire per excubias et se committere nocti,
Perque feros enses non tantum moenia Troum,
Verum etiam summnas arces intrare suaque

Eripere aede deam, raptamque adferre per hostes?
Quae nisi fecissem, frustra Telamone creatus Gestasset laeva taurorum tergora septem.
illa noxte mihi Troiae victoria parta est :
Pergama tunc vici, cum vinci posse coege.

[Yes, during the whole war, while the brawn and physical valor of Ajax had often gained renown (though many others had been as brave and strong as he), still it was the mind of Ulysses that had planned and counseled with the leader of the war, and it is mind that makes the worth of a man.]

Desine Tydiden vultuque et murmure nobis
Ostentare meum. Pars est sua laudis in illo.
Nec tu, cum socia cliepeum pro classe tenebas,
Solus eras. Tibi turba comes, mihi contigit unus.
Qui nisi pugnacem sciret sapiente minorem

Esse, nec indomitae deberi praemia dextrae,
Ipse quoque haec peteret. Peteret moderatior Aiajax, Eurypylusque ferox, claroque Andraemone natus;
Nec minus Idomeus, patriaque creatus cadem
Meriones; peteret maioris frater Atridae :

Quippe manu fortes nec sunt mihi Marte secundi,
Consiliis cessere meis. Tibi dextrae bello
Utilis; ingenium est, quod eget moderamine nostro.
Tu vires sine mente geris: mihi cura futuri.
Tu pugnare potes: pugnandi tempora mecum Eligit Atrides. Tu tantum corpore prodes, os animo. Quantoque ratem qui temperat, anteit emigis officium, quanto dux milite maior, antum ego te supero. Nec non in corpore nostro pectorata sunt potiora manu; vigor omnis in illis.

[Ulysses makes a final appeal to the judges and ends his speech.]

At vos, o proceres, vigili date praemia vestro;
Proque tot annorum cura, quibus anxius egi,
Hunc titulum meritis pensandum reddite nostris.
Iam labor in fine est, obstantia fata removi,
Altaque posse capi faciendo Pergama, cepi.

Per spes nunc socias casuraque moenia Troum,
Perque deos oro, quos hosti nuper ademi,
Per siquid superest, quod sit sapienter agendum,
Siquid adhuc audax ex praecipitique petendum est,
Si Troiae fatis aliquid restare putatis,

Este mei memores! Aut si mihi non datis arma, Huic date!’ Et ostendit signum fatale Minervae.

The armor is awarded to Ulysses, whereupon Ajax, in a frenzy of oointment and rage, slays himself with his own sword. From his springs a purple flower (the hyacinth) whose petals commemothe name of the fallen hero.

Mota manus procerum est, et quid facundia posset,
Re patuit; fortisque viri tuit arma disertus.
Hectora qui solus, qui ferrum ignemque Iovemque
Sustinuit totiens, unam non sustinet iram:
Invictumque virum vincit dolor. Adripit ensem,
Et ‘meus hic certe est. An et hunc sibi poscit Ulixes?
Hoc’ ait ‘utendum est in me mihi. Quique cruore Saepe Phrygum maduit domini nunc caede madebit,
Ne quisquam Aiacam possit superare nisi Ajax.’
Dixit, et in pectus tum demum vulnera passum,
Est, ubi Troia fuit, Phrygiae contraria tellus
Bistonius habitata viris. Polymestoris illic Regia dives erat, cui te commisit alendum
Clam, Polydore, pater, Phrygiasque removit ab armis;
Consilium sapiens, sceleris nisi praemia magnas
Adiecisset opes, animi inritamen avari.

Ut cecidit fortuna Phrygum, capit impiusensem
Rex Thracum, juguloque sui demisit alumni;
Et tamquam tolli cum corpore crimina possent,
Exanimem scopulo subjectas misit in undas.
Litore Threfcio classem religarat Atrides,
Dum mare pacatum, dum ventus amicior esset.
Hic subito, quantus cum vivaret esse solebat,
Exit humo late rupta, similisque minanti
Temporis illius vultum referebat Achilles,
Quo ferus iniusto petiiit Agamemnona ferro:
Immemores' que 'mei disceditis' inquit 'Achivi?
Obruitque est mecum virtutis gratia nostrae?

Ne facite! utque meum non sit sine honore sepulcrum,

Placet Achilleos mactata Polyxena manes.'

Dixit: et, immitti sociis parentibus umbrae,

Rapta sinu matris, quam iam prope sola fovebat,

Fortis et infelix et plus quam femina virgo

Ducit ur ad tumulum, diroque fit hostia busto.

Quae memor ipsa sui, postquam crudelibus aris

Admoesta est, sensitque sibi fera sacra parari,

Utque Neoptoleum stantem ferrumque tenentem

Inquem suo vidit figentem lumina vultu,

'Uter iamdudum generoso sanguine! ' dixit

'Nulla mora est. Quin tu iugulo vel pectore telum

Cond e meo!' iugulumque simul pectusque rexit.

'Scilicet aut ullah servire Polyxena vellem?

Aut per tale sacrum numen placabis illum?

Mors tantum vellem matrem mea fallere posset.

Mater obest, minuitque necis mihi gaudia: quamvis

Non mea mors illi, verum sua vita tremenda est.

Vos modo, ne Stygiis adeam non libera manes,

Este procul, si iusta peto, tactuque viriles

Virgi neo removete manus. Acceptior illi,

Quis quis is est, quem caede mea placare paratis,

Liber erit sanguis. Siquos tamen ultima nostri

Verb a movent oris, Priami vos filia regis,

Non captiva rogat, generisci corpus inemptum

Relite; neve auro redimat ius triste sepulcri,

Sed lacrimis. Tunc, cum poterat, redimebat et auro.'

Sed Dixit. At populus lacrimas, quas illa tenebat,

Non tetenet. Ipse etiam flens invitusque sacerdos

Prae bita coniecto rupit praecordia ferro.

illa, super terram defecto poplite labens,
Pertulit intrepidos ad fata novissima vultus.
Tunc quoque cura fuit partes velare tegendas,
Cum caderet, castique decus servare pudoris.

[The unhappy Hecuba, herself a slave to Ulysses, wildly laments her daughter's death, and the fate of Troy that continues to pursue herself alone. One comfort and stay alone remains to her, her son Polydorus, who had been sent by Priam for safe keeping, together with much treasure, to the king of Thrace. But now, as the hapless mother goes to the seashore to fetch water to bathe her dead daughter's wound, she sees the mangled corpse of Polydorus upon the shore; for the Thracian king had slain him to secure his treasure. Maddened beyond endurance by this last blow, Hecuba seeks the king and succeeds in tearing out his eyes. Changed to a dog, she flees, howling, madly away (481-575).

Though others mourned for Hecuba, Aurora was filled with grief of her own, for her son Memnon had been slain in battle by Achilles. She implores Jove in some way to honor her dead hero son. This the god consents to do, and changes the ashes of Memnon into a flock of birds that bear his name (576-622). Aeneas, after the fall of Troy, fleeing with his father and his son, touches at Thrace, and comes to Delos; here he is hospitably entertained by Anius, priest and king of the island. In answer to a question of Anchises, Anius relates how his daughters were transformed into doves. After an exchange of costly gifts the Trojans depart and come to Crete, thinking that this is their 'ancient mother' which the oracle at Delos had bidden them to seek. But pestilence again drives them to sea, upon which, after touching at the Strophades, Phaeacia, and Epirus, they come to the coast of Sicily, near the dangerous region of Scylla and Charybdis.

Scylla was once a beautiful nymph, beloved of many suitors. While she was boasting of this to her sister nymphs, Galatea mournfully relates in the following tale her own sad love story (623-749).

Galatea was the object of the Cyclops' love, but her heart was fixed upon the beautiful youth Acis, and so the giant's clumsy wooing was in vain. In a mad fit of jealousy the Cyclops hurls at Acis a huge jagged rock, which crushes him to the earth. The youth is changed into a river-god.]

750 ' Acis erat Fauno nymphaque Symaethide cretus, Magna quidem patrisque sui matrisque voluptas,
Nostra tamen maior. Nam me sibi iunxerat uni.
Pulcher et octonis iterum natalibus actis
Signarat dubia teneras lanugine malas.

755 Hunc ego, me Cyclops nulla cum fine petebat:
Nec, si quaesieris, odium Cyclopes, amorne
Acidis in nobis fuerit praeuentior, edam:
Par utrumque fuit. Pro, quanta potentia regni
Est, Venus alma, tui! nempe ille immittis et ipsis

760 Horrendus silvis et visus ab hospite nullo
Impune, et magni cum dis contemptor Olympi,
Quid sit amor, sentit, valideque cupidine captus
Uritur, oblitus pecorum antrorumque suorum.
Iamque tibi formae, iamque est tibi cura placendi

765 Iam rigidos pectis rastris, Polypheme, capillos;
Iam libet hirsutam tibi falce recidere barbam,
Et spectare feros in aqua et componere vultus.
Caedis amor feritasque sitisque immensa cruris
Cessant, et tutae veniuntque abeuntque carinae.

770 Telemus interea Siculam delatus ad Aetnen, Telemus Eurymides, quem nulla fefellerat ales, Terribilem Polyphemon adit, "lumen" que, "quod unum
Fronte geris media, rapiet tibi" dixit "Ulixes."
Risit et "o vatun stolidissime, falleres," inquit

775 "Alteram iam rapuit." Sic frustra vera monentem
Spernit, et aut gradiens ingenti litora passu
Degravit, aut fessus sub opaca revertitur antra.
Prominet in pontum cuneatus acumine longo
Collis; utrumque latus circumfluit aequoris unda.

780 Huc ferus ascendit Cyclops, mediusque resedit;
Lanigerae pecudes nullo ducente securae.
Cui postquam pinus, baculi quae praebuit usum,
Mollia fraga leges, ipsa autumnalia corna
Prunaque, non solum nigro liventia suco,
Verum etiam generosa novasque imitantia ceras.
Nec tibi castancae me coniuge, nec tibi deerunt
Arbutei fetus. Omnis tibi serviet arbor.
Hoc pecus omne meum est. Multae quoque vallibus errant,
 Multas Silva tegit, multae stabulantur in anris.
Nec, si forte roges, possim tibi dicere, quot sint.
Pauperis est numerare pecus. De laudibus harum
Nil mihi credideris: praesens potes ipsa videre,
Ut vix circumeant distentum cruribus uber.
Sunt, fetura minor, tepidis in ovilibus agni;
Sunt quoque, par aetas, aliis in ovilibus haedi.
Lac mihi semper adest niveum. Pars inde bibenda
Servatur, partem liquefacta coagula durant.
Nec tibi deliciae faciles vulgataque tantum
Munera contingunt, dammae leporesque caperque,
Parve columbarum, demptusve cacumine nidus:
Inveni geminos, qui tecum ludere possint,
Inter se similes, vix ut dignoscere possis,
Villosae catulos in summis montibus ursae:
Inveni et dixi `dominae servabimus istos.'
Iam modo caeruleo nitidum caput exime ponto,
Iam, Galatea, veni, nec munera despice nostra.
Certe ego me novi, liquidaeque in imagine vidi
Nuper aquae; placuitque mihi mea forma videnti.
Aspice, sim quantus. Non est hoc corpore maior
Iuppiter in caelo. Nam vos narrare soletis
Nescio quem regnare Iovem. Coma plurima torvos
Prominet in vultus, umerosque, ut lucus, obumbrat.
Nec mea quod rigidis horrent densissima saetis
Corpora, turpe puta. Turpis sine frondibus arbor:
Ante pedes posita est, antemnis apta ferendis,
Sumptaque harundinibus compacta est fistula centum,
Senserunt toti pastoria sibila montes,
Senserunt undae. Latitans ego rupe meique
Acidis in gremio residens procul auribus hausi
Talia dicta meis auditaque verba notavi:
"Candidior folio nivei, Galatea, ligustri,
Floridior pratis, longa procerior alno,
Splendidior vitro, tenero lascivior haedo,
Levior adsiduo detritis aequore conchis,
Solibus hibernis, aestiva gratior umbra,
Nobilior forma ac platano conspectior alta,
Lucidior glacie, matura dulcior uva,
Mollior et cygni plumis et lacte coacto,
Et, si non fugias, riguo formosior horto:
Saevior indomitis eadem Galatea iuvencis,
Durior annosa quercu, fallacior undis,
Lentior et salicis virgis et vitibus albis,
His immobilior scopulis, violentior amne,
Laudato pavone superbior, acrior igni,
Asperior tribulis, feta truculentior ursa,
Surdior aequoribus, calcato immittior hydro,
Et, quod praecipue vellem tibi demere possem,
Non tantum cervo claris latratibus acto,
Verum etiam ventis volucrique fugacior aura!
At bene si noris, pigeat fugisse, morasque
Ipsa tuas damnes et me retinere labores.
Sunt mihi, pars montis, vivo pendentia saxo
Antra, quibus nec sol medio sentitur in aestu,
Nec sentitur hiems. Sunt poma gravantia ramos;
Sunt auro similes longis in vitibus uvae,
Sunt et purpureae: tibi et has servamus et illas.
Ipsa tuis manibus silvestri nata sub umbra
Mollia fraga leges, ipsa autumnalia corna
Prunaque, non solum nigro liventia suco,
Verum etiam generosa novasque imitantia ceras.
Nec tibi castaneae me coniuge, nec tibi deerunt
820 Arbutei fetus. Omnis tibi serviet arbor.
Hoc pecus omne meum est. Multae quoque vallibus errant,
Multas silva tegit, multae stabulantur in anris.
Nec, si forte roges, possim tibi dicere, quot sint.
Pauperis est numerare pecus. De laudibus harum
825 Nil mihi credideris: praesens potes ipsa videre,
Ut vix circumeat distentum cruribus uber.
Sunt, fetura minor, tepidis in ovilibus agni;
Sunt quoque, par aetas, aliis in ovilibus haedi.
Lac mihi semper adest niveum. Pars inde bibenda
830 Servatur, partem liquefacta coagula durant.
Nec tibi deliciae facile velgataque tantum
Munera contingent, dammae leporesque caperque,
Parve columbarum, demptusve cacumine nidus:
Inveni geminos, qui tecum ludere possint,
835 Inter se similes, vix ut dignoscere possis,
Villosae catulos in summis montibus ursae:
Inveni et dixi 'dominae servabimus istos.'
Iam modo caeruleo nitidum caput exime ponto,
Iam, Galatea, veni, nec munera despice nostra.
840 Certe ego me novi, liquidaeque in imagine vidi
Nuper aquae; placuitque mihi mea forma videnti.
Aspice, sim quantus. Non est hoc corpore maior
Iuppiter in caelo. Nam vos narrare soletis
Nescio quem regnare Iovem. Coma plurima torvos
845 Prominet in vultus, umerosque, ut lucus, obumbrat.
Nec mea quod rigidis horrent densissima saetis
Corpora, turpe puta. Turpis sine frondibus arbor:
Turpis equus, nisi colla iubae flaventia velent.
Barba viros hirtaeque decent in corpore saetae.
Unum est in media lumen mihi fronte, sed insta Ingentis cipei. Quid? Non haec omnia magna Sol videt e caelo? Soli tamen unicus orbis.
Addam quod in vestro genitor meas aequore regnat.
Hunc tibi do socerum. Tantum miserere, precesque
Supplicis exaudi: tibi enim succumbimus uni.
Quique Iovem et caelum sperno et penetrabile fulmen, Nereis te vereor. Tua fulmine saevior ira est.
Atque ego contemptus essem patientior huius,
Si fugeres omnes. Sed cur Cyclope repulso Acin amas, praefersque meis amplexibus Acin?
Ille tamen placeatque sibi, placeatque licebit,
Quod nollem, Galatea, tibi: modo copia detur!
Sentiet esse mihi tanto pro corpore vires.
Viscera viva traham, divulsaque membra per agras,
Perque tuas spargam — sic se tibi misceat! — undas.
Uror enim, laesusque exaestuat acrius ignis,
Cumque suis video translatam viribus Aetnam Pectore ferre meo. Nec tu, Galatea, moveris.”
Talia nequiquam questus — nam cuncta videbam—
Surgit, et ut taurus vacca furibundus adempta,
Stare nequit, silvaeque et notis saltibus errat:
Cum ferus ignaros nec quicquam tale timentes Me videt atque Acin, “video” que exclamat “et is Ultima sit, faciam, Veneris concordia vestrae.”
Tantaque vox, quantam Cyclops iratus habere Debuit, illa fuit. Clamore perhorruit Aetne.
Ast ego vicino pavefacta sub aequore mergor,
Terga fugae dederat conversa Symaethius heros:
“Adfer opem, Galatea, precor, mihi! ferte parentes Dixerat “et vestris peritum admittite regnis.”
METAMORPHOSES

Insequitur Cyclops, partemque e monte revulsam
Mittit, et extremus quamvis pervenit ad illum,
Angulus is molis totum tamen obruit Acin.

At nos, quod solum fieri per fata licebat,
Fecimus, ut vires adsumeret Acis avitas.
Puniceus de mole cruor manabat, et intra Temporis exiguum rubor evanescere coepit,
Fitque color primo turbati fluminis imbre,

Purgaturque mora. Tum moles taetra dehiscit,
Vivaque per rimas proceraque surgit harundo,
Osque cavum saxi sonat exsultantibus undis:
Miraque res, subito media tenus exsttit alvo
Incinctus iuvenis flexis nova cornua cannis,

Qui, nisi quod maior, quod toto caerulus ore,
Acis erat.—Sed sic quoque erat tamen Acis, in amnem
Versus; et antiquum tenuerunt flumina nomen.'

[Thus ends the tale of Galatea. While sporting on the shore, the nymph Scylla was seen and loved by Glauce, a sea-god, who but now had been a mortal fisherman. He relates to Scylla his wonderful metamorphosis through the eating of certain magic herbs (898–968).]

Book XIV

[Spurned by the nymph, Glauce seeks out Circe and begs her aid.
But Circe herself is enamored of Glauce, and, confessing her love, is rejected by him. In revenge she, by her magic art, changes Scylla into a hideous monster, fixed upon the coast of Sicily (1–74). This dangerous spot, which had proved disastrous to the ships of Ulysses, the fleet of Aeneas escapes, who, continuing on his way, comes to Carthage, where he is hospitably received by Queen Dido. From Carthage he again proceeds to Sicily and thence to the island of Pithecusa, whose inhabitants had been changed into apes (75–100). Crossing to Cumae, Aeneas, under the guidance of the Sibyl, visits the shade of his father in Hades. On their return the Sibyl relates how Apollo, for love of her, had] promised to grant her wish, which was years of life in number equal to the grains in a heap of sand. This she had gained, but without continued youth (101–153). Aeneas next arrives at Caieta, where he meets Achemenides, the lost companion of Ulysses, who, at the request of Aeneas, tells of his adventures among the savage Cyclops before he was rescued (154–222). Macareus, another former companion of Ulysses, relates how he and his companions were changed into swine through the magic of Circe, but were restored to human shape at the request of Ulysses (223–319).

Macareus tells another tale that he had heard in Circe’s Isle, how Picus, king of Latium, had loved and wedded the beautiful Canens, the daughter of Janus; how Picus, rejecting the advances of Circe, had been transformed by her into a woodpecker, and how Canens, in despair, had wasted away to a mere breath or voice (320–434).

Passing on from Caieta, Aeneas at last enters the Tiber, and Latinus, the king of Latium, bestows upon him the hand of his daughter Lavinia. This causes a struggle for supremacy between the Rutulians and Latinus, headed by Turnus, and the Trojans, headed by Aeneas. The latter appeals to Evander for aid, and the former to Diomede, who had settled in Italy and become the son-in-law of Daunus. Diomede recounts to the Rutulian ambassadors his adventures since the fall of Troy (435–526). Turnus sets fire to the fleet of Aeneas, but the burning ships are transformed into nymphs at the command of Cybele. Turnus is finally slain, and Aeneas is triumphant through the aid of Venus (527–580).

The wrath of Juno against Aeneas is now at length appeased, and Jove, in a council of the gods, decrees an apotheosis to Aeneas. He is accordingly removed from earth and ranked among the gods (581–608). Ascanius succeeds his father on the throne, and then follows a long line of Alban kings.

In those days there dwelt in Italy a beautiful wood-nymph, Pomona, who, devoted entirely to her fruits and flowers, rejected all advances of those who sought her love; until at last Vertumnus, the native god of seasons, wooed and won her. As a warning against the neglect of honest love, he tells to her the story of the maiden Anaxarete, who, for her contempt of Venus in the cruel rejection of her lover, Iphis, was changed to stone (609–771). Numitor finally succeeds to the Alban throne, is dispossessed by his brother Amulius, but restored by Romulus, who founds Rome, schemes for its settlement, establishes it in power among the surrounding nations, and is finally translated to the skies by Mars, where he is enrolled among the gods under the name of Quirinus, while his wife Hersilia is also deified under the name of Hora (772-851).]

Book XV

[After the removal of Romulus from earth, Numa Pompilius was chosen king in his stead. The mind of this prince was turned toward the peaceful arts and the acquisition of knowledge. In pursuit of this he came to Crotona, on the coast of Bruttium. Here he eagerly imbied the doctrines of the sage Pythagoras, who had removed from his native Samos and settled in Crotona (1-59). The first endeavor of this philosopher was to persuade men to renounce the use of flesh as food.
In the golden age men ate only the fruits of the earth, and all animal life was sacred except that which was harmful to human interests.
Gradually the greed of man invented causes of offense, until even the most inoffensive and helpful animals were slain for food under cover of sacrifice to the gods (60-142).

The philosopher longs to free his fellow-mortals from the fear of death. Death is not the fearful thing that popular belief would make it, but merely a transition from one life to another. All things change, but nothing dies. The soul is still the same, though housed in many changing forms of man and beast. And what is true of souls is true of all nature—all is in a state of ceaseless change.]

‘Et quoniam deus ora movet, sequar ora moventem
Rite deum, Delphosque meos ipsumque recludam Aethera et augustae reserabo oracula mentis.
Magna, nec ingeniis evestigata priorum,
Quaeque diu latuere, canam. Iuvat ire per alta
Astra; iuvat terris et inerti sede relicta
Nube vehi, validique umeris insistere Atlantis, Palantesque homines passim ac rationis egentes
Despectare procul, trepidosque obitumque timentes
Sic exhortari, seriemque evolvere fati:
O genus attonitum gelidae formidine mortis!
Quid Styga, quid tenebras et nomina vana timetis?
Materiem vatum, falsique piacula mundi?
Corpora, sive rogus flamma, seu tabe vetustas
Abstulerit, mala posse pati non ulla putetis.
Morte carent animae; semperque priore relicta
Sede novis domibus vivunt habitantque receptae.

Ipse ego — nam memini — Troiani tempore belli
Panthoides Euphorbus eram, cui pectore quondam Haesit in adverso gravis hasta minoris Atridae.
Cognovi clipeum, laeae gestamina nostrae,
Nuper Abanteis templo Iunonis in Argis.

Omnia mutantur, nihil interit. Errat, et illinc
Huc venit, hinc illuc, et quoslibet occupat artus
Spiritus; eque feris humana in corpora transit,
Inque feras noster, nec tempore deperit ullo.
Utque novis facilis signatur cera figuris,

Nec manet ut fuerat, nec formas servat easdem,
Sed tamen ipsa eadem est; animam sic semper eam
Esse, sed in varias doceo migrare figuras.
Ergo — nec pietas sit victa cupidine ventris —
Parcite, vaticinor, cognatas caede nefanda

Exturbare animas; nec sanguine sanguis alatur.
Et quoniam magni feror aequore plenaque ventis
Vela dedi: nihil est toto, quod perstet, in orbe.
Cuncta fluunt, omnisque vagans formatur imago.
Ipsa quoque adsiduo labuntur tempora motu,

Non secus ac flumen. Neque enim consistere flum
Nec levis hora potest: sed ut unda impellit unda
Urgueturque eadem veniens urguetque priorem;
Tempora sic fugiunt pariter, pariterque sequuntur, Et nova sunt semper. Nam quod fuit ante relictum est,

Fitque quod haud fuerat, momentaque cuncta novant.
Cernis et emensas in lucem tendere noctes,
Et iubar hoc nitidum nigrae succedere nocti.
Nec color est idem caelo, cum lassa quiete
Cuncta iacent media, cumque albo Lucifer exit 190
Clarus equo; rursusque alius, cum praevia luci
Tradendum Phoebò Pallantias inficit orbem.
Ipse dei clipeus terra cum.tollitur ima
Mane rubet, terraque, rubet, cum conditur ima;
Candidus in summo est, melior natura quod illic
195 Aetheris est, terraeque procul contagia fugit.
Nec par aut eadem nocturnae forma Dianae
Esse potest umquam. Semperque hodierna sequente, Si crescit, minor est; maior, si contrahit orbem.
Quid? non in species succedere quattuor annum
100 Aspicis, aetatis peragentem imitamina nostra?
Nam tener et lactens puerique simillimus aevo
Vere novo est: tunc herba recens et roboris expers
Turget, et insolida est, et spe delectat agrestes.
Omnia tunc florent, florumque coloribus almus
205 Ludit ager, neque adhuc virtus in frondibus ulla est.
Transit in aestatem post ver robustior annus,
Fitque valens iuvenis: neque enim robustior aetas
Ulla, nec uberior, nec quae magis ardeat, ulla est.
Excipit autumnus, posito fervore iuventae
210 Maturus mitisque, inter iuvenemque senemque
Temperie medius; sparsus quoque tempora canis.
Inde senilis hiems tremulo venit horrida passu,
Aut spoliata suos, aut, quos habet, alba capillos.
Nostra quoque ipsorum semper requieque sine ulla
215 Corpora vertuntur; nec quod fuimusve sumusve, Cras erimus. Fuit illa dies, qua semina tantum
Specie hominum primae matris cubitavimus alvo.
Editus in lucem iacuit sine viribus infans;
Mox quadrupes rituque tuñit sua membra ferarum;
Paulatimque tremens et nondum poplíté firmo
Constitit, adiutis aliquo conamine nervis;
Inde valens veloxque fuit, spatiumque iuventae
Transit, et emeritis medii quoque temporis annis Labitur occiduæ per iter declive senectae.
Subruit haec aevi demoliturque prioris
Robora: fletque Milon senior, cum spectat inanes
Illos, qui fuerant solidorum mole tororum
Herculeis similes, fluidos pendere lacertos.
Flet quoque, ut in speculo rugas aspexit aniles,
Tyndaris, et secum, cur sit bis rapta, requirit.
Tempus edax rerum, tuque, invidiosa vetustas,
Omnia destruitis, vitiataque dentibus aevi
Paulatim lenta consumitis omnia morte.

[All nature is derived from four primal elements,—earth, air, fire, and water; but these are constantly passing from one to another. The face of the earth is always changing. The sea encroaches upon the land and land upon the sea. The valleys are exalted, and the hills brought low; and rivers in their winding course make constant changes in the land. And not only so, but the waters of many streams have strange powers to change the character of those who drink them (237–341).

Many wonderful changes are told, as when bees spring by spontaneous generation from the entrails of a buried steer, wasps from the horse, the scorpion from the crab, and frogs from slime. Most strange also are the developments of insect and bird life (342–417).

This universal change extends to cities which grow to greatness, have their day and cease to be. Such were Troy, Mycenæ, Sparta, Thebes; and Rome, though now in infancy, is destined both by fate and prophecy to pass on through all the changes of growth until the whole world shall be included in her sway (418–452).

Yes, all matter is in a state of flux, and souls are clothed now with form of man and now of beast. This thought should make all animal life sacred, save that which is itself destructive of life. Impious is it above all to expel the soul with the intention of eating the flesh that sheltered it.]
Ne tamen oblitis ad metam tendere longe
Exspatiemur equis, caelum et quodcumque sub illo est, 455 Immutat formas, tellus et quicquid in illa est.
Nos quoque, pars mundi, quoniam non corpora solum,
Verum etiam volucres animae sumus, inque ferinas
Possimus ire domos pecudumque in corpora condii,
Corpora quae possint animas habuisse parentum

460 Aut fratrum aut aliquo iunctorum foedere nobis
Aut hominum certe, tuta esse et honesta sinamus, Neve Thyesteis cumulemus viscera mensis.
Quam male consuescit, quam se parat ille cruori
Impius humano, vituli qui guttura ferro

465 Rumpit, et immotas praebet mugitibus aures!
Aut qui vagitus similes puerilibus haedum
Edentem iugulare potest: aut alite vesci,
Cui dedit ipse cibos! quantum est, quod desit in istis
Ad plenum facinus? quo transitus inde paratur?

470 Bos aret, aut mortem senioribus imputet annuis:
Horriferum contra borean ovis arma ministret:
Ubera dent saturae manibus pressanda capellae.
Retia cum pedicis, laqueos, artesque dolosas
Tollite; nec volucrem viscata fallitce virga,

475 Nec formidatis cervos inludite pennis,
Nec celate cibis uncos fallacibus hamos.
Perdite siqua nocent, verum haec quoque perdite tantum;
Ora vacent epulis, alimentaque mitia carpant.’

[Those doctrines of Pythagoras Numa brought to Rome, and by his wise and mild sway established his people in religion and the peaceful arts. The good king died in time, mourned by all his people. But Egeria, his wife, was inconsolable, and withdrawing to the dense groves of Aricia she indulged her grief. Here Hippolytus appeared to her and strove to soothe her by the story of his own sad fate: how, though guiltless, he had been accused to his father Theseus by his stepmother Phaedra of an attempt upon her honor; how he had been driven out from home loaded with his father's curses; how he had been slain by Neptune in answer to his father's prayer, and finally restored to life and made immortal by Diana, and set here in this wood as her sacred attendant under a new name (Virbius) and changed form (479–546).

But Egeria, un comforted by another's woes, continues insensible, and is at last changed by Apollo into a fountain. This change the nymphs and Virbius view with as great astonishment as when Cipas, a Roman nobleman, returning from the chase, found horns sprouting forth from his forehead. On consulting the fates by sacrifice and augury, he was told that he was destined to be king of Rome should he again enter her gates. He convened the senate without the walls, told them the oracle, and begged them to destroy him in order to save the state. The grateful senate decreed that he should live in honor without the walls, and allotted him for his own a portion of the public lands (547–621).

A mighty plague once visited Rome, and a deputation from the senate was sent to consult the Delphic oracle. Here they were told that not Apollo but Apollo's son, Aesculapius, the god of the healing art, would save them. Repairing to Epidaurus, the seat of Aesculapius, they implored his aid. The god accompanied them to Rome in the form of a serpent, and the plague was stayed. From that time on divine honors were always paid in Rome to the god of the healing art (622–744).

Now the worship of Aesculapius was introduced from another land, but Caesar's worship sprung from his own city, Rome. When he had reached the acme of renown, and his enemies were plotting his destruction, Venus, foreseeing his fate, implored the gods to save her offspring. The gods were powerless to avert the fate of Caesar, yet they gave many warning omens of his approaching doom. But all in vain. The assassins succeeded in their bloody work, though Venus strove to wrap her hero in that veil of mist that had of old saved Paris and Aeneas from their foes. Now Jove, in order to console her, revealed to Venus the glorious fate that was in store for Caesar, and the still more glorious destiny of his successor, his adopted son. Thus comforted, the goddess flew to the earth and bore to heaven the soul of Caesar, where, a glittering comet with a glowing train, it illumined the sky.

Great though the father was, the son is destined to be greater AESCULAPIUS
(From the Vatican Museum)
still. May all the gods who guard the destinies of Rome enlarge his sway, and may he long remain upon the earth to guide the Roman state.]

745 Hic tamen accessit delubris advena nostris:
Caesar in urbe sua deus est. Quem Marte togaque Praecipuum non bella magis finita triumphis
Resque domi gestae properataque gloria rerum
In sidus vertere novum stellamque comantem,

750 Quam sua progenies. Neque enim de Caesaris actis
Ullum maius opus, quam quod pater exstitit huius.
Scilicet aequoreos plus est domuisse Britannos,
Perque papyriferi septemflua flumina Nili
Victrices egisse rates, Numidasque rebelles
Cinyphiumque Iubam Mithridateisque tumentem Nominibus Pontum populo adieisse Quirini,
Et multos meruisse, aliquos egisse triumphos,
Quam tantum genuisse virum? quo praeside rerum
Humano generi, superi, favistis abunde.

760 Ne foret hic igitur mortali semine cretus,
Ille deus faciendus erat. Quod ut aurea vidit
Aeneae genetrix, vidit quoque triste parari
Pontifici letum et coniurata arma moveri;
Palluit et cunctis, ut cuique erat obvia, divis

765 *'Aspice,' dicebat 'quanta mihi mole parentur
Insidiae, quantaque caput cum fraude petatur,
Quod de Dardanio solum mihi restat Iulo.
Solane semper ero iustis exercita curis?
Quam modo Tydidae Calydonia vulneret hasta,*

770 Nunc male defensae confundant moenia Troiae:
Quae videam natum longis erroribus actum
Iactariique freto sedesque intrare silentum,
Bellaque cum Turno gerere, aut, si vera fatemur,
Cum Iunone magis? quid nunc antiqua recordor
775 Damna mei generis? timor hic meminisse prioru
Non sinit. In me acui sceleratos cernitis enses.
Quos prohibete, precor, facinusque repellite! ne
Caede sacerdotis flammis extinguite Vestae.'
Talia nequiquam toto Venus anxia caelo 780 Verba iacit; supersoque movet. Qui rumpere quamquam
Ferrea non possunt veterum decreta sororum,
Signa tamen luctus dant haud incerta futuri.
Arma ferunt inter nigras crepitantia nubes
Terribilesque tubas auditaque cornua caelo
785 Praemonuisse nefas. Solis quoque tristis imago Lurida sollicitis praebebat lumina terris.
Saepe faces visae mediis ardere sub astris:
Saepe inter nimbos gutae cecidere cruentae:
Caerulus et vultum ferrugine Lucifer atra
790 Sparsus erat, sparsi lunares sanguine currus:
Tristia mille locis Stygius dedit omina bubo:
Mille locis lacrimavit ebur, cantusque feruntur
Auditi sanctis et verba minantia lucis.
Victima nulla litat, magnosque instare tumultus
795 Fibra monet, casumque caput reperitur in extis.
Inque foro circumque domos et templa deorum
Nocturnos ululasse canes umbrasque silentum
Erravisse ferunt, motamque tremoribus urbem.
Non tamen insidias venturaque vincere fata
800 Praemonitus potuere deum: strictique feruntur
In templum gladii; neque enim locus ullus in ur:
Ad facinus diramque plactet, nisi curia, caedem.
Tum vero Cytherea manu percussit utraque
Pectus, et Aeneaden molitur condere nube, 805 Qua prius infesto Paris est ereptus Atridae.
Et Diomedae Aeneas fugerat enses.
Talibus hanc genitor: 'sola insuperabile fatum,
Nata, movere paras? intres licet ipsa sororum
Tecta trium; cernes illic molimine vasto

Ex aere et solido rerum tabularia ferro,
Quae neque concussum caeli neque fulminis iram
Nec metuunt ullas tuta atque aeterna ruinas.
Invenies illic incisa adamante perenni
Fata tui generis. Legi ipse animoque notavi

Et referam, ne sis etiamnum ignara futuri.
Hic sua complevit, pro quo, Cytherea, laboras,
Tempora perfectis quos terrae debutit annis.
Ut deus accedat caelo templisque locetur,
Tu facies natusque suus; qui nominis heres

Impositum feret unus onus, caesique parentis
Nos in bella suos fortissimus ultor habebit.
Illius auspiciis obsessae moenia pacem
Victa petent Mutinae; Pharsalia sentiet illum, Emathiaque iterum madefent caede Philippi,

Et magnum Siculis nomen superabitur undis:
Romanique ducis coniunx Aegyptia taedae
Non bene fisa cadet; frustraque erit illa minata Servitura suo Capitolia nostra Canopo.
Quid tibi barbariam, gentes ab utroque iacentes

Oceano numerem? Quodcumque habitabile tellus Sustinet, huius erit: pontus quoque serviet illi.
Pace data terris animum ad civilia vertet
Iura suum, legesque feret iustissimus auctor:
Exemploque suo mores reget, inque futuri

Temporis aetatem ventorumque nepotum
Prosciiciens prolem sancta de coniuge natam
Ferre simul nomenque suum curasque iubebit,
Nec nisi cum senior Pylios aequaverit annos,
Aetherias sedes cognataque sidera tanger.
840 Hanc animam interea caeso de corpore raptam
Fac iubar, ut semper Capitolia nostra forumque
Divus ab excelsa prospectet Iulius aede.'
Vix ea fatus erat, media cum sede senatus
Constitit alma Venus, nulli cernenda, suique
845 Caesaris eripuit membris nec in aëra solvi
Passa recentem animam caelestibus intulit astra.
Dumque tulit, lumen capere atque ignescere sensit,
Emisitque sinu. Luna volat altius illa,
Flammiferumque trahens spatioso limite crinem
850 Stella micat: natique videns benefacta fatetur
Esse suis maiora, et vinci gaudet ab illo.
Hic sua praeferrit quamquam vetat acta paternis,
Libera fama tamen nullisque obnoxious issis
Invitum praefert, unaque in parte repugnat.
855 Sic magni cedit titulis Agamemnonis Atreus; Aegea sic Theseus, sic Pelea vincit Achilles.
Denique, ut exemplis ipsos aequantibus utar,
Sic et Saturnus minor est Iove. Iuppiter arces Temperat aetherias et mundi regna triformis;
860 Terra sub Augusto. Pater est et rector uterque.
Di, precor, Aeneae comites, quibus ensis et ignis
Cesserunt, dique Indigetes, genitorque Quirine
Urbis, et invicti genitor Gradive Quirini, Vestaque Caesareos inter sacrata penates,
865 Et cum Caesarea tu, Phoebe domestice, Vesta, Quique tenes altus Tarpeias Iuppiter aedes,
Quosque alios, vati fas appellare piumque est:
Tarda sit illa dies et nostro serior aevos,
Qua caput Augustum, quem temperat, orbe relictto 870 Accedat caelol faveatque precantibus absens.

[And now the poet's work is done, a work which no destructive agency can mar. Though death may claim his body, still it cannot noble part, his fame, for this shall live forever on the lips.

aque opus exegi, quod nec Iovis ira nec ignis in poterit ferrum nec edax abolere vetustas.

m volet, illa dies, quae nil nisi corporis huius habet, incerti spatium mihi finiat aevi:

te tamen meliore mei super alta perennis tra ferrar, nomenque erit indelebile nostrum.

aque patet domitis Romana potentia terris, testat populi, perque omnia saecula fama,

uid habent veri vatum praesagia, vivam.

THE CALYDONIAN HUNT

(From a sarcophagus in the Capitoline Museum)

See Met. VIII, 260-444, p. 154
TRISTIA

AND

EPISTULAE EX PONTO

[There remains the poetic product of the third period of our author's life, the nine years spent in exile on the dreary shores of the Euxine Sea, far removed from everything that had been a source of joyous inspiration to him in his former life.

Here was no gay capitol with its constant round of pleasures to stimulate his poetic fancy; no circle of literary friends to call forth his best endeavors by their admiring applause, and sing his latest songs about the streets; no soft Italian skies and rich country scenery of wood and hill and ruin to provide that background and atmosphere of beauty so necessary to a poet of Ovid's luxurious temperament. Instead, he found a rude colonial town almost without the pale of civilization, inhabited by churlish barbarians, subject to constant alarms of war from more savage tribes without; he found a treeless, dreary land with frowning skies and bleak winds almost the year around.

It would be surprising if such an absolute change of environment did not produce a corresponding change in the character of Ovid's poetry during this period; if he who wrote so frankly of the joys of his youth should not now record the sorrows of his age. And this we find to be the case. The two important works of this period are five books of short poems in the elegiac measure, appropriately entitled Tristia, and four books of letters in the same measure, which are named Ex Ponte, from the place of writing. These two works are alike as to subject-matter, spirit and form of expression. They are both books of letters written from the poet's place of banishment to friends at Rome, fondly recalling former joys and complaining of present hardships. Both give vivid descriptions of the poet's surroundings and every-day life, and both abound in frantic appeals from Ovid to his friends at Rome that they use their good offices with the Emperor to soothe his anger and secure the exiled man’s return, or at least a mitigation of his hard sentence.

The chief difference between these two works is that in the first the names of the friends to whom the letters are addressed are withheld, while in the second the names are given; this for the reason that, during the first part of the poet’s banishment, when the anger of the Emperor was fresh, his friends feared to be involved in his misfortunes. But this fear seems to have disappeared by the end of the third year of his exile.

In one of the early numbers of the Tristia (I, iii) the poet gives us a vivid and very human description of his last sad night at Rome, before parting forever from all that he held dear.]

Cum subit illius tristissima noctis imago,
Qua mihi supremum tempus in urbe fuit,
Cum repeto noctem, qua tot mihi cara reliqui,
Labitur ex oculis nunc quoque gutta meis.

5 Iam prope lux aderat, qua me discedere Caesar
Finibus extremae iusserat Ausoniae.
Nec spatium fuerat, nec mens satis apta parandi.
Torpuerant longa pectora nostra mora.
Non mihi servorum, comites non cura legendi,

io Non aptae profugo vestis opisve fuit.
Non alter stupui, quam qui Iovis ignibus ictus
Vivit et est vitae nescius ipse suae.
Ut tamen hanc animi nubem dolor ipse removit,
Et tandem sensus convaluere mei,

15 Adloquor extremum maestos abiturus amicos,
Qui modo de multis unus et alter erant.
Uxor amans flentem flens acrius ipsa tenebat,
Imbre per indignas usque cadente genas.
Nata procul Libycis aberat diversa sub oris,

20 Nec poterat fati certior esse mei.
Quocumque aspiceres, luctus gemitusque sonabant,
Formaque non taciti funeris intus erat.
Femina virque meo, pueri quoque funere maerent,
Inque domo lacramas angulus omnis habet:
25 Si licet exemplis in parvis grandibus uti,
Haec facies Troiae, cum caperetur, erat.
Iamque quiesciant voces hominumque canumorque
Lunaque nocturnos alta regebat equos.
Hanc ego suspiciens et ab hac Capitolia cernens,
Quae nostro frustra iuncta fuere lari,
Numina vicinis habitantium sedibus,’ inquam
Iamque oculis numquam templam videnda me,
Dique relinquenti, quos urbs habet alta Quirini,
Este salutati tempus in omne mihi!
30 Et quamquam sero clipeum post vulnera sumo,
Attamen hanc odiis exonerate fugam,
Caelestique viro, quis me deceperit error,
Dicite, pro culpa ne scelus esse putet,
Ut quod vos scitis, poenae quoque sentiat auctor:
35 Placato possum non miser esse deo.’
Hac prece adoravi superos ego, pluribus uxor,
Singultu medios impediente sonos.
Illa etiam ante lares passis astrata capillis
Contigit extinctos ore tremente focos,
40 Multaque in adversos effudit verba penates
Pro deplorado non valitura viro.
Iamque morae spatium nox praecipitata negabat
Versaque ab axe suo Parrhasis Arctos erat.
Quid facerem? Blando patriae retinebar amore:
Ultima sed iussae nox erat illa fugae.
A! Quotiens alioquid dixi properante ‘Quid urge?’
Vel quo festinas ire, vel unde, vide!
A! Quotiens certam me sum mentitus habere Horam, proposita quae foret apta viae.
50 Ter limen tetigi, ter sum revocatus, et ipse
Indulgens animo pes mihi tardus erat.
Saepe vale dicto rursus sum multa locutus,
Et quasi discedens oscula summa dedi.
Saepe eadem mandata dedi meque ipse fefelli,
60 Respiciens oculis pignora cara meis.
Denique 'Quid propero? Scythia est, quo mittimur,' inquam
' Roma relinquenda est. Utraque iusta mora est.
Uxor in aeternum vivo mihi viva negatur,
Et domus et fidae dulcia membra domus,
65 Quosque ego dilexi fraterno more sodales;
O mihi Thesea pectora iuncta fide!
Dum licet, amplectar. Numquam fortasse licebit Amplius; in lucro est quae datur hora mihi.'
Nec mora, sermonis verba imperfecta relinquo, 70 Complectens animo proxima quaeque meo.
Dum loquor et flimus, caelo nitidissimus alto,
Stella gravis nobis, Lucifer ortus erat.
Dividor haud aliter, quam si mea membra relinquam,
Et pars abrumpi corpore visa suo est.
75 Sic doluit Mettus tunc, cum in contraria versos
Ultiores habuit prodigionis equos.
Tum vero exoritur clamor gemitusque meorum,
Et feriunt maestae pectora nuda manus.
Tum vero coniunx, umeris abeuntis inhaerens, 80 Miscuit haec lacrimum tristia verba meis:
' Non potes avelli. Simul hinc, simul ibimus ' inquit:
'Te sequar et coniunx exsulis exsul ero.
Et mihi facta via est, et me capit ultima tellus:
Accedam profugae sarcina parva rati.
85 Te iubet a patria discedere Caesaris ira,
Me pietas. Pietas haec mihi Caesar erit.'
Talia temptabat, sicut temptaverat ante,
Vixque dedit victas utilitate manus.
Egridior, sive illud erat sine funere ferri,
Squalidus immissis hirta per ora comis.
ILLA dolore amens tenebris narratur obortis
Semanimis media procubuisse domo,
Utque resurrexit foedatis pulvere turpi
Crinibus et gelida membra levavit humo,
Se modo, desertos modo complorasse penates,
Nomen et erepti saepe vocasse viri,
Nec gemuisse minus, quam si nataeque meumque
Vidisset structos corpus habere rogos,
Et voluisse mori, moriendo ponere sensus,
Respectuque tamen non perississe mei.
Vivat! Et absentem — quoniam sic fata tulerunt —
Vivat ut auxilio sublevet usque suo.

[The following letter to his wife (Tristia, III. 111) is even more sad than usual, for it is written from the poet's sick chamber. He pathetically describes the utter loneliness of his life, with no friend near to lighten the tedious of the slowly moving days; while every delicacy of food and care that should sustain him in his sickness is lacking. He looks forward to his death, and hopes that his wife will grieve for him and rescue his bones at least from the exile's lot.]

Haec mea, si casu miraris, epistula quare
Alterius digitis scripta sit: aeger eram.
Aeger in extremis ignoti partibus orbis,
Incertusque meae paene salutis eram.
Quem mihi nunc animum dira regione iacenti
Inter Sauromatas esse Getasque putes?
Nec caelum patior, nec aquis adsuevimus istis,
Terraque nescio quo non placet ipsa modo.
Non domus apta satis, non hic cibus utilis aegro,
Nullus, Apollinea qui levet arte malum,
Non qui soletur, non qui labentia tarde
Tempora narrando fallat, amicus adest.
Lassus in extremis iaceo populisque locisque,
Et subit adfecto nunc mihi, quicquid abest.

Omnia cum subeant, vincis tamen omnia, coniunx,
Et plus in nostro pectore parte tenes.
Te loquor absentem, te vox mea nominat unam;
Nulla venit sine te nox mihi, nulla dies.
Quin etiam sic me dicunt aliena locutum,

Ut foret amenti nomen in ore tuum.
Si iam deficiam, suppressaque lingua palato
Vix instillato restituenda mero,
Nuntiet huc aliquis dominam venisse, resurgam,
Spesque tui nobis causa vigoris erit.

Ergo ego sum dubius vitae, tu forsitan istic
Iucundum nostri nescia tempus agis?
Non agis; adfirma. Liquet hoc, carissima, nobis, Tempus agi sine me non nisi triste tibi.
Si tamen implevit mea sors, quos debuit, annos,

Et mihi vivendi tam cito finis adest,
Quantum erat, o magni, morituro par cere, divi,
Ut saltem patria contumularer humo?
Vel poena in tempus mortis dilata fuisset,
Vel praecipisset mors properata fugam.

Integer hanc potui nuper bene reddere lucem;
Exsul ut occiderem, nunc mihi vita data est.
Tam procul ignotis igitur moriemur in oris,
Et fient ipso tristia fata loco;
Nec mea consuo languescent corpora lecto,
Sed sine funeribus caput hoc, sine honore sepulcrum.
Indeploratum barbara terra teget!
Ecquid, ubi audieris, tota turbabere mente,
Et ferius pavida pectora fida manu?
Ecquid, in has frustra tendens tua bracchia parte?
Clamabis miserii nomen inane viri?
Parce tamen lacerare genas, nec scinde capillos:
· Non tibi nunc primum, lux mea, raptus ero.
Cum patriam amisi, tunc me periisse putato.
Et prior et gravior mors fuit illa mihi.
Nunc, si forte potes,—sed non potes, optima coniunx—
Finitis gaude tot mihi morte malis.
Quod potes, extenua forti mala corde ferendo,
Ad quae iam pridem non rude pectus habes.
Atque utinam pereant animae cum corpore nostrae.
Effugiatque avidos pars mihi nulla rogos.
Nam si morte carens vacua volat altus in aura
Spiritus, et Samii sunt rata dicta senis,
Inter Sarmaticas Romana vagabitur umbras,
Perque feros manes hospita semper erit;
Ossa tamen facito parva referantur in urna:
Sic ego non etiam mortuus exsul ero.
Non vetat hoc quisquam: fratrem Thebana peremptus
Supposuit tumulo rege vetante soror.
Atque ea cum foliis et amomi pulvere misce,
Inque suburbano condita pone solo;
Quosque legat versus oculo properante viator, Grandibus in tituli marmore caede notis:
hic ego qui iaceo tenerorum lusor amorum ingenio perii naeo poeta meo:
at tibi qui transis ne sit grave quisquis am.
dicere nasonis molliter ossa cubent.
TRISTIA

Hoc saepe niturna magis sunt monumenta mihi, tis in titulo est. Etenim maiora libelli et auctori tempora longa suo.

Et quos e nomina, go confido, quamvis nociere, daturos se tuis lacrimis umida serta dato.

Tu tam dequies in cineres corpus mutaverit ignis,

Quamvis sentis et officium maesta favilla pium.

e pluram libet. Sed vox mihi fessa loquendo

Scriberem andi vires siccaque lingua negat.

Accipe supremo dictum mihi forsitan ore,

Quod tibi qui mittit, non habet ipse, vale!

Ovid's gratitude to those friends at Rome who stood by him in his agement to unwillingness to be named in his letters lest they ed, are well illustrated in the following selection (V, ix).]

Otus in nostris nomina ponis, minibus, positus quam mihi saepe fores!

Carmen eremolum meriti memor, inque libellis

Te can crevisisset sine te pagina nulla meis.

Te deberem, tota sciretur in urbe, l in amissa si tamen urbe legor.

Quid tibi esens mitem nosset, te serior aetas,

Questa vetustatem si modo nostra ferunt,

Tibi cessaat doctus bene dicere lector.

Hic te servato vate maneret honor.

Caesar is est primum munus, quod ducimus auras;

Gratia post magnos est tibi habenda deos.

Ille dedit vitam; tu, quam dedit ille, tueris,

Et facis accepto munere posse frui.

Cumque perhorruerit casus pars maxima nostros,

Pars etiam credi pertimuisse velit,

Naufragiumque meum tumulo spectarit ab alto,
THE WORKS OF OVID

Nec dederit nanti per freta saeva manum,
Seminecem Stygia revocasti solus ab unda.

20 Hoc quoque, quod memores possumus esse, tuum est.
Di tibi se tribuant cum Caesare semper amicos:
Non potuit votum plenius esse meum.
Haec meus argutis, si tu paterere, libellis
Poneret in multa luce videnda labor;

25 Nunc quoque se, quamvis est iussa quiescere, quin te Nominet invitum, vix mea Musa tenet.
Utque canem pavidae nactum vestigia cervae
Latrantem frustra copula dura tenet;
Utque fores nondum reserati carceris acer

30 Nunc pede, nunc ipsa fronte lacescit equus,
Sic mea lege data vincita atque inclusa Thalia
Per titulum vetiti nominis ire cupit.
Ne tamen officio memoris laedaris amici,
Parebo iussis — parce timere — tuis.

35 At non parerem, si non meminisse putares.
Hoc quod non prohibit vox tua, gratus ero.
Dumque — quod o breve sit! — lumen vitale videbo,
Serviet officio spiritus iste tuo.

[The poet's autobiography, which has been given in full at the beginning of this volume, also belongs to this period, being the tenth number of the fourth book. While it is of a somewhat more general character than the other poems written from exile, still it manifests the same longing to keep his name and memory alive in the world of men and letters, from which he had been driven, and the same disposition to dwell upon that unnamed cause of his banishment, so mysterious to us, though perhaps well known to Ovid's contemporaries.

One selection from the Epistulae Ex Ponto will illustrate the general character of all, showing Ovid's bitter repining at his hard lot, upon which he dwells in detail; his reiterated prayers to his friends to intercede for him with the Emperor, and his abject subservience to that prince's will.]
I, II. Maxime, qui tanti mensuram nominis imples Et geminas animi nobilitate genus:
   Qui nasci ut posses, quamvis cecidere trecenti,
   Non omnes Fabios abstulit una dies:
   5 Forsitan haec a quo mittatur epistula, quaeras,
       Quisque loquar tecum, certior esse velis.
       Ei mihi! quid faciam? Vereor ne nomine lecto
   8 Durus et aversa cetera mente legas.
   11 Videris: audebo tibi me scripsisse fateri
   * * * * * * * * * * * *
   Qui, cum me poena dignum graviore fuisse
       Confitear, possum vix graviore pati.
   15 Hostibus in mediis interque pericula versor,
       Tamquam cum patria pax sit adempta mihi:
       Qui, mortis saevo geminente ut vulnere causas,
       Omnia vipereo spicula felle linunt.
       His eques instructus perterrita moenia lustrat
   20 More lupi clausas circueuntis oves:
       At simul intentus nervo levis arcus equino,
       Vincola semper habens inresoluta, canet,
       Tecta rigent fixis veluti vallata sagittis,
       Portaque vix firma submovet arma sera.
   25 Adde loci faciem nec fronde nec arbore laeti,
       Et quod iners hiemi continuatur hiems.
       Hic me pugnantem cum frigore cumque sagittis
       Cumque meo fato quarta fatigat hiems.
       Fine carent lacrimate, nisi cum stupor obstitit illis,
   30 Et similis morti pectora torpor habet.
       Felicem Nioben, quamvis tot funera vidit,
       Quae posuit sensum, saxea facta, mali!
       Vos quoque felices, quarum clamantia fratrem
       Cortice velavit populus ora novo.
   35 Ille ego sum, lignum qui non admittar in ullum:
Ille ego sum, frustra qui lapis esse velim.
Ipsa Medusa oculis veniat licet obvia nostris,
Amittet vires ipsa Medusa suas.
Vivimus, ut numquam sensu careamus amaro,
Et gravior longa fit mea poena mora.
Sic inconsumptum Tityi semperque renascens
Non perit, ut possit saepe perire, iecur.
At, puto, cum requies medicinaque publica curae
Somnus adest, solitis nox venit orba malis.

Somnia me terrent veros imitantia casus,
Et vigilant sensus in mea damna mei.
Aut ego Sarmaticas videor vitare sagittas,
Aut dare captivas ad fera vincla manus.
Aut ubi decipior melioris imagine somni,
Aspicio patriae tecta relictâ meae.
Et modo vobiscum, quos sum veneratus, amici,
Et modo cum cara coniuge multa loquor.
Sic ubi percepta est brevis et non vera voluptas,
Peior ab admonitu fit status iste boni.

Sive dies igitur caput hoc miserabile cernit,
Sive pruinosis noctis aguntur equi,
Sic mea perpetuis liquefiunt pectora curis,
Ignibus admotis ut nova cera solet.
Saepe precor mortem, mortem quoque deprecor idem,
Ne mea Sarmaticum contegat ossa solum.
Cum subit, Augusti quae sit clementia, credo
Mollia naufragiis litora posse dari.
Cum video, quam sint mea fata tenacia, frangor;
Spesque levis magno victa timore cadit.
Nec tamen ulterior quisquam sperove precorve,
Quam male mutato posse carere loco.
Aut hoc, aut nihil est, pro me temptare modeste
Gratia quod salvo vestra pudore queat.
EPISTULAE EX PONTO

Suscipe; Romanae facundia, Maxime, linguae

70 Difficilis causae mite patrocinium.
   Est mala, confiteor, sed te bona fiet agente:
   Lenia pro misera fac modo verba fuga.
   Nescit enim Caesar, quamvis deus omnia norit,
   Ultimus hic qua sit condicione locus.

75 Magna tenent illud numen molimina rerum;
   Haec est caelesti pectore cura minor.
   Nec vacat, in qua sint positi regione Tomitae,
   Quaerere, finitimo vix loca nota Getae;
   Aut quid Sauromatae faciant, quid Iazyges acres,

80 Culctaque Orestae Taurica terra deae;
   Quaeque aliae gentes, ubi frigore constitit Hister,
   Dura meant celeri terga per amnis equo.
   Maxima pars hominum nec te, pulcherrima, curat,
   Roma, nec Ausonii militis arma timet.

85 Dant illis animos arcus plenaeque pharetrae,
   Quamque libet longis cursibus aptus equus,
   Quodque sitim didicere diu tolerare famemque,
   Quodque sequens nullas hostis habebit aquas.
   Ira viri mitis non me misisset in istam,

90 Si satis haec illi nota fuisset humus.
   Nec me, nec quemquam Romanum gaudet ab hoste,
   Meque minus, vitam cui dabat ipse, capi.
   Noluit, ut poterat, minimo me perdere nutu.
   Nil opus est ullis in mea fata Getis.

95 Sed neque, cur morerer, quicquam mihi comperit
   actum,
   Et minus infestus, quam fuit, esse potest.
   Tunc quoque nil fecit, nisi quod facere ipse coëgi:
   Paene etiam merito parcius ira meo est.
   Di faciant igitur, quorum iustissimus ipse est,

100 Alma nihil maius Caesare terra ferat:
Utque diu sub eo sit publica sarcina rerum,
Perque manus huius tradita gentis eat.
At tu tam placido, quam nos quoque sensimus illum,
Iudice pro lacrimis ora resolve meis.

Non petito, ut bene sit; sed uti male tutius, utque
Exsilium saevo distet ab hoste meum:
Quamque dedere mihi praesentia numina vitam,
Non adimat stricto squalidus ense Getes:
Denique, si moriar, subeam pacatius arvum,

Ossa nec a Scythica nostra premantur humo,
Nec male compositos, ut scilicet exsule dignum,
Bistonii cineres ungula pulset equi:
Et ne, si superest aliquis post funera sensus,
Terreat et manes Sarmatis umbra meos.

Caesaris haec animum poterant audita movere,
Maxime, movissent si tamen ante tuum.
Vox, precor, Augustas pro me tua molliat aures, Auxilio trepidis quae solet esse reis:
Adsuetaque tibi doctae dulcedine linguae

Aequandi superis pectora flecte viri.
Non tibi Theromedon crudusque rogabitur Atreus,
Quique suis homines pabula fecit equis;
Sed piger ad poenas princeps, ad praemia velox,
Quique dolet, quotiens cogiturus esse ferox;

Qui vicit semper, victis ut par cere posset,
Clausit et aeterna civica bella sera:
Multa metu poenae, poena qui pauc a coercet,
Et iacit invita fulmina rara manu.
Ergo tam placidas orator missus ad aures,

Ut proprior patriae sit fuga nostra, roga.
Ille ego sum, qui te colui, quem festa solebat
Inter convivas mensa videre tuos.
Ille ego, qui duxi vestros Hymenaeon ad ignes,
ET CECCINI FAUSTO CARMINA DIGNA TORO;

CUIUS TE SOLITUM QEMINI LAUDARE LIBELLOS

EXCEPTIS, DOMINO QUI NOCUERE SUO;

CUI TUA NONNUMQUAM MIRANTI SCRIPTA LEGEVAS.

ILLE EGO, DE VESTRA CUI DATA NUPTA DOMO EST.

HANC PROBAT ET PRIMO DILECTAM SEMPER AB AEO

EST INTER COMITES MARCIA CENSA SUAS,

INQUE SUIS HABUIT MATERTERA CAESARIS ANTE:

QUARUM IUDICIO SQUA PROBATA, PROBA EST.

IPSAM SUA MELIOR FAMA, LAUDANTIBUS ISTIS,

CLAUDIA DIVINA NON EGUSSERT OPE.

NOS QUOQUE PRAETERITOS SINE LABE Peregimus ANnos:

PROXIMA PARS VITAE TRANSILIENDA MEAE.

SED DE ME UT SILEAM, CONIUNX MEA SARcina VESTRA EST:

NON POTES HANC SALVA DISSIMULARE FIDE.

CONFUGIT HAEc AD VOS, VESTRAS AMPLECTITUR ARAS —

IURE VENIT CULTOS AD SIBI QUISQUE DEOS —

FLENSQUE ROGAT, PRECIBUS LENITO CAESARE VESTRIS, BUSTA SUI FIANT UT PROPiorA VIRI.

THE POETIC FORM OF OVID'S WORKS

I. THE DACTYLIC HEXAMETER

This is the great epic and didactic measure introduced from the Greek into Latin literature by the poet Ennius, in his historical epic, the Annales. He was followed in this by all the satirists,—Lucilius (for the most part), Horace, Persius, and Juvenal,—whose poetry, as Horace himself said, was in outward form only; by Lucretius, in his great work on natural philosophy, De Natura Rerum; and by Vergil, in all his works. Though the Aeneid, his greatest work, shows some metrical defects,—which the author would doubtless have removed, had he lived to do so,—Vergil will stand as the poet who advanced the noble measure to its highest state of perfection, and will be considered, as Tennyson has styled him,—

"Wielder of the stateliest measure ever molded by the lips of man."

It was in the Dactylic Hexameter that Ovid wrote his longest poem, and probably his greatest work,—though he himself seems not so to have regarded it,—the Metamorphoses. Many students will in this poem meet their first Latin verse, while more advanced students will come to it with a wider range of metrical knowledge. It is 227 for the interest and instruction of both these classes that the following notes are prepared.

Let the beginner read the following lines (Met. I. 89 and following) aloud repeatedly, giving careful heed to the correct enunciation of the Latin words. Let him continue this until he feels a sense of rhythm, and then advance to a consideration of the verses in detail.

Aurea | prima sa\'ta (e)st ae\'tas, | quae | vindice | nullo
Sponte su\'a, | sine | lege fi|dem | rec|tumque co|lebat.
Poena me,tusque abe|rant, | nec | verba mi|nacia | fixo
Aere le|ge|ban|tur, | nec | supple\'x | turba ti|me|bat
Iudicis | or\'a su\'i, | sed e|rant sine | vindice | tuti.
Nondum | caesa su\'is, | pere|grinum ut | viseret | orbem,
Montibus | in liqui|das | pi\'nus de|scenderat | undas,
Nullaque | morta|l\'es | praet|er sua | litora | norant.
Nondum | praecipi\'tes | cin\'ge|bat | oppida | fossae :
Non tuba | direc\'ti, | non | aeris | cornua | flexi,
Non gale|ae, | non | ensis e|rant: | sine | militis | usu
Mollia | sec\'rae | per\'a|ge|bat | otia | gentes.
Ipsa quo\'que immu\'nis | ras|troque in|tacta nec | ullis
Saucia | vomer|ibus | per | se dabat | omnia | tellus ;
Conten|tique ci|bis | null\'o co|l\'ente cre|atis
Arbute|os fe\'tus | mon|tanaque | fraga le|ge|bat
Cor|naque et | in du\'ris | hae|rentia | mora | rubetis
Et quae | de\'ci|de|rant | patu|la Iovis | arbo\'re, | glandes.
Ver erat | aet|er|num, | plac|dique te|pentibus | auris
Mulce|bant zephy|ri | na|tos sine | semine | flo\'res.
Mox et|am fru|ges | tel|lus ina|rata fe|re|bat,
Nec reno\'vatus a|ger | gravi|dis ca|ne|bat a|ris|tis :
Flumina | iam lac|tis, | iam | flumina | necta|ris | iban\',
Flavaque | de viri|di | still|abant \ ili\'ce | mella.
A consideration of the metrical structure of these lines shows that each is divided into six regularly recurring cadences; and that these cadences, measures or feet are composed either of two long syllables or beats (a spondee), or of one long and two short beats (a dactyl); and that they are consequently equal in respect to the time required to pronounce them. The last foot in each line differs from the others in that it may be either a spondee, filling up the full time of the measure, or a trochee, composed of a long and a short beat followed by a rest equivalent in time to a short beat. The first two lines are represented both metrically and musically as follows:—

\[
\begin{array}{cccc}
\text{用量} & \text{用量} & \text{用量} & \text{用量} \\
\text{用量} & \text{用量} & \text{用量} & \text{用量} & \text{用量} & \text{用量} \\ \end{array}
\]

It will be seen from these considerations that the rhythm of Latin verse depends upon the quantity of the syllables which compose it. If due attention has been paid to the subject of quantity from the beginning of the study of Latin, the student will experience little difficulty at this point, particularly in the Hexameter, whose mechanical structure is simple. If this has not been the case, the student should master at the outset a few of the simpler principles, especially those which include quantity by position and quantity of final and increment syllables. For these, the following refer-

While mastering these principles, the student should put them into practice by attempting to read Latin verse at once. Let him get the swing of the hexameter by repeatedly reading aloud the verses printed above, observing the application of the principles of quantity which he is considering.

Meanwhile, observe that there is a musical or metrical stress falling upon the first syllable in each measure. This stress, in the last two feet of each line, coincides with the word-accent, but does not regularly do so in the other feet. It is the traditional theory that the word-accent is lost when it falls upon a syllable that does not bear the metrical stress. The opposite theory, advanced notably by Professor W. G. Hale (Proceedings of the Am. Phil. Ass., 1895, p. xxvi), is that, beside quantity, both word-accent and metrical stress were given by the Romans in reading verse. While the exact facts can probably never be known, it is likely that only a slight stress, whether metrical or word, was given by the Romans themselves.

The rhythm of Latin verse further requires the practical suppression of certain easily slurred final syllables coming before a word beginning with a vowel or the simple breathing $h$. These letters are any vowel or vowel with $m$, or a diphthong. The slurred part is retained sufficiently to indicate to the ear its presence in the verse, but not enough to count in the time. It is the second or receiving element which gives the time to the resultant syllable. In the case of est following a syllable or letter that would ordinarily be slurred, the reverse takes place; i.e. the e is lost, and st is pronounced with the preceding unchanged word.

Omission of slurring (Hiatus) rarely occurs. In the nearly four thousand lines selected from the Metamorphoses for the present edition, only the following cases occur:—

I, 363. O uti|nam pos|sem || popu|los repa|rare pa|ternis.
          756. Et tuli|t ad Clyme|nem || Epal|phi con|vicia | matrem.
II, 244. Et celer | Isme|nos || cum | Phegia|co Ery|mantho.
III, 467. O uti|nam a nos|tro || se|cedere | corpore | possem !
          501. Verba lo|cus ; || dic|toque va|le, || 'vale' | inquit et | Echo.

In this line note the double peculiarity of hiatus and the shortening of final e in the second vale.

V, 409. Est medi|um Cya|nes || et | Pisae|ae Are|thusa.
          625. Et bis 'i|o Are|thusa, i|o Are|thusa !' vo|cavit.

In this line note that there is a triple hiatus. In such cases, including the two lines in which O occurs, hiatus is regularly found, since it is evident that the word could not be slurred without undue loss to its integrity as a word.

No instance is found, in the hexameters of this edition, of a letter at the end of a line slurring over to the beginning of the next line (Synapheia). Vergil allows, in all, twenty such hypermetric lines, the syllable concerned being, in all but two cases, the enclitic -que.

The polished hexamer of the Augustan period avoids frequent and harsh slurrings, although these abound to excess in the earlier poets, e.g. Ennius, Lucilius, and Lucretius. Some specimens of Lucilian harshness are seen in the following:—
THE POETIC FORM OF OVID'S WORKS

Praetextae ac tunicae, Lydorum opus sordidulum omne.
Ad cenam adducam et primum hisce abdomina thunni.
Ceteri item, in capulo hunc non esse aliumque cubare.

Slurring in good verse is rare in the fifth foot, and so rare in the sixth as to be almost unknown. The only cases which these selections from the Metamorphoses present are: II, 86; IV, 103; VII, 12; XV, 214.

In general it may be said of Ovid's verse that it is remarkably smooth in the matter of elision, even when compared with Vergil. Only a few lines show any approach to roughness, and these, if compared with such standards as the lines just quoted from Lucilius (which are typical), are not noticeably harsh.

Analogous to the slurring of a final letter or letters, in its effect both upon the ear and upon the rhythm of the verse, is the slurring of two vowels coming together within a word (Synaeresis). In both cases there is the sounding of two letters with the time of one, and in both, with the exception of deerat, it is the second element which gives the time to the resultant syllable. The following instances of Synaeresis occur in these selections: I, 77. deerat; 292. deerant; 353. (et passim) deinde; 423. alveo; 461. (et passim) nescio; V, 201. Persei; VII, 151. aureae; 247. aenea; IX, 51. reicere; XIII, 366. anteit; 819. deerunt.

The metrical effect of both final and medial slurring is to shorten the line to the proportions required by the rhythm. To produce the opposite effect of gaining time, resort is sometimes had, though rarely in Ovid, to the lengthening of a short syllable (Diastole), as, for example, in the following passages: I, 193. faunique; II, 247. Taenariüs; V, 484. side-raquē; VII, 265. seminaquē; XIII, 257. Alastoraquē.
THE DACTYLC HEXAMETER

It will be seen that the lengthened syllable in each of these cases is the accented syllable of the foot, which is in itself an indication that the metrical accent of the verse had a perceptible influence in determining rhythm. In every instance but one, the lengthened syllable in the cases quoted above is the enclitic -que. Vergil lengthens -que seventeen times, and rather freely uses the license of diastole in a large variety of other final syllables.

Conversely, a long syllable may be shortened for metrical purposes (Systole), as seen in III, 501:—

Verba lo|cus; dic|toque vālē 'vālē'! inquit et | Echo.

As to the character of the different feet in the hexameter verse, it has been seen that the last foot is always either a spondee or a trochee. The fifth foot is, except in rare instances, a dactyl. So rare is the spondee in the fifth foot that lines having this peculiarity are named spondaic lines. The following instances occur in these selections: I, 14, 62, 117, 193, 690, 732; II, 226, 247; V, 607; VI, 247; VII, 114. It will be seen that the lines all end in a polysyllabic word, frequently a difficult proper name.

The first four feet in a hexameter verse may be either dactyls or spondees. The proportion of these varies in different authors. In the verses of Homer, the dactyls far outnumber the spondees, being about 68 per cent of all. In the Latin writers, the two feet are about equally proportioned, the spondees preponderating by a small percentage, except in Ovid, whose lines are noticeably dactylic in effect. In the first foot, however, the dactyl is favored by all, in Ovid especially so, whose line initials are even more preponderatingly dactylic than Homer’s. A large number of the lines of the Metamorphoses are composed entirely of dactyls with the exception of the sixth foot. Some examples of this are: I, 143, 158, 234, 778; II, 32, 34, 158, 195; IV, 675, 696; V, 365, 400; VI, 172, 174, 176, 304; VIII, 675; IX, 134; X, 14, 15; XIII, 35, 267, 273. Since the thought in these lines does not, as a rule, require rapidity of expression, it is evident that Ovid chooses the rapid style for its own sake.

An unusual line for Ovid, both in its monosyllabic character and consequent slow movement, is VII, 40.

If the model lines are again examined, it will be seen that each is rhetorically broken by a more or less noticeable pause (marked ||) falling in all but three lines in the middle of the third foot, i.e. after the first or metrically accented syllable. In the exceptional lines, the pause falls in one case (l. 89) in the fourth foot; and in the other two (ll. 90 and 99) there are two such pauses, falling in the second and fourth feet respectively. Such a pause as is here described is called the caesural pause of the line. The above-mentioned distribution of the caesural pause pretty accurately represents Ovid’s usage as to the position of the caesura. A comparison with the corresponding feature of Vergil’s hexameter shows that he is much more careful to secure variety by breaking consecutive lines differently, than is Ovid.
THE DACTYLIC HEXAMETER

As has been said, the pause regularly falls after the first or accented syllable of the foot (Masculine Caesura). In infrequent instances, however, the rhetorical pause of the line falls between the two short or unaccented syllables of a dactyl (Feminine Caesura), as in the following lines:—

VI, 246. Membra solo posueris; simul sumprema iacentes.
XIII, 77. Si perstas certare, lo cum redeamus in illum.

It is a metrical fault for a line to be so constructed that no such pause occurs; also to have any considerable portion of the words in a line coincide with the feet, thus forming what may be called a mechanical or prose line. From this fault, Ovid is singularly free. The following lines exhibit this fault to a slight extent: IX, 208, 209; XV, 868. Much more mechanical is Lucretius, e.g.—

I, 244. At nunc, inter se quia nexus principiorum;

and the most extreme case known is the following line from the Satires of Ennius:—

Sparsis hastis longis campus splendet et horret.

A glance at Ovid's lines shows that his favorite ending is a word of two or three syllables. So in Vergil. Lucretius, more than any other poet, is fond of a resounding polysyllabic ending. In all, it is considered a metrical blemish to end a line with a monosyllable, unless it be the absorbed est, or unless the ending be used intentionally for dramatic effect or for emphasis, as in Horace (A. P. 139):—

Parturient montes, nascetur ridiculus mus;
where the monosyllabic ending represents the insignificant outcome of the great preparations suggested by the otherwise high-sounding line.

As a rule, however, the prevalence of this ending is a fair test as to the smoothness of a writer’s hexameters in other respects. Of the extant fragments of the Annales of Ennius (about 430 full lines), 10 per cent have the monosyllabic ending; of the fragments of Lucilius (1000 lines), 6.3 per cent; in Lucretius, 3.5 per cent; in Horace, 8.3 per cent; in Juvenal, 7 per cent; in Vergil and Ovid, not more than \( \frac{1}{3} \) of 1 per cent of the lines have this ending.

One of the most noticeable features of the earlier Latin poetry is the fondness of its writers for multiplying similar sounds at the beginning of words and accented syllables. In the crude poetry of early English literature, this alliterative principle seems to have been the basis of rhythm; but among the early Latin writers it is probably nothing more than an attempt to embellish their lines by what was considered an artistic devise. A pleasant effect is undoubtedly produced by this means, if used in moderation. The fault, however, of such writers as Ennius, and to a less extent of Lucretius, is that they are carried away by these jingles, and use them until they are no longer pleasing. Ennius runs riot in alliteration. Nearly 20 per cent of his lines are marked by this feature. Extreme examples of his alliterative verse are as follows:

\[
\begin{align*}
\text{Machina multa minax molitur maxima muris.} \\
\text{Si luci, si nox, si mox, si iam data sit frux.} \\
\text{O Tite tute Tati tibi tanta tyranne tulisti.} \end{align*}
\]
Vergil does not make alliteration a feature of his verse, at least so far as conscious striving for this effect is concerned.

Ovid, on the other hand, while he nowhere goes quite to the extreme of Ennius, did consciously and constantly avail himself of alliterative effects. Alliteration in two letters is very common. In these lines, the words which begin with the same letter are generally connected rhetorically. Many of the lines contain two pairs of alliterated words, e.g. VII, 96; XIII, 93. Alliteration in three letters is also common, e.g. II, 77, 82; III, 481; X, 44; XIII, 83, 84. Ovid's most extreme alliterative lines are as follows: II, 155, 170; V, 473; VI, 312; VII, 136; IX, 80; XIII, 87, 116, 577.

The same taste which led the Latin poets to alliteration is displayed in their frequent attempts to produce a jangling or rhyming effect at the end of two or more words in a line. Whether such attempts are to be considered as the origin of the modern rhyme is a question which cannot be answered; and yet the fondness for such effects, displayed by many of the Latin poets, is significant. This is shown very strongly in Ennius, and perhaps most of all in Lucretius. Ovid also makes use of assonance with extreme frequency. The following lines illustrate this echoing or rhyming effect:—

I, 130. In quorum subiere locum fraudesque dolique.
307. Quaesitisque diu terris, ubi sistere detur.

Other examples are in: II, 27, 215, 235, 245, 249; IV, 83, 147, 480; V, 192, 193, 422, 428, 432, 625; VI, 219, 250; VII, 139, 177, 271; VIII, 673; IX, 91, 180; XI, 142; XIII, 303, 304, 361, 844; XV, 754, 757, 758. It will be seen, upon examination, that the syllables here in question fall in the masculine caesurae in the second and fourth feet. There can be little doubt that the poet consciously aims to produce an echoing effect in these lines. This effect can be produced only by giving prominence to (i.e. by accenting) the similar syllables; and since these syllables are word finals, this requires an accent which is not the proper accent of the word.

A favorite line ending with Ovid is seen in I, 129, 130. Over fifty such endings occur, with the similarly duplicated enclitic -ve.

Ovid’s fondness for jingles is further illustrated in such phrases as the following: ille levem; advehor Ortygiam; Helicona colentes; convicia victae; Latona relatis; deme meis; ense senis; clausere serae; texit ora frutex; voce vocatur; pecoris spectans; sentiat at; tantae . . . Tantalides; Lemnos nostro; spolieris erit; nobis altera nobilitas; remoraturituros; silvis et visus; septemflua flumina; unus onus.

In this class of jingles, Lucretius easily excels all other Latin poets. In the actual repetition of words and phrases, however, Ovid outdoes even Lucretius. This repetition extends from such simple cases as —

I, 240. Occidit una domus: sed non domus una perire, through all phases of line initial, medial and final repetition, with duplication of part lines and half lines, to almost complete line repetition, such as,—

I, 325, 326. Et superesse virum de tot modo millibus unum, Et superesse videt de tot modo millibus unam.
For further illustrations of this most prominent feature of Ovid’s poetic form, turn to the following passages:—

I, 248, 249. Forma futura, rogant: quis sit laturus in aras Tura? ferisne paret populandas tradere terras?

and 325, 326 (line repetition with slight changes); 361, 362 (second half line repeated); 481, 482 (first half line repeated); 514, 515 (double word repetition); 742 (double jingle: que in quinos dilapsa absuntur); II, 280, 281 (double phrase repetition with chiasmus); III, 98 (a perfectly symmetrical chiasmic arrangement of a double repeated phrase); 446 (the same as in 98); 465 (triple word repetition); IV, 152, 153; 713 (double word repetition with chiasmus and triple alliteration); V, 345 (triple word repetition; two in parallel order, and one in chiasmic order); 369, 370; 483; VII, 197, 198 (remarkable repetition of -que, and double word repetition in beginning and medial positions); VIII, 673 (every word but one containing an echoing syllable: Danque locum mensis paulum seducta secundis); 714, 715 (triple word repetition); IX, 36–38 (ll. 36 and 37 are held together by vicem and cervicem; while 37 and 38 are joined by captat and captare); 44, 45 (three pairs of repeated words, with quadruple alliteration in one line, and two pairs of double alliteration in the other); 207–210 (a strongly onomatopoetic passage with many repetitions); XIII, 284; XV, 757, 758 (in one line, triple ending in -os and double in -isse, every word but et being involved; in the other, triple ending in -um and one in -isse).

These passages, containing every possible variety of alliteration, assonance, anaphora, double, triple, and quadruple echoes, repetitions in parallel and chiasmic order exhibit an amazing fluency which amounts to an almost fatal facility of language. Add to this the ceaseless, swift gallop of his lines, of which mention has already been made, and it will be seen that Ovid is a past master in the use of the Hexameter—a veritable juggler in language.

II. THE ELEGIAIC DISTICH

The first appearance of this species of verse in Roman poetry is in the Epigrammata of Ennius, of which the following lines, upon the poet himself, are a good illustration:

Áspici|te Ó ci|vés, || senis | Énni j|máginis | fórnam l
Híc ves|trúm pan|xít # máxima | fácta pa|trúm.
Némo | mé lacru|mís deco|rét || nec | fúnera | flétu
Fáxit. | Cúr? voli|tó # vívu’ per | óra vi|rúm.

Marcus Terentius Varro employed the same verse, to a limited extent, in his Menippean satires. The following passage, of which the initial hexameter line is lost, is among the extant fragments:

Nátu|ra húma|nis # ómnia | súnt pari|á:
Qui pote | plús, ur|gét, || pis|cis ut | saépe mi|nútos
Mágnu’ co|mést, ut a|vés # énicat | áccipi|tér.

In Catullus, Carmina 65–116 are in the elegiac distich. This poet is probably the first of the Latins to use the distich in the true elegiac (mournful) strain, as illustrated in Carmen 65, in which he laments the death of his brother:—
Nunquam ego | té vitá # frater amabilior
Aspiciám post hác: | at | cérte | sémper amábo,
Sémper | maésta tuál # cámina | móte cañám,
Quália | súb den|sil | ra|mór | concinit | úmbris
Daúlias | ábsum|tii # fáta ge|méns Ityli.

But the distich reaches its highest perfection of development in the more properly styled elegiac poets, Propertius, Tibullus, and Ovid, in whose hands it becomes the ready instrument for the expression of the passion of love. For Ovid's own account of the measure, and the origin of his use of it, read Amores, I, i, and see notes upon this.

The elegiac distich, as will have been observed above, is composed of a dactylic hexameter line followed by a (wrongly so-called) pentameter. It is to this pentameter only that the attention of the student need be called. In the selections quoted above, and in the minor works of Ovid (i.e. all except the Metamorphoses), observe the following facts:—

1. The distich is a true couplet,—a unit, not alone in form, but in thought,—which is brought to a close by the pentameter line; so that the sense rarely goes over uncompleted into the next hexameter. In this respect, compare the English rhymed couplet, e.g. of Pope.

2. The pentameter line, as has been suggested above, is wrongly so called. Properly considered, it is a dactylic hexameter with the unaccented part of the third and sixth feet suppressed. In theory, the remaining syllable has the time of the entire foot.

3. The line is usually broken rhetorically after the OVID—16 accented part of the third foot. This break in the pentameter is marked in the lines above thus #, and divides the line into two equal parts. There are many lines, however, in which there is no rhetorical break here, e.g. —

Tiphys in Haemonia puppe magister erat.

4. In the first half, substitution of spondees for dactyls is freely admitted, while in the second half no substitution is allowed. Here the dactyl only is found. Hence the verse scheme is as follows: —

\[ \langle \infty | \infty | \infty | # | \infty \infty | \infty \infty | \infty \]

5. Elision, especially in Ovid, is exceedingly rare in the second half of the line.

6. It is Ovid's almost universal rule to end the pentameter with a dissyllable. The older poets, as seen above, had no such practice.

7. It is a very common thing in Ovid for the two words which end the two halves of the pentameter to be noun and adjective in agreement, having the same ending, thus forming an assonance or rhyme; e.g. —

Venerat, antiquas miscueratque comas.

Oftentimes the echo of the sound is secured, although the two ends are unconnected in construction; e.g. —

Ille fuit. Matri proxima iusta tuli.

Again, the two words may be in agreement, though the final sounds are not identical, as in the following line: —

Prodita sum causis una puella tribus.
NOTES

H = Harkness' Complete Latin Grammar, references to Harkness' Standard Grammar being inclosed in parentheses; M = Mooney; A = Allen & Greenough; G = Gildersleeve; B = Bennett; L. & M. = Lane & Morgan.

THE LIFE OF OVID (Tristia, IV, 10)

Page 11. — 1. "Who I was, that playful poet of the tender loves." Reference is made to the love poems of Ovid's youth. The present poem was written at the end of his life, after the completion of his greater and more serious works. But the poet passes over these, and introduces himself to posterity merely as the writer of amatory verse.

3. Sulmo: a town of the Peligni, lying almost due east of Rome, watered by cool mountain streams (gelidis undis). Ovid claims (Fast. IV, 79) that the town was named from Solymus, one of the followers of Aeneas. For a further account of the poet's birthplace, see Amores, III, xv, p. 32, of this book.

4. ab Urbe: to a Roman, urbs, unless otherwise defined, referred, as a matter of course, to Rome, the city, par excellence. See Quintilian (VI, 3, 103): "After the term Urbs, even though no distinguishing proper name was added, came to be understood as referring to Rome."

6. cum cecidit: i.e. in 43 B.C. The two consuls were Hirtius and Pansa, who, after the death of Caesar, had taken sides against Antony. They fell in a successful attack upon that general, who was besieging D. Brutus in Mutina.

8. "Not made a knight by fortune's gift alone." His was an ancient order of knighthood, descended to him from a remote ancestor, and not conferred by fortune's latest whirl. In these lines, Ovid substantially repeats what he had said in the Amores (III, xv, 5, 6, p. 32), where militiae turbine is substituted for fortunae munere, both phrases having reference to the sudden promotion which had come to many as the reward of service in the civil wars.

11. "The same morning dawned upon the natal day of both." In the three lines (10-12) there is a threefold statement that the birth anniversary of the poet and his brother fell on the same day.

12. libum: the libum was a kind of pancake, the composition of which is thus described by Cato (de Re Rustica, 75): "Make the libum after the following fashion: take two parts of cheese and rub up well in a mortar. To this add one pound of wheaten flour, and mix well with the cheese. Add one egg and mix all well together. Make the mixture into a cake, cover it with leaves, and bake it slowly on the warm hearth.” It was customary to offer such a cake to the gods upon one’s birthday.

13-14. In these lines we are told the month and day of Ovid’s birth,—the twentieth of March. The “five festal days of armor-clad Minerva” here referred to were the Quinquatria, which lasted for five days, March 19-23. Ovid (Fast. III, 809-814) thus describes the festival:

Una dies media est, et fiunt sacra Minervae, Nomina quae iunctis quinque diebus habent.
Sanguine prima vacat, nec fas concurrere ferro:
Causa, quod est illa nata Minerva die.
Altera tresque super rasa celebrantur harena:
Ensibus ex sertis bellica laeta dea est.

Therefore, “the first day that was wont to be ensanguined with battle” would be the first of the last four days, or the twentieth of the month.

PAGE 12. — 15. cura parentis: Horace gives us a similar picture of his own father’s ambition for his son’s education and of his personal supervision and care (Satires, I, vii, 71): “My father, though possessed of but a meager estate, was unwilling to send me to Flavius’ school, but was enterprising enough to take me early in my career to Rome, there to be instructed in the studies which the sons of knights and senators pursued.”

18. “Born for the wordy forum’s ardent strife.” His brother chose the profession of the law.

19. caelestia sacra: poetry was regarded as sacred, exalted, because inspired of Heaven. The poet was the priest of the Muses.

20. Maenides: i.e. Homer. The utilitarian old father could see no good in that which brought no financial profit.

25, 26. Compare the early experience of Pope, who, no doubt, remembered his Ovid when he wrote (Prologue to the Satires):

As yet a child, nor yet a fool to fame,
I lisped in numbers, for the numbers came.

28. liberior toga: otherwise called the toga virilis, the assumption of which was a sign that the young man had attained his majority, or the age of sixteen years. The toga praetexta, the dress of boyhood, was at that time laid aside.

lato clavo: the laticlave was a broad band of purple which adorned the front of the tunic. It was primarily designed as a mark of senatorial rank, but the sons of wealthy knights were allowed by Augustus to assume this badge, since they also might aspire to senatorial dignity.

studium nobis manet: each boy entered public life with his early inclinations strong upon him.

parte mei: the force of these words is somewhat weakened by Ovid's frequent use of similar expressions. He thus addresses Severus (Ex Ponto, I, viii, 2): Pars animae magna, Severe, meae.

The triumvirate was a sort of committee or commission of three, charged with the police or the mint, as the case might be. The office of the triumvir was a minor one, which, however, was one of the necessary steps for the political aspirant.

mensura coacta: instead of entering the senate, the badge of which was the broad purple stripe, which he had assumed as destined to the senate, Ovid now gave up his political aspirations, and was content to remain a knight, and wear only the narrow purple stripe of that order.

Ex 13.—39. Aonieae sorores: the Muses. Aonia, that is, Boeotia, was especially sacred to the Muses, because here was Mt. Helicon, their favorite haunt, and many fountains and streams which were consecrated to them. Compare Milton (Paradise Lost, I, 13):—

My adventurous song,
That with no middle flight intends to soar
Above the Aonian mount.

"And every bard I took to be a god." Such enthusiastic reverence readily explains, in part, the popularity which Ovid speedily enjoyed among his brother poets.

Macer: this was Aemilius Macer, of Verona, the friend both of Vergil and Ovid. He wrote a poem on serpents and birds, no trace of which remains to us. Ovid here implies that he wrote on the healing properties of herbs also.

Propertius: an elegiac poet, about ten years older than Ovid, born in Umbria, near the confines of Etruria. Four books of his elegies have come down to us. He also was of an equestrian family, and his friendship with Ovid seems to have been based on many similarities of taste and experience.

ignes: the poets frequently call their passionate effusions by the appropriate names of ignes, ardiores, flammeae, and the like.

"Who by bonds of comradeship was joined to me."

Ponticus: Propertius addresses two elegies (I, 7 and 9) to this poet, in the first of which he recommends his friend not to despise love poetry, and in the second Ponticus is jestingly taunted with being at last in love. In the first four lines of the seventh elegy, Propertius implies that Ponticus is writing a heroic poem upon Thebes.

47. Bassus: Propertius addresses the fourth elegy of his first book to this same Bassus, in which he reproaches that poet for trying to part him from his sweetheart, Cynthia. Of this Bassus nothing further is known.

49. Horatius: Horace was Ovid's senior by twenty-two years. While they both moved in the same literary circles, there is no evidence in the works of either poet that they were intimate friends.

50. Ausonia: i.e. Italian. Horace himself (Odes, III, 30) claims that he was the first Roman to adapt the Greek lyric meters to Latin verse.

51. Vergilium: Vergil died in B.C. 19, when Ovid was only twenty-four years old. He spent much of his time, in the later years of his life, at Naples. These facts, added to the well-known reserved disposition of Vergil, would account for Ovid's extremely limited acquaintance with him.

Tibullo: Tibullus was, like Propertius, an elegiac poet, born at about the same time with him, and of an equestrian family of considerable wealth; but, unlike his friend, he was born in the city itself. Ovid's love for Tibullus is testified by the impassioned lament over his death, which occurred in B.C. 19. This lament is found in the Amores, III, 9.

53. Galle: C. Cornelius Gallus was, like Tibullus and Propertius, an elegiac poet, and that of no mean ability. His writings, none of which are extant, comprised a volume of elegies in four books in praise of a certain Greek actress, to whom he gives the name of Lycoris. These elegies are favorably mentioned by Ovid (Amores, I, 15, 29):

Gallus et hesperiis et Gallus notus eos,
Ex sua cum Gallo nota Lycoris erit.

He was also a sincere friend and patron of men of letters, and in particular of Vergil, whom he introduced to the notice of the great Maecenas. Vergil's warm friendship and admiration of his friend and brother-poet are expressed in his sixth and tenth eclogues.

54. The elegiac succession would, then, be Gallus, Tibullus, Propertius, Ovid.

56. Thalia: Ovid here uses the name of a specific muse (the muse of Comedy), as Horace also frequently does, for poetry in general.

57. "When I first gave public readings of my youthful verse." This practice of reading one's own productions has already been alluded to in line 45. The custom was instituted by Asinius Pollio.

60. Corinna: the mistress who inspired his love songs, as did the Lesbia of Catullus, Lycoris of Gallus, Delia of Tibullus, and Cynthia of Propertius. What the real name of Corinna was is matter only for conjecture. This device of addressing an inamorata under an assumed name was adopted by many English poets.
Augustus Caesar
Vergil
Gallus
Horace
Macer
Livy
Tibullus
Propertius
Ovid
PAGE 14. — 63. “Then, too, on the eve of flight, I burned some works which would have pleased.” Among these works yet in hand was the Metamorphoses, which Ovid was at that time employed in correcting. Fortunately for posterity, however, this great work was not destroyed.

68. “No scandal was ever connected with my name.”

78. Lustrum: the lustrum was an expiatory sacrifice or lustration made by the censors at the end of every five years, upon the completion of the official census. A lustrum hence came to mean a period of five years.

79. “I mourned him as he would have mourned for me had I been taken off.”

85-88. Ovid raises questions which to the thinkers of his time were full of interest, questions which were variously answered but never settled: when a man dies does anything remain? does the soul escape the funeral flames? does news of earthly doings penetrate to the spirit world? While Ovid, in more than one passage, boldly asserts belief in his own immortality, it is more of the enduring life of his literary fame than of his own personal existence that he speaks.

PAGE 15. — 90. “The cause of my enforced flight was an unfortunate blunder, not a deliberate sin.”

94. Antiquas comas: i.e. that of the former days of his youth. Ovid is very fond of this use of antiquus in the sense of “old-time” or “former.” Elsewhere he has antiqua frons, antiqui capilli, antiqua facies, mens, and the like.

95. Pisaea oliva: reference is here made to the Olympic games which were held in the territory of Pisa. The victor’s crown was a wreath of wild olive. Hence the words of the text. These games were held at intervals of four years called Olympiads. Ovid has evidently confounded the Olympiad with the Roman lustrum, which was a period of five years.

95, 96. “And since my birth the victorious horse, crowned with Pisa’s olive wreath, had ten times won the prize.” By this whole passage he means to tell us that he was fifty years old when this calamity came upon him. As a matter of fact, he was fifty-one years of age, which would set the date of his banishment in 8 A.D.

96. Victor equus: the use of equus instead of eques seems strange here until we remember that Pindar twice chants the praises of the victorious horse. Horace refers to this feature of Pindar’s verse in Odes, IV, 2, 17.

97. For a full description of the place and circumstances of Ovid’s exile, see the selections from the Tristia and Epistulae ex Ponto, and notes.
101.
comitum nefas: this is a dark allusion to the faithlessness of friends in his time of trouble. In ex Ponto (II, vii, 61) he plainly says that, instead of aiding him as they might have done, they had actually profited by his misfortunes: —

Recta fides comitum poterat mala nostra levare:
Ditata est spolitis perfida turba meis.

109, 110. "At length, worn with long wanderings, I reached Sarmatia's shores, hard by the quiver-bearing Getae."

Page 16. — 113. quod: "this," my poetry (carmen), the subject of referatur.

115 seq. So Horace acknowledges his debt to the muse for all that he has attained in life (Odes, IV, iii, 21): "'Tis all thy gift that I am noted by the passer-by, and called Rome's lyric bard; and that I live and please, if so I please, is thine."

116. "That utter weariness of the irksome days does not o'erwhelm me."

119. ab Histo: the Ister stands for all his savage and unpoetic surroundings. From these he is lifted bodily by the muse's inspiration to the sacred haunts of poesy.

121. mihi vivo nomen: it is the result of the natural envy of man that the full meed of praise is rarely bestowed in life.

125. "For though our age has produced great poets," etc. Notwithstanding the strong rivalry for fame of many gifted men, Ovid feels that his has been no mean share of fame.

128. A prophecy fulfilled, in that even now the poet is being read and studied in a land of which he never dreamed.

129, 130. This prediction of his own literary immortality Ovid is very fond of making. See Tristia, III, vii, 50: —

Me tamen extincto fama superstes erit,
Dumque suis victrix omnem de montibus orbem Prosperet domitum Martia Roma, legar.

The fullest statement of these hopes is found in the concluding lines of the Metamorphoses, which see with note.

HEROIDES

The story of Ariadne falls into three parts: her connection with the adventure of Theseus in Crete against the Minotaur, her flight with Theseus and subsequent desertion by him upon the island, and her union with Bacchus, who discovered her there. Ovid gives the briefest outline of the whole story in Met. VIII, 172–182; the present letter describes at length the second, and Ars Amatoria, I, 526–564, gives the third phase of the story. This same phase he presents at length in Fasti, III, 459–516, ending with the transformation of Ariadne's crown into the constellation of that name.

The story of Ariadne is referred to by numerous other Latin writers, related among the other legends of antiquity in the Fabulae of Hyginus (who was intimately acquainted with Ovid), and in Plutarch (Theseus); but it is told most graphically and at greater length by Catullus (Carmen, 64, 50–264), who describes the whole story in all its details as embroidered upon the drapery of the marriage couch of Thetis.

Among ancient references to this heroine are Hesiod (Theog. 947), and Homer (Od. XI, 323), where Ulysses beholds the shades in Hades:—

Phaedra I saw, and Procris, and the child
Of the wise Minos, Ariadne, famed
For beauty, whom the hero Theseus once
From Crete to hallowed Athens' fertile coast Led, but possessed her not. Diana gave Ear to the tale which Bacchus brought to her,
And in the isle of Dia slew the maid.

Note the variation here in the ending of the story. This myth has taken strong hold upon the fancy of English writers from Chaucer (Legend of Good Women) to modern poets. Among the latter may be mentioned Frederick Tennyson (Ariadne), R. S. Ross (Ariadne in Naxos), J. S. Blackie (Ariadne), W. M. Call (Ariadne), and H. H. Jackson (Ariadne's Farewell).

PAGE 18. — X, 1, 2. Palmer points out that these lines appear to have been prefixed by a later hand, and that the poem properly begins at line 3.
3. quae: the antecedent is ea understood, the object of mitto.
7. tempus erat: a stock expression used to introduce the description of circumstances preceding some important action or event.
quo primum: this time was in the early gray dawn, with not light enough as yet to dim the moon, which was still shining.
9, 10. These lines are strikingly recalled by Tennyson (In Memoriam, XIII):—

Tears of the widower, when he sees
A late-lost form that sleep reveals,
And moves his doubtful arms, and leaves
Her place is empty, fall like these.

18. "My eyes find (have) nothing to see except the (long line of) shore."
videant: H. 591, 1 (503, 1); M. 383, 2; A. 320, a; G. 631, 2; B. 283, 2=L. & M. 838.
19, 20. These lines present an unusually realistic picture, even for Ovid.

PAGE 19. — 21–23. Ovid again describes this moment in Ars Amatoria (1, 529–532), where he tells the sequel of the present situation:
Utque erat e somno tunica velata recincta,
Nuda pedem, croceas inreligata comas,
Thesea crudelem surdas clamabat ad undas,
Indigno teneras imbre rigante genas.

At this point Bacchus and his train appear upon the scene.
24. This is exceptional, for elsewhere throughout the letter she represents all nature as conspiring with Theseus against her.
29. nam ventis, etc.: “for I found that the winds also were cruel to me.”
31, 32. quae has a suppressed antecedent. “I either saw (them, i.e. the sails), or as it were such as I thought I saw — (at any rate) I was colder than ice and half dead (with fear).
36. numerum suum: a nautical expression for a full ship’s crew, or complement of passengers.
38. verbera cum verbis: such a play upon words (paronomasia), whether conscious or otherwise, is frequently to be noticed in Latin poetry.
42. met: H. 454 (406, II); M. 227; A. 219, 1; G. 376; B. 206, 1; L. & M. 588.
43. oculis: H. 429, 2 (386, 2); M. 211; A. 229; G. 345, Rem. 1; B. 188, 2, d; L. & M. 532, 534. (It will be observed that oculis in the present passage is really personified.)
45. facerent: H. 559, 4 (484, V); M. 324; A. 268; G. 265; B. 277; L. & M. 723.
45, 46. “What should my eyes do other than weep when they no longer saw thy sails?”
48. Ogygio deo: i.e. Bacchus, so called from Ogyges, a mythical king of Thebes. Bacchus is especially connected with Thebes, both because he was peculiarly honored there and because his mother, Semele, was a Theban princess.

Page 20. — 55. Toro manante is in the ablative absolute construction with lacrimis profusis as a limiting phrase: “And while the couch is sprinkled with my gushing tears.”
58. pars nostri maior: this phrase strikingly suggests the modern expression “my better half.” It is similar to Horace’s animae dimidium meae.
59. faciam: see note on facerent, line 45.
64. quid sequar? “where am I to go?”
65. ut labar: H. 586, II (515, III); M. 378, 2; A. 313, a; G. 608; B. 308.
67. centum urbes: “Crete of the hundred towns” was Homer’s expression (I. II, 649), and the Latin poets have followed him. So Vergil (Aen. III, 106):

Centum urbes habitant magnas, uberrima regna;

and Horace (Odes, III, xxvii, 33):

Quae simul centum tetigit potentem Oppidis Creten.
68. puero cognita terra Iovi: “the land that Jove's infancy knew.” According to an ancient tradition (as far back as Hesiod), Jupiter, the son of Saturn and Rhea, was born in the island of Crete. Vergil therefore calls Crete the island of Jove (Aen. III, 104):

> Creta Iovis magni medio iacet insula ponto;

an expression which Ovid also uses (Her. IV. 163):

> Est mihi dotalis tellus Iovis insula, Crete.

69. parenti: H. 431, 6 (388, 4); M. 207, 2; A. 232, a; G. 354, note 2; B. 189, 2; L. & M. 545. The traditional genealogy of Ariadne is as follows:

```
Iuppiter = Europa
     Minos I.                  Helios = Persa
                   Minos II. = Pasiphae     Circe     Acetes = Idyia
                          Phaedra       Androgeos       Ariadne
                                           Medea
```

It was the first Minos, the son of Jupiter, who for his justice was made a judge in Hades along with Acacus and Rhadamanthus. By his use of the adjective iusto Ovid seems to refer to Minos I, although Minos II was the father to whom Ariadne refers.

71, 72. “When, lest within the mazy labyrinth, though victor, thou shouldst perish, I gave a cord to thee as guide to lead thy steps.”

73. per ego pericula iuro: the pronoun frequently takes this position in oaths. Compare Vergil (Aen. IV, 314): Per ego has lacrinas, etc. To swear by one's perils was a common oath. See Met. VII, 97: Per tanta pericula iurat.

76. sepulta: i.e. “as good as buried.”

77. mactasses: H. 559, 6; A. 266, e.

78. “The pledge which you gave (i.e. that I should be yours as long as I lived) should have been fulfilled by my death.” He would in that case, indeed, be guilty of murder, but not of perjury.

82. mora mortis: cf. line 38, note.

83. iam iam: the repetition of iam serves dramatically to represent the imminence of the fear.

85. alat: H. 552 (485); M. 327; A. 311, a; G. 257; B. 280; L. & M. 717. Page 21. — 88. gladius: Though this seems to be a desert island (cf. line 60), still the evident reference here is to fear of hostile men, as is shown in the next line.
89. ne religer: H. 558 (484); M. 325; A. 267; G. 260; B. 279; L. & M. 710.
91, 92. Such a fate would ill become one who had three such claims to greatness. See the genealogy of Ariadne, line 69, note.
93. si vidi: "if I look or turn to," i.e. for escape.
95. caelum restabat: her only chance to escape is by flight through the air; and from this she is deterred, not by the impossibility of such an attempt, but by her fear of those shadowy phantoms of the gods, who were supposed to inhabit the regions of the upper air. This is, indeed, Ovid's definite conception, expressed in Met. I. 72, 73, which see.

The present passage is not Ovid's first expression of the threefold method of escaping. See Heroides, VI, 161: —

Cum mare, cum terras consumpserit, aeæ temptet.

98. externos: she has had experience enough with "foreigners" in Theseus.
99-104. She regrets all the chain of circumstances which have brought her to her present situation: her brother's death, the dreadful atonement of Athens, the death of the Minotaur at the hands of Theseus, and the assistance which the princess herself has rendered.

This regret for the remote source of present tribulation is common in literature. A further illustration of this is in a fragment from Ennius, in which Medea's old nurse laments that the tree was ever felled that made the Argo's timbers.

101, 102. "And would that, with thy knotty club, O Theseus, thy strong hand high upraised, thou ne'er hadst slain the man-beast monster."

104. This line describes the process by which Theseus found his way out of the labyrinth, pulling in the clew hand over hand as he advanced.
105-110. Small wonder that he conquered the Minotaur, for such a flinty heart would be proof against the thrust of any weapon.

108. "Even though thou didst wear no defensive armor, thou wast still invulnerable because of thy hard heart." There is nothing unusual in the mode of eras, since the reference is directly to the facts of the struggle, as the previous two lines show.

110. "There (i.e. in thy heart) thou hast that which is harder than flint — thyself."

112. aut presents the statement of this line as an alternative with an implied statement in the previous line, "(I ought to have awakened before Theseus abandoned me) or else been buried in an endless sleep."

Page 22. — 119-124. A new and terrible aspect of her case now presents itself: she must die here, with no friendly hand to close her eyes, unwept, unburied. Pope, in his Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady, rings the changes on the same theme: —
What can atone (O ever injured shade!)
Thy fate unpitied, and thy rites unpaid?
No friend’s complaint, no kind domestic tear Pleased thy pale ghost, or graced thy mournful bier.
By foreign hands thy dying eyes were closed,
By foreign hands thy decent limbs composed,
By foreign hands thy humble grave adorn’d,
By strangers honor’d, and by strangers mourn’d!

121. The idea seems to be that if one dies in a foreign land his soul finds itself in a correspondingly foreign spirit world.

124. Ironical. “Such burial as this befits my services!”

125–130. She pictures the triumphal arrival of Theseus at Athens, and the honors which await him there as the deliverer. She bitterly bids him not to leave his desertion of her out of the tale of his adventures.

126. “When thou shalt stand uplifted high amid the acclamations of thy thronging townsmen.” Celsus may picture him actually elevated as upon the shoulders of the people, or, in a less material sense, exalted by their praises.

131, 132. “Thou art the offspring of no human parents, but the crags were thy father and the sea thy mother!” This is a favorite characterization of a hard-hearted man. So Dido upbraids Aeneas (Aen. IV, 365–367):

Nec tibi diva parenst, generis nec Dardanus auctor,
Perfide; sed duris genuit te cautibus horrens
Caucasus, Hycanaceae admorunt ubera tigres.

In the Iliad (XVI, 42) Patroclus thus strives to arouse Achilles:

O merciless! it cannot surely be
That Peleus was thy father, or the queen
Thetis thy mother; the green sea instead
And rugged precipices brought thee forth,
For savage is thy heart.

This last is identical with the thought of Ovid in the present passage.

133. facerent: see references on macllasses, line 77.

135–150. She has run the whole gamut of passion from plaintive reproach to the bitterest denunciation and execration; and now her storm of passion dies down into piteous and submissive pleading.

135. “Behold me now, not with your eyes, but with your mental vision, with which you can (behold me).”

139. A striking and beautiful simile. Ovid is rich in the expression of this physical effect of fear and grief. See Mut. 135, 136 for a similar experience described under a different but equally beautiful simile.
140. "And the letters as I trace (pressa) them with my trembling fingers sprawl unsteadily." This is a very realistic line and represents the speaker as actually writing. We need not trouble ourselves about the source of her materials any more than Ovid did—not to mention the tremendous anachronism of her writing at all!

Tennyson in The Princess (1) curiously transfers the simile of Ovid's line 139, which here describes the trembling body, to the handwriting of line 140:—

And I sat down and wrote,
In such a hand as when a field of corn
Bows all its ears before the roaring East.

144. "There still is no (reason) why you should be the cause of my death."

147. After the two fine dramatic lines immediately preceding, this is ludicrous and bathetic enough: "these hairs I sadly stretch to you, what few hairs still remain!"

149. vento: the sense of this passage, as has been suggested by Palmer, would be better served by velo, since Theseus could not change the wind at will, whereas his sail was under his control.

150. feres: the future used in mild imperative. H. 536, 2 (487, 4); A. 264, c; G. 243; L. & M. 747.

Ovid himself lived to make the same pathetic request of his wife, writing from his sick chamber in exile (Tristia, III, iii, 65, 66):—

Ossa tamen facito parva referantur in urna:
Sic ego non etiam mortuus exsul ero.

AMORES

This work was originally published in five books about 14 B.C. The edition that has come down to us is in three books and was published about 2 B.C.

1, i. In this poem he describes in a dramatic way how Cupid thwarted his youthful ambition to write in heroic measure on serious themes. Vergil relates the same personal experience (Eclogues, VI, 3-5):—

Cum canerem reges et proelia, Cynthiae aurem
Vellit, et admonuit: Pastorem, Tityre, pingues Pascere oporit et oves, deductum dicere carmen.

PAGE 23. — i, 2: "I was all ready to relate in ponderous strains the stirring deeds of war, my subject and my verses in accord." That is, he was well launched in hexameter lines upon some epic theme.

modis: H. 434 (391); M. 214; A. 234, a; G. 359; B. 192, 2; L. & M. 536.

3. par erat inferior versus: "the lower (or second in each couplet) verse was equal (in length) (to the first)." The shortening of the alternate verses by the mockery of Cupid is described in the following line. So, in his allegorical description of Elegeia (\textit{Amores}, III, i, 8), he represents her with halting feet:

\begin{quote}
Et, puto, pes illi longior alter erat.
\end{quote}

5–16. The poet protests against the attempt of Cupid to divert him from his lofty aims, first on the ground that such a transfer of activity would be unseemly; as well might Venus exchange functions with Minerva, Ceres with Diana, Phoebus with Mars. The second ground of protest is that the power of Cupid is already too extensive.

5. iuris: H. 440, 5 (397, 3); M. 225, 2; A. 216, 3; G. 369; B. 201, 2 L. & M. 564.

12. Aoniam lyram: Aonia is that part of Boeotia in which is Mount Helicon the home of the muses.

15, 16. These are indignant rhetorical questions. “Is all the world, then, yours? Is the Vale of Tempe (the muses’ favorite haunt) yours? Is his own lyre scarce safe in Phoebus’ hands?”

15. quod ubique: understand \textit{est}.

Page 24.—17, 18: “When well the new page started with its opening verse, he standing by me, did curtail my lines.”

\textit{Attenuat nervos} is a rather ambiguous metaphorical expression, meaning simply that he reduces the hexameter to the elegiac measure. \textit{Nervos} would most naturally refer to the strings of a lyre, and hence by an easy transfer, to the lines of poetry.

19, 20. The poet is now equipped with the meters of amatory verse, but has no love to celebrate in song. This passage is a striking illustration of the necessary agreement between form of expression and subject matter. If one is changed, the other must be also. By forcing upon the poet elegiac meters, Cupid turns him of necessity to sing of love.

22. in exitium facta meum: “formed for my undoing.”

24. canas: H. 589, II (503, 1); M. 382, 5; A. 320; G. 631, 2; B. 283; L. & M. 836.

27. “In the hexameter strain let my verses arise; let them sink in pentameter cadence."

This conception of the rise and fall of the lines in the elegiac distich, as well as a good illustration of the distich itself, is seen in the following lines of Coleridge:

\begin{quote}
In the hexameter rises the fountain’s silvery column;
In the pentameter aye falling in melody back.
\end{quote}

\textit{In quinque}: understand \textit{numeros}.

28. The poet’s surrender is complete, and he bids farewell to epic verse and themes.
30. per undenos pedes: observe with this the many ways in which Ovid has described the formation of the elegiac distich by the shortening of the second hexameter line: unum subripuisse pedem (line 4), attenuat nervos (line 18), numeris levioribus (line 19), and line 27 entire. This repetition of an idea under many forms of expression is a prominent characteristic of Ovid's style.

I, iii. — 1, 2. quae me, etc.: "may the maiden who lately ensnared me or love me or make me her lover for ever."

3, 4. He is shocked by the boldness of this double petition, and insists only upon its latter half.

audierit, etc.: "may Venus hear just that much of my prayer."

7-10. He acknowledges the obvious objections to his suit — he is neither high born nor wealthy. But these objections are offset by the personal characteristics of the poet and his devotion to his love described below.

11. vitis repertor: i.e. Bacchus.

12. hinc faciunt: hinc here refers to the objections above mentioned; and the statement is made in these words, for which there is no corresponding English idiom, that Phoebus, the Muses, Bacchus, and the rest serve to counterbalance these objections.

PAGE 25. — 17. dederint: "such years as the fates may have granted me."

18. "May it be mine to live with thee, and mid thy mourning die."

19. in carmina: "for my songs."

21-26. He holds before her the alluring prospect of immortality through song that Io, Leda, and Europa gained.

I, xv. — 1-6. Ovid here undoubtedly voices the criticisms that were commonly made upon him by members of his own family and by his friends. Compare the words of his father (page 12, lines 21, 22).

1, 2. "Why, carping spite, dost thou protest that my years are spent in sloth, and call my verse the work of sluggish powers?"

3. non me sequi, etc.: understand dicens.

4-6. War, the law, and statesmanship were the honorable professions, one of which each Roman youth of good birth was expected to follow. Ovid had himself been bred up to the law, but this he had deserted for poetry.

7, 8. His answer to these materialistic criticisms is that his is no mortal task. The object of his quest is lasting fame, — the glory of renown in verse in all the world and always.

OVID — 17
9–30. In this brilliant passage Ovid links the poets' existence with the duration of that which each has celebrated in his verse. It is clear that he has in mind the immortality in human remembrance to which Ennius refers in his epitaph:

Nemo me lacrimis decoret nec funera fictu
Fasit. Cur velino vivus per ora virum.

9, 10. "Homer shall live while Tenedos and Ida stand, While Simois rolls his whirling waters to the sea."

11. The fame of Hesiod (born at Ascra in Boeotia) is linked with the vine and corn, whose culture he describes in his Works and Days.

13. Compare this line with line 8 and note the variation in phraseology.

Battiades: an inhabitant of Cyrene, founded by Battus, i.e. Callimachus, a Greek poet who flourished in the third century B.C. Of his works there remain seventy-four Epigrams, six Hymns, and fragments of his Elegies and other works. One of these elegies is entitled Cypdipe, which is recalled by Ovid in his twentieth Heroid, and to which he refers in the Remedia Amoris (lines 381, 382):

Callimachi numeris non est dicendus Achilles.
Cydipe non est oris, Homere, tui.

Ovid follows Callimachus also in his poem entitled Ibis. His seeming familiarity with the Greek poet renders his criticism in line 14 of real value:

"He makes up by art what he lacks in native genius."

15. This line is too much abridged. The poet means that Sophocles shall live as long as tragedy endures; what he succeeds in saying is that Sophocles' own tragedies shall never perish.

16. Aratus, a Greek poet, contemporary with Callimachus. He was the author of an astronomical poem, treating of the heavenly bodies, their names, movements, etc. His fame is therefore linked by Ovid with the sun and moon.

17, 18. The fallax servus, durus pater, improba lena and meretrix blandex are constantly recurring characters in the comedies of the Greek Menander, whose works are not extant, but are imitated and translated by the Roman Terence. Ovid says elsewhere of Menander (Trist. 1, 369), that his plays all turn on love and that in his own time they were used as school books:

Fabula iucundi nulla est sine amore Menandri,
Et solet hic pueris virginibusque legi.
26. — 19. Ennius arte carens: this stunted mention, as well as dis-praise of the "Father of Roman Song," is hardly in accord with the popular estimate of that poet. This estimate is voiced by Horace (Epist. II, 1, 50), though he himself would not fully sustain it: —

Ennius et sapiens et fortis et alter Homerus, Ut critici dicunt.

That Ennius' lines were rough, many of the extant fragments abundantly testify; but, on the other hand, a contrary judgment can be equally well sustained by others of these fragments. Vergil himself drew freely from Ennius, often with very little change in the lines.

animosi Accius oris: Accius or Attius was a Roman tragic poet born 170 B.C., the year before the death of Ennius. Only fragments of his tragedies remain. He was held in high estimation among the Romans.
Horace (Ars Poetica, 259) speaks of the "nobiles trimetri" of Accius, the epithet being an echo of popular sentiment. Ovid no doubt intends to express in his epithet "animosi" the idea of strength and vigor of language and sublimity of thought.

Varro: i.e. Varro Atacinus, as distinguished from the great Varro, died about 37 B.C. He wrote a free translation into Latin verse of the Argonautics of the Greek Apollonius Rhodius, which was a history of the voyage of Jason and his companions in search of the Golden Fleece.
Notwithstanding Ovid's prediction, only the merest fragment of Varro's work remains.

duci: see references on parenti (Heroides, 69).

Lucretius: the great Roman poet, a contemporary of Cicero, author of De Rerum Natura, which is a presentation of the physical and ethical philosophy of Epicurus.

The three great works of Vergil are mentioned under words most suggestive of each. The first Eclogue begins Tityre, etc., and this character—may be taken as a typical shepherd; the Georgics open with the words: "Quid faciat lactas segetes," etc.; while the theme with which Vergil opens the Aeneid is "Arma virumque."

These works shall all endure while Rome remains the capitol of the world, the "eternal city." See Life, line 129, note. Horace similarly measures what to him was unending time (Odes, III, 30, 7): —

"My praise shall ever grow while priest with silent virgin train shall climb the capitol."

The torch, as well as the bow and arrows, was one of the traditional implements of Cupid; see page 80, line 461.

Tibulle: see note on The Life of Ovid (Tristia, IV, 10), line 51.
260 AMORES II [P. 26

31-42. Ovid is filled with a poetic ecstasy as he realizes and proclaims the triumph of the bard over power and wealth, the tongue of envy, time, and even death itself.
32. cedant: H. 559, 2; 453; M. 321, 2; A. 266; G. 263, 3; B. 275; L. & M. 713, 714.
37. myrtum: the myrtle was sacred to Venus.
39. 42. “Envy feeds upon the quick, but spares the dead, where his own praise keeps watch over every man according to his deeds.”
42. Compare with this the final passage of the Metamorphoses, and both with Horace, Car. III. 30, and consider whether Ovid had this ode in mind as he wrote.

II, vi. — 1. psittacus: there are many references in the Roman writers to the use of the parrot as well as of other birds as pets. This lament of the poet over the death of the parrot is no doubt suggested by the poem of Catullus (carmen 3) upon the death of his mistress’s pet sparrow. It is worth while to note, however, the wide difference between the simple and natural, tender though half playful treatment of Catullus with the florid, almost mock-heroic, and conventional style of Ovid. Statius (Silvae, II. vi) has a poem upon the same theme, though it is evident that he follows Ovid rather than Catullus.

imitatrix: i.e. as Statius has it, humanae linguae.

1-16. The announcement of the death and the summons to the funeral of all bird-kindred and friends.

2. exequias, etc.: “attend in thongs the funeral.” Exequias ire is a conventionalized expression, exequias being used as the limit of the motion in ire.

PAGE 27. — 3-6. All the features of the typical Roman funeral are to be present, of which the most notable were the hired mourners, women who beat their breasts, rent their cheeks, and tore their hair. The horn would suggest the musicians who headed the procession at the funeral of a man of importance.

7, 8. “As for the crime of the Thracian tyrant, which thou, Philomela, wallest, that complaint has expired by natural limitation.”

Ovid has related the story of Tereus, Procris, Philomela, and Itys at some length in the Metamorphoses (VI, 412-674). See analysis on page 139. This Thracian king did violence to Philomela, the sister of his wife Procris. The latter, together with her sister, in revenge slays Itys, the son of the king, and serves him up as a feast to his father. Tereus, on discovering the horrible nature of his repast, draws his sword and pursues the two sisters; whereupon he is changed into a lapwing, Philomela into a nightingale, and Procris into a swallow.
The complaints of Philomela, half nightingale, half maid, have yearned deeply into literature. Examples of this are in Shakespeare _Lucrèce, 1079_:

By this, lamenting Philomel had ended
The well-tuned warble of her nightly sorrow,
And solemn night with slow, sad gait descended
To ugly hell.

And in Matthew Arnold (Philomela):

O wanderer from a Grecian shore,
Still, after many years, in distant lands,
Still nourishing in thy bewilder'd brain
That wild, unquench’d, deep-sunken, old-world pain—
Say, will it never heal?

_omnes_: supply _dolete_ from the next line.

Ovid makes much of the supposed friendship between the parrot and the turtle dove, and does not fail to compare this friendship with that of Orestes and Pylades. Other famous friendships are those of Damon and Pythias, Scipio and Laelius, not to mention David and Jonathan.
Pylades was the faithful friend and cousin of Orestes, who shared his fortunes in his banishment, and helped him to avenge Agamemnon’s death upon Clytaemnestra and Aegisthus.

17-32. Regretful memories of the departed bird’s beauty, accomplishments, and excellence of disposition.

19. “What avails it that thou didst find favor with my mistress when I gave thee to her?”

21. _punicus_, _i.e._ by comparison with the brilliant colors of the feathers.

22. “With thy purple-red beak tinge’d with orange.”

25. It must have been pure spite on the part of Fate that took off this peaceful, harmless bird. It is the irony of Fate that quarrelsome quails thrive amid their quarrels.

18. “And perhaps for this very reason (inde, _i.e._ their quarrelsome disposition) large numbers of them reach old age.”

30. “The merest morsel was thy fill, and thy mouth, forever full of talk, had little room for food.”

_causa_ is plural by attraction to the number of _papaveria_, with which it is in apposition. Understand _erant esca_ with _papaveria_.

42. The bad and unworthy among birds and men live on and on, but the good die young.

“The jackdaw, harbinger of rainy weather.” The crow is the usual harbinger of rain.
Tum cornix plena pluviam vocat improba voce.

Aquae nisi fallit augur annosa cornix.

35. cornix invisa Minervae. The crow had once been the favorite bird of Minerva, but had incurred the displeasure of that goddess through being the bearer of unwelcome news. The raven, Apollo’s bird, had been changed from white to black for an offense of the same kind. Ovid tells both these stories in his Metamorphoses, II, 535–632.

36. The notion that the crow lived to a fabulous age was a general one. The nine generations mentioned here would amount to about three hundred years.

Page 28. — 39, 40. “Death loves a shining mark.”

41. Protesilaus, the grandson of Phylacus and native of Phylace, was the first Greek to fall in the Trojan War, —

> For a Dardan warrior slew Her (Laodamia’s) husband as he leaped upon the land, The foremost of the Achaian.

Homer does not mention the slayer of the hero, but Ovid says that it was Hector (Met. XII, 67). In Heroïdes, XIII, 93–98, Laodamia, writing to Protesilaus, warns him of the fated death that awaits the Greek who first sets foot on Trojan soil, and begs him to beware. This brave and noble Protesilaus was the pride of the Greeks, but the pestilent Thersites was their bane.

43–48. The death-bed scene reënacted: the fruitless prayers of the maiden, and the faithful bird’s farewell.

45. septima lux, the seventh day, i.e. of the bird’s illness.

46. The Parcae were the Fates personified as three sisters, whose names, according to Hesiod, were Clotho, Lachesis, and Atropos. They are represented as spinning, measuring, and cutting off the thread of human life. Spenser (F. Q. II, 48) gives a graphic picture of these dread sisters at work: —

> Sad Clotho held the rocke [distaff] the whiles the thrid
> By grievous Lachesis was spun with paine,
> That cruel Atropos efssoones undid,
> With cursed knife cutting the twist in twaine;
> Most wretched men, whose dayes depend on thrids so vaine!

The Parca mentioned in Ovid’s line is Clotho, whose empty spindle shows that the bird’s thread of life is all spun out.
An ideal scene in bird heaven.

Phoenix unica. The story of this fabulous bird has been often told. Perhaps the oldest account is that of Herodotus (II, 73). Later accounts are in substantial agreement with this. Ovid has himself described this bird at some length (Met. XV, 392–407): —

Una est, quae reparet seque ipsa reseminet, ales:
Assyrii phoenica vocant. Non fruge neque herbis
Sed turis lacrimis et suco vivit amomi.
Haec ubi quinque suae complevit saecula vitae,
Ilicet in ramis tremulaeque cacumine palmae
Unguibus et puro nidum sibi construit ore.
Quo simul ac casias et nardi lenis aristas
Quassaque cum fulva substravit cinnama murra,
Se super imponit finitique in odoribus aevum.
Inde ferunt, totidem qui vivere debeat annos,
Corporae de patrio parvum phoenica renasci,
Cum dedit huic aetas vires, onerique ferendo est,
Ponderibus nidi ramos levat arboris altae,
Fertque pius cunasque suas paturaque sepulcrum,
Perque leves auras Hyperionis urbe potitus
Ante fores sacras Hyperionis aede reponit.

55. ales Inmonia, i.e. the peacock.
59-62. His tomb and epitaph.
60. "Where a slender slab has an epitaph [compare "short and simple annals"] to match."
61. ex ipso septulcro, i.e. from the very fact that I am buried at all.
62. "My tongue was skilled to speak beyond the wont of birds."

Page 29. — II, xi. 1–4. "The first pine felled on Pelion’s heights to wondering ocean’s waters evil ways revealed, when, reckless, midst the clashing rocks, it bore the wondrous sheep of golden fleece."

Ovid, though very fond of the story of Jason and Medea, nowhere enlarges upon the voyage of the Argonauts in search of the Golden Fleece. In these four lines he gives the briefest possible summary. The impiety of that first voyage is everywhere dwelt upon by the poets. The concurrentes cautes were the Symplegades, two rocky islands in the Euxine Sea that clashed together on the attempt of any object to pass between them. This first ship, the Argo, did not carry the golden-fleeced ram, as Ovid narrates here. This animal proceeded by miraculous flight to Colchis, bearing Phrixus upon his back. It was the fleece alone that the Argo bore away from Colchis, but not by way of the Symplegades.
5, 6. If the first ship had been wrecked, there never would have been another, and my sweet-heart would not now be leaving me.

This vain regret for a remote first cause of present suffering is frequently expressed in the poets. An excellent example of this, and one which also traces misfortune back to the Argo, is the lament of Medea’s nurse in the tragedy of Medea Exsul, by Ennius, in which the nurse holds that if the timbers for the Argo had never been cut, Medea would never have come to her present misfortunes.

11–16. He attempts to dissuade her from the voyage on the ground that there is nothing worthy of her notice there.

12. “The restless sea is just one dark blue expanse.”

18. Scylla, Charybdis: these are the stock fabulous terrors of the sea, the names of two dangerous rocks in the passage between Sicily and Italy.

19. Ceraunia was a part of the dangerous rocky coast, the westernmost portion of Epirus. See Vergil (Aen. III, 506):

Provehimur pelago vicina Ceraunia iuxta,
Unde iter Italiam cursusque brevissimus undis.

The danger of this coast Horace describes (Odes, I, iii, 19):

Qui vidit mare turgidum et Infames scopulos Acroceraunia.

20. The “great and lesser Syrtes” were hidden sandbanks off the northern coast of Africa.

22. “No blast can harm the one who (merely) questions.”

26. “And sees destruction near as are the waves themselves”; i.e. the waves are destruction.

27. concussas is proleptically used. The waves will not be concussae until the action in exasperet has taken place.

29. sidera Ledae: the constellations of Castor and Pollux, regarded by sailors as their patron divinities. These gods were supposed to be manifest in the electric balls that are said at times to play around the masts of vessels after stormy weather. Horace enlarges upon this thought (Odes, I, xii, 25).

31, 32. fovisse, legissee, increpuisse: the tense of these infinitives is with reference to the time when this thought will come home to the girl.

33. at, etc.: the poet, finding his warnings vain, turns to prayers for her safety, and brightly pictures her return.

si vana, etc.: this fate of vain prayers, to be the sport of the winds, is one commonly expressed. See the previous selection, line 44.

PAGE 30.—34. Galatea: there is no special reason why Galatea’s presence should be invoked, except that she was a sea-nymph, herself accustomed to skim the waves in safety. See Vergil (Aen. IX, 102): —
NOTES

Qualis Nereia Doto
Et Galatea secant spumantem pectore pontum.

36. Nereidesque: que is redundant here, as frequently. Compare the common phrase pater demqve hominumque.

37. nostri: H. 451 (399, I, 2); M. 226, 1; A. 218, a; G. 374; B. 204, 1; L. & M. 573.

37-42. The god of the sea, the winds, the waves, the girl herself, are to assist in speeding the homeward bound vessel.

39. "Then may mighty Nereus incline the sea toward these shores."

41. Zephyri: if, as is natural to suppose, Corinna was sailing toward Greece, the Zephyrs, literally interpreted, would not bring her home. We are to understand, therefore, merely gentle breezes as opposed to storm blasts.

42. "Do thou thyself lay eager hands upon the swelling sails." The pretty picture is here presented of the girl, in her eagerness to reach home, pressing upon the already swelling sails, as if to add her weight to the strength of the wind. It is this eagerness, perhaps, that the poet most loves to picture, rather than its possible — or impossible — physical effect.

Joyous anticipation and picture of her return.

44. illa: understand puppis.

45. "And I shall catch thee in my arms and wildly kiss thee."

47, 48. In his eager haste he will not wait for preparations for a formal banquet, but will improvise table and dining couches of sand for an impromptu banquet on the shore.

48. "And any mound you please shall take a table’s place."

49. multa: this is expanded by two different clauses, — sit ut obruta navis (line 50), and te extimuisse (line 52).

50. ut = "how that," introducing indirect question.

53. sint: understand ut.

54. "Why should I not myself invite my own prayers’ fulfillment" (and gladly believe any tale of deliverance you choose to tell)?

III, vi. — 1, 2. "O stream, thy muddy banks thick set with reeds, I’m hastening to my mistress: stop thy waves awhile. Thou hast no bridge nor hollow skiff which, even oarless, still by cordage stretched across, might bear me over."

4. vehat: H. 591, 1 (503, 1); M. 383; A. 320, a; G. 631, 2; B. 283, 1; L. & M. 838.

PAGE 31. — 11, 12. si non datur, etc.: "if I am not allowed in any way to set foot on the further bank."

13, 14. The reference is to Perseus, the son of Danaë, who was equipped with winged sandals, and carried in his hand the Medusa head with its snaky locks, 15, 16. For explanation of references in this line see epitome of story of Triptolemus and the car of Ceres, as told in Metamorphoses, V, 642-661, page 132.

17, 18. "But I am voicing the monstrous lies of ancient bards; no time has ever produced these wonders, nor ever will produce them."

Considering Ovid's especial fondness for these mythical tales, and the verisimilitude with which he tells them everywhere, this is a remarkable admission for him to make. We should hardly expect him to cheapen his own wares. The estimate, however, in which these tales were held generally is well voiced by the passage. The same contempt is expressed by Cicero in Tusculan Disputations, I, 6. The disputant has been recalling the traditional terrors of Hades, and the following dialogue ensues: M. Haec fortasse metuis et idcirco mortem censes esse sempiternum malum. A. Adeone me delirare censes, ut ista esse credam? M. An tu haec non credis? A. Minime vero. Again, § 48, he says: Quae est anus tam delira quae timeat ista?

20. "(So may you go on forever!) flow within bounds." This is a curious form of adjuration, in which a favor is asked, as it were, in the name of that which the grantor of the favor would most desire. Other cases in point are:

Sic tua Cyreneas fugiant examina taxos,
Sic cytiso pastae distendant ubera vaccae,
Incipe, si quid habes. — Vergil, Ecl. IX, 30.

Sic tibi, cum fluctus subterlabere Sicanos,
Doris amara suam non internisceat undam:

"So may the goddess of Cyprus, the brothers of Helen, bright gleaming stars, and the father of winds guide and protect thy course, O ship, (on this condition), that thou return Vergil in safety to his journey's end." — Horace, Odes, I, iii, 1.

21. "O boisterous stream, believe me, thou wilt incur unbearable odium."

invidiae: H. 447 (401); M. 217, 2; A. 214, e; G. 366; B. 203, 5; L. & M. 556.

23. deberent: the obligation is doubly expressed — by the verb itself and by its mode. It is a past as well as a present obligation, since the poet proceeds to treat the matter historically.

87. "What have I to do with thee, mad stream?"

89. quid, si flueres: "what and if thou wert to flow?" etc.

91–96. This is no true river, with permanent tributaries and fountain head, but a nameless chance product of rains and melting snows. This lack of sustained life leads to the extremes of the muddy torrent and the dried-up rill.
PAGE 32. — 96. pulverulentus: to address a river thus is almost paradoxical; it is a strong way of saying that in the dry season there is no river there at all.

97, 98. Rhetorical questions. No traveler at such a time could slake his thirst by thy waters; no one in gratitude has ever blessed thee with the river's blessing — "flow on forever." With this form of blessing compare a similar expression in line 20.

100. damna: i.e. my disappointment in that I cannot cross and continue my journey.

101-104. The poet expresses extreme disgust that he should have mentioned the names of noble streams in such a presence. It is a case of "pearls before swine."

102. "To this stream, — think of it! — I, fool that I was, was telling the tales of rivers' loves!"

103. nescio quem hunc spectans: "gazing upon this mere nobody."

III, xv. — 1. tenerorum Amorum: a frequent phrase, designating the objects of amatory verse. See Life of Ovid, line 1.

2. "Here are my elegies rounding their final goal." The figure is from the race course, where the chariot in turning just grazes the goal post (meta) set up to mark the course. The representation of life, or a period of life, under the figure of a race course is a poetical commonplace.

3. alumnus: this, with heres (line 5) and factus eques (line 6) is to be construed with ego, the subject of compossi.

4. "And never have my loves disgraced me." Compare similar statement in Life of Ovid, lines 67, 68.

5, 6. See also Life, lines 7, 8, and note.

7. The following epitaph, according to Suetonius, was placed upon the tomb of Vergil at Naples:

```
Mantua me genuit, Calabri rapuere, tenet nunc Parthenope; cecini pascua, rura, duces.
```

9, 10. "Which its desire for liberty had forced to honorable arms, when Rome, anxious (for her power) feared the allied bands." The reference is to the social war, or the struggle of the Italian allies for Roman citizenship. Among these allies were the Pelignians. The war ended in 90 B.C. with a successful issue for the allies.

13. dicat: H. 552 (485); M. 327; A. 311, 2; G. 257, 2; B. 280, 1; L. & M. 717.

13, 14. "Ye walls, which could produce so great a poet, however small you are, I call you great."
15. For explanation of references in this line see epitome of story of Tyrrhenianus and the ear of Ceres, as told in Metamorphoses, V, 642-645, p. 152.

17. A Titus was writing the monstrous lies of ancient bards; no time has ever produced these wonders, nor ever will produce them.”

Considering Juvenal’s especial fondness for these mythical tales, and the verisimilitude with which he tells them everywhere, this is a remarkable adaption for him to make. We should hardly expect him to cheaper his own wares. The estimate, however, in which these tales were held generally is well voiced by the passage. The same contact is expressed by Cicero in Tusculan Disputations, I, 6. The disputant has been reciting the traditional terrors of Hades, and the following dialogue ensues: M. Haec fortasse metu et idcirco morte tenes casae semperturn malum. A. Adeone me delirare censes, x ista casae crearem? M. An tu haec non credis? A. Minime vero.
Agaia, § 48, he says: Quae est annus tam delira quae timeat ista?

20. “See ye no go on forever!) flow within bounds.” This is a curious form of adoration, in which a favor is asked, as it were, in the name of that which the granter of the favor would most desire. Other cases in point are:

Sic tua Cyrenae fugiant examina taxos,
Sic crasso pastae distendant ubera vaccae.
Incipe, si quid habes. — Vergil, Ec. IX, 30.

Sic tibi, cum flectus subterlabere Sicanos,
Doris amara suam non intermisceat undam:
Incipe.
— Ec. X, 4.

So may the goddess of Cyprus, the brothers of Helen, bright stars, and the father of winds guide and protect thy (on this condition), that thou return Vergil in safety to end.” — Horace, Odes, I, iii, 1.

21. “O boisterous stream, believe me, thou wilt incur unbear-invidiae: H. 447 (401); M. 217, 2; A. 214, 5; G. 306.
M. 556.

23. deberent: the obligation is doubly expressed — by the verb its mode. It is a past as well as a present obligation.
proceeds to treat the matter historically.

87. “What have I to do with this?”
89. quid, si fueras?
AMORES III

PAGE 33. — 15. Amathusia: Venus is so called from Amathus, a city of her favorite Cyprus.

17. "Horned Bacchus has sounded with heavier thyrsus." Bacchus is sometimes represented with horns as symbolic of natural power. See Tibullus (II, i, 3): —

Bacche, veni, dulcisque tuis e cornibus uva Pendeat.

And Propertius, in the ode in which he declares his intention of becoming a votary of Bacchus (IV, 16, 19), says: —

Quod superest vitae per te et tua cornua vivam, Virtutisque tuae, Bacche, poeta ferar.

Bacchus was sometimes represented upon the stage with horns. See Euripides, Bacchanals, 920: —

Penetheus (to Dionysus):

"Thou as a bull seemest to go before me,
And horns have grown upon thine head. Art thou
A beast indeed? Thou seem'st a very bull."

In Horace (Odes, II, xix, 29) Bacchus is described as adorned with a golden horn: —

Tv. vidit insons Cerberus aureo Cornu decorum.

But this is probably in reference to the horn of wine carried by the god to propitiate monsters in Hades.

For the horn as an emblem of power, compare the frequent language of Scripture; e.g. "All the horns of the wicked also will I cut off; but the horns of the righteous shall be exalted" (Ps. 75:10).

18. I.e. "I must undertake a greater work." The poet evidently has in mind the Fasti and Metamorphoses.

20. "Work destined to live on, surviving, after I am dead." Upon the importance which Ovid himself attached to the Amores see Life of Ovid, line 1, note.

ARS AMATORIA

The composition of this work may be dated by the allusion in I, 171, to a naumachia or sham sea fight presented by Augustus in 2 B.C.: —

Quid, modo cum bellis navalis imagine Caesar
Persidas induxit Ciceronianus ratea?
PAGE 34. — I, 3, 4. "By art—and sails and oars, swift ships are moved, by art, quick flying chariots: by art must Love be guided." The poet would emphasize that which forms the theme of his poem—the art to which he has reduced what was hitherto but an untrained impulse of love.

5. Automedon was the famous charioteer of Achilles, master of his art. He is mentioned by Vergil in Aeneid, II, 477.

6. Tiphys was famous as the skillful pilot of the Argo.

7, 8. And Ovid is to combine the skill of both, as charioteer and pilot of the car and bark of Love.

95. saltusque: see Amores, II, xi, 36, note.

96. thyma summa: "the tops of the thyme."

97. cultissima femina is here used in the sense of cultissima quaeque femina, "all the fine ladies."

98. "Their numbers often have delayed my choice."

101–126. The poet seizes this opportunity to tell the well-known story of the ruse of Romulus and the rape of the Sabines.

101. "Thou didst make, O Romulus, the first games a place of confusion and alarm."

PAGE 35. — 103–108. This description of the primitive theater is, we may be sure, in conscious contrast to the theater that Ovid knew, with its vela or awnings, stretched over as a protection to the spectators from the sun and rain; its rich marble structure; its highly decorated stage and elaborate stage setting.

106. scaena: does this mean that the trees in their natural position formed a sylvan background to the whole rural scene? or is scaena to be taken in its more technical sense of "stage setting," "background," or "scenery" for the stage? Vergil, in his picture of the home of the nymphs (Aen. I, 164), thinks of the bay as a theater, and the grove of trees at its inner extremity as a scaena or background:——

Tum silvis scaena coruscis
Desuper horrentique atrum nemus imminet umbra.

107. in gradibus de caespite factis: "on seats made of turf," i.e. they sat upon the sloping, turf-covered hillside.

108. "Their shaggy locks encircled by a wreath of any sort."

109. quisque splitts the subject of notant into its component parts.

112. ter pede: "in a dance of triple measure." This rude dance is described by Horace in his ode on the rustic festival of Faunus (Odes, III, xviii, 15):——

Gaudet invisam pepulisse fossor
Ter pede terram.
Ovid is fond of detailed analysis of action. Another striking example of this is in the description of the destruction of the children of Niobe, Metamorphoses, VI, 218–312.

And fear itself enhanced the loveliness of many.

---

PAGE 36. — III, 685, 686. The story of the death of Procris has been often told, and with variation of details. Before Ovid, Homer and Vergil had both made brief mention of Procris in Hades among other heroes whose love had come to a tragic end. The Greek Apollodorus had told her story. After Ovid’s time Pausanias told the same story. Ovid himself has told the story twice, first in the present passage, and again with much greater elaboration in Metamorphoses, VII, 661–862. The latter version is put into the mouth of Cephalus himself. For its connection in the chain of story, see analysis on page 150.

693. Zephyris auraque: Ovid shows great art in giving the reader the necessary clew at the outset to the real meaning of aura, which is the word on which the story turns. By coupling it with Zephyri, he shows us at once that it is a breeze and not a nymph. It is this same coupling of the two words in line 728 that undeceives Procris. In the second telling Ovid omits this fine touch, and it is necessary for Cephalus to explain in set terms to his dying wife.

697. relevæs: H. 590 (497, 1); M. 382, 3; A. 317, 2; G. 630; B. 282, 2; L. & M. 835.

699. male sedulus: “over officious.”

700. memoris ore: a striking phrase, because the power of memory is transferred from the brain to the lips. The gossip repeated with “retentive lips” what he had heard.

703–706. With all his city-bred tastes, Ovid has a genuine artist’s love for the country, and draws some of his most effective descriptions and figures from nature. It must be admitted, however, that the present comparison is rather Cyclopean in its realism:—“like the lingering frost-bitten leaves of the vine after the grapes have been gathered, and the ripe quinces that curve their branches down, and cherries not yet ripe for human food.” Compare Met. XIII, 789 and following.

708. indignas: this word is used here, as often, when applied to an inanimate object, in the sense of “unworthy or undeserving such treatment.”

711. perventum: impersonal, supply est.

713. “What were thy feelings, then, O Procris, when thus, almost beside thyself, thou didst lie in waiting.”

715. iam, iam: the dramatic repetition of iam, a device often employed by the poets to express the imminence of the act.
Aura, according to regular construction, would be Appam, construed as subject of venturum (esse), the object of patbas.

6. probræ: adjective used as substantive, nominative, plural. Supply esse with videnda.

7. vellex: this is an extension of the subjunctive use regularly found in the first person only. H. 556 (486, I); A. 311, b; G. 258; B. 280, 2, a; L. & M. 720.

GE 37.—719, 720. “To influence her belief there is the place, the name, and the informing, and the further fact that a lover always believes his fears.”

3, 724. The same thought — the arrival of the hour of noon — is twice expressed in poetical repetition in these lines. Examples of this parallelism of thought, which forms the basis of Hebrew poetry, are very frequent in the Latin poets.

15. esse always introduces a new actor upon the scene, and this with some abruptness and promise of interesting developments. It corresponds to the English “But see!” “See there!”

16. This line beautifully illustrates the interlocking arrangement of nouns and adjectives. The student should watch the verses for variations upon this arrangement.

See note on line 693.

5, 736. The poet himself, as if carried away by his interest in the scene, cries out to avert the disaster. So also when the sailors are about to murder Arion. See page 52, lines 101, 102. The value of this rhetorical device can readily be seen.

1. hoc: i.e. the fact mentioned in nulla paetice laesa. “This thought will make thee rest lightly upon me, O earth, when I am laid in the grave.”

746. “Her spirit takes its leave, and, slipping gently from the breast that had too heedless been, is caught up by her grieving husband’s lips.”

The reference is to the Roman custom in accordance with which the nearest relative would catch the last breath of the dying one in his own mouth. Following are some other references to this custom:

Filiorum suorum supremum spiritum ore excipere liceret.

—Cicero, in Verrem.

Membra complecti ultima,
O nate, liceat; spiritus fugiens meo Legatur ore.

—Seneca, Hercules Oetaeus, 1341.

Date vulnera lymphis
Abluam, et, extremus si quis super halitus errat, Ore legam.

—Vergil, Aeneid, IV, 683.
REMEDIA AMORIS

Impositaque manu vulnus foveat, oraque ad ora Admovet atque animae fugiendi obsistere tentat.

— Ovid, Metamorphoses, XII, 424.

This custom may point either toward the perpetuation of the dying in the relative who receives his final breath, or merely to the natural desire to prevent the exit of the departing breath. The last passage quoted above plainly expresses this thought.

REMEDIA AMORIS

Page 38. — 3. parce dammare: a poetic variation on noli dammare. Examples of this construction are frequent in Horace: fuge quaerere, ne para dare, mitte sectari, remittas quaerere, omite mirari, etc.

sceleris: H. 456 (409, II); M. 228; A. 220; G. 378; B. 208, 2; L. & M. 582.

4. “Me who have so often under thy leadership borne the standard intrusted to my care.”

5, 6. Homer, in his fifth book of the Iliad, tells how Venus rescued Aeneas from death at the hands of Diomed, the son of Tydeus; how Diomed wounded the goddess with his spear, and how she was carried back to heaven in the chariot of Mars.

9, 10. The reference is to the Ars Amatoria, which is here shown to be prior in composition to the present work. Line 4 above probably refers to the Ars, though it may easily include the Amores.

10. “And that (i.e. love) which once was mere blind impulse, is now reduced to law.”

13, 14. ardet is coordinate with amat, and the conclusion of both is in gaudeat and naviget.

gaudeat: II. 559, 2 (483); M. 321, 2; A. 266; G. 263, 3; B. 275, 1; L. & M. 713.

15. “But if any one is struggling under the sway of an unworthy love.”

74. The intervening steps in the natural growth from the “green shoot” to the “sturdy stalk” are poetically described by Cicero (De Senectute, 51).

Page 39. — 87, 88. summa tellure: “the surface of the earth,” is in contrast with in immensus, “deep down (below the surface).”

90–94. The doctor amoris is full of wise saws and the proverbial expressions of his art.

95. verba dat: a common expression, “cheats,” “deceives.”

96. “The nearest (earliest) chance for freedom is the best.” The vindicta was the rod with which a slave was touched in the ceremony of manumission. Its use here in connection with the slave of love is very apropos.
This is a truism of nature and of ethics. Size and strength are the result of gradual growth through the lapse of time.

If thou hadst known at the start to how great a sin thy course was leading, a tree's rough bark, O Myrrha, would not now conceal thy face.” The story of the change of Myrrha into a myrrh tree is told in the tenth book of Metamorphoses.

---

4. reddat: H. 590 (497, 1); M. 382, 3; A. 317, 2; G. 630; B. 282, 2; L. & M. 835.

3840. — 185, 186. “What, when the bees flee the smoke that’s made beneath (their hives), that the honeycombs may be removed and relieve the bending withes.”

ut relevant is a clause of purpose, but it is not the purpose of the subject of the main verb, fugiunt, but of the agent of suppositos.

vimina curva: are the shelves or partitions of osiers within the hives on which the combs are built. The removal of the honeycombs would relieve the overweighted withes.

The reference is to the ancient custom of placing the grapes in large vats and treading out the juice or “must” with the bare feet.

192. These lines mention the three processes in harvesting grain—the reaping with the sickle (desectas), the binding into sheaves (adligat herbas), and the gleaning of the scattered stalks of grain.

herbas: the poet does not here make the distinction between herba and segetes which he draws in line 84 of this poem.

196. “Then there is grafting: make one branch adopt another, and let the tree stand covered o’er with borrowed foliage.”

The process of grafting always excites admiration and poetic fancy.

Cicero says of it (De Senectute, 54): Nec conditiones modo delectant sed etiam insitiones, quibus nihil invenit agricultura solliertius.

haec voluptus: “pleasure of this sort.”

leporem pronom: see vocabulary under the word pronom.

varia formidine: compare Metamorphoses, XV, 475, and note.

---

-258. These are the often stated wonders which professors of magic arts claimed to be able to perform—to call spirits from the tomb, to cause the earth to yawn asunder, to transfer crops from field to field, dim the sun’s light, turn rivers back upon their course, wrest the moon from the sky, and other things equally wonderful. Compare Vergil (Aeneid, IV, 487-491):

Haec se carminibus promittit solvere mentes,
Quas velit, ast allis duras immittere curas;

Ovid — 18
PAGE 41. — 259. recantatas is partly adverbial in its force: "no heart shall lay aside their cares through the force of charms."

61, 262. Medea (the Colchian witch) is represented at the opening of Metamorphoses, VII, as struggling between filial devotion and her newborn love for Jason—a love which in the end she is unable to resist.

63–288. Circe was the daughter of the Sun and of the sea-nymph Pem, from whom she inherited her magic powers. Homer has given a length the story of Ulysses and Circe in the tenth book of the Odyssey, but he describes no such attempt on the part of the goddess to retain Ulysses, and no such struggle with her own love as is here represented.

62. "According to whose standard my muse is wanton."

63. placeam: II. 587 (513, 1); M. 376; A. 314; G. 573; B. 310, II; L. & M. 920.

64. "Let any and every man say what he will against my work."

395, 396. Ovid here bases his fame upon his love poetry. And even at the end of his life, when his two great poems, the Fasti and Metamorphoses were completed, he still introduces himself to posterity merely as tenerorum lusor amorum (Tristia, IV, 10, 1).

397, 398. "So far I answer spite: now bard, more firmly grasp the reins and speed thee on thy way."

TRAGEDY

PAGE 42. — Amores, II, xviii, 11, 12. Compare with this passage Amores I, 1 (page 23), in which the poet refers to a struggle of the same kind with the same outcome.

12. I.e.: he betakes himself again to amatory verse.

13. sceptra: one of the accompaniments of Tragedy.

tamen: this shows that, notwithstanding his failure to keep to the implied in sumptis ab armis of line 11, he did accomplish something tangible in tragedy. This something must have been his lost tragedy of Medea, the only one from Ovid’s pen of which we have knowledge. The Medea must therefore have been written before the present poems.

15. pallam, cothurnos: two other accompaniments of Tragedy.

16. "The scepter which my hand assumed and so quickly lost again."
Amores, III, i. The obvious inference from this whole poem is that it was written before Ovid had given himself to the work of Tragedy, for it represents the two divinities, Elegia and Tragoedia, contending for his devotion, and ends by a request to Tragedy that she wait awhile before claiming him, a request which she grants.

6. The poet was in a receptive mood, seeking a theme for song. The moment was therefore an opportune one for the advent of the claimants for his attention.

moveret: see references to reddat, Rem. Am. 174, note.

Page 43.—11. The line pictures the vehemence that would “tear a passion to tatters,” and the traditional stage strut of the tragedian.

12. comae: understand iacebant. “Her hair hung low upon her frowning brow, her palla swept the ground.”

14. Lydus cothurnus: Micyllus commenting upon this passage says: Lydium pro Hetrusco hic accipit Commentator, quasi Graeci ab Hetruscis tragœdiam et eius ornatum accepiissent. Ego vero proprie dictum Lydibus accipere quod multa, quae ad rem ludicram pertinrent, a Lydis inventa fuere.

It should be added that the ancients considered the Etruscans to be of Lydian origin.

17. 18. “Thou art the common talk at the drinking bouts and street corners.”

23. tempus erat: an emphatic way of saying “it is time,” i.e. “it is high time.” Compare Horace (Odes, I, xxxvii, 4): —

Nunc Salariibus
Ornare pulvinar deorum Tempus erat dapibus, sodales.

thyrso gravlore: it is not the intention of Tragedy to suggest that Ovid come under the sway of Bacchus, whose symbol the thyrus is. She means simply that he must be swayed by a mightier, more exalted impulse than love. For this more general meaning of thyrus see Lucretius I, 923: —

Sed acri
Percussit thyrso laudis spes magna meum cor.

25. “Thou art dwarfing thy powers by the stuff thou writest of.”

28. per numeros suos: see Life of Ovid, lines 25, 26.

29. habeam: H. 558 (483); M. 325; A. 267; G. 260; B. 279, 1; L. & M. 710.

30. implebit is the future indicative of mild command. See references to feres, Heroides, X, 150 note.

35, 36. “Why with labored phrases, O soulful Tragedy, dost thou o’erwhelm me? Canst never be else than ponderous?”

37. 38. I.e. in her above address, Tragedy has used the elegiac measure.
39. "As for me, I should not bring your lofty strains into comparison with mine." The proper meter of tragedy was the heroic measure, or iambic senarius.

40. "(The uses of) your princely dwelling overwhelm my humble doors;" i.e. "my humble measures are but a slender and insufficient instrument through which to convey your lofty thoughts."

Page 44. — 43, 44. "And yet I have acquired greater powers than thou, simply by bearing much that thy haughty spirit would not endure." Elegeia has been always willing to "stoop to conquer."

45–52. The personification is still kept up here, although these lines would apply equally well to a person and to poems of love.

53–58. In these lines the personification is entirely dropped, except that the first person is still used. But the speaker is no longer Elegeia, nor even the amatory poem, but rather the paper on which the latter is written. Each couplet in this passage describes some ruse, either on the part of the writer to get his poetic billet-doux into his mistress' hands undiscovered, or on the part of the latter herself to prevent the detection of the note by her duenna.

55. abiret: II. 603, II. 2 (519, II. 2); M. 354; A. 328; G. 572; B. 293; L. & M. 921.

57. natali: understand die.

at: in a sense coördinates rumpit and mersat with mittis, but only loosely so: "what of this, that when thou dost send me as a gift upon her birthday, she, on the other hand," etc.

59, 60. Ovid drew his first poetic inspiration from love, and through his amatory verse gained that reputation as a poet which causes Tragedy to seek his services.

61–68. Ovid's reply expresses reverence to both the goddesses and desire to please both. Inasmuch, however, as tragedy is a grander and more enduring work, he begs the postponement of this work for a season.

61, 62. "By both your divinities I beg that he who reverences you both may receive your words into empty ears," i.e. without decision for the moment in favor of either.

64. It is as if his lips had already been touched with the finger of inspiration, and the heroic strains of tragedy were pressing for utterance.

69, 70. He will indulge in amatory verse now; tragedy is soon to follow.

Ovid in later life, writing from his banishment (Tristia, II, 553), calls attention to tragedy among the more serious works of his pen:—

Et dedimus tragicis scriptum regale cothurnis, Quaeque gravis debet verba cothurnus habet.
FASTI

Fasti (understand dies) are primarily court-days, on which the courts could held and judgment pronounced. By a transfer the word comes to mean a or calendar of all the days in the year, with the particular event connected h the several days, the festivals falling thereon, etc.

GE 46. — I, 1, 2. Ovid states the design and scope of his poem: "Of times and seasons, each with its cause, arranged throughout the Roman year, and constellations that set beneath the earth and rise again, I'll sing."

Caesar Germanicus: as has been stated on page 46, this first book was revised and rededicated to Germanicus. Ovid, writing to Augustus from exile (Tristia, II, 549-552), tells how he had written twelve books of Fasti, dedicated to Augustus himself, and how the work had been broken off by his exile:

Sex ego Fastorum scripsi totidemque libelllos,
Cumque suo finem mense volumen habet,
Idque tuo nuper scriptum sub nomine, Caesar,
Et tibi sacratum sors mea rupit opus.

It is a favorite device of Ovid to compare his work to a ship. See II, 3; IV, 18. Similarly, in I, 25, the poet's work is likened to a chariot drawn by horses; and see IV, 10, also Remedia Amoris, I, 394, 397.

Officio huic devoto is to be construed with ades. "And, not disdaining even meager praise, graciously accord, of thy divine favor, a hearing to this work which is here presented as an offering to thee." This base spirit of sycophancy pervades and spoils the whole passage.

Sacra annalibus eruta priscis: so in IV, 11. Ovid here gives in part the sources of his information. The annales were, in the first place, the public chronicles, kept from ancient times by the Pontifex Maximus. There were also other writers of annals and antiquarians from whose works Ovid could draw, such as M. Fulvius Nobilior, Quintus Ennius, M. Porcius Cato, and M. Terentius Varro. The works of Livy would also furnish much valuable material. As a model for his work Ovid had the 'Atra or "Causes" of Callimachus, a Latin translation of which was known to him. It may be that the title of this work is reflected in Tempora cum causis in line 1 above.

Fasti domestica vobis: the fashion of commemorating the deeds of the ruling families by inscriptions in public buildings and by establishing holidays in their honor became more and more in vogue in the days of the empire. Compare our national holiday on the birthday of Washington. Horace refers to the custom of honoring both by tituli (public inscriptions) and fasti (Odes, IV, xiv, 1): —
Quae cura patrum quaeve Quiritium
Plenis honorum muneribus tuas,
Auguste, virtutes in aevum
Per titulos memoresque fastos Aeternet?

Page 47. — 10. pater, avus: i.e. his adoptive father (Tiberius), and grandfather (Augustus).

11, 12. "The honors which they enjoy marking red-letter days in our calendar, thou too with Drusus shalt obtain."

12. Drusus, the younger, was the son of Tiberius, and hence the adoptive brother of Germanicus. He died of poison administered through the plots of the imperial favorite Sejanus.

15. conanti: supply mihi.

ire: i.e. to enumerate. Compare II, 16, ingredimur. In both passages the poet pictures a solemn procession passing in review the hero's glorious deeds, and honors that have been bestowed for these. The whole passage (II, 9–16), wherein the poet disclaims the power or intention to bear the arms of the soldier, but offers rather the higher service of the bard, parallels, though in greater detail, I, 13–15. The former is the original passage addressed to Augustus, while the latter, addressed to Germanicus, is the product of the revision of Book I.

17. da is a common elegiac construction for si dabis.

steteris is the conclusion of this condition.

19, 20. "My book is started on its way to undergo the criticism of the learned prince, as if sent to be read by the Clarian god himself."

21, 22. quae sit facundia culti oris is the object of sensimus, and facundia (understood) is the subject of tulit. The reference is to the exercise of the prince as an advocate in defense of his clients.

23, 24. Though famed chiefly as a soldier, Germanicus devoted himself also to literary pursuits, and produced two Greek comedies, some epigrams, and a translation of Aratus into Latin verse. A portion of the latter only is extant.

26. annus: i.e. "my year of song," "my poem on the year."

63. ecce is generally used to call attention to some new actor whose appearance on the stage causes some surprise. Ovid has just been discussing fasti and nefasti dies, and, having finished his introductory matter, comes now to the first month of his year.

"But see, Germanicus, here is Janus himself, the leader in my song, and he wishes you a glad new year."

67. ducibus: i.e. the imperial family.
69. tuis is to be joined both to patribus and populo. "To the fathers and the Roman people who are thine."

70. resera: Janus as the god of doors is represented with a key. See line 99.

71. linguis animisque favete! This is the ore favete omnes of Vergil, and the favete linguis of Horace. Ovid goes a little deeper, in that he appeals to the thought as well as the word. It is the common appeal of the priest for a sacred silence lest some ill-omened word should escape the lips.

73. 74. Let the strife of the courts, the wranglings of the forum, and din of trade all cease to-day.

75–78. A beautiful picture is given of the scene, as the perfumed clouds of incense rise from the altars, and the gilded temples gleam with the reflections of the altar fires.

76. spica Cilicia: i.e. the saffron crocus, the best of which came from Cilicia in Asia Minor. It was used by the Romans as a condiment and as a perfume diluted in water or wine. Ovid describes it here as thrown on the fire. And since it burns with a crackling noise (sonet) it is a good omen.

Page 48. — 79, 80. The attention is next attracted to the consuls elect, who in pure white garments (vestibus intactis) take their way up the Capitoline Hill (poetically referred to as Tarpeias arces, which formed a part of the hill), while the people, themselves in festal attire of white, press around.

81, 82. All is new (novi) because the newly elected officials are inaugurated to-day.

ebur: the curule chair of ivory, on which the "curule officers," consuls, praetors and curule aediles, were allowed to sit.

84. herba Faliscia: "Faliscan pastureage," i.e. of Falerii, the capital of the ancient Faliscans. This was near the region of the River Clitumnus in Umbria, a place famous for its white herds of cattle, which were reserved as victims for sacrifice. See Vergil (Georgics, II, 146).

85. arce sua: i.e. his place of observation on the vault of heaven.

86. tuatur: see references to videant, Heroides, X, 18.

88. rerum: compare H. 451, 3 (399, II); M. 226, 2; A. 218, 6; G. 375, B. 204, 1, a; L. & M. 573, 574.

89. tamen is resumptive, as opposed to the digression in the preceding lines. "But, to resume my story."

90. "For Greece has no divinity corresponding to thee." Nearly all the Roman gods have corresponding deities in the theogony of Greece. But not so Janus.
89-93. There are two distinct questions here: (1) Who are you? (2) Why have you this double form?

100. ore priore: "with his front mouth," the one nearest me.
101. vates operose dierum: i.e. as author of the Fasti, a poem of days.
103. Chaos: Ovid does not connect this name etymologically with Ianus, but it has been supposed by some that Ianus is a corruption of Chaos. A second derivation of Ianus is by connection with Dianus, which would be a masculine parallel to Diana. In Varro the form Iana does occur for Diana, the moon-goddess. A similar loss of an initial D before i is seen by comparing Jovis with Vediovis (cf. Fast. III, 457). Ovid's own derivation is from the √i. See lines 126, 127. This has been generally accepted as the popular etymology, but the second derivation given above is more probably correct.

105, 106. The ancients conceived of all matter as formed from the four primal elements, earth, water, air, and fire.
107, 108. "As soon as this mass broke up through the strife of its component elements, and in its freed state sought new location (for its parts);" i.e. the severed elements sought new positions.
107-110. In his introduction to the Metamorphoses Ovid gives an extended account of the war of these elements and their readjustment in the orderly universe.

109. petit is perfect, = petuit.

Page 49 — 110. medio solo: "in the central region," i.e. of the great sphere which is conceived of as the original form of shapeless chaos. The globe is indeed a symmetrical form, but in Ovid's conception (see line 111) globus and sine imagine moles are synonymous.

113. confusae, etc.: "a slight indication of my once shapeless condition.”
113, 114. I.e. while once in his form all sides were alike, now at least two sides are the same.
114. in me shows that he is speaking of his own form, front and back, and not of objects in front and behind.
120. cardinis: i.e. of the sphere of the created universe.

121-124. The conception here is that Janus holds both Peace and War confined in his temple, either of which he may release upon the land at will. A different explanation is offered in lines 279-281.

121, 122. "When it is my pleasure to send Peace forth among the quiet haunts of men, she holds free course along unbroken ways.”
placidia is proleptic. The tecta are placida as a result of the advent of peace.

123. miscibitur is used instead the less vivid misceatur, which would be the more natural conclusion of ni teneant.
127. inde: i.e. from ianua implied in foribus caeli, and from it and redit, which all contain the √i. See line 103, note.

128. libum: there was a kind of cake offered to Janus called ianual.
farra mixta sale: more frequently called mola salsa, was the sacred salted meal which, sprinkled on the head of the victim, devoted him to the sacrifice. In II, 24, we find torrida cum mica (salis) farra.

129, 130. Patulcius, Clusius: i.e. "the Opener" (pateo), and "the Closer" (cludo).

131, 132. "The reason is that the people of that rude ancient time desired by the use of these names alternately to call attention to my opposite functions which I exercise in turn."

133. vis mea: "my functions." It has been seen above that Janus is the god of all opening and closing doors; of all things that begin and end in the earth, the sea, and sky; of the gates of heaven, where Jove's own movements are subject to the "Opener"; of the temple of peace and war. Spenser (F. Q. IV, x, 12) represents Janus as presiding over the beginning of the year:—

Therein resembling Janus auncient,
Which hath in charge the ingate of the yeare.

134. aliqua parte: "to some extent," that is, in lines 113, 114, where he explains that his present shape is a relic of his original form as Chaos.

136. populum, or the outside; Larem, or the inside, where the image of the Lar familiaris stood in a shrine on the hearth of the central room (atrium) facing the door.

141. ora Hecates: Vergil (Aen. IV, 510) speaks of this goddess:

Tergeminamque Hecaten, tria virginis ora Dianae.

This is the goddess of threefold manifestation — Luna in heaven, Diana on earth, and Hecate in Hades. Her statues represent three female forms, and these are placed where three roads meet, "in order that she may watch the roads cut into threefold ways" (line 142).

PAGE 50. — 145. si vellem: a less vivid future condition from a past point of view.

279–283. Janus now says that the gates of his temple are open in war "in order when the people go to war they may have opportunity to return," and that he shuts the door in peace "in order that peace may not be allowed to depart." That is, Peace is shut up in order that she may be kept in safety.

Vergil's picture is quite different (Aen. I. 294). Behind the shut gates of Janus' temple Fury sits bound hand and foot: —
282. clusus ero: the temple of Janus had been shut only twice in Roman history prior to the reign of Augustus—once in the reign of the peaceful Numa, and again at the close of the first Punic war. In Augustus' reign the gates were three times closed.

285. vestri by courtesy includes the Emperor Tiberius, who is represented as sharing in the triumph of Germanicus.

triumphus: Germanicus celebrated a triumph in the year 16 A.D. for his victories over the Germans.

289. quod: refers to the fact stated in line 290.

291. The son of Phoebus and the nymph Coronis was Aesculapius, the great healing god. See analysis of Metamorphoses, XV, 622 and following.

292. insula: was the island in the Tiber within the city of Rome.

II. — 4. exiguum: is in contrast to velis maioribus, and is explained by lines 5, 6—"trifling."

5, 6. The reference is to the Amores and other love poems written in elegiac verse.

PAGE 51. — 8. "Would any one believe that there is any connection between that former work and this?"

10. omni munere: H. 464 (414, I); M. 237, 1; A. 243 a; G. 390, 2; B. 214, 1, c; L. & M. 601. The legal age of exemption from service in the Roman army was forty-six years. Ovid implies that he is past that age (this would date the present writing at 3 A.D. or later), but that he still can render valuable service with the pen if not with the sword.

19. The poet proceeds to an examination into the meaning of the old Sabine word februa (n. pl.) from which February is derived. The point is to connect the word with purgamina in meaning. The facts which he adduces in "proof" (fidem) of this connection are as follows: (1) the name februa was given anciently to the fillets of wool (lanas) used in sacrifice; (2) the sacrifices of lustration performed with the salted meal had the same name; (3) the branches of certain sacred purificatory trees were called februa; (4) this name in ancient times was given to all expiatory and lustral processes.

21. regi: understand sacrorum.

22. quis: a contraction for quibus.

23. liector: a priest's assistant or attendant.
NOTES

arborea pura: not "a pure tree," but "a tree that makes pure," i.e. one used in lustral ceremonies. Pura is an example of what may be called active adjectives, in which not the quality, but the power to produce that quality, is ascribed to the limited noun. Compare in Horace, palma nobilis, "the palm that confers renown"; albus notus, "a wind that makes bright," a "clearing wind."

pinea: the pine tree is seen to be one of the arbores purae.

intonsos avos: the Romans in early times wore the beard uncut. Barbers were not introduced into Rome until 300 B.C. Intonsi, therefore, of itself means "ancient."

Granting that februa and purgamina are connected in meaning, how did the month acquire the name Febrarius? Two explanations are offered: (1) because in this month was celebrated the festival of the Luperi, whose ceremonies were considered expiatory; (2) because the Feralia or Parentalia (see below) fell within that month.

32. The Lupercalia was a festival held on the 15th of February in honor of Faunus. "The object of the festival was, by expiation and purification, to give new life and fruitfulness to fields, flocks, and people." The ceremonies were performed by the priests (Luperi), who, armed with a whip of thongs from the hide of the goat which they had sacrificed (sexta pelle), traversed (iustrant) the city, striking all whom they met with the thongs, in token of purification.

34. The festival of Parentalia, or festival in honor of dead relatives, was celebrated in the latter part of February. At this time oblations of victims, wine, milk, and other things were presented to the manes of ancestors, who among the ancient Romans were accounted gods. In the latter part of the festival, more properly called Feralia, the Romans were accustomed to carry food to the sepulchers for the use of the dead. The departed spirits would thus be appeased and their "ghosts laid" (placatis sepulcris). In II, 569, Ovid again refers to the Feralia:

> Hanc, quia iusta fecit, dixere Feralia lucem.Ultima placandis Manibus illa dies.

See also Tristia, III, iii, 81–84.

GR 52.—81, 82. Two causes are suggested for one of which the dolphin was honored by a place among the heavenly constellations: (1) When Neptune was wooing Amphitrite, the nymph for a long time shunned his addresses. But a dolphin revealed her place of concealment to Neptune, who, out of gratitude, placed the fish in the heavens. (2) The dolphin saved the life of Arion, a famous musician, native of Lesbos, and for this act was rewarded by Jove, as the story narrates.
85-92. These are some of the stock illustrations of the power of music. See description of the effect of the music of Orpheus among the shades, Metamorphoses, X, 40-48.

89. Palladis alite: i.e. the owl. For an explanation of the natural enmity between the owl and the crow, see Amores, II, vi, 35, note.

96. quae sitas opes: the fruits of his western tour.

101, 102. See Ars Amatoria, III, 735, 736, note.

109, 110. "As when, in mournful strains, his whitening temples pierced with deadly shaft, the swan pours forth his (dying) song."

Page 53. — 110. tempora: H. 416 (378); M. 194; A. 240, c; G. 338, 1; B. 180, 1; (but see 179, 1 and 3); L. & M. 510.

115. pretium: in apposition to the following sentence.

117. astris: H. 428, i (384, II, 3, 1, note 1); M. 213; A. 225, 6, 3; G. 358; B. 193; L. & M. 540.

118. stellas novem: Hyginus (Fabulae, 194) tells the story of Arion and the dolphin, ending with this statement: Apollo autem propter artem citharae Arionem et delphinum in astris posuit.

III. — 4. The statement in this line is in answer to the question in line 3.

5, 6. "Thou thyself seest dire conflicts waged by the hand of Minerva: has she then less time for devoting herself to the fine arts?" In Homer, Minerva, like Mars and other gods, mingleth freely in the conflict of arms.

6. ingenuis artibus: see references under munere, Fast. II, 10. Minerva was goddess of wisdom, poetry, the arts and sciences, and handicraft in general, such as weaving, spinning, building, etc.

8. quod agas: "something to do."

71. iam, etc.: the omitted passage, apropos of inermis (line 8), represents Mars as the progenitor of Romulus, and relates the prophetic dream of Rhea Silvia, who was to be the mother of the twin brothers. Then follows the birth of these, the attempt of Amulius to destroy them, their miraculous deliverance; their growth to manhood; their return as the slayers of Amulius and restorers of Numitor to his throne. All the founding of a new city.

72. pater Urbes: i.e. Romulus.

74. et ut credar . . . dabo: "and, that I may be believed (to be of thy bleg."

I shall give many proofs;" i.e. Romulus was to be a warlike king.

76. Thus the first month of the year of Romulus began with March.
\textit{Ex 54.} — 79, 80. "And yet (the peoples of Latium) before (the time of Romulus) worshiped Mars above all (other gods). This tribute they, being a warlike race, had paid to their natural inclinations."

\textit{tellus Hypsipylea:} Lemnos. Hypsipyle was the daughter of Thoas, and queen of Lemnos. When the Lemnian women, under the influence of Venus, killed off all the men of the island, the queen alone preserved her father. Lemnos under the reign of Hypsipyle is also connected with the voyage of the Argonauts, who touched at this island.

\textit{Vulcanum:} Lemnos was the favorite haunt of Vulcan on earth. It was on this island that he fell when Jove hurled him from heaven.

98. Other countries had other gods, but Mars was preeminently the god of warlike Latium, and the various peoples of Latium honored him also in their calendars, although his month was variously situated in the order of months.

92. "Among the calendars of Aricia and Alba and (that city whose) lofty walls (were) reared by the hand of Telegronus (i.e. Tusculum), there is an agreement."

\textit{Telegronus was the son of Ulysses and Circe, who unwittingly caused his father's death. He afterward founded the Italian town of Tusculum. Hence Horace thus speaks of this town: —}

\begin{quote}
Telegoni iuga parricidae (\textit{Odes}, III, xxix, 8); and Tusculi Circaeae moenia (\textit{Epodes}, I, 99).
\end{quote}

\textit{a tribus primum:} "the fourth." Ovid delights in such roundabout expression of numbers. Compare his "four times three months," his "doubling of ten years," his "adding of nine lustra to other nine," and his "joining of ten times six to three hundred and five days."

\textit{convenit:} compare \textit{constat} above.

\textit{genti utrique:} "for both branches of the race," i.e. the Sabines and the Pelignians.

\begin{quote}
. "And that you may not doubt that prior (to the time of Numa) the Kalends of March was the first day (of the year), give your attention to the following proofs."
\end{quote}

-149. These "proofs" are: (1) that in olden times in March or on the first of March the laurel branch in the houses of the Flamens was annually renewed; (2) fresh laurel was hung at the door of the \textit{rex sacrorum}, of the chapel of the ward, and in the temple of Vesta; (3) fresh fires were kindled upon the altars in the shrines; (4) the worship of Anna Perenna, the goddess of the old lunar year was instituted; (5) newly elected officials entered upon their offices; and (6)
the count must start with March in order to explain the titles of the months which are named from numbers.

140. curia priscā: these curiae, of which four remained in Ovid's time, were the ancient chapels, one of which was placed in each of the original curiae or wards of the city.

PAGE 55. — 145. parva fides: supply est. — isse = iūisse.

148. Although all Carthaginians were to the Roman proverbially "perfidious," the reference is here to Hannibal and, loosely speaking, to the second Punic war. It was not until after 153 B.C. that the consuls entered upon their office in January.

151. Numa was, according to tradition, a native of Cures, a town of the Sabines.

153, 154. The "Samian" was the philosopher Pythagoras of Samos, who taught the transmigration of souls. Ovid is apparently not troubled by the anachronism involved in making this philosopher the instructor of Numa. See the fifteenth book of the Metamorphoses, in which Ovid gives an extended account of the life of Numa and the philosophy of Pythagoras.

155. Numa added January and February, making a year of twelve months. But these, as before, were lunar months, so that the year consisted of only 355 days. Hence, even with Numa's addition (etiam nunc), the seasons "kept going wrong" (errabant), making the addition of intercalary months necessary, until 46 B.C., when Julius Caesar placed the calendar upon a scientific basis, giving to the year 365\(\frac{1}{4}\) days. As is well known, this arrangement continued until the time of Pope Gregory III, who in 1582 made the final adjustment under which all Christendom, with the exception of Russia, is now living.

157, 158. "That prince, himself a god and founder of a noble line, did not consider such things as these too small for his attention."

officiis: H. 471 (417); M. 239, 1; A. 247; G. 398; B. 217, 1; L. & M. 695.

161. signa: i.e. the signs of the Zodiac, through which the sun goes in his apparent annual round.

164. e pleno tempora quarta die: i.e. a quarter of a day. On this and the preceding line, see line 94, note.

165, 166. in lustrum, etc.: "there should be added every fourth year the one day which is the sum of the part days (i.e. the quarters)." This is the institution of our quadriennial leap year.

701. simulacra: it was a favorite devise of the deus ex machina in mythological story to substitute a delusive image for some imperiled favorite. Diana's rescue of Iphigenia from the sacrificial knife at Aulis, and
NOTES

Apollo’s rescue of Aeneas on the field of battle, are cases in point.
The latter incident is thus related by Homer (II. V. 449):

Meantime the bowyer-god, Apollo, formed
An image of Aeneas, armed like him,
Round which the Trojans and Achaians thronged
With many a heavy weapon-stroke.

PAGE 56. — 707. Brutus and Cassius, the leaders of the conspirators against the life of Caesar, and afterward the leaders of the so-called patriotic forces, were defeated and slain at the battle of Philippi, 42 B.C., where they met the opposing forces under Octavian.

708. “And ye whose scattered bones lie bleaching on the ground.”

710. Caesaris: i.e. Octavian, afterward Augustus.

patrem: Julius Caesar was Octavian’s adoptive father, though in reality his uncle.

IV. — 1. geminorum Amorum: “the twin loves,” i.e. Eros and Anteros.
3. maiores canebas: the poet is well on in the composition of his Fasti.
4. 5. There is a joke between the poet and the goddess about some old love affair of the former.
7. saucius, an sanus: an is loosely used here for sive ... sive.
9. “What (trifling themes) ’twas fitting (I should sing), I sang in earlier years without offense.” With lusimus compare lusor amorum in line 1 of Life; and with sine crimine, Life, 68.
11. This line is a combination of parts of 1, 1 and 7.
12. Repeated from 1, 2.
17. Ovid here as elsewhere represents himself as obtaining his facts, at least in part, by the direct inspiration of some god.

PAGE 57. — 85. mensis honorem: i.e. the honor of having the name connected directly with Venus by etymological derivation. Ovid gives his own opinion on the etymology of the word in lines 61, 62: —

Sed Veneris mensem Graio sermone notatum
Auguror: a spumis est dea dicta maris.

Ovid’s derivation would therefore be: (1) Greek ἀφρός (= spuma, “foam”), (2) Ἀφροδίτη (Aphrodite, the goddess sprung from the foam of the sea), (3) Aprilis. It is needless to say that modern philology would not allow this derivation. Ovid falls into another error in supposing that any Latin word can be derived from a Greek word. It must be either cognate with the Greek, or else a mere transliteration of it.
tibi: H. 429, 2 (386, 2); M. 211; A. 229; G. 347, 5; B. 188, 2, d;
L. & M. 539.
86. velint: H. 591, i (503, i); M. 383, 2; A. 320, a; G. 631, 2; B. 283, 2; L. & M. 838.

87–89. The derivation which Ovid here contemptuously quotes is, however, the one now commonly received: Aprilis (contracted from aperilis, an adjectival form from the verb aperire), is the month in which the earth opens and softens, and awakes to renewed life.

90. "(A month) which fruitful Venus lays her hand upon and claims as her own." Iniecta manu and vindicat are both technical words, used primarily of a master who officially claims a runaway slave by laying his hand upon him.

93. natalibus undis: see note on Aphrodite, line 85. Venus rose from the spray of the sea near the island of Cythera; hence her epithet in line 15, and her more common name Cytherea.

97. "She united the rough minds of men into one (society)." The home, which is based upon the mutual love of the man and wife, is the foundation of civilized society. Cicero (Tusc. Disp. I, 62) imagines some one man to have brought this about, and classes him with those unknown men who have performed important service for civilization and who illustrate the greatness of the human soul: Aut qui dissipato homines congregavit et ad societatem vitae convocavit.

101. mare: from mas.

108. "From her (influence) came display in dress and a decent care for one's personal appearance." This fact is illustrated in the individual as well as the national experience of man.

111. eloquium fuit exorare: the poet plays upon these two words, which are similar in composition and meaning, and asserts that the experience involved in exorare called forth the original eloquium. Hence love is the origin of the art of persuasive speech.

115. titulo: H. 462 (414, i); M. 237, 1; A. 243, a; G. 390, 2; B. 214, 1; L. & M. 601.

116. audet. H. 557 (485); M. 327; A. 311; G. 257, 2; B. 280, 2; L. & M. 723.

Page 58. — 747 and following. Pales was a pure Italian deity, one of the most ancient. Her festival, called the Palilia, was celebrated on the 21st of April, which was regarded as the day on which Rome was founded. Her favor was much desired by both shepherd and farmer. Vergil (Ecl. V, 35–39) describes the disastrous consequences of the withdrawal of Pales and Apollo:

"Often nowadays, in the very furrows to whose care we give our largest barley grains, we see growing ungenerous darnel and unfruitful oats. In place of the delicate violet and the dazzling bright narcissus springs up the thistle, and the thorn with its sharp spikes." — [Conington's trans.]
776. This passage, aside from its other merits, is of especial interest in that it is Ovid's ideal of a rustic's formal prayer. Similar to this is the farmer's prayer addressed to Ceres and Tellus (Fasti, I, 675–694). The student should analyze both of these prayers and observe the elements, if any, of praise, thanksgiving, petition, etc., which they contain. With these may also be compared such passages as Lucretius, De Rerum Natura, I, 1–43 (a hymn or prayer to Venus); and Horace, Odes, I, xxxi, xxxv, and III, xviii. As an interesting statement of the conditions for successful prayer, read Horace, Odes, III, xxiii.

754. A list of the ceremonial offenses which he or his flock may knowingly or unwittingly have committed.

1. sive sacro pavi: "if I have fed (my flocks) on sacred (food)."
2. semicaper deus: i.e. Faunus.
3. Both lucum and nemus of line 751 here refer to a sacred or consecrated grove.

5. fano: H. 429, i (386, 1); M. 202, i; A. 228; G. 347; B. 187, III, 2; L. & M. 534.

7. To the timorous mind of the rustic, every spring and wood and mountain had its deity who would be offended by the slightest intrusion, and who, if beheld by human eyes, was likely to bring disaster and death upon the unlucky mortal.

8. lavent: H. 590 (497, I); M. 382, 3; A. 317, 2; G. 630; B. 282, 2; L. & M. 835.

9. "And may my osier sieve let freely drain the watery whey."
10. "Soft and well fit for hands however tender."
11. ad annum: "with each returning year."

7–782. These lines contain detailed instructions in the mysteries of the worship of Pales, being an addition to and in part a repetition of the lines which preceded the prayer. Some of these practices, such as turning to the east in prayer, bathing the hands in running water, and leaping through the fire, are common to the superstitious practices of many nations before and since the time of Ovid.

---

59.—V, 379, and following. Chiron was a centaur, the offspring of Saturn and the nymph Philyra (the "lyre-loving one"). He is praised by Homer (II. XI, 832) for his love of justice; his skill in surgery also is incidentally mentioned: —

OVID — 19
FASTI V

(The wounded Euryphylus addresses Patroclus.)

Shed
Soothing and healing balms upon the wound,
As taught thee by Achilles, who had learned
The art from Chiron, righteous in his day
Beyond all other Centaurs.

Chiron was, moreover, skilled in the art of music, which he imparted to his pupils, the young heroes, Jason, Hercules, Aesculapius, and Achilles, who were entrusted to his care. For further account of Chiron’s part in story, see analysis on page 102.

379. nocte minus quarta: Ovid’s way of saying nocte tertia.
385. manus: i.e. of Achilles.
387, 388. In the course of his wanderings, having reached almost the end of his twelve labors, Hercules pays a visit to his old instructor in his cave on Mount Pelion.
389. casu videres: H. 555 (485); M. 327, note; A. 311, a; G. 258; B. 28; 3; L. & M. 720.
Troiae duo fata: i.e. Achilles, who was destined to slay Hector, the bulwark of the Trojans; and Hercules, who, after his twelve labors were ended, in company with a band of heroes, attacked Troy and slew King Laomedon and all his sons, except the youthful Podarces, afterward called Priam. This vengeance he took for the faithlessness of Laomedon in withholding the promised reward for the rescue of Hesione.
393. clavam spoliumque leonis: these were the club which he cut in the Nemean forest, prior to his attack upon the Nemean lion; and the skin of that beast, whose death was the accomplishment of the hero’s first labor. The club and lion’s skin were ever after his constant accompaniments.
394. his armis: supply digna. H. 481 (421, III); M. 238, 2; A. 245, a, i; G. 397, note 2; B. 226, 2; L. & M. 654.
395, 396. “Nor could Achilles keep his hands from making bold to touch the skin all shaggy with rough fur.” This is a fine human touch of the poet, showing the awestruck admiration of the youthful hero for the arms of the now famous Hercules.
395. auderent. H. 595, 2 (504, 4); M. 341, 3; A. 332, 9; G. 555, 1; B. 295, 3; L. & M. 913.
397, 398. According to another account, Chiron was accidentally wounded by one of these poisoned arrows in the contest between Hercules and the Centaurs.
venenis: this poison which, tipping the arrows of Hercules, made wounds inflicted by them incurable, was obtained from the gall of the hydra which Hercules slew in the accomplishment of his second labor.
AGE 60. — 403. "The swift poison made the remedy unavailing." Edax is explained by the remainder of the couplet. So speedily did the virus eat or make its way through the body that no superficial remedy could avail.

18. "So must Peleus himself (the father of Achilles) have been mourned, had he been dying." For mode of fiendus erat, see H. 582 (511, 2); M. 369; A. 308, c; G. 597, 3, a; B. 304, 3, b; L. & M. 938, 940.

10. "The teacher now enjoys the rewards (of his toil) in (of) the kindly disposition (morum) which he himself has fostered."

2. vive: it is related that Chiron retired to his cave, longing to die, but was unable to do so on account of his immortality, till, on his expressing his willingness to die for Prometheus, he was released by death from his misery. According to another account (the present), he was, on his prayer to Jove for relief, raised to the sky and made the constellation of Sagittarius, which is one of the twelve signs of the Zodiac.

3. justissim: a frequent epithet of Chiron. See above the quotation from Homer on line 379.

4. corpora: H. 416 (378); M. 198; A. 240, c; G. 338, 1; B. 180, 1; L. & M. 510.

I.—249, 250. "O Vesta, hail! we open now our lips to thee devoted, if in thy sacred festival we be allowed a part."

2. Compare IV, 5 and 6.

3. valeant mendacia vatun: "away with the lying tales of bards;" i.e. Vesta never appears to mortals, any statement of the poets to the contrary notwithstanding.

4. nec fueras aspicienda vir: "(and even if thou didst appear to mortals), thou wouldst not have revealed thyself to (me) a man." No man was allowed to enter Vesta’s temple. For the mode of fueras see V, 408 and note.

256. Again he professes to receive knowledge of things archaeological, philological, and otherwise, by direct inspiration, "at the instruction of no (visible) being." Compare IV, 17.

Palilia: see IV, 747, note. Ovid means to say in this line that forty years after the founding of the city, the formal worship of Vesta was introduced. He implies also (IV, 731, 732), that after the introduction of Vesta’s worship, she had some connection with the worship of Pales. The two lines here quoted are a part of the instructions for the observance of the Palilia: —

I, pete virginea, populus, suffimen [incense] ab ara;
Vesta dabit, Vestae munere purus eris.
Lanciani's plausible explanation of the origin of the worship of Vesta makes her connection with Pales seem very close and natural.

"The origin of the worship of Vesta is very simple. In prehistoric times, when fire could be obtained only from the friction of two sticks of dry wood, or from sparks of flint, every village kept a public fire burning day and night, in a central hut, at the disposition of each family. The care of watching the precious element was intrusted to young girls, because girls, as a rule, did not follow their parents and brothers to the far-away pasture grounds, and did not share with them the fatigue of hunting or fishing expeditions. In course of time, however, this simple practice became a kind of sacred institution, especially at Alba Longa, the mother country of Rome; and when a large party of Alban shepherds fled from the volcanic eruptions of the Alban craters into the plain below, and settled on the marshy banks of the Tiber, they followed, naturally, the institutions of the mother country; and the worship of Vesta — represented by the public fire and the girls attending to it — was duly organized at the foot of the Palatine hill, on the borders of the market-place (forum)."

259. opus is in apposition to the act expressed in the preceding line.
regis placidi: Numa's peaceful reign was in striking contrast to the war-filled reign of Romulus.
metuentius numinis: "more God-fearing."

261. aere, stipula: he contrasts the present bronze roof of Vesta's temple with its ancient roof of thatch.

263, 264. The Atrium Vestae, extensive ruins of which are still to be seen in the Forum, was the home of the Vestal Virgins. The small round temple, the foundation of which is still traceable, and the Regia, the official residence of the Pontifex Maximus, are in the same plot of ground immediately adjacent to (sub) the Atrium. The chart illustrates their relative location. The foundation of the Regia was attributed to Num

PAGE 61. — 265. forma templi: notwithstanding the many vicissitudes involving repeated destruction and rebuilding, which this temple experienced during the centuries, it still retained its original form, i.e. cylindrical. Numa's original hut temple was destroyed at the time of the invasion of the Gauls in 390; the temple was again destroyed by fire in 241; it was seriously damaged by an inundation in the time of Augustus (cf. Horace, Odes, I, ii, 15, 16); it was burned in Nero’s fire, and restored by that emperor; burned again in 191 A.D., and reconstructed by Julia Domna, the empress of Septimius Severus. In 394, Theodosius II shut the gates of the temple and extinguished forever the mysterious fire that had been kept burning for over one thousand years. Well-preserved ruins were in existence in 1549, when the builders of Saint Peter’s destroyed it, burning its pillars and marble blocks into lime. A shapeless mass of concrete of the foundations is all that is left in the Forum to-day of the famous shrine.

6. “The cause of (this round) form is reasonable and not far to seek (subest).”

7–282. His process of reasoning is as follows: (1) There is an occult but real connection and similarity between Vesta and the Earth (Ovid’s explanation at this point is very obscure). (2) The earth is round like a ball, a statement supported by purely a priori argument. (3) Therefore the temple of Vesta, who, by the first argument, is in a sense the same as the earth, must approach the terrestrial rotundity as nearly as is possible to a temple; and this form is the cylinder.

7. subest vigil ignis utrique: “beneath each is the never dying fire;” i.e. the perpetual fire burned upon the altar in the center of the temple, and beneath the earth fires were supposed to be always burning.

8. “(Now these two related beings) Earth and Hearth (i.e. Vesta), (the one situated at the center of the universe, and the other at the center of the temple) suggest (both by their shape and position) their (common) abode (i.e. the temple).”

8. globus: this was the famous planetarium, a model of the heavenly bodies, showing their position, motions, and relation, constructed by Archimedes of Syracuse. In this, as in the usual ancient conception, the earth is represented as situated at the center of the universe.

15, 296. The contents of Vesta’s temple were sacredly guarded from profane eyes. It is known, however, that for centuries the Palladium and other sacred relics were preserved there.

8. The poet would imply that the Romans never fashioned an image of Vesta. The vision which Aeneas had on the night of the destruction of Troy (Aen. II, 293–297) is, however, interesting in this connection. The apparition of Hector consigns the Trojan Penates to Aeneas, and moreover produces from the shrine the image of Vesta, with the sacred fillets upon the head, and also the sacred, never dying fire.

9. Here again Ovid asserts a relation between Earth and Vesta. The Earth is independent of all support, nullo fulcimine nixa (cf. line 269), and so is Vesta (i.e. she needs no image to show her forth); and from this very fact, says the poet, she is named both in Latin and Greek.

Ovid's etymology is at fault here, as often. Vesta and Gr. 'Ereia are both derived from the v w s, "to burn." Focus also (line 301) is not connected etymologically with flamma and foveo, but is from the v b h a, "to be bright," with which root are also connected such words as f a x, f a cies, etc.

302. 303. In old times the hearth (or vesta) was in the front part of the house, in the passage between the street door and the central apartment or atrium. From this fact, says Ovid, this front entrance or passage is called vestibulum, the place of Vesta.

306. In a fragment of Manius, one of the satires of Varro, which describes the management of a rural household, there are three maxims for the guidance of the pious rustic: not to speak evil against one's neighbor, not to put the feet upon the sacred hearth, and to contribute to the god who is supposed to be present at the feast his own portion in his dish set upon the hearth: Non maledicere, pedem in focum non imponere, sacrificari.

307. Vacuna was an ancient Sabine goddess, whose worship also, like that of Vesta, centered around the hearth. Ovid does not mean to suggest any other connection between these two.

309. de more vetusto: i.e. the ancient custom of associating the gods with the family meal, and of worshiping them at the hearthside.

311-318. Closely connected with Vesta and the hearth as the center of family life is bread, which is baked upon the hearth. Hence all implements and agents connected with the making of bread, from the millstone to the oven, and from the ass who turns the mill to the baker himself, are sacred to and under the special patronage of the goddess of ovens, Fornax, to whom Numa himself is said to have instituted a festival.

METAMORPHOSES

Page 64.—I, 1-2. "My mind is bent to tell of bodies into new forms changed." The subject of the poem is thus briefly stated; it is to be a story of transformations or metamorphoses.

2. nam vos, etc.: "for you yourselves have wrought these changes."

4. dederite carmen: the metaphor is taken from the process of spinning or weaving. There is to be an unbroken thread of song from the earliest to the latest times.

5-7. Micylus points out that it was the common belief of antiquity, Aristotle to the contrary notwithstanding, that the universe did not exist always, but had a beginning and was created out of chaos by God; that these common beliefs extended also to the flood and other similar events of world-wide importance; that ideas of God himself were common property; and that these beliefs were passed on as oral traditions from generation to generation. These ideas were first and most fully developed by the Jews, from whom they passed to the Egyptians, thence to the Greeks, and thence to the other nations.

Ovid has elsewhere described the resolution of chaos into the orderly universe. See Fast. I, 103-110; and Ars Amat. II, 467-470.

8, 10. congestaque, etc.: "and, heaped in one mass, the warring seeds of ill-matched elements."

12, 13. The ancients had clear notions of the rotundity of the earth, although they were wrong in making it the center of the universe. Ovid elsewhere describes the shape and position of the earth with great minuteness (Fast. VI, 269-280).

15-20. All matter which now exists was then existent, but in no permanent or separate form. All was one mass of opposing elements.

Milton (Paradise Lost, II) has well described this state of things:

A dark
Illimitable ocean, without bound,
Without dimension, where length, breadth, and height,
And time, and place, are lost; where eldest Night
And Chaos, ancestors of Nature, hold Eternal anarchy, amidst the noise
Of endless wars, and by confusion stand.
For Hot, Cold, Moist, and Dry, four champions fierce, Strive here for mastery, and to battle bring Their embryo atoms. . . . . .
. . . . . . Into this wild abyss,
The womb of Nature, and perhaps her grave,
Of neither sea, nor shore, nor air, nor fire,
But all these in their pregnant causes mixed
Confusedly, and which thus must ever fight,
Unless the almighty Maker them ordain
His dark materials to create more worlds, etc.

20. sine pondere habentia pondus: "things having weight with weightless things."

Page 65.—21. "God and a better nature composed this strife." So the literal. According to the ancient belief, God and nature were closely united. Seneca, indeed, says: Nihil aliud est natura quam Deus. The passage in question would best be translated, in the light of this belief:

"God by the laws of nature (i.e. by his own laws) composed this strife."
23. "And he separated the ethereal heavens from the dense atmosphere."

26, 27. The ancients considered all things resolvable into four elements: earth, water, air, and fire. Fire is the most attenuated and lightest of all substance, and is akin to immaterial spirit. Its natural home is in the far regions of upper space. According to Zeno, the Stoic philosopher, it is of this substance the soul is made. And Vergil, following this thought (Aen. VI, 730), says of the soul: —

Igneus est ollis vigor et caelestis origo Seminibus.

Here read again the passage (in this volume) to which reference has already been made — Fast. I, 103–110.

31. ultima, i.e. extima: "the outermost, farthest regions."

32. quisquis fuit ille deorum: the idea of some definitely conceived creative deity, which was set forth in line 21, now gives way to a much more indefinite conception — but it is still some deity actively engaged in the work of creation.

"When he, whoever of the gods it was, had thus arranged in order and resolved that chaotic mass, and reduced it, thus resolved, to cosmic parts," etc.

These "cosmic parts" are earth, water, atmosphere, and ether, as mentioned above.

36. tumescere: understand freta as subject.

37. circumdare: the subject is some agent unexpressed; the object is litora, and the indirect object, terrae.

40. ipsa: understand terra.

41, 42. campoque, etc.: "and, being received to (into) an expanse of more extended water, beat now on shores instead of banks."

campo: H. 428, 1 (385, 4, 1); M. 213; A. 225, 3; G. 358; B. 193; L. & M. 540.

45–51. The vault of heaven is first conceived of as marked off into five bands or zones; and other zones, corresponding in position and nature to these, are, as it were, imprinted upon the earth.

"And as the celestial sphere is cut by two zones on the right (i.e. north frigid and temperate), and by two on the left (south frigid and temperate), and there is a fifth zone hotter than these (the torrid zone); so," etc.

Page 66. — 48. cura dei: "the providence of God," or, "God in his providence."

56. Ventosique illis consistere iussit qui fulmina et frigora faciunt.

57. his: i.e. the winds. This may be construed with habendum as apparent agent, or with permissit as indirect object.
58–60. vix nunc, etc.: "even as it is (nunc), although they control each one his own blasts in separate regions, they can with difficulty be kept from tearing the universe to pieces."

58. illis: H. 429 (386); M. 202; A. 228; G. 347; B. 187, III; L. & M. 532.
60. lanient: H. 595, 2 (504, 4); M. 341, 3; A. 332, 8; G. 555, 1;
B. 295, 3; L. & M. 913.

fratrum: the winds are the brothers, sons of Astraeus, a Titan, and Aurora, goddess of the dawn.

61–66. The four principal winds are here described: the East Wind (Eurus), the West Wind (Zephyrus), the North Wind (Boreas), and the South Wind (Auster, also called Notus). Vergil has represented these winds as confined in a cave under the control of Aeolus (Aen. I, 52).

66. pluvioque: que is here made to unite two elements not quite coördinate, i.e. nubibus adsiduis, a means or cause, and pluvio ab Auströ, an expression halting between agency and source.

67. gravitate carentem: "weightless."

70. massa sub illa: i.e. chaos, in which the stars and all other individual entities had been engulfed.

72. "And that no place might be without its own forms of animate life."

73. To the ancient imagination, the stars were closely connected with the gods, many of them bearing the names of gods as well as of earthly heroes, animals, and objects which had been so honored by divinity as to merit a place in the heavens. The planets all bore names of gods.
Added to this, the great interstellar spaces were conceived of as the home of the invisible gods. And the human mind has not yet lost the conception of the heavens as the abode of Deity, and as the world of disembodied spirits.

Page 67. — 76–88. Man is the culmination of creative work. Science, poetic imagination, and revelation alike proclaim this. Compare with the present passage, Milton, Paradise Lost, Book VII: —

Now Heaven in all her glory shone, and rolled
Her motions, as the great first Mover’s hand
First wheeled their course; earth in her rich attire
Consummate lovely smiled; air, water, earth,
By fowl, fish, beast, was flown, was swum, was walked Frequent; and of the sixth day yet remained:
There wanted yet the master-work, the end
Of all yet done; a creature who, not prone
And brute as other creatures, but endued
With sanctity of reason, might erect
His stature, and upright with front serene Govern the rest, self knowing.
78–83. What made man so superior to all other creatures? The poet advances two theories: either (1) the Creator himself fashioned him out of divine substance, or else (2) the clay of earth from which the man was formed was so freshly come from its association with heavenly ether in chaos as to retain some ethereal elements. Lowell’s description of Lincoln (Commemoration Ode, VI) has a thought somewhat akin to the last suggestion:

For him her Old-World moulds aside she [Nature] threw,
And, choosing sweet clay from the breast
Of the unexhausted West,
With stuff untainted shaped a hero new.

82. satus Iapeto: i.e. Prometheus. This is one of the most admirable heroes of mythology. He is not only the creator of mankind, but benefactor and instructor as well in all the arts of civilization — and this at the cost of endless suffering on his own part in man’s behalf. His creative act is briefly mentioned here by Ovid. He is elsewhere represented (e.g. Horace, Odes, I, xvi, 13) as creating man in a somewhat different manner. His theft of fire for man, its method, and the method of his punishment for this are related by Aeschylus (Prometheus Bound):

For I, poor I, though giving Great gifts to mortal men, am prisoner made
In these fast fetters; yea, in fennel stalk
I snatched the hidden spring of stolen fire,
Which is to men a teacher of all arts,
Their chief resource. And now this penalty
Of that offense I pay, fast riveted
In chains beneath the open firmament.

83. “Molded into the image of the all-controlling gods.” According to this statement, man was made in the image of the gods. But the gods of classical mythology had long since been made in the image of man. All the poets from Homer and Hesiod down had emphasized the anthropomorphic conception of deity. Cicero (Tusc. Disp. I, § 65) turns from this idea in disgust: Fingebat haec Homerus, et humana ad deos transferebat; divina mallem ad nos.

Unless we retain this same anthropomorphic conception of God, the “likeness” of Genesis I, 26 must be interpreted as a spiritual likeness. Milton’s story of the creation of man (in the connection above quoted) enlarges upon this text:

“Let us make now man in our image, man
In our similitude.” . . .

This said, he formed thee, Adam; thee, O man.
Dust of the ground, and in thy nostrils breathed
The breath of life; in his own image he Created thee, in the image of God Express, and thou became'st a living soul.

_aurea prima sata est aetas_: the conception of man's original perfect state and his degeneracy because of sin, and the hope of his final restoration to his primal happiness, are ideas common to many ancient nations.
It is the teaching of the Hebrew Scriptures, and no less the doctrine of the classic poets. Ovid here discusses the first two conceptions only. Vergil predicts (Eclatues, IV) the imminent return of the blessings of the reign of Saturn in language that is strikingly similar to the millennial prophecies of the prophet Isaiah.

Opposed to these conceptions of original perfection followed by degeneration should be noted the evolutionary theories put by Aescylus in the mouth of Prometheus, and set forth also by Lucretius (De Rerum Natura).

n. 68. _fixo aere_ refers to the Roman practice of engraving the laws on tablets of bronze, and hanging these in public places to be noted by the people. In the Golden Age there were no laws.

69. "Not yet had the pine tree, felled on its native mountains, descended thence unto the watery plains to visit other lands." The fixed abode of men in one land as a characteristic of this age is thus described by Seneca (Medea, 328-333):

_The guiltless golden age our fathers saw,
When youth and years the same horizon bounded;
No greed of gain their simple hearts confounded;
Their native wealth enough,—'twas all they knew._

Horace locates the impiety of man's invasion of the sea in the fact that this was plainly intended by Providence to be a means of separation between the nations, but man has made it a highway (Odes, I, iii, 21).

_orant_: a syncopated form for _neverant_.

directi: supply _aeris_.

1. "Secure from war's alarms, the nations passed the years in peaceful case."

_mollia otia_ is syntactically the direct object of _peragebant_.

_ota_ is plural, perhaps because of the plural idea in _gentes_; but Ovid frequently uses the plural with no apparent distinctive plural meaning.

.i. _immunis_: "without compulsion," i.e. "of her own motion" = _sua sponte_.

.i. _Iovis arbore_: the oak among trees as the eagle among birds was sacred to Jove. In the same way the olive was the sacred tree of Minerva, the laurel of Apollo, etc.

110. nec renovatus ager: "and the fields, though unrenewed."

111. The Biblical description of Canaan is strikingly recalled here,—"a land flowing with milk and honey."

112. mella: on the plural, see note on otia, line 100. The distilling of honey from the trees is a feature of Vergil's prophecy:

Et durae quercus sudabunt roscida mella.

The fourth Eclogue should be read entire in this connexion.

113, 114. "After Saturn had been banished to gloomy Tartara and the world came under the sway of Jove." According to the Greek myth, Zeus had risen up against his father Cronos (Saturn), and, with the help of Prometheus, Oceanus, and others, had dethroned and chained him in Tartara.

117. inaequales: "changeable."

Page 69. — 121–124. Ovid places in the first stage of human degeneration those arts of civilization, the lack of which, according to the evolutionary theory of Lucretius, characterized the early savage life of primitive man.

123. semina: but in the Golden Age, plants had sprung up sine semine. See line 108.

127. non scelerata: war was now introduced, but not impious civil strife, the worst phase of war.

132–134. See notes on lines 94–96.

135, 136. "And the ground, which had hitherto been a common possession like the sunlight and the air, the careful surveyor now marked out with long-drawn boundary line."

137. segetes: H. 411, 1 (374, 1); M. 192, 2; A. 239, c, note 2; G. 339, a; B. 178, 1, a; L. & M. 522, 523.

138–140. In Milton's story (Paradise Lost, Book I), it was Mammon who taught men to dig for treasure:

By him first
Men also, and by his suggestion taught,
Ransacked the center, and with impious hands
Rifled the bowels of their mother earth
For treasures better hid.

So also Horace (Odes, III, iii, 49) would leave gold unmined:

Aurum inrepetrum et sic melius situm,
Cum terra celat.

142. utroque: i.e. gold and iron both.
144. vivitur ex rapti: "men live on plunder."

_hospes_ is literally a stranger, and is used to express the relation of both host and guest. Among the ancients the relation of hospitality (_hospitium_) was one of the most sacred. In the Iron Age human degeneracy is complete, when men sin against this and the closest domestic ties.

147. _lurida_ is to be taken as an active adjective, representing its noun (_aconita_) not as possessing the quality indicated by the adjective ("pale," "ghastly"), but as imparting that quality to something else ("making pale or ghastly"). Compare _Fasti_, II, 25, note.

148. ante diem: "before his time," because the son is overanxious to come into the inheritance.

149. 150. _et virgo_, etc.: "and the maiden Astraea, last of the immortals, abandoned the blood-steeped earth (to its fate)." Astraea was the goddess of Justice. She long had mingled with the human race on earth, but degeneration was now complete, and she fled to the skies where she became the constellation _Virgo_ in the Zodiac.

Spenser, with his usual fullness in classical allusion, thus describes the flight of Astraea (_Faerie Queene_, _V_, _i_, 11): —

Now when the world with sinne gan to abound, Astraea loathing lenger here to space [walk]
Mongst wicked men, in whom no truth she found,
Return'd to heaven, whence she deriv'd her race;
Where she hath now an everlasting place
Mongst those twelve signes which nightly we doe see
The heavens bright-shining baudricke to enchace;
And is the Virgin, sixt in her degree,
And next herselle her righteous ballance hanging bee.

It seems strange that Ovid should have passed over in this connection the legend of Pandora and her fatal box, whence escaped all human ills, leaving Hope alone behind.

Page 70. — 154, 155. "Then the almighty father hurled his thunderbolt, shattered Olympus, and shook off Pelion from underlying Ossa." This famous attempt of the Giants to scale heaven by piling mountain upon mountain, and thus to dethrone Jove, is a commonplace in literature. Horace (_Odes_, III, iv, 53) uses the incident to point the moral that brute force cannot avail against wisdom.

155. Ossae: H. 428, 2 (385, 4, 2); M. compare 211; A, 229; G. 345, Rem. 1;
B. 188, 2, d; L. & M. 534.

157. natorum: these giants were the sons of Heaven and Earth.

160. et: "also," _i.e._ in additions to the giants, from whose blood they had sprung.
162. scires: H. 555 (485); M. 327, note; A. 311, a; G. 258; B. 280, 3; L. & M. 720.

164-166. "And, with the infamous revels of Lycaon's table fresh in mind, which because of their recent occurrence were not generally known, he conceived a mighty wrath worthy of the soul of Jove," etc.

169. Lactea: understand via, "the Milky Way."

171, 172. deorum nobilium: a fragment from the Annales of Ennius contains a list of the twelve gods who were reckoned in the first rank:

- Iuno, Vesta, Minerva, Ceres, Diana, Venus, Mars,
- Mercurius, Iovis, Neptunus, Vulcanus, Apollo.

In this description of the heavenly aristocracy Ovid has definitely in mind (see lines 175, 176) the social state of his own time, with the spacious palaces of the emperor and his nobles occupying the hills and thronged (celebrantur) with courtiers of lower degree.

173. plebs, etc.: "the gods of lower rank dwell (literally, apart in situation) in a different locality"; just as the common people of Rome lived in the less desirable quarters of the city.

hac fronte: "fronting on this way (i.e. the Milky Way)."

176. Palatia (n. pl.) is the word used distinctively of the palace of Augustus on the Palatine. The emperors successively built their palaces on the same hill, tearing down, remodeling, adding to the structures of their predecessors, until the whole area was covered with buildings, extensive ruins of which are still to be seen.

Page 71. — 183, 184. qua centum, etc.: "when (qua tempestate) each one of the serpent-footed (giants) was in act to lay violent hands upon the captive sky." Captivo is used proleptically, since it could not properly apply unless the undertaking should succeed.

186. ab uno corpore: in the war with the giants, they only were the sages; but in the present situation all men of every class are in a state of open and violent rebellion.

187. qua would naturally be qua cumque, but the generalization is effected by means of totum orbem.

188. per flumina iuro, etc.: these rivers of the lower world are named and described by Milton as follows (Paradise Lost, II):

> Abhorred Styx, the flood of deadly hate;
> Sad Acheron, of sorrow, black and deep,
> Cocytus, named of lamentation loud
> Heard on the rueful stream; fierce Phlegethon, > Whose waves of torment fire inflame with rage.

An oath by these rivers, usually the Styx alone, was inviolable.
>Vergil (Aen. VI, 323): —
Cocyti stagna alta vides Stygiannque paludem,
Di cuius iurare timent et fallere numen.

195. “Since we do not yet esteem them worthy of the honor of a place in heaven, let us at least guarantee that they dwell (in safety) in the lands allotted to them.”

an satis, etc.: an indignant rhetorical question, with evident negative answer.

Lycaon: a mythical king of Arcadia, notorious for his impiety and cruelty, which are illustrated in the following story.

ausum talia is very much condensed. It is equivalent to cum qui talia ausus est.

Caesaroe: i.e. of Julius Caesar. The adjective is used for the possessive genitive.

santo subitae terrore ruinae: note the interlocked order of the words — a favorite arrangement with Ovid.

The poet here a second time (see lines 175, 176) introduces a flattering comparison between Augustus and Jove.

5. 206. qui postquam, etc.: “after he, by word and gesture, had checked their outcry.”

62 72.—209. ille: i.e. Lycaon.

5. admissum: understand sit. “Still, what the crime was, and what the punishment, I’ll tell.”

6. quam cupiens falsam, etc.: “hoping to prove this false,” etc. Jove is represented here not as the all-seeing, all-knowing one, who sits upon the height of heaven and views the world, but as one who must come down to earth and investigate like a mortal. Vergil’s picture is more consistent with the dignity of the god (Aen. I, 223–225):

> Iuppiter aethere summo
> Despiciens mare velivolum terrasque iacentes
> Litoraque et latos populos.

But it should be said that Ovid’s habitual attitude toward the gods is one of easy familiarity. They are rarely august in his pages, partly because of their anthropomorphic character in the stories which he undertakes to tell; but largely, no doubt, because from Ovid, as from his contemporaries, reverence for the gods of mythology was passing away.

217. Maenala (acc. pl. n.), Cyllene, Lycaeus: mountains in Arcadia, ruled over by Lycaon, the Arcas tyrannus.

traherent cum, etc.: i.e. just as dusk was deepening into night.

signa dedi, venias dic deum: “I gave the sign, a god has come.” What was this sign of divine presence? In the story of Philemon and Baucis (Met. VIII, 679 seq.) it is the miracle of the replenished wine-bowl. Other signs of godhead may be inferred from the following passages in Vergil; first, where Venus reveals herself to Aeneas just before vanishing from his sight (Aen. I, 402 seq.): —

Dixit, et avertens rosea cervice refusit, Ambrosiaeque comae divinum vertice odorem
Spiravere, pedes vestis defluxit ad imos,
Et vera incessu patuit dea.

In the second passage (Aen. V, 646 seq.), Iris, to deceive the Trojan women, has put on the form of Beroë, "faciem deae vestemque repones." But for all that, her disguise is penetrated by one of the women: —

Non Beroë vobis est . . . .
. . . divini signa decoris
Ardentesque notate oculos; qui spiritus illi,
Qui vultus, vocisque sonus, et gressus eunti.

222. experiar, etc.: "I'll prove by a plain test whether this fellow be god or mortal."

224-230. The proposed test was twofold. The events are stated in reversed chronological order. The experiment of the offer of human flesh at dinner under the guise of meat would naturally come first. The second experiment (which never came to the test) was to have been an attack upon the life of the sleeping god.

227. iugulum resolvit: "he cut the throat."

228. semineces: i.e. "still warm with life." This passage explains the foeda convivia of line 165.

229. mollit = coquit.

230. simul = simul ac.

231. "Upon its master did I overthrow the house, and, on his guilty household." Penates seems best taken by metonymy for the household who were "worthy" of the head of the house, sharers of his guilt; it may also be taken literally of the household gods who shared Lycaon's guilt in not restraining him from his impiety.

232. ipse: i.e. Lycaon, as opposed to his household.

234. conligit os rabiem: naturally, like a wild beast.

236. "His garments change to shaggy hair, his arms to legs."

237. fit lupus: Browning (The Ring and the Book, XI, 2050) thus rationalizes this passage, joining it with the story of Byblis (Met. IX, 452 seq.): —

Only, be sure, no punishment, no pain,
Childish, preposterous, impossible,
But some such fate as Ovid could foresee —
Byblis in fluvium, let the weak soul end
In water, sed Lycaon in Iupum, but
The strong become a wolf forever more.

240. perire: a poetic construction. H. 591, 7; 608, 4 (503, II, 2); M. 383, 1;
A. 320, f; and note; G. 631, 1; 552, Rem. 2; B. 382, 3; L. & M. 952.

PAGE 73.—242. "You would think that men had banded together for crime"; i.e. that the whole world was in a criminal alliance.

dent: the subjunctive represents the resolve of the speaker: "they shall pay."

245. alli partes implevit: the language is that of the stage, "they play (or perform) their parts." Compare Terence, Phormio, Prologue 27:
—
Latin Phormionem nominant, Quia primas partes qui agit, is erit Phormio.

247. mortalibus: H. 465 (414, III); M. 237, 2; A. 243, d; G. 390, 3;
B. 214, 1, d; L. & M. 604.

250. "As they questioned thus, the king of gods bade them not to be troubled, for the results would be his care."

252. populo: H. 434 (391); M. 214; A. 234; G. 359; B. 192, 1; L. & M. 536.

253. "And now he was just on the point of hurling." Jove's natural weapon of destruction was the thunderbolt, the vindex flamma, but he suddenly remembers the decree of fate, which he knows but cannot alter, that the heavens and the earth shall some day be destroyed by fire;
and he has no mind to precipitate this destruction which would involve the gods as well as men.

255–258. The destruction of all things by fire, or rather a return of all things to the elemental fire from which they had been evolved, was a Stoic doctrine. Lactantius (De Ira, § 13) declares that this fate is foretold in the Sibylline Books.

258. ardeat: H. 591, 2 (500, I); M. 382, 4; A. 320; G. 631, 2; B. 283, 1;
L. & M. 838.

mundi, etc.: "and when the curiously wrought structure of the world should be destroyed."

257, 258. quo tellus ardeat, etc.: Seneca (Epigrammata, VII, 5) refers to this belief in the method of the world's destruction: —

Quid tam parva loquor? moles pulcherrima caeli
Ardebit flammis tota repente suis.

259. tela manibus fabricata Cyclopon: i.e. the thunderbolts. Hesiod (Theogony, 139) first represented the Cyclops as smiths who forged Jove's thunderbolts. Horace takes up the same idea (Odes, I, IV, 7): —

Dum graves Cyclopon
Volcanus ardens visit officinam.

OVID — 20
their personal safety not yet secure (351–362); the next is, "How can the race of mortals be restored?"
351. soror, coniunx: see note on line 318.
352, 353. The pair are united by triple bonds—the ties of blood, of marriage, and of common perils.
355. nos duo turba sumus: this is a unique instance of a "crowd" of two.
According to other accounts, these were not the only survivors of the flood.
356. "Even this hold (which we have) upon our life is not as yet sufficiently secure."
358, 359. quid tibi nunc animus foret? "what would be your feelings now?"
359. miseranda: in a purely adjectival sense, "poor soul."
360. quo consolante dolores? "with whom consoling wouldst thou grieve?"
i.e. "who would console thy grief?"
361, 362. See note, lines 325, 326.
364. animas formatae infundere terrae: "to breathe the breath of life into the moulded clay."
369. The Cephasus has its source at the foot of Parnassus.
370. ut, sic: "though, still."
371. libatons inroravere liquores: the purification by running water before engaging in any sacred act was a well-established custom. In Homer (II. IX, 207) this act is coupled with the sacred silence that is also enjoined:

And now be water brought to cleanse our hands,
And charge be given that no ill-omened word
Be uttered, while we pray that Jupiter,
The son of Saturn, will assist our need.

And Aeneas (Aen. II, 718) cannot himself handle the images of the gods:

Me, bello e tanto digressum et caede recenti,
Attractare nefas, donec me flumine vivo
Abluero.

vestibus et capiti: H. 429 (386); M. 202; A. 228; G. 347; B. 187, III: L. & M. 532.
76. humi: H. 484, 2 (426, 2); M. 242, 2; A. 258, d; G. 411, Rem. 2;
B. 232, 2; L. & M. 622.
372. Tell us, O Themis, how (qua arte) the loss of our (i.e. the human) face may be repaired.
260, 261. The world is to be destroyed by flood. This flood tradition is a part of the stock of old-world story, traceable alike in the Hebrew scriptures and in the literature and folk-lore of many nations. See Genesis VI, 7: And the Lord said, I will destroy man whom I have created from the face of the ground; both man, and beast, and creeping thing, and fowl of the air; for it repenteth me that I have made them; and Genesis VII, 4: For yet seven days, and I will cause it to rain upon the earth forty days and forty nights; and every living thing that I have made will I destroy from off the face of the ground.

261. perdere, demittere is an example of hysteron proteron, the reverse of the natural order of events.

265. "His forbidding face shrouded in pitchy darkness."

269. hinc = deinde: "next," "after that."

Page 74. — 270. nuntia Iunonis Iris: this description of Iris, the messenger of Juno, "varios induta colores," is paralleled by Vergil's lines (Aen. IV, 700):

> Ergo Iris croceis per caelum rosicina pennis,
> Mille trahens varios adverso sole colores, > Devolat.

The bright many-hued trail left by Iris was the rainbow, which Spenser (Faerie Queene, V, iii, 25) thus describes:

> As when the daughter of Thaumantes faire
> Hath in a watry cloud displayed wide
> Her goodly bow, which paints the liquid ayre,
> That all men wonder at her colours pride.

271. concipit aquas, etc.: "Iris draws up water and feeds it to the clouds."

Compare the familiar phenomenon of "the sun drawing water."

274. caelo suo: rain, cloud-bursts, and the like are not enough; there must be swollen rivers, broken dikes, tidal waves.

275. caeruleus frater: i.e. Neptune.

277, 278. non est hortamine, etc.: "now is no time to employ a long harangue," such as a general would make to his army just before ordering them into battle.

280. The figure now changes to that of the horse-race. Immittere habenas is "to give loose rein," "shake out the reins" over the necks of the horses.

281 and following. Compare with this dramatic account of the coming of the flood the exceedingly simple language of Genesis, VII, 17–24.

281-282. ora relaxant, defrenato cursu: again the figure of the horse with the "bits removed from the mouth" and the consequent "unbridled course." The poet has, however, in line 282 mixed his horses and his streams, since defrenato is applicable only to the former, and volvuntur only to the latter.

284. Subterranean streams are opened up.

285. expatiata is the word used of Phaethon’s runaway horses (Met. II, 202). In any other writer than Ovid the rapid motion of this line might be considered as intentionally agreeing with the motion of the swift waters. But see introductory note on Ovid’s Hexameters, under the head “The position and preponderance of dactyls and spondees.”

293-306. Ovid delights in the sharp contrasts afforded by these changed relations, and makes the most of his opportunity.

302. Shelley (Prometheus Unbound, III, ii) thus beautifully pictures the Nereids in their under-sea home:—

Behold the Nereids under the green sea,
Their wavering limbs borne on the wind-like stream,
Their white arms lifted o’er their streaming hair
With garlands pied and starry sea-flower crowns.

PAGE 75. —303. agitata is used by prolepsis, since the oaks would not be “shaken” until the act in pulsant is performed.

304. The abandonment of natural hostility by the lower animals in times of common danger, e.g. by flood or forest fire, is well known.

305, 306. nec vires, etc.: “neither does the power of his lightning stroke avail the boar, nor his swift limbs the stag, (since both alike are) swept away (by the flood).” Ovid expresses more plainly the application of fulmen to “the destructive power” of the boar’s tusks in another place (Met. X, 550):—

Fulmen habent acres in ad unciss dentibus apri.

ablato belongs rhetorically with both apro and cervo. For the case of these, see H. 429 (386); M. 202; A. 228; G. 346; B. 187, III; L. & M. 532.

307, 308. “And after long search upon the earth for a place to light, the wandering bird with wearied wings fell down into the sea.”

detur: H. 590 (497, I); M. 382, 3; A. 317, 2; G. 630; B. 282, 2; L. & M. 835.

318. The sole surviving mortals were Deucalion and his wife Pyrrha, who was also his cousin, loosely called his sister (line 351). Their genealogy is as follows:—

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Uranus</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Iapetus (the Titan)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>-------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Prometheus</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Deucalion</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
320. Corycidas nymphas, etc.: their first act is one of worship of the nymphs and other deities, dwelling in the mountain cave on Parnassus. Parnassus from most ancient times was associated with the presence of the Muses and Apollo, whose were the Delphic oracle and the Castalian spring. At this time, however, it was Themis, the goddess of justice and of prophecy, who presided over the oracle.

321. The suppliant attitude of Adam and Eve after the fall reminds Milton of these two before the shrine of Themis (Paradise Lost, XI):

Nor important less
Seemed their petition, than when the ancient pair
In fables old, less ancient yet than these,
Deucalion and chaste Pyrrha, to restore
The race of mankind drowned, before the shrine
Of Themis stood devout.

322. aequi: H. 451, 3 (399, II); M. 226, 2; A. 218, b; G. 375; B. 204, 1, 4; L. & M. 574.

325. "And that (only) one man was left from (those who were) but now so many thousands."

325, 326. For the repetition involved in these lines as a characteristic of Ovid's style, see note on Ovid's Hexameters, under the heading "Alliteration, assonance, and kindred effects."

328. aquilone: this wind had been previously shut up (line 262), as being one of those which put storm clouds to flight. It is now brought into requisition for this very purpose.

332, 333. Triton was the son of Neptune, whose especial function it was to communicate the orders of that god upon his resounding horn or shell. He is graphically represented here as "standing forth upon the depths, dark blue, his shoulders covered with a thick growth of shell-fish."

Page 76. — 335. illi: H. 431, 6 (388, 4); M. 207; A. 232, b; G. 355, note; B. 189, 3; L. & M. 545.

337, 338. quae medio, etc.: "which, when in mid sea it has received (the Triton's) breath, fills with its notes the shores that lie beneath the rising and the setting sun."

339. ora madidâ rorantia barbâ: note the interlocked order of words.

341. omnibus undis: H. 431, 2 (388, 1); M. 207, 2; A. 232, a; G. 354; B. 189, 2; L. & M. 545.

314. plenos capit alveus amnes: the rivers are still swollen, but are contained within their banks.

345. crescent loca, etc.: "the lands increase as the waves subside."

346. diem: "time."

348–350. The picture is striking and impressive — two living creatures in a world of silence and of death. The first thought of the man is for their personal safety not yet secure (351–362); the next is, "How can the race of mortals be restored?"

351. soror, coniunx: see note on line 318.
352, 353. The pair are united by triple bonds—the ties of blood, of marriage, and of common perils.
355. nos duo turba sumus: this is a unique instance of a “crowd” of two. According to other accounts, these were not the only survivors of the flood.
356. “Even this hold (which we have) upon our life is not as yet sufficiently secure.”
358, 359. quis tibi nunc animus foret? “what would be your feelings now?”
359. miseranda: in a purely adjectival sense, “poor soul.”
360. quo consolante dolores? “with whom consoling wouldst thou grieve?” i.e. “who would console thy grief?”
361, 362. See note, lines 325, 326.

Page 77.—363. paternis artibus: i.e. the creative arts which Prometheus employed. See line 82, note.
364. animas formatae infundere terrae: “to breathe the breath of life into the moulded clay.”
369. The Cephisus has its source at the foot of Parnassus.
370. ut, sic: “though, still.”
371. libatos inroravere liquores: the purification by running water before engaging in any sacred act was a well-established custom. In Homer (II. IX, 207) this act is coupled with the sacred silence that is also enjoined: —

And now be water brought to cleanse our hands,
And charge be given that no ill-omened word
Be uttered, while we pray that Jupiter,
The son of Saturn, will assist our need.

And Aeneas (Aen. II, 718) cannot himself handle the images of the gods: —

Me, bello et tanto digressum et caede recenti,
Attractare nefas, donec me flumine vivo
Abluero.

372. vestibus et capit: H. 429 (386); M. 202; A. 228; G. 347; B. 187, III; L. & M. 532.
376. humi: H. 484, 2 (426, 2); M. 242, 2; A. 258, d; G. 411, Rem. 2; B. 232, 2; L. & M. 622.
379. “Tell us, O Themis, how (gua arte) the loss of our (i.e. the human) race may be repaired.”
The ungirt robes, bare feet, and flowing hair are all seen in religious symbolism. Cf. Ovid’s description of Medea (A. 183), and Vergil (Aen. IV, 518), who represents Dido at the

Unum exuta pedem vincis, in veste recincta.

384. obstipuere: to appreciate fully the horror that the words of if literally interpreted, would occasion, it must be remembered worship of ancestors was prevalent among the ancients, disturb the dead violated not only a natural sentiment, but a deep-seated principle of religious veneration.

386, 387. “And in timid tones she prays (the goddess) to grant gence, and trembles at the thought of outraging her mother treating her bones (as the goddess directs).”

390. For the force of the patronymics, see note on line 318.
392. pia: i.e. counseling no failure in duty toward parents.
    idea of piety was very broad, signifying action according to cially to the gods and religion in general, to parents, child

Page 78. — 393. lapides, etc.: “I believe that the bones which speaks of are the stones in the body of mother earth.” The of the earth as the mother of all creatures is one of the ideas of the race.

395. Titania: i.e. Pyrrha, so called because descended from Iapet;
397. monitis: H. 426, 1 (385, II); M. 205; A. 227; G. 346; E
    L. & M. 530.
399. iussos lapides, etc.: iussos belongs rhetorically with the sub tum. “They cast the stones behind them as they walk, goddess bade them.”
382. The veiled head and the ungirt robe were connected with the symbolism of Roman ritualistic worship. The purpose of the former is expressly stated by Vergil (Aen. III, 408) in the advice of Helenus to Aeneas:

Ne qua inter sanctos ignes in honore deorum
Hostiliis facies occurrat et omnia turbet.

The ungirt robes, bare feet, and flowing hair are all seemingly related in religious symbolism. Cf. Ovid's description of Medea (Met. VII, 184, 183), and Vergil (Aen. IV, 518), who represents Dido at the altar:

Unum exuta pedem vincis, in veste rectinta.

384. obstipuere: to appreciate fully the horror that the words of the oracle, if literally interpreted, would occasion, it must be remembered that the worship of ancestors was prevalent among the ancients, and that to disturb the dead violated not only a natural sentiment, but also the most deep-seated principle of religious veneration.

386, 387. "And in timid tones she prays (the goddess) to grant her indulgence, and trembles at the thought of outraging her mother's ghost by treating her bones (as the goddess directs.)."

390. For the force of the patronymics, see note on line 318.

392. pia: i.e. counseling no failure in duty toward parents. The ancient idea of piety was very broad, signifying action according to duty, especially to the gods and religion in general, to parents, children, country.

Page 78.—393. lapides, etc.: "I believe that the bones which the goddess speaks of are the stones in the body of mother earth." The conception of the earth as the mother of all creatures is one of the ancient stock ideas of the race.

395. Titania: i.e. Pyrrha, so called because descended from Iapetus the Titan.

397. monitis: H. 426, 1 (385, II); M. 205; A. 227; G. 346; B. 187, II; L. & M. 530.

399. iussos lapides, etc.: iussos belongs rhetorically with the subject of mitunt. "They cast the stones behind them as they walk, just as the goddess bade them."

400. nisi sit, etc.: the naïveté of this reasoning is similar to that of the rustic who proved (Met. VIII, 620) that Philemon and Baucis had been changed into trees by the statement that he had seen the trees.

credat: H. 557 (486, II); M. 327; A. 307, 2, b; G. 259; B. 380, 2, L. & M. 723.

401. ponere = deponere.

suum: "their natural."

402. ducere formam: "to take on a definite shape."

404-406. "A certain likeness to the human form indeed (sit) can be seen, still (sic) not very clear, but (such a form) as (statues) just begun out of marble have, not sharply defined, and just like roughly blocked out images."

407. "That part of them, however, which was damp with some slight moisture."

413. Keats (Lamia) recalls this fancied origin of woman: —

There is not such a treat among them all,
Haunters of cavern, lake, and waterfall,
As a real woman, lineal indeed
From Pyrrha’s pebbles or old Adam’s seed.

414. Laborum: H. 451, 3 (399, II); M. 226, 2, A. 218, b; G. 375; B. 204, i, a; L. & M. 574.

414, 415. Compare Spenser (Faerie Queene, V, Introd. 2), who complains of the reverse process, of men changed into stone: —

For from the golden age, that first was named,
It’s now at earst [length] become a stonie one;
And men themselves, the which at first were framed
Of earthly mould, and form’d of flesh and bone,
Are now transformed into hardest stone;
Such as behind their backs (so backward bred)
Were throwne by Pyrrha and Deucalione.

416–437. Ovid’s theory of the origin of the lower forms of life is that of spontaneous generation from the slime of the recently inundated earth, under the genial influence of the heat of the sun. Lucretius, who gives the history of the origin of life and progress of civilization (De Rerum Natura, V, 771–1457), also represents the earth as the mother, in a very real sense, from whom sprung directly all forms of life. Herbs and trees were first produced, then birds and animals, and finally human infants crept forth from cavities in the earth’s surface. This theory is opposed alike to that of evolution and to that of the divine origin of life.

vetus umor: i.e. that which remained from the flood.

79. The phenomena of the annual overflow of the Nile, and the consequent fecundation of the adjacent land, are well known from immemorial. Gray (Education and Government) alludes to these phenomena: —

What wonder, in the sultry climes, that spread
Where Nile redundant o’er his summer-bed
From his broad bosom life and verdure flings,
And broods o’er Egypt with his wat’ry wings.

serio sidere: i.e. the sun.
426–429. inveniunt, etc.: these would be "finds" indeed for the biologist, if true, in which he could see life in its very inception, inanimate matter in the very act of passing into animate existence.

et in his, etc.: "and among these they see certain forms of life just begun, on the very brink of birth; some not yet completed, and lacking in some of their parts; and often, in the same body, one part is alive while the other is unformed clay."

430, 431. According to this view, heat and moisture are the complementary powers of fecundation, the parents, as it were, of all life. This creative power comes from a union of opposites, expressed very tersely in the phrase, vapor umidus (line 432).

432. aqua: H. 452, 1 (399 II); M. compare 226, 2; A. 218, b; G. 375; B. compare 204, 1, a; L. & M. 575.

434–437. Compare this second account of the origin of life with the first (lines 76–88).

437. nova monstra: in these words the poet prepares the way for the next story, for the Python which Apollo slew was one of these monster. See Introduction to Metamorphoses, page 63, first paragraph, and note on Ovid’s method of transition to each new story.

438. illa: i.e. Tellus. "She indeed would prefer not (to have done so), but she did produce thee also," etc.

Python: the difference between what may be called the realistic and rationalistic treatment of classic myth in English literature is well illustrated in the following quotations, both referring to the Python:

But still greatest he the midst,
Now dragon grown, larger than whom the sun
Engendered in the Pythian vale on slime, Huge Python.

— Milton, Paradise Lost, X.

Gray Power was seated
Safely on her ancestral throne;
And Faith, the Python, undefeated
Even to its blood-stained steps dragged on Her foul and wounded train.—Shelley, Rosalind and Helen.

The name of this serpent is accounted for as follows: after Apollo had slain the creature he cried out in triumph, "Now rot (röthe) there on the man-feeding earth." Hence also the name of the oracle of Delphi, near which place the serpent was slain; Pythia, the priestess of the oracle; Pythius the god Apollo, and Pythia (n. pl.) the game which Apollo founded.

441. deus arcitenens: "the archer god," i.e. Apollo. This epithet, "god of the glittering bow," is one of the earlier epithets of this god, and
a favorite with Homer. See Goldsmith (Vida's Game of Chess): —
As yet Apollo in his radiant seat
Had never driv'n his chariot through the air,
Known by his bow alone and golden hair.

448, 449. “At these games, every youth who had been victorious in boxing, running, or the chariot race, received the honor of an oaken garland.”

449, 450. Note again the preparation for the next story: the victor crowned with the oaken garland, since the laurel was not yet Apollo’s tree.
This suggests the story of the laurel tree.

PAGE 80. — 451. de qualibet arbore: “with a garland made of any tree (you please).”

452. Daphne: supply erat.
458. qui: the antecedent is nos implied in nostros.
460. tumidum: i.e. propter venenum.
461, 462. “Do thou be content with thy torch to light the hidden (nescio quos) fires of love, and do not lay claim to our honors.” Cupid is generally represented with wings and a bow, but sometimes also with a torch, representing the burning fires of love. See Tibullus, II, 1, 82.

463. figat: H. 559, 3 (484, III); M. 323; A. 266, e; G. 264; B. 278;
L. & M. 716.

464. arcus: supply figit.
469. diversorum operum: “of opposite effects.”

PAGE 81. — 478. petentes, the object of aversata, “rejecting.” 479. viri: H. 451, 2 (399, I, 3); M. 226, 1; A. 218, a; G. 374; B. 204, 1;
L. & M. 573.

480. “Nor does she care anything about Hymen, or love, or marriage.”
488. sed te decor, etc.: “but that beauty of thine forbids thy being what thou desirlest (i.e. a virgin).”

492. demptis aristas: “when the grain has been harvested.”
493. quas forte viator, etc.: “which some traveler has chanced to build too near, or has gone off and left (burning) at break of day.”

500. vidisse: “merely to have seen.”

508, 509. His fears are threefold: lest she fall on the rough path, lest she be scathed by the brambles, and lest he, her lover, be cause of harm to her.

PAGE 82. — 512. cui placeas, etc.: “but do stop and ask who your lover is.”

515. mihi: H. 426, 1 (385, I); M. 205; A. 227; G. 346; B. 187, II, a;
L. & M. 530.

517. The past, present, and future are alike open to him. He is said to have been taught divination by Pan.

eritque: que is redundant.

518. per me concordant, etc.: Apollo’s claim is not quite correct here, although he is indeed the god of music. It was Mercury who invented the lyre, and then gave it to his brother Apollo. See Horace (Odes, I, x, 5).

519. He is the god of the unerring bow, unmatched save by the archer who has smitten him.

521. Apollo is god also of the healing art, an art which he transmitted to his son Aesculapius.

522. mihi: H. 432 (389, note 2); M. 209; A. 235, e; G. 351; B. 188, 2, b; L. & M. 541.

The physician cannot heal himself. So Medea and Circe were unable by their own magic to help themselves. See Remedia Amoris, 261–288.

526. cumque ipso, etc.: “and she leaves him with his unspoken words behind, even in her desertion (tum) seeming fair.”

527. corpora: “her limbs.”

528. “And the opposing breezes set her garments a flutter as she hurried on.”

530. sed enim: “but (the chase draws to an end) for,” etc.

531. perdere blanditias: not so much to “waste his words” as to “waste his time in persuasive words.”

532. admissus passu: “at utmost speed.”

533. Ut cum canis Gallicus leporem in vacuo arvo vidit.

For the simile, compare Homer (Iliad, X, 360): —

As two hounds,
Sharp-toothed, and trained to track their prey, pursue
Through forest-grounds some fawn or hare that runs
Before them panting, so did Diomed
And terrible Ulysses without stop
Follow the fugitive.

And see a similar figure in Iliad, XXII, 188, where Achilles is pursing Hector. Vergil no doubt has these in mind in Aeneid, XII, 748.

534. hic, ille: the hound, the hare.

535. iam iamque: this is an instance of the dramatic repetition of iam, expressing the extreme imminence of the act. See Vergil (Aen. I, 530): —

Illum ardens infesto vulnere Pyrrhus
Insequitur, iam iamque manu tenet et premis hasta.

536. et extento, etc.: “and grazes the very heels (vestigia) (of the hare) with his outstretched muzzle.”

538. eripitur: has the middle force = se eripit, “escapes.”

Page 83. — 542. crinem: the object of adflat, which takes either acc. or dat.

545. vel istam ... figuram: “or else destroy by changing the accursed (istam) beauty which is the cause of my persecution.”

istam: this pronoun, properly a second personal demonstrative, is often streams; since defrenato is applicable only to the former, and voluntur only to the latter.

184. Subterranean streams are opened up.

185. exspatiata is the word used of Phaethon's runaway horses (Met. II, 202). In any other writer than Ovid the rapid motion of this line might be considered as intentionally agreeing with the motion of the swift waters. But see introductory note on Ovid's Hexameters, under the head "The position and preponderance of dactyls and spondees."

193-306. Ovid delights in the sharp contrasts afforded by these changed relations, and makes the most of his opportunity.

102. Shelley (Prometheus Unbound, III, ii) thus beautifully pictures the Nereids in their under-sea home:

Behold the Nereids under the green sea,
Their wavering limbs borne on the wind-like stream,
Their white arms lifted o'er their streaming hair
With garlands pied and starry sea-flower crowns.

Age 75. — 303. agitata is used by prolepsis, since the oaks would not be "shaken" until the act in pulsant is performed.

104. The abandonment of natural hostility by the lower animals in times of common danger, e.g. by flood or forest fire, is well known.

105. 306. nec vires, etc.: "neither does the power of his lightning stroke avail the boar, nor his swift limbs the stag, (since both alike are) swept away (by the flood)." Ovid expresses more plainly the application of fulmen to "the destructive power" of the boar's tusks in another place (Met. X, 550):

Fulmen habent acres in aduncis dentibus apri.

aBLato belongs rhetorically with both aprox and cervo. For the case of these, see H. 429 (386); M. 202; A. 228, G. 346; B. 187, III; L. & M. 532.

7. 308. "And after long search upon the earth for a place to light, the wandering bird with wearied wings fell down into the sea."

detur; H. 590 (497, I); M. 382, 3; A. 317, 2; G. 639; B. 282, 2; L. & M. 835.

The sole surviving mortals were Deucalion and his wife Pyrrha, who was also his cousin, loosely called his sister (line 351). Their genealogy is as follows:

```
     Uranus
      | Iapetus (the Titan)
     |   |   |
     Prometheus | Epimetheus  |
     | Deucalion   | Pyrrha     |
```
320. Corycidas nymphs, etc.: their first act is one of worship of the nymphs and other deities, dwelling in the mountain cave on Parnassus. Parnassus from most ancient times was associated with the presence of the Muses and Apollo, whose were the Delphic oracle and the Catan- lian spring. At this time, however, it was Themis, the goddess of justice and of prophecy, who presided over the oracle.

321. The suppliant attitude of Adam and Eve after the fall reminds Milton of these two before the shrine of Themis (Paradise Lost, XI):—

Nor important less
Seemed their petition, than when the ancient pair
In fables old, less ancient yet than these,
Deucalion and chaste Pyrrha, to restore
The race of mankind drowned, before the shrine
Of Themis stood devout.

322. aequi: H. 451, 3 (399, II); M. 226, 2; A. 218, b; G. 375; B. 204, 1, 4; L. & M. 574.

325. “And that (only) one man was left from (those who were) but now so many thousands.”

325, 326. For the repetition involved in these lines as a characteristic of Ovid’s style, see note on Ovid’s Hymn meters, under the heading “Alliteration, assonance, and kindred effects.”

328. aquilone: this wind had been previously shut up (line 262), as being one of those which put storm clouds to flight. It is now brought into requisition for this very purpose.

332, 333. Triton was the son of Neptune, whose especial function it was to communicate the orders of that god upon his resounding horn or shell. He is graphically represented here as “standing forth upon the depths, dark blue, his shoulders covered with a thick growth of shell-fish.”

Page 76.—335. illi: H. 431, 6 (388, 4); M. 207; A. 232, b; G. 355, note; B. 189, 3; L. & M. 545.

337, 338. quae medio, etc.: “which, when in mid sea it has received (the Triton’s) breath, fills with its notes the shores that lie beneath the rising and the setting sun.”

339. ora madidâ rorantia barba: note the interlocked order of words.

341. omnibus undis: H. 431, 2 (388, 1); M. 207, 2; A. 232, a; G. 354; B. 189, 2; L. & M. 545.

344. plenos capit alveus amnes: the rivers are still swollen, but are contained within their banks.

345. crescent loca, etc.: “the lands increase as the waves subside.”

346. diem: “time.”

348-350. The picture is striking and impressive — two living creatures in world of silence and of death. The first thought of the man is for their personal safety not yet secure (351–362); the next is, "How can the race of mortals be restored?"

1. moror, coniunx: see note on line 318.

2. 353. The pair are united by triple bonds—the ties of blood, of marriage, and of common perils.

5. nos duo turba sumus: this is a unique instance of a "crowd" of two. According to other accounts, these were not the only survivors of the flood.

i. "Even this hold (which we have) upon our life is not as yet sufficiently secure."

359. quis tibi nunc animus foret? "what would be your feelings now?"

miseranda: in a purely adjectival sense, "poor soul."

quo consolante dolores? "with whom consoling wouldst thou grieve?"

i.e. "who would console thy grief?"

362. See note, lines 325, 326.

& 77. — 363. paternis aribus: i.e. the creative arts which Prometheus employed. See line 82, note.

animas formatae infundere terrae: "to breathe the breath of life into the moulded clay."

The Cephisus has its source at the foot of Parnassus.

ut, sic: "though, still."

libatos inroraveri liquores: the purification by running water before engaging in any sacred act was a well-established custom. In Homer (I. IX, 207) this act is coupled with the sacred silence that is also enjoined:

And now be water brought to cleanse our hands,
And charge be given that no ill-omened word
Be uttered, while we pray that Jupiter,
The son of Saturn, will assist our need.

And Aeneas (Aen. II, 718) cannot himself handle the images of the gods:

Me, bello e tanto digressum et caede recenti,
Attractare nefas, donec me flumine vivo
Abluero.

vestibus et capiti: H. 429 (386); M. 202; A. 228; G. 347; B. 187, III; L. & M. 532.

humi: H. 484, 2 (426, 2); M. 242, 2; A. 258, d; G. 411, Rem. 2; B. 232, 2; L. & M. 622.

"Tell us, O Themis, how (qua arte) the loss of our (i.e. the human) race may be repaired."
382. The veiled head and the ungirt robe were connected with the symbolism of Roman ritualistic worship. The purpose of the former is expressly stated by Vergil (Aen. III, 408) in the advice of Helenus to Aeneas:—

Ne qua inter sanctos ignes in honore deorum
Hostiliis facies occurrat et omnia turbet.

The ungirt robes, bare feet, and flowing hair are all seemingly related in religious symbolism. Cf. Ovid's description of Medea (Met. VII, 182, 183), and Vergil (Aen. IV, 518), who represents Dido at the altar,—

Unum exuta pedem vincis, in veste recincta.

384. obstipuere: to appreciate fully the horror that the words of the oracle, if literally interpreted, would occasion, it must be remembered that the worship of ancestors was prevalent among the ancients, and that to disturb the dead violated not only a natural sentiment, but also the most deep-seated principle of religious veneration.

386, 387. "And in timid tones she prays (the goddess) to grant her indulgence, and trembles at the thought of outraging her mother's ghost by treating her bones (as the goddess directs)."

390. For the force of the patronymics, see note on line 318.

392. pia: i.e. counseling no failure in duty toward parents. The ancient idea of piety was very broad, signifying action according to duty, especially to the gods and religion in general, to parents, children, country.

Page 78. — 393. lapides, etc.: "I believe that the bones which the goddess speaks of are the stones in the body of mother earth." The conception of the earth as the mother of all creatures is one of the ancient stock ideas of the race.

395. Titania: i.e. Pyrrha, so called because descended from Iapetus the Titan.

397. monitis: H. 426, 1 (385, II); M. 205; A. 227; G. 346; B. 187, II, a; L. & M. 530.

399. iussos lapides, etc.: iussos belongs rhetorically with the subject of mis-tunt. "They cast the stones behind them as they walk, just as the goddess bade them."

400. nisi sit, etc.: the naiveté of this reasoning is similar to that of the rustic who proved (Met. VIII, 620) that Philemon and Baucis had been changed into trees by the statement that he had seen the trees.

credat: H. 557 (486, II); M. 327; A. 307, 2, b; G. 259; B. 380, 2, b; L. & M. 723.

401. poner = deponere.

suum: "their natural."

402. ducere formam: "to take on a definite shape."

404-406. "A certain likeness to the human form indeed (sic) can be seen, still (sic) not very clear, but (such a form) as (statues) just begun out of marble have, not sharply defined, and just like roughly blocked out images."

407. "That part of them, however, which was damp with some slight moisture."

413. Keats (Lamia) recalls this fancied origin of woman: —

There is not such a treat among them all,
Haunters of cavern, lake, and waterfall,
As a real woman, lineal indeed
From Pyrrha’s pebbles or old Adam’s seed.

414. Laborum: H. 451, 3 (399, II); M. 226, 2, A. 218, b; G. 375; B. 204, 1, a; L. & M. 574.

414. 415. Compare Spenser (Faerie Queene, V, Introd. 2), who complains of the reverse process, of men changed into stone: —

For from the golden age, that first was named,
It’s now at earst [length] become a stonie one;
And men themselves, the which at first were framed
Of earthly mould, and form’d of flesh and bone,
Are now transformed into hardest stone;
Such as behind their backs (so backward bred)
Were throwne by Pyrrha and Deucalione.

416–437. Ovid’s theory of the origin of the lower forms of life is that of spontaneous generation from the slime of the recently inundated earth, under the genial influence of the heat of the sun. Lucretius, who gives the history of the origin of life and progress of civilization (De Rerum Natura, V, 771–1457), also represents the earth as the mother, in a very real sense, from whom sprung directly all forms of life. Herbs and trees were first produced, then birds and animals, and finally human infants crept forth from cavities in the earth’s surface. This theory is opposed alike to that of evolution and to that of the divine origin of life.

417. vetus umor: i.e. that which remained from the flood.

424. aestherio sidere: i.e. the sun.
426-429. inveniunt, etc.: these would be "finds" indeed for the biologist, if true, in which he could see life in its very inception, inanimate matter in the very act of passing into animate existence.

et in his, etc.: "and among these they see certain forms of life just begun, on the very brink of birth; some not yet completed, and lacking in some of their parts; and often, in the same body, one part is alive while the other is unformed clay."

430, 431. According to this view, heat and moisture are the complementary powers of fecundation, the parents, as it were, of all life. This creative power comes from a union of opposites, expressed very tersely in the phrase, vapor umidus (line 432).

432. aqua: H. 452, 1 (399 II); M. compare 226, 2; A. 218, 6; G. 375; B. compare 204, 1, a; L. & M. 575.

434-437. Compare this second account of the origin of life with the first (lines 76-88).

437. nova monstra: in these words the poet prepares the way for the next story, for the Python which Apollo slew was one of these monsters.

See Introduction to Metamorphoses, page 63, first paragraph, and note Ovid's method of transition to each new story.

438. illa: i.e. Tellus. "She indeed would prefer not (to have done so), but she did produce thee also," etc.

Python: the difference between what may be called the realistic and rationalistic treatment of classic myth in English literature is well illustrated in the following quotations, both referring to the Python:—

But still greatest he the midst,
Now dragon grown, larger than whom the sun
Engendered in the Pythian vale on slime,
Huge Python. —Milton, Paradise Lost, X.

Gray Power was seated
Safely on her ancestral throne;
And Faith, the Python, undefeated
Even to its blood-stained steps dragged on Her soul and wounded train. —Shelley, Rosalind and Helen.

The name of this serpent is accounted for as follows: after Apollo had slain the creature he cried out in triumph, "Now rot (πόθεν) there on the man-feeding earth." Hence also the name of the oracle of Delphi, near which place the serpent was slain; Pythia, the priestess of the oracle; Pythius the god Apollo, and Pythia (n. pl.) the games which Apollo founded.

441. deus arcitenens: "the archer god," i.e. Apollo. This epithet, "god of the glittering bow," is one of the earlier epithets of this god, and
a favorite with Homer. See Goldsmith (Vida's Game of Chess):—

As yet Apollo in his radiant seat
Had never driv'n his chariot through the air,
Known by his bow alone and golden hair.

48, 449. "At these games, every youth who had been victorious in boxing, running, or the chariot race, received the honor of an oaken garland."

19, 450. Note again the preparation for the next story: the victor crowned with the oaken garland, since the laurel was not yet Apollo's tree. This suggests the story of the laurel tree.

GR 80.—451. de qualibet arbore: "with a garland made of any tree (you please)."

1. Daphne: supply erat.
2. qui: the antecedent is nos implied in nostros.
3. tumidum: i.e. propter venenum.
4. 462. "Do thou be content with thy torch to light the hidden (nescio quos) fires of love, and do not lay claim to our honors." Cupid is generally represented with wings and a bow, but sometimes also with a torch, representing the burning fires of love. See Tibullus, II, 1, 82.
5. figat: H. 559, 3 (484, III); M. 323; A. 266, 6; G. 264; B. 278; L. & M. 716.
6. arcus: supply figit.
7. diversorum operum: "of opposite effects."

GR 81. — 478. petentes, the object of aversata, "rejecting."
8. viri: H. 451, 2 (399, I, 3); M. 226, 1; A. 218, 9; G. 374; B. 204, 1; L. & M. 573.
9. "Nor does she care anything about Hymen, or love, or marriage."
10. sed te decor, etc.: "but that beauty of thine forbids thy being what thou desirest (i.e. a virgin)."
11. demptis aristis: "when the grain has been harvested."
12. quas forte viator, etc.: "which some traveler has chanced to build too near, or has gone off and left (burning) at break of day."
13. vidisse: "merely to have seen."
14. 509. His fears are threefold: lest she fall on the rough path, lest she be scratched by the brambles, and lest he, her lover, be cause of harm to her.

GR 82. — 512. cui placæas, etc.: "but do stop and ask who your lover is."
15. mihi: H. 426, 1 (385, I); M. 205; A. 227; G. 346; B. 187, II, 6; L. & M. 530.
16. The past, present, and future are alike open to him. He is said to have been taught divination by Pan.
17. critque: que is redundant.
18. per me concordant, etc.: Apollo's claim is not quite correct here, although he is indeed the god of music. It was Mercury who invented the lyre, and then gave it to his brother Apollo. See Horace (Odes, L. x. 5.)

519. He is the god of the unwarring bow, unmatched save by the archer who has smitten him.

520. Apollo is god also of the healing art, an art which he transmitted to his son Asclepius.

522. milki: H. 432; 389, note 2.; M. 209; A. 235, e.; G. 351; B. 188, 4, b;
L. A. M. 541.

The physician cannot heal himself. So Medea and Circe were unable by their own magic to help themselves. See Remedia Amoris, 261-288.
525. camque ipse, etc.: "and she leaves him with his unspoken words behind, even in her desertion, (swm) seeming fair."

527. corpora: "her limbs."

528. — And the opposing breezes set her garments a flutter as she hurried on."

530. sed enim: "but: the chase draws to an end) for," etc.

531. perdere blanditias: not so much to "waste his words" as to "waste his time in persuasive words."

532. admisso passu: "at utmost speed."

533. Ut cum iactis Galicis tegment in vacuo arvo vidit.

For the simile, compare Homer (Iliad, X, 360):

As two hounds,
Sharp-toothed, and trained to track their prey, pursue
Through forest-grounds some fawn or hare that runs
Before them panting, so did Diomed
And terrible Ulysses without stop
Follow the fugitive.

And see a similar figure in Iliad, XXII, 188, where Achilles is pursing Hector. Vergil no doubt has these in mind in Aeneid, XII, 748.

534. hic, ille: the hound, the hare.

535. iam iamque: this is an instance of the dramatic repetition of iam, expressing the extreme imminence of the act. See Vergil (Aen. II.
530):

Illum ardens infesto vulnere Pyrrhus
Insequitur, iam iamque manu tenet et premis hasta.

536. et extento, etc.: "and grazes the very heels (vestigia) (of the hare) with his outstretched muzzle."

538. eripitur: has the middle force = se eripit, "escapes."

Page 83. — 542. crinem: the object of adflat, which takes either acc. or dat.
545, 547. vel istam ... figuram: "or else destroy by changing the accursed (istam) beauty which is the cause of my persecution."

Istam: this pronoun, properly a second personal demonstrative, is often used in Ovid to express contempt, disgust, or kindred feeling, where there is no second personal idea.

551. pes for pedes.

553–567. In a note on the Python (line 438) were given illustrations of the realistic and rationalistic treatment of myth. A third method of treatment, the burlesque, is very well illustrated by Lowell’s version of the Apollo and Daphne story in the opening lines of his Fable for Critics:

> Phoebus, sitting one day in a laurel tree’s shade,
> Was reminded of Daphne, of whom it was made;
> For the god being one day too warm in his wooing,
> She took to the tree to escape his pursuing;
> Be the cause what it might, from his offers she shrunk,
> And, Ginevra-like, shut herself up in a trunk;
> And, though ’twas a step into which he had driven her,
> He somehow or other had never forgiven her.

553. hanc quoque: i.e. even in the form of a tree.

560, 561. The reference is to the several features of the triumphal entrance into Rome of a Roman general, who passed in magnificent pomp along the Via Sacra, up the Clivus Capitolineus, and halted at the temple of Jupiter on the Capitol. The laurel crown is here destined by Apollo to adorn the head of the victorious general in his triumph.

563. ante fores stabis, etc.: two laurel trees stood before the door of Augustus’ palace on the Palatine Hill.

mediam quercum refers to the civic crown of oak leaves which hung over the door in token that the prince was pater urbis.

564, 565. As Apollo’s hair is ever unshorn, so the leaves of the laurel are not to be deciduous, but remain ever green.

566. factis modo ramis: “with its new-made branches.”

567. utque caput: “and like a head.”

Page 84.—569. quaes refers to Tempe (n. pl. acc.).

ab imo Pindo: “from the foot of Pindus.”

571–573. “And by its heavy fall forms clouds which drive along fine smoke-like mist, and sprinkles the tops of the trees with spray, and deepens by its roar even remoter regions.”

572. In the description of this natural cloud of mist Ovid has an eye to the use which he is going to make of this by contrast with the miraculous cloud which Jove produces to conceal his amour (lines 601–604). A similar instance of Ovid’s foresight is seen in Ars Amatoria, III, 693, which see with note.

577. popularia flumina: i.e. the rivers of his own country.

578. grevatur consolenturne: “whether to congratulate or console,” an indirect question with nescia.
316

METAMORPHOSES I

582. Observe the poetic art in putting a descriptive epithet with each name.
583. quae = qual. quamque. "wherever."
   imperius. "their current."
584. A line of much poetic beauty—"lead down their waters, weary with wandering, into the sea."
585. Inacius: this word is the stepping-stone to the next story. He alone is absent. Why? It takes the whole story to tell. Ovid tells a part of this story again in Heroides, XIV, 85-108.
586. tuaque beatum, etc. "and destined to make some one (nescio quem) happy by your union (with him)."
587. praeside deo: abs. abs. giving its force to tua; "(you) safe under the protection of a god."
   memoriam is to be taken with secreta (n. pl. subs.).
   subhis: the future ind. used as a mild imperative.

Page 85. — 585. nec de plebe deo: deo is in apposition with deo of the previous line. "And (that too) not a god of (from) the common sort."
   de plebe = de plebeis deis: with these compare what may be called the patriarch gods (line 172 and note).
   magnâ: with zurück.

596. vaga is a natural epithet of the lightning flash viewed from the standpoint of mortals, but it is somewhat inappropriate in the mouth of Jove, who gives his thunderbolts.
597. ne fuge: what would be the prose construction?
602, 603. Supply est with mirata. "And she marveled that quick rising clouds had wroght the effect of night in the clear light of day."
603. non fluminis illas (nebulas) esse: see line 572 and note.
604. A second natural explanation of the clouds would be that they were mist or fog exhaled from the damp earth.
605. ubi sit: indirect question with circumspicit, "she looks around (to see) where her husband is."
   ut quae nosset: "as one who well knew," etc. = "since she well knew."
609. nebulasque recedere iussit: it was natural that Juno should give this command and be obeyed, for she was the queen of the air. In the physical interpretation of mythology, Jove represents the ether or upper regions of the air, while Juno is the lower strata corresponding to our atmosphere.
610. praesenserat: the subject is ille (line 611), i.e. Jove.
613, 614. nec non et cuius, etc.: "and (nec non) she asks both whose an-whence or from what herd the heifer is, as if she did not know."
615, 616. If the creature is a real heifer, she must have an owner who ca prove his ownership; if she is a miraculous creation, she must have maker (auctor). Jove puts a stop to the dangerous investigation by saying that she is an earth-born creature, having, therefore, no owner and no maker.
NOTES

618. crudele, etc.: "'tis a cruel task to surrender his love; but not to do so would arouse suspicion."

619. Pudor est qui suadeat, dissuadet amor: the two methods of expression are for the sake of variety. "On the one hand shame influences him (to give her up, and hence avoid suspicion); but love dissuades him from the other course (i.e. the course of betrayal)."

621. leve si munus vacca: "if so slight a boon as a heifer."

generisque torique: Juno was the sister as well as wife of Jove. Note the polysyndeton in -que-que.

negare tur, poterat: H. 583 (511, 1, note 2); M. 368; A. 308, c; G. 597, 3, a; B. 304, 3, a; L. & M. 940.

33. anxia furti = anxia ne fur tur fuit.

34. servandum: understand illum, i.e. vaccam. The genesis of the purpose idea in a simple objective gerundive construction is evident if the literal meaning be noticed. "She handed the heifer over to Argus as a to-be-watched thing," i.e. "she gave her to Argus to watch."

AGE 86.—626. inde = ex eis tumultibus, a partitive expression with bina.

"Of these, two at a time slept in their turn," etc.

7. in statione manebant: "remained on guard," a military metaphor.

8. luce: "by day."

1. indigno: here, as often, = not "unworthy," but "undeserving" such treatment.

634. "And for a couch, upon the earth not always grassy, does the poor wretch lie."

636. These lines illustrate Ovid's fondness for repetition of phrases.

6. propria: "her own."

639. In Heroides (XIV, 85-108) Ovid relates a portion of Io's story, which he puts in the mouth of Hypermnestra. The lines recall and enlarge upon the present passage.

littera quam pes in pulvere duxit: this has been thought by some to refer to the fact that the letters Ω roughly resemble the track made by the hoof of the cow, and that the name was simply stamped upon the ground, half accidentally. But, according to the better view, since the story clearly leaves to Io her human feelings and human reason, she may well be considered as intentionally tracing the letters on the ground.

650. tune es quae sita, etc.: "art thou she whom I have sought in every land, my daughter?"

655. tu non inventa, etc.: "unfound a lighter grief wast thou than found.” Certainty in such a case as this is far worse than uncertainty.

§ 87. — 660. habendus: understand est.

663. praecussaque ianua, etc.: “and (the fact that) the door of death (is) closed (to me) prolongs my grief for evermore.”

stellatus: Argus is so called because of his many eyes which glitter like stars.

inde procul: “at some distance from there.”

natum: i.e. Mercury. His mother was Maia, one of the Pleiades.

det: supply ut.

parva mora est sumpsisse: i.e. he put on without delay.

virga retenta est: this was the caduceus, a magic wand with which he performed many wonders. Some of these are described by Spenser (Faerie Queene, II, xii, 41): —

Of that same wood it fram’d was cunningly,
Of which Caduceus whilome was made,
Caduceus, the rod of Mercury,
With which he wont the Stygian realms invade,
Through ghastly horror and eternall shade;
Th’ infernal feends with it he can asswage,
And Orcus tame, whome nothing can persuade,
And rule the Furies when they most doe rage.

677. “With this wand, in the character of a shepherd, through sequestered country paths he drives a flock of goats, which he ‘borrowed’ as he came along.”

poteras: so in Vergil (Eclogues, I, 79) the shepherd says: —

Hic tamen hanc mecum poteras requiescere noctem.

Conington, commenting upon this passage, says: “It seems more pressing than the present — ‘you might as well stay.’ Perhaps account of the idiom is that it treats the time for action as almost gone by, the wrong determination as almost formed, and so implies urgency to change the one and overtake the other.”

Atlantiae: Maia, the mother of Mercury, was the daughter of Atlane 88. — 692. non semel: not once alone,” “more than once.”

695. Ortygiam studiis etc.: “she patterned after the Delian god in her daily pursuits (i.e. hunting, etc.), and especially (ipso) in main- taining her maiden life.”

colebat: the nymph’s worship took the form of imitation. Compare proverb, “Imitation is the sincerest flattery.”

falleret: the protasis is in si non foret, below. “When girl after manner of Diana, she would deceive (the beholder), and could be believed to be Diana herself, if," etc.

sic quoque: "even as it was."

restabat: Mercury's story stops here, for he sees (line 713) that his object is accomplished and his listener is asleep. To satisfy his readers, however, Ovid finishes the story — in the indirect discourse. "It remained to tell his words, and (to relate) how the nymph fled," etc.

706. See Keats (Miscellaneous Poems):

Telling us how fair, trembling Syrinx fled
Arcadian Pan, with such a fearful dread.
Poor nymph, — poor Pan, — how did he weep to find Nought but a lovely sighing of the wind
Along the reedy stream! a half-heard strain,
Full of sweet desolation — balmy pain.

,712. tenuisse has for its subject the instrument (syrinx, or Pandean pipes) whose structure is described in the ablative absolute phrase, disparibus calamis iunctis. "And so the pipes, made of unequal reeds fitted together by a joining of wax, took and kept the name of the maiden."

See 89.— 713, 714. This critical point in the story has attracted the fancy of the poets, who have made various uses of it. Thus Marlowe (The Tragedy of Dido):

A man [Sinon] compact of craft and perjury,
Whose ticing tongue was made of Hermes' pipe
To force an hundred watchful eyes to sleep.

Milton describes "the cohort bright of watchful cherubim" as follows (Paradise Lost, XI):

All their shape
Spangled with eyes, more numerous than those
Of Argus, and more wakeful than to drowse, Charmed with Arcadian pipe, the pastoral reed
Of Hermes, or his opiate rod.

Pope uses the incident to illustrate the disappearance of fancy and wit from current literature (The Dunciad, IV):

Before her [Chaos] fancy's gilded clouds decay,
And all its varying rainbows die away;
Wit shoots in vain its momentary fires,
The meteor drops and in a flash expires;
As Argus' eyes by Hermes' wand oppressed,
Closed one by one to everlasting rest.
Keats (Endymion) thinks especially of the sweetness of Mercury's music: — Ravishments more keen Than Hermes' pipe, when anxious he did lean Over eclipsing eyes.

720, 721. Some have put these lines into the mouth of Mercury as a triumphal boast. But it is quite in the style of Ovid, seemingly from his absorbing interest in the action which he is describing, to speak of in propria persona and himself address the actors. Instances of this are to be seen in Ars Amatoria, III, 735, 736; and Fasti, II, 101, 104, where see notes. quodque in tot lumina, etc.: in = inter. "And the light which thou hadst within thy many fires is all put out."

721. centum is commonly used in poetry to denote an indefinite number.

722. volucris suae: Juno's bird was the peacock (pavo), in whose tail she now sets the numerous star-like eyes of Argus. See Spenser (Faerie Queene, I, iv, 17): When she [Juno] does ride, Draune of fayre pecocks, that excell in pride, And full of Argus eyes their tayles dispredden wide.

725. "And she set a terrifying frenzy to work before the eyes and within the heart of her Grecian rival."

726. stimulos in pectore caecos: this "goad" has commonly been conceived of as a gadfly which Juno set to persecute her victim and sting her to madness. In Aeschylus (Prometheus Bound), in which the story of Io is told at length, the heifer-maiden comes upon the scene of Prometheus' sufferings after already prolonged wanderings. Shelley (Swellsfoot the Tyrant) gives a fanciful historical importance to this gadfly: —

The gadfly was the same which Juno sent
To agitate Io, and which Ezekiel mentions That the Lord whistled for out of the mountains
Of utmost Ethiopia, to torment Mesopotamian Babylon.

728. Ages are now supposed to pass by, and Io at last comes to Egypt, where she is to be delivered from her sufferings. Prometheus (see above) had prophesied her further wanderings, in the course of which "the Bosphorus shall take its name from thee," and "from thee the Ionian [sea] shall be called." And at last —

A city stands,
Canbos, at its country's farthest bound,
Hard by the mouth and silt-dank of the Nile;
There Zeus shall give thee back thy mind again,
With hand that works no terror touching thee—
Touch only—and thou then shalt bear a child
Of Zeus begotten, Epaphos, "Touch-born."

Prometheus foretells that he himself shall be delivered from his present ills by a descendant of Io in the thirteenth generation. This prophecy was fulfilled in the person of Hercules. Following is the genealogy of Io and her descendants:

Oceanus = Tethys

\[ \text{Inachus (a river god of Argos)} \]

Jupiter = Io

\[ \text{Phoroneus (hence Io is called Phoronis)} \]

. Epaphus

Libya = Neptune

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Agenor</th>
<th>Belus</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

Cadmus

* Europa

\[ \text{49 daughters} \]

Hypermnestra = Lyceus

\[ \text{49 sons} \]

\[ \text{Abas (k. of Argos)} \]

Acrisius

\[ \text{Danaë = Jupiter} \]

\[ \text{Perseus = Andromeda} \]

\[ \text{Electryon} \]

Alcmene = Jupiter

Hercules

\[ \text{resupinoque ardua collo, etc.: "and with her head thrown back, she raised to the lofty stars her face, which alone she could (uplift)." The natural gesture for a human suppliant would be the hands and arms, as well as the face, uplifted to heaven.} \]

OVID — 21
735. in futurum: "for the future."
737. Stygias paludes: see line 188 and note.
738. illa: i.e. Io.
742. "And the hoofs disappear, being changed each into five fingers."

PAGE 90.—745. erigitur: the middle voice. "She raises herself up," i.e. "she stands erect."
746. timide verba intermissa, etc.: "and with fear and trembling she resumes (her) human speech (so long ago) abandoned."
747. "Now she is worshiped with the greatest honor by the linen-robed thron (i.e. Egyptians)." Io was identified by the Greeks with the Egyptian Isis, the cow-goddess, while Epaphus was connected with the worship of Apis, the bull-god. Herodotus, indeed, says that "Apis is in the Greek language Epaphus."

751. magna loquentem: "talking big," "boasting."
753. Inachides: see the genealogy of Epaphus above.

matri omnia demens credis: "you foolishly believe everything your mother says."
757. ille ego liber, etc.: "I who am so (?ille) free, so high spirited, held my peace."
761. me asserere caelo: "claim me for the sky," i.e. "assure me that I am of heavenly origin."
765. ambiguum: supply est. The passage centering in ambiguum is in part parenthetical. "Clymene, moved (it is uncertain whether by Phaethon’s prayers, or more by anger at the charge brought against her)," etc.
766. criminis: H. 440, 2 (396, III); M. 216; A. 217; G. 363, 2; B. 200; L. & M. 571.

PAGE 91.—774. unde = ex qua (domo).
775. ipsô: i.e. Phoebus.
777. concipit aethera mente: "he grasps the heavens in his imagination."

He already thinks of himself as having attained a right to the heavens through his assured divine parentage.

II. The story of Phaethon was anciently told in dramatic form by Aeschylus and Euripides in the Illiades and Phaethon, only fragments of which remain, and by Apollonius Rhodius in poetic narrative. Among the Latin writers, it is found in the Fabulae purporting to be by Hyginus, a contemporary and friend of Ovid, and is here told by Ovid himself. Vergil only alludes to the story (Aen. X, 189, and Ecl. VI, 62). Some illustrations of the use of this story in English literature will be found below in the proper connection.

1. regia Solis: the location of this palace is indicated in 1, 774.
2. "Bright with glittering gold, and bronze that gleams like flame."
4. This line is also a part of the relative clause introduced by cuius. The prose order would be: cuius(que) *valva*ae bifores lumine argentii radiabant.
5. opus: i.e. the workmanship.
6. caelarar: a syncopated form for caelaverat.
9. Protea ambiguum: this sea-god, who possessed the power of changing his form at will, has become a type of changeableness and has given his name to that quality (Protean).

For by his mighty science he could take
As many formes and shapes in seeming wise,
As ever Proteus to himselfe could make.

—Spenser, Faerie Queene, I, ii, 10.

13, 14. facies non omnibus una, etc.: i.e. they were not all just alike, nor yet markedly different, but had a general similarity of appearance such as is natural for sisters.

PAGE 92.—18. The twelve signs of the zodiac are represented upon the doors.

19. quo: "to this place."
    simul = simul ac.

20. dubitati parentis: "of his father whose parenthood had been called in question."

25, 26. Dies, Mensis, Annum, Saecula, Horae: supply stabant. It is natural that these, together with the seasons mentioned below, should be in attendance upon the sun, whose movements measure and control all times and seasons.

28. nuda: "lightly clad."
    spicae sarta: the wheat harvest is in the summer, while the vintage (line 29) is in the autumn.

30. canos capillos: the accusative of the part affected.
27–30. Spenser (Faerie Queene, VII, vii, 28–31) has a description of the seasons which from many expressions is evidently modeled upon this, but is also greatly enlarged.

31, 32. Inde Sol, loco medius, iuvemem rerum novitate parentem, oculis vidit quibus omnia aspicit.

38. propago: supply esse.
39. errorem: "uncertainty."
41. accedere: supply eum (i.e. Phaëthon) as subject.
42. negari: a poetic construction.
42, 43. nec tu mens esse, etc.: "you are both worthy to be acknowledged as my son; and Clymene has told you your true origin."
PAGE 93.—45. me tribuente: "at my hand."

46. palus: i.e. the Stygian pool. On Dis iuranda see I, 188 and note.

47, 48. currus rogat ille, etc.: Shakespeare uses this request as a type of extreme presumption (Two Gentlemen of Verona, III, i):

Why, Phaëthon,—for thou art Merops' son,— Wilt thou aspire to guide the heavenly car
And with thy daring folly burn the world?
Wilt thou reach stars, because they shine on thee?
Go, base intruder! overweening slave!

50, 51. temeraria vox mea facta tua est: "my words have been made rash by yours." They were before only potentially rash, but Phaëthon has made them actually so. The answer which Phoebus is to give is the turning point in the story.

53. dissuadere licet: "I may (at least) attempt to dissuade you."

58. placeat sibi quisque licebit: understand ut; "though each (god) may (in general) do as he pleases."

59. non quisquam: "no one."

60. me excepto: "except myself."

61. Note the interlocked order of adjectives and substantives to which reference has before been made.

62. agat: H. 552 (485); M. 327; A. 311, a; G. 257, i; B. 280; L. & M. 717.

63. ardua prima via est: it is easy to think of the path of the sun from its point of rising to the zenith as an upward climb.

recentes: "though fresh."

67. et eget moderamine certo: "and requires a firm controlling hand (upon the reins)."

68, 69. The prose order is: tunc etiam Tethys ipsa, quae me subjiciit undis excipit, solet vereri ne in praeceps ferar.

69. in praeceps: "headlong."

70–73. The idea in this passage, repeated in several forms, is that of the ancient astronomers, that the vault of heaven (caelum) containing the fixed stars (sidera) is whirled around in one direction, while the sun, moon, and planets revolve in the opposite direction.

72. nec me qui cetera, etc.: "nor does this swift motion, which overcomes all else, overcome me."

PAGE 94.—75. polis: to be construed with obvius.

76, 77. Is it your desire to see wonderful and beautiful sights? Only dreadful creatures are to be met.

78–83. The poet seems to forget that he is describing not the yearly but the daily path of the sun. He mentions and describes a part of the zodiacal constellations, all of which in their order are as follows: Arlia, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Virgo, Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricornus, Aquarius, Pisces. Ovid here mentions only the more terrible of these creatures.

79. ut teneas: what force does tamen in the following line give to ut?

83. aliter: "in the opposite direction."

84–86. nec tibi quadrupedae in promptu regere est: "nor is it an easy thing (in promptu) for you to control the steeds," etc.

91. do pignera certa timendo: "I give indubitable proofs by the anxiety which I show."

93, 94. utinamque: this is one of those fine, realistic, human touches which Ovid often gives. "And O that you could look into my heart, and understand the fatherly care (for you) which I have within me."

98. vero nomine: i.e. "if rightly understood."

100. The stage direction for the action of this dramatic passage is readily seen. Phaëthon here clasps his father's neck, and renews his request with entreaties. It is a strong proof of Ovid's realism that the reader finds rising in himself a feeling of impatience that the foolish boy should so persist beyond reason.

104. currus: H. 440, 2 (396, III); M. 216; A. 213, 2; G. 363, 2; B. 200; L. & M. 571.

Page 95. — 105. quâ licuit: supply some such word as ratione, "in what way he could," "as far as," or, by wider interpretation, "as long as he could."

107. 108. summa curvatura rotae: i.e. the rim of the wheel.

109. iuga: either the yoke which would be worn by the horses, and into which the end of the chariot pole would be fitted, or, perhaps better (inasmuch as it is the chariot itself which is being described), the curved top or rail of the front or dashboard of the chariot.

112, 113. The usual poetic interpretation of the bright colors of sunrise.

114, 115. Lucifer agmina cogit, novissimus exit: Lucifer, the morning star, is represented as driving away before him the other stars, and is himself the last to fade away before the rising sun.

116. The prose order is: et ut (Phoebus) eum (i.e. Luciferm) terras petere vidit mundumque rubescere:

petere terras: the morning star is here represented as setting, whereas in reality it fades out of sight. This effect is beautifully described by Lowell (Prometheus): —

And now bright Lucifer grows less and less,
Into the heaven's blue quiet deep-withdrawn.

117. extremae lunae: the moon in its last quarter is still well up in the sky at sunrise, and its crescent fades away "as it were" (velut) as the sky brightens.
119. iusa deae celeres peragunt: “the goddesses speedily do as they are bid.”

ignemque, etc.: the prose order is: quadrupedes, ignem vomentes, ambrosiae suco saturos, praesepibus altis ducent.

120. ambrosiae suco: the heavenly horses are given the same food as the gods themselves.

123. et rapidae, etc.: “and made it (ora, his face) able to endure the devouring flame.”

124. luctus: objective genitive, see currus, line 104.

129. directos: belongs grammatically with arcus, but rhetorically with via.

130. in obliquum: “slantwise.”

130–132. This is a poetic description of the position of the ecliptic, the apparent path of the sun in its annual (not diurnal) course. This great circle cuts across the equatorial zone (of the heavens) and the north and south temperate, but leaves untouched the north and south frigid zones.

PAGE 96.—136. altius egressus: “if you go too high.”

138. Anguem: i.e. Draco, the constellation lying between the Greater and Lesser Bears, in the extreme north.

139. Aram: this constellation would be visible in northern latitudes only low down on the horizon, and represents that portion of the sky nearest the earth, just as Draco represents that portion nearest heaven.

141. quae iuvet: “and may she aid you.”

142–144. A strange disjunction of cause and effect. The night goes away from the sky, and the dawn sets the heavens aglow, both as acts independent of the sun, who has not yet started upon his course!

148. axes = axem = currum.

149. “Permit me to give light to the world, (light) which you may in safety behold.”

156. nepotis: Clymene, the mother of Phaëthon, was the daughter of Tethys.

157. et facta est, etc.: “and free course through the boundless skies was given.”

161. nec quod, etc.: “and not one that the horses of the sun could feel.”

162. gravitate: H. 462 (414, I); M. 237, 1; A. 243, a; G. 390, 2; B. 214, 1, c; L. & M. 601.

163. pondera: “ballast.”

PAGE 97.—165. dat saltus = salit.

168. nec quo prius, ordine currunt: “nor do they run in the (same) track as before.”

170. nec, si sciat, imperet illis: “nor, if he did know, would he be able to enforce his orders upon the horses.”

171, 172. Medea boasts among her other magic powers that she has caused these constellations to sink beneath the sea. These, with the other circumpolar constellations, do not go below the horizon in the latitude of the north temperate zone, and hence are poetically said to be forbidden, and sometimes to fear, to sink beneath the sea.

177. Both in ancient and in modern times the constellations Ursa Maior and Ursa Minor have been conceived of under a second and entirely different figure; that is, in Latin as the Trionet, or oxen yoked to a cart, in English as “Carl’s Wain.” For the mythical origin of the conception of the constellations as bears, see analysis at the end of Book II, lines 401–530.

Similarly, the adjacent constellation, containing the bright star Arcturus, has been named Arctophylax, the “Bear-keeper,” and Boötes, the “Wagoner,” each having reference to his relation to the neighboring constellations. Ovid has in this passage rather inartistically introduced the bears on the one hand and the ox-driver on the other.

Some interesting references to these constellations in English literature are as follows: —

Wide o’er the spacious regions of the North,
That see Boötes urge his tardy wain.

— Thomson, Seasons, IV, 834.

By this the northerne wagoner had set
His sevenfold teme behind the stedfast starre
That was in ocean waves yet never wet,
But firme is fixt, and sendeth light from farre
To al that in the wide deepe wandring arre.

— Spenser, Faerie Queene, I, ii, 1.

179. penitus penitusque iacentes: “lying far, far below.”

184. Merops dici cupiens: “more than willing to be called Merops’ (son).”

It will be remembered that this taunt had started Phaëthon upon this adventure. See Book I, line 754.

185. pinus: i.e. a ship.

185, 186. cui remisit frena: a mixed metaphor. The chief point is, however, that control has been lost over ship and horses alike, and there is nothing left to do but pray.

187. quid faciat? H. 559, 4 (484, V); M. 324; A. 268; G. 265; B. 277; L. & M. 723.

189, 190. “And now he looks forward to the west which he is not destined to reach,” etc.

Shakespeare, careless as to mythological accuracy, conceives of Phaëthon as lashing on his steeds: —

Juliet. Gallop space, you fiery-footed steeds, Towards Phoebus’ lodging; such a wagoner
As Phaëthon would whip you to the west,
And bring in cloudy night immediately.

—Romeo and Juliet, III, ii.

195–197. The constellation Scorpio is here represented as covering two of the signs or divisions of the zodiac. (For the twelve constellations see note on lines 78–83). The constellation Libra, the seventh in order, was not commonly used among the Greeks; its place was occupied by Chelae, the “Scorpion’s Claws.”

Page 98.—198–205. It is by this terrible creature that the final catastrophe is precipitated. Phaëthon in his fright gives up all semblance of control, and the horses break entirely from the proper course.

Spenser (Faerie Queene, V, viii, 40) represents the horses themselves as taking fright at the Scorpion, and draws a very lively picture of this situation.

208, 209. “And Luna in amazement sees her brother’s horses speeding below her own.” The sun is now nearer the earth than the moon.

210. “The earth catches fire, the highest parts first.” Shakespeare uses this catastrophe to illustrate the text, “How great a matter a little fire kindleth.” Clifford (III Henry VI, II, vi) thus voices his vain regrets: —

O Phoebus, hadst thou never given consent
That Phaëton should check thy fiery steeds,
Thy burning car never had scorched the earth!
And, Henry, hadst thou swayed as kings should do,
I and ten thousand in this luckless realm
Had left no mourning widows for our death.

217. Ovid abounds in geographical catalogues, with his list of mountains here, of rivers a little later; and see Metamorphoses, VII, 220 and following. A similar case is in Amores, III, vi, 25 and following. Ovid redeems these catalogues from dullness by his apt use of epithet.
Note these in the present passage.

218. creberrima fontibus Ide: the burden of Tennyson’s Oenone very well translates this phrase: —

O mother Ida, many-fountain’d Ida,
Dear mother Ida, harken ere I die.

219. virgineus: as the seat of the muses.

nondum Oeagrius: i.e. it was before the time of Oeagrus, father of Orpheus and king of Thrace, in which country Mount Haemus was situated.

220. geminatis ignibus: Aetna was already a mass of flames within, which occasionally burst forth; and this fire is now duplicated by the conflagration from without.

222. et tandem caritura: “and Rhodope destined at last to lose her snows.”

223. natuaeque ad sacra Cithaeron: this Boeotian mountain was a favorite resort for the orgiastic worshipers of Bacchus.

227. cunctis e partibus: “on all sides,” “in every direction.”

Page 99. — 235, 236. “They say (think) that on that occasion the Aethiopians took on a swarthy hue, since the blood was called to the surface of the body (by the heat).” Hyginus (Fabulae, 154) makes a similar statement about the people of India:

> Indi autem, quod calore vicini ignis sanguis in atrum colorem versus est, nigri sunt facti.

239. quaerit: “seeks (in vain),” i.e. “mourns the loss of.”

240. Ephyre: Corinth was so called from a nymph of that name whose story is told in Hyginus (Fabulae, 275).

241, 242. “Nor do the rivers whose lot had given them more spacious channels (banks wide apart) remain unscathed.”

242. Homer (Iliad, XXI) describes the battle between the flames of Vulcan and the waves of the Xanthus and the Simois. Ovid does not attempt a similar personification here. It is Homer and not Ovid, therefore, whom Dryden has in mind in his Annis Mirabilis (926). The passage is quoted here because of the poetic description in the last two lines of the effect of a great fire on a river: —

> Old father Thames rais’d up his reverend head,
> But fear’d the fate of Simois would return:
> Deep in his ooze he sought his sedgy bed,
> And shrunk his waters back into his urn.

245. arsurus iterum Xanthus: the first conflict of Xanthus with the flames, as described by Homer, has just been referred to in the previous note.

246. Maeandros: Ovid more fully describes this wandering stream in Met. VIII, 162 and following, where he likens the Cretan Labyrinth to it.

251, 252. “And the swans, which had been wont to throng the Maeonian streams in tuneful company, were scorched in mid Cayster.”

254. in extremum orbem: “to the ends of the earth.”

254, 255. The poetical accounting for the fact of the hidden sources of the Nile.

255, 256. ostia septem, septem valles: a double reference to the delta of the Nile.

257. Ismarios: understand anno from the next line. “The same mischance dries up the Thracian streams — Hebrus and Strymon.”
et sparsas Cycladas augent: i.e. as the mountain tops emerged from the sea more islands would come into being.

272–275. "But now the all-fostering Earth, encircled as she was by sea, amid the waters of the deep, amid her fast-contracting streams which had crowded into the dark bowels of the earth and hidden there, though parched by heat, raised up her smothered face," etc.

275. collo: H. 490, 2, note 3 (434 and note 4); M. 258, 3; A. 260, ε; G. 413; Remark 1, end; B. 142, 3; L. & M. 664.

280. deum = deorum: she addresses Jove.

280, 281. "If I must perish by the force of fire, let me perish by thy fire (lightning), and ease my downfall by the thought of him who wrought it."

So Nileus boastfully comforts Perseus with the thought that the impending death of the latter will be at the hands of a great man (V, 191, 192); and Aichelous (Met. IX, 7) takes comfort in the fact that it was the mighty Hector who overcame him.

286–289. The quo-clauses of this passage are an expansion of the idea in officii. "Is this the reward of my fertility and the performance of all my duties? Is this the way you pay me for enduring," etc.

frater: i.e. Neptune.

tradita sorte: the kingdom of Saturn had been divided by lot among his three sons, Jove, Neptune, and Pluto. Homer puts a description of this partition into the mouth of Neptune (Iliad, XV, 235):

> Three parts were made of all existing things,
> And each of us received his heritage.
> The lots were shaken; and to me it fell
> To dwell forever in the hoary deep,
> And Pluto took the gloomy realm of night,
> And lastly, Jupiter the ample heaven
> And air and clouds.

293. fratris is coordinate with *mea (= met); "regard neither for your brother nor for me."

294. at: "at least."

caeli: H. 457 (406, 1); M. 229; A. 221, a; G. 377; B. 209, 2; L. & M. 586.

295. quos: i.e. uterque polus, which stand by metonymy for the whole heavens.

296. atria vestra: the home of the gods is here conceived of as built upon the vault of heaven as we see it.

297. axem: i.e. caelum, the vault of heaven.

299. in chaos, etc.: "we are swept back again to primeval chaos."

300. summae rerum: i.e. the universe.

301. neque enim: some words are to be supplied here, such as "and (she ceased speaking) for she could neither endure," etc.
303. rettulit os in se: Ovid is guilty here of an absurd and gross mixture of fact and figure. In the same sentence we have Terra and terra, the one acting upon the other. Similarly, in XI, 125, Midas is said to mingle the "bestower of his gift" (who was Bacchus, but the poet now means wine) with water. See also XII, 614.

306. arduus is used here with the subject of petit, "on high," where we should more naturally expect the corresponding adverb with the verb.

311. Ovid represents Jove in this passage as poising the thunderbolt at his right ear just as a soldier would poise a spear.

312. pariterque, etc.: "and hurled him equally from life and chariot." This is an instance of zeugma, which is common enough in Latin, but which sounds rather harsh to English ears.

314, 315. et saltu in contraria facto, etc.: "and, leaping apart, wrench their necks from the yoke," etc.

318. Laceri vestigia currus: "the remains of the wrecked chariot."

319. rutilos: this epithet is used proleptically, since the hair would not be "ruddy" (because in flames) until the act in populante had begun.

Page 102. — 320. It has already been seen that Shakespeare makes frequent use of the Phaëthon story. This particular incident well illustrates the downfall of princes. So in King Richard II, III, ii: —

Down, down I come; like glistening Phaëton, Wanting the manage of unruly jades.

323. diverso orbe: "in another quarter of the globe."

325. trifida fumantia flamma corpora: scan the line in order to connect the adjectives with their proper nouns. trifida carries us back to the forked lightning which had been the immediate cause of Phaëthon's destruction. corpora is for corpus, according to the usage of Ovid, who often writes the plural for the singular with no apparent reason.

III.—It is a long way from the death of Phaëthon to the subject-matter of the ensuing passage. The student should read carefully the epitome of the omitted part on pages 102 and 103, and observe the threads by which Ovid unites the various stories. Sometimes, it must be admitted, these threads are very slender. See also introduction to the Metamorphoses, page 63.

The story of Cadmus and the founding of Thebes has an unusual importance, since it is closely connected with the historical problem of the relation of the East to the early development of Greece.
The story is told by Apollonius Rhodius, Apollodorus, and Nonnus of the Greeks; and by Ovid and Hyginus (Fabulae, 178) of the Latin writers. A genealogy of Cadmus is here given, which will be of assistance in the understanding of subsequent history of his family. (For descent of Agenor, see table under I, 728, note.)

```
Agenor
  |   |
Harmonia = Cadmus Phoenix Cilix Europa
  |   |
Semele gave Ino Antonoë Polydorus
  = Jupiter = Echion = Athamas = Aristaeus
  |
Bacchus Pentheus Melicertes Actaeon Labdacus
  |
  |
  Laius = Jocasta
  |
  |
  Jocasta = Oedipus
  |
  |
  Eteocles Polynices Antigone Ismene
```

Page 103. — 1. deus: i.e. Jove.

posita = deposita.

3. ignarus: "ignorant (of these circumstances)."

perquirere: would this be the prose construction?

4. Hyginus says that the two brothers of Cadmus were sent with him:
   Agenor suas filios misit, ut sororem reducuerent aut ipsi in suum conspectum non redirent. Phoenix in Africam est profectus ibique remansit; inde Afri Poeni sunt appellati. Cilix suo nomine Ciliciae nomen indidit. Cadmus cum erraret, Delphos devenit, etc.

5. pius et scleratus: the father was pius in that he desired to recover his lost daughter; scleratus in imposing commands so harsh upon his son.

8. Phoebi oracula: i.e. at Delphi. See Hyginus above.

Page 104. — 9. et, quae sit tellus, etc.: "and seeks to learn in what land he should settle." With habitanda supply sibi.

12. hac duce: "under her guidance."
   et qua requieverit herba: "and where she shall have lain down to rest upon the grass."

13. moenia fac condas: supply ut with condas. "See that you build (your city's) walls."
NOTES

Boeotia (supposed to be derived from δος) was the country in which the city was to be built, not the city itself.

0-13. Hyginus gives a different version of this oracle: —

Ibi resumum accepit, ut a pastoribus bovem emeret, qui Lunae signum in latere haberet, eunquae anteq se ageret; ubi decubiisset, ibi fatum esse eum oppidum condere et ibi regnare.

14. “Hardly had Cadmus left the Castalian grotto when he saw,” etc. This grotto was the seat of the Delphic oracle, named by Ovid from the famous Castilian spring near by.

17. pressoque legit vestigia gressu: “and with guarded step he follows her.”

presso gressu: that the animal may be uninfluenced, and that fate may be unassisted.

19. From Delphi to Panope is about eleven English miles; and from this point to the future site of Thebes about thirty miles,—a long way for one proceeding “presso gressu.”

27. libandas undas: “water for purposes of libation.”

32. Martius anguis erat: here is the starting point of the evils which came thick upon the house of Cadmus—the slaying of the sacred serpent of Mars.

35. “When the wayfarers of the Tyrian race had reached this grove with luckless steps.” These were the ministri mentioned in line 26, who had been sent to draw water.

Page 105.—42. et immensos, etc.: “and with a spring he throws himself into huge curves.”

sinuatur is used in the middle voice.

43. “And lifted high by more than half his length into the unsubstantial air.”

44, 45. This dragon is as large as the great constellation Draco, lying outstretched between the two Bears in the northern sky.

44. tanto corpore: H. 473, 2 (419, II); M. 246; A. 251; G. 400; B. 224, 1; L. & M. 643.

46. nec mora: supply est.

48, 49. His powers of destruction are three-fold: his teeth, his constricting folds, and his pestilential breath.

51. “Cadmus wonders what has delayed his comrades.”

52, 53. leonis pellis: no particular lion is connected with the adventures of Cadmus, as in the case of Hercules; but a lion’s skin of the hunter’s own gaining is a natural accompaniment, half cloak, half shield (see line 81), of these traditional heroes.

56. “And the huge bodied victorious foe (lying) upon (them).”

corpora: H. 440, 3 (396, V); M. 222; A. 215; G. 365; B. 203; L. & M. 558 61, 62. cum turribus ardua celsis moenia: "high walls with their lofty towers."

62. mota forent = mota essent.

Page 106.—67. ferrum: i.e. the iron head as opposed to the wooden shaft (hastile).

70. "And when, by violent effort, he had loosened this (i.e. the shaft) all around."

75, 76. quique halius, etc.: "and such rank breath as exhales from the Stygian caves befoul the tainted air."

modo is another instance of prolepsis. See II, 319 and note.

77. impete: from impes. Why could not Ovid have used the ablative of the more usual impetus in this place?

83. cuspile: Cadmus was armed with a spear and a javelin, as seen in lines 53, 54. The javelin has been hurled (line 65), and its head is buried in the creature's vitals (line 71). Cadmus now presents the point of his spear to the dragon's mouth, and attempts to thrust him through.

87. quia se retrahebat, etc.: "because he kept backing away from the thrust."

88. plagamque sedere, etc.: "and by withdrawing prevented the stroke from being driven home."

91. dum retro, etc.: "until an oak tree stopped his (i.e. the serpent's) backward course."

92. The serpent is now pinned fast to the oak by the spear which pierces both.

94. flagellari: for the force of the infinitive see H. 614 (535, III); M. 273, 4;

A. 333; b; G. 533; B. 331, V; L. & M. 964.

95. victor victi: it is quite in Ovid's style to bring these words together.

See The Poetic Form of Ovid's Works, under the subject Alliteration, Assonance, and kindred effects.

Page 107.—96. neque erat cognoscere, etc.: "nor was it easy to tell whence it came." The voice may be that of Mars, whose wrath has been incurred by the death of his sacred dragon. Ovid nowhere distinctly refers to the wrath of Mars, but Hyginus (Fabulae, 6) says: —

Cadmus ira Martis, quod draconem fontis Castalii custodem occiderat, suorum prole interempta, cum Harmonia Veneris et Martis filia uxore sua, in Illyriae regionibus in dracones sunt conversi.

98. et tu spectabere serpens: it is obvious that Ovid uses the awkward spectabere, which means here nothing more than eris or fies, simply because he has already used spectas.

The fulfillment of this prophecy is described by Ovid in lines 563–

603. See epitome on page 118. It will there be observed that the change came at the request of the royal pair. This is not, therefore, itself the punishment for the act of Cadmus; the punishment is in the long train of disaster which makes the change welcome. Hence, references to this metamorphosis are in a rather pleasing vein. So in Milton (Paradise Lost, IX):

Pleasing was his (i.e. Satan’s) shape,
And lovely; never since of serpent kind Lovelier, not those that in Illyria changed Hermione and Cadmus.

And Matthew Arnold (Cadmus and Harmonia): —

Two bright and aged snakes,
Who once were Cadmus and Harmonia,
Bask in the glens, or on the warm seashore,
In breathless quiet after all their ills.

102. motaeque iubet, etc.: “and she bids him plow the earth and plant therein the dragon’s teeth.”

105. mortalia semina: “a man-producing seed.”

106. fide maius: “a thing beyond belief.”

111–114. The curtain (aulaem) of the ancient theater was fixed upon a roller let into the masonry of the floor in front of the stage. See Horace, Epistles, II, i, 189: “The curtain is kept down for more than four hours,” i.e. the stage is in view of the spectators during that time. To “raise the curtain,” therefore, had just the opposite effect to that in the modern theater. The curtain was decorated by various figures (signa), as, for instance, those of men. When, at the conclusion of the play, the curtain was unrolled, or raised, these figures would come into view top first. The appropriateness of this simile to Ovid’s narrative is at once apparent.

111. festis: because these theatrical performances were given on festal days, as part of a religious celebration in honor of some god.

113. placidoque educata, etc.: “and (at length), drawn up with steady motion, the entire figures stand revealed.”

117. civilibus bellis: “this fratricidal strife.”

120. dederat: for object, understand illum, from the following ille.

122. exemplo pari: “in the same way.”

123. subiti: referring to the manner of their birth.

PAGE 108. — 125. matrem: it should be remembered that these brothers were terrigenae (line 118).

126. Echion: Hyginus (Fabulae, 178) gives the names of the other four:
Ex quibus quinque superfluerunt, id est Chthonius, Udaeus, Hyperenor, Pelorus, et Echion.
128. fraterneae = cum fratribus.
129. Sidonius hospes: Agenor, the father of Cadmus, was king of Sidon.
130. Phoebis sortibus = sortibus Phoebi. See line 13.
132. exsilio: has a concessive as well as locative force — “even in exile.”
    Mars Venusque: see genealogical table under note at beginning of Book III.
135–137. Compare with this the solemn words with which the Oedipus Rex of Sophocles closes, and which Ovid doubtless recalled as he wrote these lines: —
    From hence the lesson learn ye,
    To reckon no man happy till ye witness
    The closing day; until he pass the border
    Which severs life from death, unscathed by sorrow.

Page 109. — 402 and following. The story of Narcissus is told most fully by Ovid, and is briefly touched upon by Hyginus. A different and more rational version is told by Pausanias. The story has taken strong hold upon the poetic imagination of English writers. Keats (Miscellaneous Poems) gives an exquisite fancy picture of the origin of this story.
Compare his description of the natural scenery with Ovid's: —

What first inspired a bard of old to sing
Narcissus pining o'er the untainted spring?
In some delicious ramble, he had found
A little space, with boughs all woven round;
And in the midst of all, a clearer pool
Than e'er reflected in its pleasant cool
The blue sky, here and there serenely peeping,
Through tendril wreaths fantastically creeping.
And on the bank a lovely flower he spied,
A meek and forlorn flower, with naught of pride.
Drooping its beauty o'er the watery clearness,
To woo its own sad image into nearness:
Deaf to light Zephyrus, it would not move;
But still would seem to droop, to pine, to love.
So while the poet stood in this sweet spot,
Some fainter gleamings o'er his fancy shot;
Nor was it long e'er he had told the tale
Of young Narcissus and sad Echo's Vale.

402. hanc: i.e. echo.
405. sic amet, etc.: “so may he himself love, and not gain the thing he loves.”
407–412. Ovid is fond of such a scene. See a similar description in Ars Amatoria, III, 687–694.
414. faciemque loci fontemque secutus: the first -que is redundant. "Attracted by the appearance of the place and by the spring."

432-436. The poet himself here addresses the person of his creating. He has done this before in Ars Amatoria, III, 735, and Fasti, II, 101. This is an indication of the absorbing interest of Ovid in his own story. It is as if one in the audience should cry out to a character on the stage, forgetting that it is but a play.

433. quod amas, avertere, perdes: "(but) turn yourself away (and) the object of your love will be no more."

Page 110. — 435. nil habet ista sui: "it has no substance of its own."

436. dissedet, si possis: the statement starts out vividly in the future indicative, but sinks to a mere possibility at the end. This possibility itself vanishes in the next sentence.

449. nec clausis moenia portis: "nor city walls with their close shut gates."

452. resupino ore: "with upturned face."

454. unice: because unmatched for grace and beauty.

457. "You give me some (ground for) hope by your friendly face."

461. "And, as I surmise from the movement of your sweet lips."

463. It dawns suddenly upon him that the object of his passion is his own image. In Milton (Paradise Lost, IV) Eve relates to Adam a similar experience of her own:

> As I bent down to look, just opposite
> A shape within the watery gleam appeared,
> Bending to look on me; I started back,
> It started back; but pleased I soon returned.
> Pleased it returned as soon with answering looks
> Of sympathy and love; there I had fixed > Mine eyes till now, and pained with vain desire,
> Had not a voice thus warned me: "What thou seest,
> What there thou seest, fair creature, is thyself;
> With thee it comes and goes."

464. flammas moveoque feroque: the reader will observe throughout this story how Ovid revels in these paradoxes. Many will doubtless feel that he overdoes the matter.

465. faciam, roger, rogem: examples of the familiar deliberative subjunctive. How has the thought changed so as to allow the indicative in rogabo, whereas the preceding verbs were in the subjunctive mode?

Page 111. — 466. "I have, I am what I desire: the abundance of my riches beggars me."

Spenser (Amoretti, XXXV) boldly borrows this fine passage:

> My hungry eyes, through greedy covetize
> Still to behold the object of their paine,

Ovid — 22
With no contentment can themselves suffice;
But having, pine, and having not complained.
For lacking it, they cannot lyfe sustayne;
And having it, they gaze on it the more,
In their amazement lyke Narcissus vaine,
Whose eyes him starv'd: so plenty makes me poor.

468. votum novum: in apposition with vellem, etc.
    abesset: supply ut. This clause is the object of vellem.
469. nec tempora vitae, etc.: "and but few days of my life remain."
471. posituro morte dolores: "since I shall lay aside my pains in death."
475. obscura reddita forma est: "the image was imperfectly reflected."
478. quod tangere non est: "what it is not possible to touch."
480. summa vestem didixit ab ora: "he plucked away his tunic at (from) its upper fold," or "from the upper part (of his breast)."
483-485. Compare similar descriptive similes in Ars Amatoria, III, 703-706.
486. simul = simul ac.
494. quae: i.e. echo. Vidiit has for its object the unexpressed conception of the sufferings of Narcissus.

PAGE 112.—499. "His last words as he gazed into the familiar spring were these."

501. The first vale is in absolute construction with dicto and is not to be translated.
504, 505. It was bad enough to have the shade of Eurydice limping still because of her earthly wound (Met. X, 49); but this passage out-Ovids Ovid, wherein a shade is represented as gazing fondly upon the shade of a shade. It is a good example of the absurdity into which the poet is sometimes led in his tendency to overwork an idea.
509, 510. This flower is what is termed in botany Narcissus poeticus. "It loves the borders of streams; bending on its fragile stem, it seems to seek its own image in the waters, and soon fades away and dies."

PAGE 113.—IV, 55 and following. The story of Pyramus and Thisbe is told in full only by Ovid of the ancients, and is one of his best told tales. From Ovid, Chaucer and Shakespeare get the story, one of whom introduces Thisbe as the martyr of Babylon in his Legend of Good Women, and the other uses the story as byplay in the Midsummer Night’s Dream. And again Thisbe appears in the great dramatist’s lines (Merchant of Venice, V, i):

    In such a night
    Did Thisbe fearfully o’er trip the dew
    And saw the lion’s shadow ere himself,
    And ran dismay’d away.
59. notitiam primosque gradus: hendiadys, "the first steps of acquaintance."
62. ex aequo: "equally."
63. conscientia: i.e. some third person, a frequent feature of clandestine love affairs, who acts as a go-between.
65, 66. "The party wall of the two houses had been split by a slender crack which it had at some former time received when it was building."
74. quantum = quantumum: "how small a thing it would have been."
erat: H. 583 (511, note 3); M. 368; A. 311, c; G. 254, Rem. 2; B. 304, 3; L. & M. 940.
77. This substantive quad-clause is the object of debere.
78. nequiquam is to be read with diversa. It was to no purpose that they were kept apart by their parents.
79, 80. partique dedere, etc: "and imprinted kisses, each one upon his own side of the wall."

PAGE 114.—87. neve sit errandum: "and that they may not run the risk of missing each other."

spatiantibus: used as substantive, dative of apparent agent with sit errandum.
88. ad busta Nini: so in Shakespeare's burslesque, Flute, as Thisbe, says: "I'll meet thee, Pyramus, at Ninny's tomb"; and is corrected by Quince: "Ninus' tomb, man." Ninus was the deceased husband of Semiramis, who in his honor had built a huge tomb outside of Babylon.
89, 90. In this way Ovid prepares the way for the denouement of his story. For a similar preparation see Ars Amatoria, III, 693 and note.
98. depositura sitim: "to slake her thirst."
99. ad luna ea radios: "by the moonlight."
100, 101. fugit, fugit: what tense in each verb? Why different?
103. sine ipsa: "without Thisbe herself;" that is, it was a perfectly harmless act, but direful in its consequences.
110. ego, te, etc: "I have been the cause of thy death, poor girl, in that I bade thee come forth by night," etc. What would be the prose construction of venire?

PAGE 115.—115. "But 'tis a coward's part (merely) to pray for death."
See a similarly constructed sentence in Met. XIII, 824, except that there the infinitive numerare has not the pregnant force "merely to count."
117. notae with vesti: "the familiar garment."
118. haustus: "draughts."
119. The prose order would be: ferrumque, quo accinctus erat, in ilia demisit.
121. humo: locative abl., poetic for in humo, here used as a variation upon the more frequent humili—"upon the ground."
et teniul stridente foramine: "and through the slender hissing aperture spurts forth long streams of water, and cleaves the air with its jets."

And while she recognized the form of the tree as she gazed upon it, still the color of its fruit mystified her.

sumnum (aequor): "its surface." See simile in Heroïdes, X, 139.

Page 116. — 147. ense: H. 465 (414, III); M. 237, 2; A. 243, d; G. 390,
3; B. 214, 1, d; L. & M. 604.

ebur: i.e. the ivory scabbard.

manus, amor: these are repeated from line 148. "I too have a hand that's brave for this one act; I too have love."

in vulnera has a purpose force, frequent with the prepositions ad and in with the accusative.

persequar extinctum: understand te. "I shall follow thee in death."

hoc: H. 411, 1 (374, 1); M. 192, 2; A. 239, 2, c, note 2; G. 399, note 4; B. 178, 2; L. & M. 522, 523. This is expanded and explained by lines 156, 157.

meus illiusque parentes: the full expression would be mi pares (= pater) illiusque parentis. Since its substantive is not expressed, meus has the nominative instead of the vocative form.

ut non invideat: non is to be taken intimately with the verb, and separated as far as possible from ut (see Ovid's arrangement), in order to justify ut non instead of ne. "Be entreated of us that you be not unwilling," etc.

And all that remains from (both) funeral pyres rests in a common urn."

---

funesta taxo: the yew tree, because of its poisonous berries, was connected with the Lower World. So Seneca (Oedipus, 555) represents Tiresias as crowned with a wreath of yew leaves while summoning the shade of Laius from the dead.

simulacra functa sepulcris: "shades of those who have received funeral rites." Vergil explains (Aeneid, VI, 325-330) at some length the unhappy condition of the shades of the unburied.

novique qua sit iter, etc.: "and the shades newly arrived know not where the road is, where it leads to the Stygian city, and where is the dread palace of the swarthy Dis."

nec ulli, etc.: "and it is not too small for any people (however numerous), nor does it feel the accession of a throng."

celebrant: "throng."

There is some authority (though not the best) for the following line at this point:

Exercerit, aliam partem sua poena coelroet.
If this line is admitted, pars (l. 445) will be construed as the subject of exercent; without this line, pars must be taken along with pars of line 444 as subject of celebrant. In this case we have zeugma.

antiquae imitamina vitae: there are many expressions of the Roman belief that "the ruling passion is strong in death," and that habits of this life will continue in the next. See Met. III, 504, 505; Amores, II, vi, 57, 58. So Vergil (Aeneid, VI, 477-493) describes the shades of Greek and Trojan warriors as engaging in all the exercises to which they were accustomed on earth, and subject to the same passions and fears.

448. tantum: i.e. the task mentioned in the previous line.
452. sorores: the Furies.
454. This is simply another way of saying that snakes were mingled with their locks. Wordsworth (Excursion, III) thinks that this is a weak conception of the Furies: —

    Feeably must they have felt
    Who, in old time, attired with snakes and whips
    The vengeful Furies.

455. agnorunt = agnoverunt.

457-463. Here are briefly enumerated the stock sufferings in Tartara: of Tityos, whose huge frame is stretched out upon the ground, while his vitals are torn by a vulture; of Tantalus, who, though standing up to his chin in water, is dying of thirst, for the water ever flees his eager lips, while above his head also luscious fruit hangs temptingly just beyond his reach; of Sisyphus, forever rolling a heavy stone up a hill, and forever unable to reach the top, for the stone escapes his grasp each time at the moment of success; of Ixion, bound to a swiftly revolving wheel; of the Belides, condemned to fill a bottomless cistern with water borne in sieves.

458. tibi: H. 431, 6 (388, 4); A. 232, b; G. 354, note 1; B. 189, 3; L. & M. 545.
461. Ixion: two excellent similes are drawn from the picture of the sufferings of Ixion. To Campbell (Lines on revisiting a Scotch River) the wheel is the never ceasing necessity of toil: —

    See, left but life enough and breathing room
    The hunger and the hope of life to feel,
    Yon pale mechanic bending o'er his loom,
    And childhood's self, as at Ixion's wheel,
    From morn till midnight task'd to earn its little meal.

    And to Kingsley (Frank Leigh's Song) the wheel is the reeling torrent of unrequited love: —
To worship, not to wed, Celestials bid me:
I dreamt to mate in heaven, and wake in hell;
Forever doom'd, Ixion-like, to reel
On mine own passions' ever burning wheel.

PAGE 118. — 462, 463. “And the Belides, for daring to work destruction to their cousins, with unremitting toil seek o'er and o'er the waters only to lose them again.” Juno looked with pleasure, no doubt, upon the punishment of these, not so much because they had each been guilty of an impious murder, but because they were descendants of the hated Io. (See genealogy under Met. I, 728, note.) So it is said in Heroides, XIV, 85, 86, by Hypermnestra, the only guiltless sister: —

Scilicet ex illo Iunonia permanet ira,
Quo bos ex homine est, ex bove facta dea.

463. perdant: it seems weak to consider this a relative clause of purpose. It is rather a fate than a purposed act.

465. et ante omnes Ixiona: “and especially Ixion.” He is suffering here because of an offense against the honor of Juno herself.

466–469. Sisyphus and Athamas were brothers, sons of Aeolus, and were both equally guilty of impiety. Juno's complaint is that one should be here in torment, while the other is enjoying immunity from punishment. The truth is, however, that the only offense of Athamas was that he had married Ino, the sister of the hated Semele, mother of Bacchus.

470. vellet: this is subjunctive, partly as a reflection of the immediately preceding velit (which is in an indirect question), and partly as a subjunctive of softened or modest assertion.

471. et in facinus, etc.: “and that the sisters (i.e. the Furies) should drive Athamas to madness.” On the fate of Athamas, read Frederick Tennyson's poem, King Athamas.

474. ut erat: “just as she was.” Ovid is fond of this expression. See Heroides, X, 16, and Ars Amatoria, I, 529 (quoted under Heroides, X, 21–23).

476. ambagibus: H. 477, III (414, IV); M. 252; A. 243, e; G. 406; B. 218, 2; L. & M. 646.

477. facta puta, etc.: “consider done all that you ask.”

480. Juno needed this purification, since she had just come from the world of the dead. On Iris, the attendant of Juno, see Met. I, 270, and note.

PAGE 119. — 663 and following. Ovid passes lightly over the events which lead to the present story: how Cassiopeia, the wife of Cepheus, king of Aethiopia, had boasted of her own beauty as excelling that of the Neretides; how Neptune, to avenge this slight upon his nympha, had flooded the country, and sent a sea monster to ravage the coasts; and how the oracle of Jupiter Ammon had declared that further disaster could be averted only if Andromeda, the king's daughter, should be exposed to the monster.

The story is briefly told among the ancients other than Ovid by Apollodorus and Hyginus. For the genealogy of both Perseus and Andromeda, see Met. I, 728, note. In English literature reference is often made to the character and incidents of this story. The most extended English version is the Andromeda of Kingsley, in which the author departs considerably from the classical details.

663. Ovid calls attention to the calm that usually accompanies the dawn.

664. admonitor operum Lucifer: Longfellow conceives not of the dawn as awakening labor, but of labor as arousing the dawn (Evangeline, IV): —

Life had long been astir in the village, and clamorous labor Knocked with its hundred hands at the golden gates of the morning.

665. ille: i.e. Perseus.

666. parte ab utraque pedem = utrumque pedem.

accingitur is used in a middle sense, "he girds himself."

telo unco: this was the short sword, with a peculiar hooklike projection on one side (harpe), which Mercury had given him. He was otherwise equipped with winged shoes, a magic wallet, and helmet of invisibility, all of which the nympha had given him. But his chief weapon, used only as the last resort, was Medusa's head.

670, 671. "There the pitiless Ammon had bidden Andromeda, though free from guilt, to pay the penalty of her mother's (sinful) words." See line 663, and note; also Milton, Il Penseroso: —

Or that starred Ethiop queen that strove
To set her beauty's praise above
The sea nympha, and their powers offended.

672. bracchia: for construction, see capillos, line 474, note.

673. Abantiades: i.e. Perseus, the descendant of Abas.
nisi quod moverat, etc.: "except that," etc. This clause is equivalent to the conditional sentence nisi movisset, etc., the conclusion of which is ratus esset.

675. inscius: either, "in ignorance of the meaning of this strange sight and of the identity of the maiden," or, "without consciousness of the effect upon himself," "unwittingly."

ignes: understand amoris.
678. ut stetit: "when he alighted (near the maiden)."
679. sed eis catenis digna quibus, etc.
680. requirenti: understand mihi.
682. virum virgo: this is one of Ovid's numberless alliterations; but in this instance the juxtaposition has more than the usual significance, especially when joined with the position in the sentence of these two words. They are contrasted and strongly emphasized: "Nor does she, being a maiden, dare to address him, a man."
685–688. "As he continues to urge her, she, lest she seem to be trying to conceal some fault of her own, tells him her name and her country, and what boastful confidence her mother has had in her own beauty."
687. maternae fiducia formae: see line 663, note.
689, 690, and 706, 707. Ovid thus describes what is the most thrilling moment in the whole story from a dramatic point of view—the approach of the monster. Considering the importance of this crisis, it would seem that Ovid has given it rather meager notice in his lines. See how Virgil treats a similar occasion, though not as important dramatically as the present, where he describes the approach of the two serpents that destroyed Laocoon and his sons (Aeneid, II, 203–212). Compare also Kingsley's elaboration of this passage, wherein he makes use of Ovid's simile of the ship (Andromeda):—

Onward it came from the southward, as bulky and black as a galley, Lazily coasting along, as the fish fled leaping before it; Lazily breasting the ripple, and watching by sand bar and headland, Listening for laughter of maidens at bleaching, or song of the fisher, Children that play on the pebbles, or cattle that pawed on the sand hills. Rolling and dripping it came, where bedded in glistening purple Cold on the cold seaweeds lay the long white sides of the maiden, Trembling, her face in her hands, and her tresses afloat on the water.

Page 120. —691, 692. genitor, mater: the parents of Andromeda.
illa iustius: because through her sin her daughter is thus exposed to death.
697–701. Perseus sets forth his claims to the hand of Andromeda first by virtue of his own birth and prowess, which are all-sufficient in themselves. "If I sought her (only) as the son of Jove and her whom," etc.
697, 698. illa, quam clausam: i.e. Danaë, whom her father, Acrisius, fearing destruction at the hands of her offspring, had imprisoned in a brazen tower. This precaution, however, proved in vain, for Jove gained access to her prison, which opened to the sky, by assuming the form of a golden shower.
03. But he now advances a greater claim than these — meritum, the "desert" of service rendered by saving the maiden's life.

"My only stipulation is that she be mine if by my valor saved."

super regnum dotale: "a kingdom as a dowry in addition."

710. "He (the monster) was as far distant from the rocks (where Andromeda was) as is the space of open air through which a Balearic sling can send its hurled bullet (lit., can traverse with its bullet)."

tantum: H. 417(379); M. 196; A. 257; G. 335; B. 181; L. & M. 513.

quantum is object of transmitere, and caeli is partitive genitive with quantum.

14. utque Iovis praepe, etc.: so Horace (Odes, IV, iv, 11) likens the sudden campaign of Drusus against the Vindelici to the swoop of an eagle upon its prey. Kingsley compares Perseus at this point to an osprey darting upon a dolphin.

715. praebentem Phoebi terga: i.e. sunning himself.

716. occupat aversum: "swoops upon him from behind."

718. missus praeceps is to be taken with Inachides (line 720).

719. frenentis: understand ferae.

PAGE 121. — 720. Inachides: i.e. Perseus, the descendant of Inachus. See table under I, 728, note.

ferrum curvo, etc.: "he plunged the sword as far as the curved hook."

See line 666, note.

721. laesa: i.e. the monster.

725. quaque patent: "and where they (i.e. the various vulnerable points) lie exposed."

727. falcato ense is the sword is called falcatus, because of the feature before mentioned.

730. bibulis: i.e. the wings on his sandals were in danger of becoming soaked, and hence useless.

731, 732. qui vertice, etc.: "whose top projects above the surface when the waves are still, (but) is hidden by the roughened sea." Compare Vergil's fuller description of a similar scene (Aeneid, V, 124-128).

733. eo: H. 476, 3 (425, i, 1) note); M. 247, 3, note 1; A. 254, 6; G. 401, note 6; B. 218, 3; L. & M. 629.

734. The inference is that the monster is slain by the use of the sword alone. According to another version of this part of the story, Perseus changed his enemy into a rocky island by presenting to his gaze the Medusa head. Kingsley follows the latter version:

Then fell the boy on the beast, unveiling the face of the Gorgon;
Then fell the boy on the beast; then rolled up the beast in his horror,
Once, as the dead eyes glared into his; then his sides, death-sharpened, Stiffened and stood, brown rock, in the wash of the wandering water.
346 METAMORPHOSES IV

736. implevere: is plural because cum plausu clamor is felt as equal to clamor plaususque.

gaudent: i.e. the parents of Andromeda.

741. caput: i.e. the Gorgon’s head.

742. virgas: seaweed.

743. imponit: supply illis (virgis).

744-752. The origin of coral; i.e. petrified seaweed.

748. et idem contingere gaudent: “and are delighted that the same result is obtained (in case of all).”

751. “So that they become hard on contact with the air.”

---

PAGE 122.—V. 177. “But when he saw (his own) strength no match for (the) superior numbers (of his foes).”

179. ab hoste: i.e. the head of Medusa.

181. Perseus is tauntingly bidden to try his play magic on some one else.

185. Lyncidæ: i.e. Perseus, as the descendant of Lynceus. See under I, 728, note.

187, 188. qui se genitum, etc.: “who falsely claimed that he was sprung from the sevenfold Nile.”

septemplice: referring to the Nile delta of seven mouths. See II, 255, 256.

191. solacia: it will be observed that Ovid frequently employs the poetic plural. See ora above (line 180).

192. a tanto cecidisse viro: this is the magna solacia of the previous line. With the thought, compare II, 280, 281, note.

195. hos: Eryx does not realize that these have been changed into stone, so lifelike are their attitudes; and he charges them that their stupefaction comes from fear (“defect of courage”) rather than from any power in the Gorgon’s head.

---

PAGE 123.—196. incurrere: supply iuveni or in iuvenem.

197. магіка arma: uttered in unbelieving scorn, just as miracula of line 181.

202. “Saw the Gorgon’s head, and hardened as the stony influence spread through his frame.”

207. longa mora est dicere: “it would take a long time to tell,” etc.

208. corpora: i.e. homines.

210. Phineae belli: H. 457 (409, III); M. 229; A. 221, b; G. 377; B. 209; L. & M. 585.

212, 213. quamque opem: H. 411 (374); M. 192, 2; A. 239, 2, c; G. 339, a; B. 178, 1, a; L. & M. 522.

213. credens parum: “hardly believing (his eyes).”

215. confessas manus: by an artistic stroke Ovid joins confessas with manus, since it is the outstretched hands that confess defeat and implore mercy.
216, 217. monstra, vultus: see line 191, note.
217. quaecumque ea may be either "whatoever things they are," i.e. the general concepts involved in monstra and vultus; or, "whosoever she (Medusa) is." Supply sint or sit, according to the interpretation adopted.
220. The strength of Perseus' claims to Andromeda lay in his superior service in her behalf; the claim of Phineus was based on a prior promise by her parents to him.
221. cessisse: supply tibi.
223. talia dicenti: "as he thus spoke."
224. ait: i.e. Perseus.
225. magnum munus: the "boon" is explained in the next line—nullo violabere ferro; he is not to be slain by the sword. Perhaps also the ironical three lines following are included in this.

232. conanti, etc.: "as he strove to avert his gaze," etc.

341. prima Ceres, etc.: this opening praise of Ceres recalls the lines of Vergil in the same strain (Georgics, I, 147).

The story of Ceres and Proserpina, or, according to the Greek names, Demeter and Persephone, is very old, and has been frequently treated both by Greek, Latin, and modern writers. Among the Greeks it is found in the Homeric Hymns (V), in Hesiod (Theogony), in Apollodorus and Apollonius Rhodius; among the Romans writers who have treated of the subject are Ovid, who, in addition to his story at this place, has told it at still greater length in the Fasti (IV, 417-620); Hyginus (Fabulae, 146), Statius (Achilleis), and Claudian (in his epic poem, De Rupta Proserpinae).

It is worth while to notice the interesting variations of detail in Hyginus:—

Pluton petit ab Iove Proserpinam filiam eius et Cereris in coniugium. Iovis negavit Cererem passuram ut filia sua in tartaro tenebroso sit, sed iubet eum rapere eam flores iegentem in monte Aetna; in quo Proserpina dum flores cum Venere et Diana et Minerva legit, Pluton quadrigis venit et eam rapuit.

It has inspired the English writers not only to passing mention, but also to entire poems. Thus Shelley (Song of Proserpine), Tennyson (Demeter and Persephone), Rossetti (Sonnet), Jean Ingelow (Persephone), Aubrey de Vere (The Search after Proserpina), Morris (Persephone in Epic of Hades), Swinburne (Hymns to Proserpine).

346. Giganteis membris: the Pierides had sung of the rebellion of the Giants (see page 124, analysis of omitted parts), dwelling especially upon the terror of the Gods. The Muses begin their song by a picture of the final discomfiture and punishment of the Giants.

348-355. In Vergil it is Enceladus who is thus buried under Aetna, though not under all Sicily, as Ovid here describes Typhoeus (Aen. III, 578-582).

Page 125. — 356. inde: i.e. on account of these struggles. rex silentum: Pluto, son of Chronos (Saturn), and brother of Jupiter, Neptune, Juno, and Ceres.

362. "After he had investigated to his satisfaction, and found that no portions (of the island) were giving way."

368. When Chronos withdrew from the sovereignty of the universe, his three sons, Jupiter, Neptune, and Pluto, shared the kingdom by lot. Homer puts the following account of this event in the mouth of Neptune (Iliad, XV, 235) :

Three parts were made of all existing things,
And each of us received his heritage.
The lots were shaken; and to me it fell
To dwell forever in the hoary deep,
And Pluto took the gloomy realm of night,
And, lastly, Jupiter the ample heaven
And air and clouds.

novissima: it is here stated that Pluto's lot was "last." But, according to Homer, as seen above, it was Jove who came last.

371. quid Tartara cessant: "why does the realm of shades hold off?" i.e.

"why is it exempt from our power?"

372. agitur: "is at stake."

373. quae = talis: "such is our long-suffering."

376. mihi: H. 428, 2 (385, II, 2); M. 211; A. 229; G. 345, Rem. 1;

188, 2, d; L. & M. 537.

Cereris filia: Proserpina.

377. erit: i.e. "will continue to be," "will remain."

378. situa est ea gratia = situa eius regni gratia est tibi: "if you have regard for this joint sovereignty of ours."

379. deam patruo: i.e. Proserpina and Pluto. See line 356, note.

Page 126. — 385, 386. In prose order, Haud procul ab Henaeis (= Henae) moenibus est lacus aquae altae nomine Pergus.

386, 387. The prose order would be, Cystros plura carmina cyncorum lab-tibus in undis non audit ille (= quam ille lacus audit).

388, 389. suis frondibus ut velo: "with its foliage as with an awning."

The Romans were familiar with the huge awnings stretched over open amphitheater as a protection from the sun.
391. Milton uses this fair scene in comparison with the beauty of Eden (Paradise Lost, IV):

Not that fair field
Of Enna, where Proserpine gathering flowers,
Herself a fairer flower, by gloomy Dis
Was gathered, which cost Ceres all that pain
To seek her through the world; . . .
. . . . . . might with the Paradise
Of Eden strive.

396. usque adeo: "to such a degree," "so."
398. et ut summa, etc.: "and as (since) she had torn her garment at its upper edge."
399. Shakespeare (Winter's Tale, IV, iv) makes this scene more real by naming the flowers: —

O Proserpina,
For the flowers now, that frighted thou let'st fall
From Dis's wagon! daffodils . . violets . .
. . primroses . . oxlips . . lilies.

400. "And such was the innocence of her girlish years."
402. quemque: resolves equos into its component parts: "he urges on his horses, calling each by name."
406. stagna Palicorum: the god is pursuing a southeasterly course, and is now halfway between Henna (in the center of Sicily) and Syracuse (on the southeast coast).
Near the temple of the Palici (see vocab.) were two pools of hot sulphureous water.
rupta ferventia terra: "boiling up from (or in) a crevice of the earth." The language of the whole passage is descriptive of a volcanic region.
407-410. Ovid is in these lines describing ancient Syracuse (confined originally to the island of Ortygia alone). The lines will be easily understood by reference to the accompanying map of Syracuse and its environment.
408. inaequalis portus: these were the “Great Harbor” and the “Little Harbor.” See map.

moenia: i.e. of Syracuse in Ortygia.

409, 410. “There is between (medium) Cyane and Pisaean Arethusa a bay of the sea (aequor), which, confined by enclosing points of land, brings its waters to a narrow strait (coel).” This aequor is the “Great Harbor,” between Arethusa on the island and Cyane on the mainland.

Pisaeae Arethusae: for explanation of this epithet and history of Arethusa, see lines 577–641, in which the nymph tells her own story.

411, 412. The prose order is: Hic (“near here”) fuit Cyane, celeberrima inter Sicelidas nymphas, a cuius nomine stagnum quoque dictum est.

413. gurgite: i.e. in her own pool.

summa tenus alvo: “as far as the waist.”

414. deam: i.e. Proserpina. Pluto is now nearing the coast with his fair captive.

Page 127. — 415. roganda, non rapienda fiat: “she (the maiden) should have been wooed, not snatched away by force.”

418. exorata, exterrita: “prevailed upon by prayer, and not by fear.”

420. Saturnius: for the epithet, see line 356, note.

424. pronos currus: “the down-rushing chariot.” Again Ovid uses the plural for the singular.

cratere: i.e. the basin of the pool of Cyane.

431. primaque de tota: “and first of all.”

437. The metamorphosis is complete, and the goddess of the pool is no longer an entity separate from its waters.

Page 128. — 465. mutata: i.e. from a nymph into water.

467. nec quo, etc.: “nor had she any means wherewith to speak.”

477, 478. saeva vertentia aratra manu: note the quantity of the final vowels, as shown by the rhythm of the lines, and assign the epithets to their proper nouns. Observe the symmetrical arrangement, and compare with Ovid’s favorite interlocked order, which would be obtained in this case by transposing the order of the substantives.

481. latum vulgata per orbem: “which was famous the world over.”

Sicily was famous in ancient times as a grain-producing country.

483–486. These are the disasters familiar to farmers. Horace (Odes, III, i, 29) says that he who is content with a modest income has no large ventures out, and hence has none of these things to fear.

488. Ovid is fond of this bit of realism, and uses it on several occasions where the effect is still more striking. See IV, 475, where Tisiphone similarly pushes back her snaky locks before addressing Juno; and XI, 157, 158, where the mountain Tmolus, half personified, prepares to listen by putting back the trees like locks from his ears.
491. "And do not be grievously wroth with the land which is faithful to thee."

terrace: H. 426, 2 (385, II); M. 205; A. 227; G. 346; B. 187, 2, a; L. & M. 531.

493-495. Frequent and abrupt change from singular to plural may be noticed here as elsewhere in Ovid.

Page 129.—498, 499. cur sim, adehav: these are indirect questions dependent upon the idea of telling in the verbal noun narratibus. "A convenient time will come for me to tell why," etc.

501. vultus melioris: "of a more cheerful countenance." For the case, see H. 440, 3 (396, V); M. 222; A. 215; G. 365; B. 203; L. & M. 558.

501-503. According to tradition, Arethusa's waters flowed far down beneath the sea, from the point of disappearance in Elis until they reappeared in Sicily, unmixed and undefiled through it all. Dryden (Elegies and Epitaphs) derives a very appropriate figure of purity of style from this feature of the story:

Her Arethusian stream remains unsoil'd,
Unmix'd with foreign filth, and undefil'd.

503. desueta sidera cerno: during her long submarine journey she had become unaccustomed to the sight of the stars. In this and the succeeding passage there is no thought but that the stream is the sentient nymph.

504. "While I was gliding beneath the earth in my Stygian stream." Stygio gurgite probably means no more than sub terris; and yet the poet, by the use of this word, desires to connect Arethusa not alone with the subterranean regions, but also with the Under World, so that she may be able to report the whereabouts of Proserpina. In Ovid's other account (Fasti, IV, 577) Ceres asks the Constellations of the Bears where her daughter is:

Parrhasides stellae, — namque omnia nosse potestis,
Aequoreas numquam cum subeatis aquas —
Persephone nata miserae monstrare parenti!

They disclaim all knowledge of the deed, since it was done in the day, and refer her to the Sun. And the Sun says: —

Quam quaeris, ne vana labores, Nupta Iovis fratri tertia regna tenet.

506. illa and the succeeding substantives may be construed either by supplying erat, or by considering them in loose apposition with Proserpina.
509. "The mother upon hearing these words (lit., at these words) stood as if petrified."

510, 511. utque dolore, etc.: "when her overwhelming frenzy had been displaced by overwhelming pain." She realizes now as not before that her daughter is lost to her.

515. si nulla est gratia matris: "if you have no regard for the mother."

516, 517. neu sit tibi cura, etc.: "and let not your regard for her (illiua) be diminished (vilius) by the fact that she is my child."

519. amittere, reperire: these infinitives are to be read as verbal nouns ("losing," "finding") and construed as the direct object and predicate object respectively of vocas. Similarly in the case of scire and reperire below.

520. quod rapta: understand est, and read as substantive clause.

521. reddat: i.e. Pluto.

521, 522. neque enim praedone, etc.: "for your daughter does not deserve to have a robber as a husband."

si iam mea, etc.: this passage is capable of two interpretations:

(1) "if now my daughter does not," i.e. if my daughter is above such a fate, much more is yours, since you are lord of heaven;

(2) "if she is no longer mine," i.e. I say your daughter, for she is no longer mine, being stolen from me.

Page 130. — 525. non hoc iniuria factum = hoc factum (noun) non et iniuria.

526. gener ille: "the fact that he is our son-in-law."

nobilis, pudori: H. 433 (390, I); M. 206; A. 233, a; G. 256; B. 191, 2; L. & M. 547.

527. tu modo velis: this proviso has reference to gener. "(I say son-in-law,) provided, of course, that you are willing (that he should be such)."

ut desint: "though other (recommendations) be lacking."

528. quid quod: "what of the fact that," etc.

529. nec cedit nisi sorte mihi: "and that he does not yield place to me save by (the grace of the) lot." See line 368, note.

529, 530. sed tanta cupidio, etc.: "but if you so greatly desire to separate them."

532. nam sic Parcarum, etc.: according to the belief of the ancients, as shown by many passages similar to this, Jove knows the fates, and is privileged to reveal them at will, but has no power to thwart or change them.

573. Arethusa: this beautiful story, in explanation of what purported to be a natural wonder, is told by Ovid, as usual, in fuller form than by any other author. It is told also in Pliny the Elder, as well as in Pausanias and Moschus. Vergil twice refers to Arethusa, first in Eclogue X, in which he invokes the nymph, as muse of bucolic poetry, to aid his song, adding the prayer:—

Sic tibi, cum fluctus subterlabere Sicanos,
Doris amara suam non intermisceat undam.

And again (Aeneid, III, 694) the main points in the story are touched:—

Alpheum fama est huc Elidis amnem
Occultas egisse vias subter mare; qui nunc
Ore, Arethusa, tuo Siculis confunditur undis.

The story echoes in English poetry from Milton's crude reference in Arcades:—

Divine Alpheus, who by secret sluice Stole under seas to meet his Arethuce, with some passing allusions also in Lycidas, to the fuller and more poetic treatment of Keats and Shelley. Keats (Endymion, II, near end) describes the persistent wooing of Alpheus and the all but yielding of the nymph, each in his watery form; while Shelley tells the whole story in his exquisite ode Arethusa.

575. siccata capillos: in this verb we have a true middle voice, with capillos as its object; so that the reading is not "having been dried as to her hair," but "having dried her (own) hair."

576. fluminis Elei: i.e. the Alpheus.

578. me: H. 471 (417); M. 239; A. 247; G. 398; B. 217; L. & M. 615, 619.

581. formosae nomen: "the reputation of (being) a beautiful (maiden)."

583. qua refers to dote; both words are causal in force, the one of gaudere, and the other of erubui.

Page 131. — 588. alpe: "deep down in the water."

590, 591. "Silvery willows and the wave-fed poplar gave natural shade to the soft-sloping banks."

593. recingor: again the middle voice.

597. nescio quod murmur: "some gently murmured words."

604–618. Pope (Windsor Forest) transfers the scene to Windsor Forest, introduces a local nymph in Arethusa's stead, makes Pan the pursuer, and then takes his action from Ovid with but scanty change. The passage is a good example of the lavish and unblushing borrowing from the classics in which that poet indulged:—

Not half so swift the trembling doves can fly,
When the fierce eagle cleaves the liquid sky;
Not half so swiftly the fierce eagle moves,
When through the clouds he drives the trembling doves;

OVID — 22
As from the god she flew with furious pace,
Or as the god, more furious, urged the chase;
Now fainting, sinking, pale, the nymph appears;
Now close behind his sounding steps she hears;
And now his shadow reach'd her as she run,
His shadow lengthen'd by the setting sun;
And now his shorter breath with sultry air,
Pants on her neck, and fans her parting hair.

Compare with this Coleridge's (probable) imitation of lines 614, 615 (Ancient Mariner, I):
—
With sloping masts and dripping prow,
As who pursued with yell and blow
Still treads the shadow of his foe,
And forward bends his head,
The ship drove fast, loud roared the blast,
And southward aye we fled.

Page 132. — 622. tectam: supply me.
632. sudor frigidus: the beginning of the metamorphosis into a stream.
636. sed . . . enim: "but (this does not stop his pursuit) for," etc.
637. positoque viri, etc.: "and, laying aside the human form which he had assumed."
638. ut se mihi misceat: in his telling of the story, Ovid ignores the accomplishment of this purpose, and represents Arachnusa alone as gliding under land and sea to Sicily. But other references connect the two in their watery career. See Vergil (Aeneid, III, 694) as quoted under line 573, note, and the English poets. Note, in this connection, Pope (Dunciad, II), who is in evident imitation of Milton as quoted above: —
As under seas Alphaeus' secret sluice
Bears Pisa's offerings to his Arethusa.

639. Delia: i.e. Diana, to whom the nymph had already appealed for aid (line 619).
640. Ortygiam: H. 419, 2 (380, II, 2, 2)); M. 199, 1; A. 258, 6; G. 337; B. 182, 1, a; L. & M. 515.
640, 641. cognomine divae grata meae: "pleasing (to me) because of the name of my goddess (which it bore)." Ortygia was an old name for Delos, the birthplace of Diana, and hence an epithet of that goddess.

662. dictos cantus: the rehearsal of the song of the Muses was begun in line 341. Read the connecting paragraphs on page 124.
663. nymphae Helicona coulentes: these had been the judges of the contest between the Muses and the Pierides, e 133. — 664. concordi sono: "unanimously."

victae: i.e. the Pierides.
dixit: i.e. e nobis maxima (line 661), who served as mouthpiece for the Muses.
quoniam certamine, etc.: "since 'tis not enough that you have deserved punishment by your presumption in challenging us to a contest (certamine)."
et non est patientia, etc.: "and since our endurance is not without limit."
et qua vocat ira: i.e. we shall let our just wrath dictate your punishment.

1. Emathides: this name is given to the Pierides, because their father, Pierus, is king of Macedonia, and Macedonia, by metonymy, is called Emathia, which is a district of Macedonia. The name Pierides is used both of the Emathides and the Muses. See Vocabulary, under Pierides.

3. alteraque alterius, etc.: "and each sees the faces of her fellows stiffen-ing with a hard beak."

5. per braccia mota levatae: i.e. the motion of their arms (now wings), intended to be of lamentation, raises them into the air.

8. nemorum convicia: "the disgrace of the woods."

134. — VI, 146 and following. The story of Niobe appears first in Homer, whose version (Iliad, XXIV, 602) it is worth while to quote in full. The story is told by Achilles as he urges the aged Priam within his tent to partake of food:—

Now let us break our fast,
For even Niobe the golden-haired,
Refraîned not from her food, though children twelve Perished within her palace, — six young sons
And six fair daughters. Phoebus slew the sons
With arrows from his silver bow, incensed
At Niobe, while Dian, archer queen,
Struck down the daughters; for the mother dared
To make herself the peer of rosy-cheeked
Latona, who, she boastfully proclaimed,
Had borne two children only, while herself
Had brought forth many. Yet, though only two,
The children of Latona took the lives
Of all her own. Nine days the corpses lay
In blood, and there was none to bury them,
For Jove had changed the dwellers of the place
To stone; but on the tenth the gods of heaven
Gave burial to the dead. Yet Niobe,
Though spent with weeping long, did not refrain
From food. And now forever mid the rocks
And desert hills of Sipylus, where lie,
Fame says, the couches of the goddess-nymphs,
Who lead the dance where Achelous flows,
Although she be transformed to stone, she broods
Over the woes inflicted by the gods.

The Niobe story is further mentioned in Hesiod, Sophocles, Aполлodorus, Pausanias, and certain epigrams in the Greek Anthology. Besides the present version by Ovid, the story is told in Latin by Hyginus (Fabulae, 9), with brief references in other writers.

The story has been retold to modern ears by Landor, in his “Niobe,” Lewis Morris, “Niobe on Sipylus,” and Frederick Tennyson, “Niobe.” It will be found a most valuable literary exercise to study these poems in comparison with Ovid’s version, and observe the differences in style and method of treatment employed by the ancient and modern poets.

Following is the genealogy of Niobe and her husband Amphion:—

```
   Neptune
    /
  Nycteus (k. of Thebes)
    /
Jupiter = Antiope (k. of Lydia)
    /
   Amphiон = Niobe (k. of Thebes)
     /
   7 sons
```

---

146. facti: i.e. the punishment of Arachne, who was a maiden of Lydia, for her presumption in challenging Minerva to a contest of skill.

148. illa: i.e. Arachne. By the statement that Niobe had once known Arachne, Ovid connects this story more closely with what precedes, and justifies Niobe’s punishment by giving the warning a more personal character.

149. Niobe is said to have been born in Maeonia (Lydia) near Mt. Sipylus.

150. popularis: “her countrywoman.”

152. multa dabant animos: “many things contributed to her pride.”
sed enim: "but (one thing especially) for neither," etc.

coniugis artes: referring to Amphion's skill on the lyre. See l. 178, note.

156. si non sibi, etc.: i.e. self-consciousness of her good fortune led her into the presumptuous sin which wrecked her happiness.

157. Tiresia: H. 469, 2 (415, 11); M. 234, 1; A. 244, a; G. 395; B. 215; L. & M. 609.

venturi: "of the future."

161. lauro: the laurel had by this time come to be sacred to Apollo. For the origin of this sentiment see Met. I, 553-567.

164. This line is an instance of zeugma. "They burn incense upon the altar flames and utter prayers the while."

165. ecce introduces a conspicuous object suddenly presented to the view; "see," "but look."

celeberrima: "thronged about."

166. intexo auro: the Phrygians were famous for their skill in embroidery.

168. immisis: "hanging loose," "free flowing."

169. alta: "drawn up to her full height."

170. visis: understand caelestibus.

173. "The only (mortal) ever allowed to recline at the feasts of the gods." This privilege, according to Pindar and Euripides, was indeed granted to Tantalus; but it does not suit the pride of Niobe to add that her father merited and received lasting punishment in Hades for his treachery on that same occasion. This is variously stated as theft of the immortality-conferring nectar and ambrosia, which he gave to his friends on earth, and divulgence of the secrets of the gods.

172-176. See genealogical table under line 146, note.

176. socius illi: "in him as father-in-law."

PAGE 135. — 178. fidibusque mei commissa mariti moenia: it is said that Amphion had been instructed in music by Mercury himself, and that this god gave him a golden lyre, by the seductive strains of which he built the walls of Thebes, causing the great stones to fall harmoniously into place till all was done.

The poets love to dwell upon this triumph of song. Dryden (Art of Poetry) finds the origin of the story in the benefits which poetry has conferred upon mankind: —

These benefits from poets we received,
From whence are raised those fictions since believed,
[That] Amphion's notes, by their melodious powers,
Drew rocks and woods, and raised the Theban towers.

Tennyson has written a very happy, but quite un-Tennysonian, burlesque poem, entitled Amphion.
181. accedit eodem: "in addition to this, I am possessed of beauty worthy of a goddess."

182. septem: ancient writers differ as to the number of Niobe's children, ranging from twenty to twelve.

185, 186. "And then presume to prefer to me the Titaness Latona, daughter of Coeus, whoever he may be (nescio quo)."

187. The jealousy of Juno had bound the whole earth under a curse not to give place of birth to Latona for her children.

189–191. This is an allusion to the myth that Delos was once an island floating beneath the surface of the sea, and that it had been commanded to appear (δῆλος) by order of Neptune, in order that there Latona might give birth to Apollo and Diana. According to Vergil's account (Aeneid, III, 75), the island was at last securely anchored by Apollo himself in grateful remembrance of its service to his mother.

See also Spenser (Faerie Queene, II, xii, 13):

As th' isle of Delos whylome, men report,
Amid th' Aegean sea long time did stray,
Ne made for shipping any certeine port,
Till that Latona, travelling that way,
Flying from Juno's wrath and hard assay [persecution],
Of her fayre twins was there delivered,
Which afterwards did rule the night and day.

190. dixit: i.e. Delos.
192. uteri nostri: "of my offspring."
195. "I am too strong for Fortune to harm."

cui: H. 426, 1 (385, 1); M. 205; A. 227; G. 346; B. 187, II, a; L. & M. 530.
196. ut: "although."

multo plura: i.e. than she herself has.
198. huic populo: H. 428, 2 (385, 4, 2); M. 211; A. 229; G. 347, Rem. 5; B. 188, 2, d; L. & M. 537.

populo natorum: she thinks of her children as a very nation for multitude.
200. turbam: in apposition with numerum duorum. It is contempuously used of the two children of her rival, "Latona's rabble."

qua quantum, etc.: "and with this number (turbā) how much does she differ from a childless (woman)?"
201. properate: i.e. "make haste (and cease your worship of Latona)."
202. ponite = deponite.
204. dea: i.e. Latona.
206. vobis animosa creatis: "proud of your birth."

Page 136.—208. an dea sim, dubitor: "I have had my divinity called in question."
quod: the antecedent is the condition implied in orbam.
linguam paternam: this phrase points to the second of the two accounts of the offense of Tantalus given in note on line 173—an unbridled tongue that led him to betray the secrets of the gods.
adsidus equis: "by the constant tread of horses."
Amphion: see references on Tiresia, line 157, note.
rubentia terga: i.e. the horses are equipped with purple saddle-cloths.
sarcina prima: "the first burden," i.e. the firstborn child.

Page 137. — 229. in latus a dextro armo: "sidewise, over (his horse's) right shoulder."

Sipylius: this son is evidently named from the Lydian mountain near which his mother was born, just as his brother Ismenus was named for the river of that name near Thebes.
The prose order is: Veluti cum rector, praecipus imbris, nube visa, fugit, pendentiaque undique carbae deducit.
pendentia carbasae deducit: when the sail was not in use, it would be reefed up to the crosspiece at the top of the mast. When the sail was unfurled, therefore, it would be drawn down (deducit).
ne qua: supply parte, "lest on any side."
"He, just as he was, leaning forward (pronus) over the neck of the swiftly moving horse (lit., the swift neck)."

incurvata: "writhing."
illi: H. 425, 4, note (384, II, 4, note 2); M. 208; A. 235, a; G. 350, i; B. 188, i; L. & M. 537.
simul = simul ac.
eductum: supply est.
intonsum: "unshorn," hence "youthful," since the Greek boys did not cut their hair until manhood.
non simplex vulnus: "not one wound alone."
qua crus esse incipit, et qua, etc.: a double description of the part of the leg just behind the knee.
pennis tenus: "clear up to the feathers."
non omnes: i.e. where only two divinities were concerned.
certam: why not the more usual certiorem with fecere?
ruinae: H. 451, 1, note (page 210, footnote 3); M. 226, 1; A. 218; G. 374, note 9; B. 204, 1; L. & M. 575.
mirantem (superos hoc fecere) potuisse.

nam: this is in answer to the natural question as to why Amphion does not join the queen in her grief. The king, according to this account, kills himself through excess of grief. But Hyginus assigns to him a different form of death: Amphion autem, cum templum Apollinis expugnare vellet, ab Apolline sagittis est interfectus. (Fabulae, 9.)
272. cum luce: i.e. the light of life.
273. Niobe Niobe: nominative and ablative respectively.
275. resupina refers to the proudly erect position, with head thrown back, facing upward in her disdain of common things.
276. “An object of envy to her friends; but now an object of pity even to her foes.”
279. liventia: as the result of beating her breast and arms, which doubtless accompanied her mourning, after the Oriental and ancient fashion.
280. pascere: a middle imperative. “Feed thyself,” “glut thyself.”
282. per funera septem esseror: esserre is the word regularly used of the corpse that is borne out to burial. She complains that she has suffered seven deaths in the loss of her sons.
284. victrix: this unfortunate word stirs her up to further impiety.

PAGE 139. — 290. viscere: supply suō.
291. “Sank down in a dying condition with her face pressed to her brother’s.”
294. This verse is corrupt. The present reading means: “she shut her lips, (and they remained closed) until (except) after her breath left her body, (when they again relaxed).”

The reading adopted by Burmann is: —

Oraque non pressit, nisi postquam spiritus exit.

That is to say, she had been speaking to her mother at the moment when she received her death wound, “and did not close her lips, save after life had left her body.”

298–300. This is the subject and scene of the most famous portion of the famous Niobe sculptures, the remaining fragments of which are now preserved in the Uffizi Gallery at Florence.

299. minimam: understand natu, “the youngest.”
302. Keats (Endymion, 1) catches this supreme moment of agony, when stony grief is passing into a paralysis of the whole being: —

Perhaps the trembling knee
And frantic gape of lonely Niobe,
Poor, lonely Niobe! when her lovely young
Were dead and gone, and her caressing tongue
Lay a lost thing upon her paly lip,
And very, very deadliness did nip
Her motherly cheeks.

305. nihil est in imagine vivum: “there is no sign of life in her whole form.” Dryden, in his Funeral Pindaric Poem on the death of Charles II, compares the numbing grief of the English people to that of Niobe:—

Thus long my grief has kept me dumb:
Sure there's a lethargy in mighty woe,
Tears stand congeal'd and cannot flow;
And the sad soul retires into her inmost room;
Tears, for a stroke foreseen, afford relief;
But, unprovided for a sudden blow,
Like Niobe we marble grow,
And petrify with grief.

Ovid, in his own bitter grief in exile (Ex Ponto, I, ii, 31), congratulates Niobe upon her loss of sense:—

Felicem Niobem, quamvis tot funera vidit, Quae posuit sensum, saxea facta, mali!

311. in patriam; fixa cacumine montis: according to myth she was carried by a whirlwind back to Lydia, and placed upon the summit of her native mount, Sipylus.

310–312. This rock on Mount Sipylus went by the name of Niobe. Pausanias says of it that it was merely a rock and a precipice when one came close up to it, and bore no resemblance at all to a woman; but at a distance, you might imagine it to be a woman weeping, with downcast countenance.

Byron's famous stanza (Childe Harold, IV, 79), wherein he likens Rome to the desolate Niobe, is probably the most notable inspiration in English of this famous tale:—

The Niobe of nations! there she stands,
Childless and crownless, in her voiceless woe;
An empty urn within her wither'd hands,
Whose holy dust was scatter'd long ago;
The Scipio's tomb contains no ashes now;
The very sepulchers lie tenantless
Of their heroic dwellers: dost thou flow,
Old Tiber! through a marble wilderness?
Rise, with thy yellow waves, and mantle her distress.

PAGE 140. — VII, i, and following. This is the story of Medea in its most complete form. Her line of descent from Phoebus (Helios), however, omitted by Ovid, is given in part by Hesiod (Theogony, 956); and Homer (Odyssey, X, 136) gives in part the same facts. From these and other sources the following genealogy may be compiled:—
The successive incidents in Medea’s career are all subjects of frequent allusions in the classics. Her flight with Jason from her father’s kingdom is described by Hesiod (Theogony, 992-1002). The slaughter of her brother Absyrtus to retard her father’s pursuit is referred to by Seneca, Medea, 900.

Shakespeare (Henry VI, Second Part, V, 2) makes effective reference to this incident:

Meet I an infant of the house of York,
Into as many gobbets will I cut it
As wild Medea young Absyrtus did.

The rejuvenation by Medea of Jason’s father, Aeson, and the destruction of Pelias through the agency of his own daughters, by Medea’s machinations, are striking episodes.

Cicero (De Senectute, 83) alludes to the latter incident, although he confounds the experience of Aeson with that of Pelias:

Quo (i.e. to the world of spirits) quidem me profisciscentem haud sane quis facile retraxerit, nec tamquam Peliam recoxerit.

But it is the events of the later years in Corinth, when she slew, with King Creon, Glaucus, the king’s daughter and her rival in Jason’s affection, and her own sons, as revenge upon her husband—it is these events that have most attracted the ancient poets. Probably a score more of Greek and Latin poets have written tragedies based upon these scenes. In the case of many, the name alone survives. Of Greeks, the Medea of Euripides is extant. In Latin literature, fragments of tragedies upon this theme, by Ennius, Accius, and Pacuvius... are still preserved. On Ovid’s own tragedy see pages 42–45 of this book. The Medea of Seneca is extant in complete form. It is to be noted also that Ovid’s twelfth Heroid is addressed by Medea to Jason, upbraiding him for his ingratitude and infidelity. Hyginus relates many incidents of Medea’s story, some of which are not found in other accounts (Fabulae, 21–26).

Aside from numerous passing references in English, the following books and poems are based upon the story of Jason and Medea: Chaucer, Legend of Good Women (Medea); William Morris, Life and Death of Jason; Frederick Tennyson, Aeson.

1–6. Brief references are made to some of the adventures of the Argonauts prior to their arrival in Colchis.

2, 3. Phineus, the king of Salmydessus, had been smitten with blindness by the gods, who had also sent the harpies to torment him.

3, 4. Iuvenes: Zetes and Calais, the winged sons of Boreas, who were in the company of the Argonauts, drove the harpies away, and pursued them as far as the islands of the Strophades.

7. Phrixea vellera: the golden fleece of the fabled ram which had borne Phrixus over sea and land from Boeotia to Colchis. Phrixus had there sacrificed the ram to Jove, and given the golden fleece to king Aeëtes.

8. “And while the condition (on which the fleece may be obtained) is named, dreadful because of the number of mighty tasks (imposed).” The accomplishment of these tasks is described in lines 100–158.

Page 141. — 12. Nescio quis deus: “some god or other.” Mirumque, etc.: supply est. “And I wonder if this is not what is called love, or at least something like it.”

15. Modo denique: “but now for the first time.”

19, 20. Cupido, mens: “passion, reason.” The same ideas are expressed by furor and ratio in line 10.

20, 21. Vide meliora, etc.: a famous line, expressive of the experience of those who sin against light.

23. Quod ames: “something to love.”

23, 24. Vivat, an ille occidat, in dis est: “whether he lives or dies (is not an affair of mine but) is in the hands of the gods.”

24, 25. Idque precari: “I may at least pray for this without loving him.”

26–28. Aetas, genus, virtus, ore: these are familiar elements of influence in love—“youth, birth, valor, beauty.” Compare Dido's experience (Aeneid, IV, 2–4): —

Multa viri virtus animo, multusque recursat
Gentis honos; haerent infixi pectore vultus Verbaque.
29–31. She here refers to the three deadly tasks which Jason must perform: the yoking of the fire-breathing bulls, the sowing of the dragon’s teeth which will at once produce armed giants, and the encounter with the sleepless dragon that guards the golden fleece.

30. hostibus suae segetis: “a foe of his own sowing.”

dabitur fera praeda: “he will be given as prey like (any mere) beast.”

32. 33. These are familiar expressions, descriptive of hardiness of heart.

34, 35. oculosque videndo conscelero: she does not seek a reason for defiling her eyes by the sight of his death; the real question is: “Why is such sight defilement?” Back of this the question is: “What is he to me that I may not properly look upon his death?” The defilement in question could be incurred only by beholding the death of a loved one or a relative. See the indignant words of Priam to Pyrrhus, who has just slain Polites in his father’s sight: —

Qui nati coram me cernere letum Fecisti et patrios foedasti funere vultus.

— Aeneid, II, 538.

37. quamquam, etc.: she rouses herself to action: “this is no time for saying ‘Heaven forefend,’ but for preventive action.”

38–43. The adverse consequences of her aid to Jason at once present themselves to her mind.

38. prodamne regna: the safety of her father’s realm depended upon his retaining the golden fleece.

39. nostra: read with ope.

40. per me: construe with sospes.

Page 142.—43–45. sed non is, etc.: the negative is here taken with timeam. “But his features, his loftiness of soul, his grace of form, are such that I need fear no trick or forgetfulness of my desert.”

46. ante: “beforehand.”

50. servatrix: in predicate construction with celebrabere—“thou shalt be hailed as his deliverer.”

51, 52. Again the objections, not now of jealousy, but of natural sentiment. These objections are briefly answered one by one in the following three lines.

54. stant mecum vota sororis: “my sister’s good will is on my side.” Medea’s sister was Chalciope (see genealogical table), whom Aëtes had given in marriage to Phrixus. Hyginus (Fabulae, 3) gives an interesting side light upon this point, since he shows Chalciope’s motive for being on Jason’s side: —

Phrixum autem Aëtea libens recepit filiamque Chalciopean dedit ei uxorem, quae postea liberos ex eo procreavit. Sed veritus est Aëtea ne regno eicierent, quod ei responsum fuit ex prodigis, ab advena Aeoli filio mortem cayeret. Itaque Phrixum interfecit. Ac filii eius in ratem conscenderunt ut ad avum transirent. Hos Iason, cum pellem peteret, naufragos ex insula Aria sustulit et ad Calchiopen matrem reportavit, cuius beneficio ad sororem Medeam est commendatus.

56. titulum servatae pubis: servatae is the emphatic participle, and is equivalent to a verbal noun with its objective genitive following. Servatrix pubis Achivae, "Savior of the Greek youth," is the title to which she aspires.

59, 60. "And him whom I would not give in exchange for all that the wide world holds—the son of Aeson."

61. vertice sidera tangam: a common expression for extreme pride and satisfaction. See Horace (Odes, I, i, 35).

62–65. The third objection, now more feeble, of mythical terrors on the deep. These three dreaded wonders are used by Milton (Paradise Lost, II) for purposes of comparison:—

And more endangered, than when Argo passed Through Bosporus, betwixt the justling rocks;
Or when Ulysses on the starboard shunned
Charybdis, and by the other whirlpool steered.

62. quid, quod nescio, etc.: "what of the fact that certain crags are said to rush together in mid sea?"

63. montes: these were the Cyaneae, two small rugged islands near the mouth of the Bosporus at the entrance of the Euxine Sea. There was a legend that these were floating islands, and that they crushed whatever attempted to pass between them. Hence they were called Symplegades ("the clashers").

63, 65. Charybdis, Scylla: Vergil (Aeneid, III, 420–428) gives a vivid description of these two monsters that infested the strait between Italy and Sicily. They were respectively a dangerous whirlpool on the Sicilian side, and a rock on the opposite or Italian side. The ancient imagination personified these objects, giving them the terrifying physical characteristics which Ovid here, and Vergil, in the passage above referred to, describe.

69. coniugiumne putas? this thought, suggested by coniuge in the preceding line, recalls her to her senses as she realizes how entirely without foundation her assumptions are.

PAGE 143. — 74. Hecates Persei dos: see genealogical table under line 1, note. Hecate was the goddess of magic and enchantment.

76. ardor: i.e. the furo and cupido of the preceding narrative.

79–81. The prose order is: Utque parva scintilla, quae sub inducta favilla latuit, ventis alimenta adsumere soleat, crescerque, et agitata rumgat in vires vetere.

84. solito formosior: "more beautiful than usual."
85. amanti: i.e. Medea.
86. tum denique: "never before."
91. torum: i.e. "marriage."
94. promissa dato: "keep your promises."

triformin deae: this was the same goddess in three manifestations—Luna in heaven, Diana on earth, and Hecate in Hades. Her status were representations of three female forms joined back to back, and she was worshiped where three roads met; hence the epithet Trinia.

95. quod = quodcumque.
96. societ futuri: i.e. Aëtes. This oath is by the Sun.

PAGE 144. — 102. iugis: "upon the ridges" surrounding the field of Max.
105. vaporibus: "by their hot breath."

107, 108. The poet has in mind a lime-kiln (fornace) partly hollowed out of the earth on a hillside (terrena) and partly built up of brick. In this kiln the limestone (silicea) is burned until it is softened (solui) and converted to quicklime. If water be poured upon this product, the lime combines chemically with the water, producing much heat. A hissing steamlow vapor accompanies this action, and to this fay breath of the bulls is likened.

110, 111. illis obius it: "goes to meet them."

truces: understand tauri.

venientis: understand Iasonis.

116. medicamina: these were the cantatae herbae mentioned in line 98.

118. suppositoris agrees with tauros supplied as part object of cogit. It's best rendered as a coordinate verb: "he yoked them and made them draw the heavy plow."

119. insuetum ferro: i.e. this was a virgin field, never before plowed. This is indicated by sacrum in line 101.

122. vipereos dentes: see Met. III, 101 and following, where Minerva bids Cadmus sow the serpent’s teeth in the ground. It would seem that Cadmus did not use all of these remarkable teeth on that occasion.
According to the account by Apollodorus, Minerva presented the remaining teeth to Aëtes, who now requires Jason to sow them, as hoped, to his own ruin.

123–130. Compare with this the corresponding result in III, 106–114.

125. sumit: the subject is infans.

126. "And is perfected within through all its parts."

PAGE 145. — 130. edita arma: each giant sprung from the earth fa-armed, like Minerva from the head of Jove.
viderunt: the subject is Pelasgi.
demisere vultum animumque: "their faces fell and their hearts failed them."
ipsa: i.e. Medea.
neve parum valeant: "(fearing) lest the herbs be not strong enough."
Cadmus (III, 115) needed not to adopt any such ruse.
148. agisque carminibus grates: "thou didst thank thy charms."
arboris aureae: i.e. the tree on which was hung the golden fleece.
Lethaei sucī: i.e. an herb whose juice produced oblivion, just as did the waters of the river Lethe.
ter: this number had a peculiar significance and power; but, on the other hand, it is used of an indefinite number, and may signify nothing more here than "repeatedly."
auro: H. 477, I (421, I); M. 253; A. 249; G. 407; B. 218, 1; L. & M. 646.
157. It is like Ovid, after giving part of a story at great length, to hurry over the rest in a few words.
146.—161. inducta cornibus aurum: "with gilded horns." It was the custom thus to gild the horns of the victim doomed to sacrifice; also to wreath the horns with garlands of flowers or fillets of wool.
debere: supply me as subject.
possunt: supply tua carmina as subject.
"And the picture of her deserted father, Acētēs, came before her mind — a mind so different from that of Jason."
affectus tales: "such feelings."
istō: supply munere.
177. "By my art and not by your years shall I attempt to renew my father-in-law's long span of life."
"There were yet three nights before the horns (of the moon) should unite entire." The full moon was a time especially favorable to magic.
postquam plenissima fulsit: Shakespeare remembers this occasion (Merchant of Venice, V, i): —

In such a night
Medea gathered the enchanted herbs
That did renew old Aeson.

183. induta, infusa: "clad in flowing robes, with unshod feet, and hair streaming down over her bare shoulders." The bare foot, the ungirt robes, the flowing hair, are characteristic of the garb of the enchantress as well as suppliant in action. Compare Vergil's description of Dido (Aeneid, IV, 518): —

Unum exuta pedem vinulis, in veste recincta;
and Horace (Satires, I, viii, 23): —

Vidi egomet nigra succinctam vadere palla
Canidiam pedibus nudis passoque capillo.

185–188. An exquisite picture of the absolute stillness of the moonlit midnight, where the twinkling stars alone (micant) have aught of motion. Vergil enlarges his description of a similar time (Aeneid, IV, 522–528).

Page 147. — 191. solvit: “she opened.”

192, 193. quaeque diurnis, etc.: “and ye bright stars whose golden beams together with the moon succeed the light of day.”

194. coepitis nostris: H. 453, 2 (400, 1); I. & M. 536.

199. ripis mirantibus: “while their banks looked on in wonder.”

200. concussa: understand freta.

207–209. Pope is thinking of these effects in the closing lines of the Dun-ciad: —

Before her, Fancy’s gilded clouds decay,
And all its varying rainbows die away;
Wit shoots in vain its momentary fires,
The meteor drops, and in a flash expires;
As one by one, at dread Medea’s strain,
The sickening stars fade off the ethereal plain.

207. Temesaea aera: the eclipses (labores) of the moon were supposed to be caused by magic. The simple peasants would try to ward off this magic by beating upon brazen vessels. Medea boasts that notwithstanding all such efforts she is able by her magic arts still to cause the moon’s eclipse.

208, 209. currus avi: i.e. of the Sun, her grandfather.

212. serpentigenis: this loose relation, indicated by the dative in Latin, is better expressed in English by the genitive. “You turned the savage on slaughters of the serpent-born band against themselves.”

213. somni: H. 451, 1 (399, I, 2); M. 226, 1; A. 218, a; G. 374; B. 204, 1; L. & M. 573.

subiecta Thessala Tempe: “Thessalian Tempe lying far below.”

232. vivax is an example of what may be called, the “active” adjective, which represents its noun as conferring, not possessing, the quality implied by the adjective. Hence vivax in this connection does not mean “ever living,” but “conferring immortality.” Horace abounds in this adjectival use; e.g. palma nobilis (Odes, I, i, 5) is “the palm that confers renown.”
NOTES

233. "(An herb) not yet made famous by the change which it produced in the body of Glaucus." Ovid tells of this metamorphosis of the fisherman Glaucus into a sea god in Met. XIII, 898–968. See epitome of that passage.

234. curru pennisque: to be construed with lustrantem.

238. adveniens: "upon her arrival home."

243. tellure is in the ablative absolute construction with egesta, and scrobibus is to be taken with egesta as ablative of source. The line may be freely translated, "having dug two ditches in the earth near by." It was customary, in sacrificing to the deities of the Under World, to dig a ditch into which the blood of black victims was poured.

247. aenea carchesia: observe also that the magic herbs were cut with a bronze sickle (line 227). Bronze was used as the metal for sacred utensils long after the introduction of iron.

tetpidi lactis: fresh drawn blood, new wine, fresh milk, and olive oil (this last not mentioned here) were the sacred liquids.

250. senili: this epithet properly belongs to artus, but is here transferred to anima.

251. murmure: "a muttered incantation."

252. ad auras: he had doubtless been awaiting the event in Jason's house.

253. resolutum belongs syntactically with corpus. It is best rendered, however, as an active verb, coördinate, so far as subject is concerned, with porrexit; "having buried him in deep slumber by her magic words, she stretched him out like a corpse," etc.

PAGE 149.—256. oculos profanos; the profani were those uninitiated in the sacred mysteries. The familiar warning of the priest is given in Vergil (Aeneid, VI, 258): —

> Procul, o procul este, profani, > Totoque absistite luco.

270, 271. "And the entrails of a werewolf which has the power (solitii) of changing its wild beast features into those of a man." This belief in lycanthropy, or werewolfism, is very ancient, and long survived in many parts of Europe. Ovid here gives the reverse of the usual form of the superstition, which was that of a human being changing voluntarily, or by the will of another, into a wolf, while still retaining human intelligence.

273. vivacia: compare meaning in this context with that in line 232.

274. Compare Amores, II, vi, 36, note.

277. arenti ramo iampridem: "with a branch long since dead (dry)."

mittis properly applies to the fruit of the olive tree, but is here applied to the tree itself.

OVID — 24
278. summis: H. 427, 474, 2 (385, 3, 419, 1, 2); A. 248, 4, Rem.; G. 346, note 6, 348, Rem. 1; B. 218, 5; L. & M. 534.
279–284. Shelley makes happy use of this detail in his Alastor:—

Oh for Medea's wondrous alchemy,
Which where'soe'er it fell made the earth gleam
With bright flowers, and the wintry boughs exhale
From vernal blooms fresh fragrance!

285–287. Pope also (Dunciad, IV) has his use of this story—each after his kind:—

When Dulness, smiling—"Thus revive the wits!
But murder first, and mince them all to bits;
As erst Medea (cruel, so to save!)
A new edition of old Aeson gave;
Let standard authors, thus like trophies borne Appear more glorious as more hack'd and torn.
And you, my critics! in the chequer'd shade,
Admire new light through holes yourselves have made."

Page 150.—293. hunc: supply fuisse. "He recalls that he looked like this."

292, 293. Ovid is content with the simple fact of Aeson's rejuvenation, and the old man's joy and wonder. Frederick Tennyson in his Aeson has the modern poet's fashion of "looking before and after," of considering the question in its logical sequence. And so:—

Soon came the bitter knowledge after it
That this fair resurrection of the Past
Was all unsuited to the timeworn soul,
That dwelt within it. What were lively limbs Without the love that moved them? Could I think
With youthful thoughts, because my blood was warm?
Clothe myself with new hope and nought to hope for?

Page 151.—VIII, 183 and following. The story of Daedalus and Icarus seems to have been invented to explain, on the one hand, the origin and spread of the manual arts, and, on the other, the name of the Icarrian sea. It is mentioned in Latin, in addition to the present account, in Vergil (Aeneid, VI, 14–33) and Hyginus (Fabulae, 40).

Shakespeare (III Henry VI, V, vi) makes a detailed metaphorical application of the story:—

Gloucester. Why, what a peevish fool was that of Crete,
That taught his son the office of a fowl!
And yet, for all his wings, the fool was drown'd.
NOTES

King Henry. I, Daedalus; my poor boy, Icarus;
Thy father, Minos, that denied our course:
The sun that sear’d the wings of my sweet boy,
Thy brother Edward: and thyself the sea
Whose envious gulf did swallow up his life.

The most obvious metaphorical meaning of the story of Daedalus is illustrated in the following passage from Falconer (Shipwreck, II):—

Such arduous toil sage Daedalus endured
In mazes, self-invented, long immersed,
Till genius her superior aid bestow’d,
To guide him through that intricate abode:
Thus, long imprison’d in a rugged way
Where Phoebus’ daughters never aim’d to stray,
The muse, that tuned to barbarous sounds her string,
Now spreads, like Daedalus, a bolder wing;
The verse begins in softer strains to flow,
Replete with sad variety of woe.

184. loci natalis: i.e. Athens.

185. Page 152.—186. obstruat: understand Minos as subject. Daedalus was kept as prisoner at large in Crete, since Minos had removed all means of escape by sea.

187. possideat: argumentative concession.

189. naturam novat: “he changes nature’s laws.”

191. ut clivo, etc.: “so that you would think (to look at them) that they had grown upon a sloping surface” (like trees upon a hillside).

192. rustica fistula: the syrinx or pipes of Pan, made of reeds of unequal length, placed side by side in orderly succession.

193. medias et imas: supply pennas, “the feathers at the middle and bottom of each.”

et does double duty by joining lino and ceris, and medias and imas.

195. veras aves: i.e. real bird’s wings.

195–200. This charmingly natural picture of the playful, innocent boy shows how real the story is to Ovid himself.

195. una: i.e. una cum Daedalo.

196. sua pericia: “the instruments of his own destruction.”

199. mollibat: an old form of molliebat.

200, 201. postquam manus, etc.: “after the finishing touches had been put upon the work.”

206–208. That is, “do not shape your course by any constellation, as if you were an independent navigator, but follow me alone.”

212. non iterum repetenda: i.e. “for the last time.”
215. sequi: supply *cum as subject.

damnosas is true of *artes, not inherently, but only in the light of the sequel. They were destined to be "destructive" to Icarus.

217–220. Again the realistic human touch. We are brought close to actual human life as we see the three rustics gazing in awe upon the flying figures — the angler no longer intent upon his rod, the shepherd leaning upon his convenient staff, and the farmer upon his plow handle.

Page 153. — 219. possent: H. 592 (517); M. 382, 2; A. 320, e; G. 633; B. 283, 3; L. & M. 839.

220. Iunonia Samos: Samos was said to be the birthplace of the goddess and especially sacred to her. See Vergil (Aeneid, I, 15):

Quam [Karthaginem] Iuno fertur terris magis omnibus unam Posthabita coluisset Samo.

220–222. Ovid shows a sublime indifference as to the order of these islands. The geographer would have traced the course from Crete, past Paros and Delos on the left, and Lebinthos on the right, to Samos. The tiny island of Calymne, near Rhodes, is so far away from the course to the southeast as to lead us to suspect that this island is mentioned only for the sake of its poetic epithet, secunda melle.

221. fuerat: supply relicta.

226. odoratas: is this the fragrance lingering in the wax from the flowers whence the honey was gathered, or is it by prolepsis the fragrance of the burning wax?

227. nudos lacertos: i.e. his arms were stripped of their wings as of a garment; and now, though he moves his arms as before, he does not "take hold of" the air (percipit).

229, 230. ora caerulea clamantium aqua: Ovid’s favorite interlocked order, with the additional touch that the nouns and adjectives are arranged in chiasmic order.

229. patrium nomen: "the name of his father."

235. tellus: i.e. the island of Icaros, near by the scene of the boy’s fall, one of the Cyclades.

Hyginus (Fabulae, 40) relates these facts in the simplest form, and tells us the subsequent course of Daedalus:

Icarus altius volans, a sole cera calefacta, decidit in mare quod ex eo Icarium pelagus est appellatum. Daedalus pervolavit ad regem Cocalum in Siciliam.

Vergil (Aeneid, VI, 14 and following) follows the story which represents Daedalus as alighting finally upon the Italian coast near Cumae, and there consecrating his wings to Apollo, a consecration which served the double purpose of thanksgiving to the god for deliverance, and of a vow that the wings should never again be used. Daedalus also built a temple to Apollo, upon the doors of which he represented the scenes of his adventures:—

Tu quoque magnam
Partem opere in tanto, sineret dolos, Icare haberes.
Bis conatus erat casus effingere in auro;
Bis patriae cecidere manus.

240. longum tibi crimen: “a lasting reproach to thee.”

241–243. The prose order is: Namque germana (Daedali), fatorum ignara, huc tradiderat progeniem suam docendam puerum bis senis natalibus actis, animi capacis ad praecepta.

244, 245. medio spinas in pisce, etc.: “he took the backbone of a fish, which he had observed, as a model.” This ingenious youth is here credited with the invention of the saw, and below of the compasses.

248. ut aequali spatio, etc.: “so that while these (arms) maintained a constant angle of divergence, one arm might stand fixed while the other traced a circle around it.”

aequali spatio: H. 479, 3 (379, 2); M. 248; A. 250; G. 403; B. 223; L. & M. 655.

250. arce Minervae: i.e. the Acropolis at Athens.

251. lapsum mentitus: “giving out the story that he (the boy) had fallen off.”
illa: supply casa.

"The old man set out a bench and bade them rest their limbs."

quo: "upon this bench."

textum rude: "a coarse cloth."

and following. These exquisitely realistic touches in description of humble hospitality justify the assertion that is sometimes made, that this is the best of all the stories which Ovid relates.

PAGE 156. — 644. tecto: we need not suppose that she robbed the roof itself to obtain fuel. Such material may naturally have been stored beneath the roof upon the rafters.

minuit: "broke them up into small pieces."

foliis: H. 462 (414, 1); M. 237, 1; A. 243, 2; G. 390, 2; B. 214, 1; L. & M. 601.

sordida terga suis: "a piece of bacon blackened (by the smoke)."
The ancient house had no chimney, but the smoke found its way out of a hole in the roof, having previously blackened the interior of the house.

medias fallunt horas: "they while away the intervening time."

655, 656. The family bed is pressed into service as an improvised dining couch, with its sedge-grass mattress (tortum) and its bedstead (leab) of willow frame (sponda) and feet.

et haec vestis, etc.: "even this (their holiday) spread was a cheap thing and well worn (vetus)."

non indignanda: "a good match for."

accubuere dei: this is an anachronism. Ovid assigns the customs of his own times to the heroic age.

bicolor baca Minervae: the Italians used the olive both in its unripe (green) and its ripe (black) condition, and hence were familiar with its two colors. The olive was sacred to Minerva.

lactis coacti: the cheese was made simply by pressing the whey out of curds or "thick milk."

non acri favilla: "warm ashes."

omnia fictilibus: "all (being served) in cheap earthenware dishes."

caelatus eodem argento cratere: "an embossed mixing-bowl of the same precious material." The poet indulges in a bit of facetiousness.

qua cava sunt inlita: "coated on the inside."

epulas calentes: i.e. the boiled bacon and cabbage mentioned above.

nec iners pauperque voluntas: "and lively and abunding good will."

PAGE 157.—681. manibus supinis: the gesture of the suppliant — hands outstretched with upturned palms.

concipiant preces: "they fall to praying."

dapibus nulliisque paratibus: "for their poor fare and bad service."
684. anser, custodia: custodia is abstract for custos. Ever since the good sentinel service rendered by the sacred geese in saving the capitol from capture by the Gauls in 390 B.C., the goose had an especial reputation as a custos. Ovid twice elsewhere honors the goose in his verse. It is a better sentinel than the dog (Met. XI, 599):

> Nec voce silentia rumpunt
> Sollicitive canes canibusve sagaciore anser.

Again, in describing the raven, he says that it was once white—

> Nec servaturis vigilii Capitolia voce
> Cederet anseribus,—Met. II, 538.

690. immunibus: "it shall be granted you to escape the destruction (that threatens your neighbors)."

691. mali: H. 452, 2 (399, 1, 3); M. 226, 1; A. 218, α; G. 374, 8; B. 204, 1; L. & M. 573.

695. They were a single bowshot's distance from the top.

699. illa vetus casa, etiam parva dominis duobus, in templum vertitur.

700. furcas subiere columnae: "marble columns took the place of the forked wooden supports."

711. vota fides sequitur: i.e. their prayer was answered.

712. soluti: "worn," "enfeebled."

Page 158.—724. cura: metrical reasons forbid the more common construction of the dative "for which."

---

IX. 1, 2. Neptunius heros rogat quae causa deo (sit) gemitus truncaeque frontis.

1. Neptunius heros: Theseus was the reputed son of Aegeus, king of Athens, and Aethra, daughter of Pittheus, king of Troezen. There was a current tradition, however, that he was really the son of Neptune.

2. Calydonius amnis: i.e. Acheloós, the river god.

Page 159.—7. See II, 280, 281, note.

8. nomine sigua suo Deíanira: "if any mention of Deíanira."

14, 15. Hercules presses his suit on the ground that he is offering no less a father-in-law than Jove himself to his bride, not to mention his own great and famous prowess.

15. novercae: for the genealogy of Hercules see 1, 728, note. It was through the jealousy of his "stepmother" Juno that he was compelled to perform his famous twelve labors. These will be enumerated in lines 183-197, where see notes.

18. fluentum = (aquarum) quae fluunt.
23, 24. "Jove, from whom you boast that you have sprung, is either not your father, or is so unlawfully."

25, 26. fictum(ne) esse iovem malis: "whether you prefer Jove (i.e. his fatherhood) to be falsely claimed."

29. verba tot: "just these words (and no more)."

dextera: understand manus.

31. puduit modo, etc.: “I was ashamed to back down after having spoken so boldly just now.”

32. viridem vestem: being a river god, he is represented as clothed in green.

33, 34. The boxer’s attitude is described, though the contest which follows is a wrestling rather than a boxing contest.

33. bracchia opposui: “I put up my arms.”

34. in statione: “in position.”

35. “He caught up a handful of dust and sprinkled it over me.”

Wrestlers were accustomed to come to the contest with their naked bodies besmeared with oil. The river god would naturally be of slippery body. Hercules besprinkles his own body and that of the god with dust, that he may gain the better hold.

36–38. Observe how these lines are connected by echoing words. Cer cicum in the second line recalls vicem in the first; while captat in the second is repeated by captare in the third line. See other illustrations of the poet’s fondness for these effects near end of note on the Hexameters of Ovid. These words describe the attempts of Hercules to get an advantageous hold upon his adversary.

PAGE 160.—40. haud secus ac moles: “just like a cliff.” Similarly,Vergil’s boxer, Entellus, is strong by virtue of his bulk (Aeneid, V, 439-442).

43. certi non pedere: “determined not to yield.”

46. non aliter: “just so.”

50–56. The position which Hercules is endeavoring to break is the one described in lines 44, 55. He now succeeds in breaking his adver-sary’s hold, turning him around and clasping him in his arms from behind, while he bears down upon him with all his weight.

57, 58. Acheloës seeks to thrust his own arms between his chest and the encircling arms of Hercules, and thus release himself.

59, 60. He succeeds, only to be attacked anew, until at last the arms of Hercules clasp his neck, and further resistance is impossible.

67. This feat of the infant Hercules is famous. He strangled two serpents which the jealousy of Juno had despatched against him. The incident is used in English literature as an illustration of the lusty strength of young states.
Campbell, in his Lines on the Departure of Emigrants for New South Wales, thus apostrophizes that country: —

Delightful land, in wildness ev'n benign,
The glorious past is ours, the future thine!
As in a cradled Hercules, we trace
The lines of empire in thine infant face.

Wordsworth is more direct in his allusion (Prelude): —

Meanwhile, the invaders fared as they deserved,
The Herculean commonwealth had put forth her arms,
And throttled with an infant godhead's might
The snakes about her cradle.

Dryden's lines (Britannia Rediviva) enforce the moral of the present passage, that heroes thrive on opposition: —

Thus, when Alcides raised his infant cry,
The snakes besieg'd his young divinity:
But vainly with their forked tongues they threat;
For opposition makes a hero great.

69. The killing of the hydra was the second "labor" of Hercules. In the following lines he describes his conquest of that monster.

Page 161. — 71. de centum (capitum) numero: the hydra had nine heads, eight of them mortal, and one — in the middle — immortal. Centum is used here, as frequently, to denote an unusual and large number.

72. gemino: whenever Hercules cut off one head two sprung forth in its place.
esset: H. 595, 4 (504, 1); M. 337; A. 319, d; G. 632; B. 283, 4; L. & M. 915.

73, 74. "This creature branching out with serpents sprung from (their predecessors') death, and thriving on destruction, I overmastered." This was accomplished by searing with a burning brand the necks of the hydra as fast as the heads were cut off. The immortal head was cut off last and buried.

76. arma aliena: "borrowed weapons."

80. devicto: supply miki.

82–85. Hercules throws his arms about the neck of the bull, catching the creature as he comes on at full speed (admissum), and drags him to a standstill; whereupon he presses the bull's horns down and thrusts them into the ground. This action lays the bull himself prone upon the earth.

87, 88. This horn, torn from the brow of Acheloüs, became the horn of plenty which Bona Copia, the goddess of abundance, carries. This is a familiar representation in art. See illustration opposite p. 161.
91. totum autumnum: i.e. "all the fruits of Autumn."

menaeas secundas, poma: apples and other fruits were generally served last at a Rōman feast, just as the meal began with eggs. Hence the proverb, ab ovo usque ad mala, "from eggs to apples," in general, "from beginning to end."

93. lux subit: this takes us back to VIII, 547 and following. The whole night has been spent by the bank of the river in feasting and story telling.

95. habeaunt: H. 603, 11, 2 (519, 11, 2); M. 354; A. 328, 1; G. 572; B. 293, 11, 2; L. & M. 921.

---

Page 162. — 134. longa fuit, etc.: "meanwhile, a long time had elapsed," i.e. since the death of Nessus.

135. implerant terras odiumque: an instance of zeugma; "had filled the earth (with their fame) and had sated Juno's hatred."

136. victor ab Oechalia: all of the trouble which is related below starts with this incident. Hercules had vanquished Eurytus, king of Oechalia, a city of Euboea, in a contest in archery. The king had promised his daughter Iole in marriage to the man who should defeat him, but after the contest refused the prize to Hercules. The hero thereupon made war upon him, and, after slaying the king, carried off Iole as his captive.

Centaeo Iovi: that is, he was intending to sacrifice to Jove at that place, the northwest point of the island of Euboea.

138, 139. This sounds like a fragment from Vergil’s famous pen picture of Fama (Aeneid, IV, 173-190):

```
• • • • • • • • • • •
Parva metu primo; mox sese attollit in auras, Ingrediturque solo, et caput inter nubila condit.
• • • • • • • • • • •
Tam ficti pravique tenax, quam munita veri.
```

140. Amphitrioniden teneri is to be construed with a verb of saying implied in fama praecessit. Hercules was the reputed son of Amphitrion, the husband of Alcmena.

145. properandum, etc.: "I must make haste and devise some plan."

147. Calypso: i.e. her father’s home.

149. Meaeagre: Meleager and Dejanira were children of Oeneus and Althaea. Meleager had killed his mother’s brothers at the Calydonian boar hunt. See epitome of VIII, 260-444.

150. quantum injuria possit, etc.: "how much a woman's outraged feelings and grief can do." Compare Vergil (Aeneid, V, 5-7): —
King Henry. I, Daedalus; my poor boy, Icarus;
Thy father, Minos, that denied our course:
The sun that ear’d the wings of my sweet boy,
Thy brother Edward: and thyself the sea.
Whose envious gulf did swallow up his life.

The most obvious metaphorical meaning of the story of Daedalus is illustrated in the following passage from Falconer (Shipwreck, II):

Such arduous toil sage Daedalus endured
In mazes, self-invented, long immured,
Till genius her superior aid bestow’d,
To guide him through that intricate abode:
Thus, long imprison’d in a rugged way
Where Phoebus’ daughters never aim’d to stray,
The muse, that tuned to barbarous sounds her string,
Now spreads, like Daedalus, a bolder wing;
The verse begins in softer strains to flow,
Replete with sad variety of woe.

184. loci natalis: i.e. Athens.
Page 152. — 186. obstruat: understand Minos as subject. Daedalus was kept as prisoner at large in Crete, since Minos had removed all means of escape by sea.
187. possideat: argumentative concession.
189. naturam novat: “he changes nature’s laws.”
191. ut clivo, etc.: “so that you would think (to look at them) that they had grown upon a sloping surface” (like trees upon a hillside).
192. rustica fistula: the syrinx or pipes of Pan, made of reeds of unequal length, placed side by side in orderly succession.
193. medias et imas: supply penñas, “the feathers at the middle and bottom of each.”
et does double duty by joining lino and ceris, and medias and imas.
195. veras aves: i.e. real bird’s wings.
195-200. This charmingly natural picture of the playful, innocent boy shows how real the story is to Ovid himself.
195. una: i.e. una cum Daedalo.
196. sua pericla: “the instruments of his own destruction.”
199. mollibat: an old form of molliebat.
200. postquam manus, etc.: “after the finishing touches had been put upon the work.”
206-208. That is, “do not shape your course by any constellation, as if you were an independent navigator, but follow me alone.”
212. non iterum repetenda: i.e. “for the last time.”
215. sequi: supply cum as subject.

damnosas is true of artes, not inherently, but only in the light of the sequel. They were destined to be "destructive" to Icarus.

217-220. Again the realistic human touch. We are brought close to actual human life as we see the three rustics gazing in awe upon the flying figures—the angler no longer intent upon his rod, the shepherd leaning upon his convenient staff, and the farmer upon his plow handle.

Page 153.—219. possent: H. 592 (517); M. 382, 2; A. 320, ε; G. 633; B. 283, 3; L. & M. 839.

220. l'unonia Samos: Samos was said to be the birthplace of the goddess and especially sacred to her. See Vergil (Aeneid, I, 15):—

Quam [Karthaginem] Iuno fertur terris magis omnibus unam Posthabita coluisse Samo.

220-222. Ovid shows a sublime indifference as to the order of these islands. The geographer would have traced the course from Crete, past Paros and Delos on the left, and Lebinthos on the right, to Samos. The tiny island of Calymne, near Rhodes, is so far away from the course to the southeast as to lead us to suspect that this island is mentioned only for the sake of its poetic epithet, fecunda melle.

221. fuerat: supply relicta.

226. odoratas: is this the fragrance lingering in the wax from the flowers whence the honey was gathered, or is it by prolepsis the fragrance of the burning wax?

227. nudos lacertos: i.e. his arms were stripped of their wings as of a garment; and now, though he moves his arms as before, he does not "take hold of" the air (percipit).

229, 230. ora caerulea clamantia aquā: Ovid’s favorite interlocked order, with the additional touch that the nouns and adjectives are arranged in chiasmic order.

229. patrium nomen: "the name of his father."

235. tellus: i.e. the island of Icaros, near by the scene of the boy’s fall, one of the Cyclades.

Hyginus (Fabulae, 40) relates these facts in the simplest form, and tells us the subsequent course of Daedalus:—

Icarus altius volans, a sole cera calfacta, decidunt maris quod ex eo Icarium pelagum est appellatum. Daedalus pervolvavit ad regem Cocalum in Siciliam.

Vergil (Aeneid, VI, 14 and following) follows the story which represents Daedalus as alighting finally upon the Italian coast near Cumae, and there consecrating his wings to Apollo, a consecration which served the double purpose of thanksgiving to the god for deliverance, and of a vow that the wings should never again be used. Daedalus also built a temple to Apollo, upon the doors of which he represented the scenes of his adventures:

Tu quoque magnam
Partem opere in tanto, sineret dolos, Icare haberes.
Bis conatus erat casus effingere in auro;
Bis patriae cecidere manus.

240. longum tibi crimen: "a lasting reproach to thee."

241–243. The prose order is: Namque germana (Daedali), fatorum ignara, huic tradiderat progeniem suam docendam puerum bis senis natalibus actis, animi capacis ad praecepta,

244, 245. medio spinas in pisce, etc.: "he took the backbone of a fish, which he had observed, as a model." This ingenious youth is here credited with the invention of the saw, and below of the compasses.

248. ut aequali spatio, etc.: "so that while these (arms) maintained a constant angle of divergence, one arm might stand fixed while the other traced a circle around it."

aequali spatio: H. 479, 3 (379, 2); M. 248; A. 250; G. 403; B. 223; L. & M. 655.

250. arce Minervae: i.e. the Acropolis at Athens.

251. lapsum mentitus: "giving out the story that he (the boy) had fallen off."

PAGE 155.—612. inriet: the subject is Ixion natus. "He laughed at their credulity."

613. Ixion natus: this was Pirithoüs, the intimate friend of Theseus. His most striking adventure in the character of spretor deorum was his attempt to steal Proserpina from her lord, the king of the Lower World. Pluto fixed him forever, for this presumption, upon an enchanted rock near the entrance to Hades.

mentis: H. 452, 1 (399, III, 1); A. 218, c; G. 374, 7; B. 204, 4; L. & M. 575.

614, 615. nimiumque putas, etc.: "and you have too large an estimate of the power of the gods, if you think that they can change the forms of men."

620, 621. tiliae contermina quercus modico circumdata muro: "an oak tree and a linden side by side, with a low wall surrounding them." The wall indicates that the spot is sacred.

622. ipse locum vidi: the naiveté with which this proof is adduced is refreshing.

624. hinc: i.e. the spot described in lines 620, 621.

627. Atlantiades: Mercury was the son of Jove, and Maia the daughter of Atlas.
illa: supply casa.

"The old man set out a bench and bade them rest their limbs."

quo: "upon this bench."

textum rude: "a coarse cloth."

and following. These exquisitely realistic touches in description of humble hospitality justify the assertion that is sometimes made, that this is the best of all the stories which Ovid relates.

PAGE 156. — 644. tecto: we need not suppose that she robbed the roof itself to obtain fuel. Such material may naturally have been stored beneath the roof upon the rafters.

minuit: "broke them up into small pieces."

foliis: H. 462 (414, 1); M. 237, 1; A. 243, a; G. 390, 2; B. 214, 1, b; L. & M. 601.

sordida terga suis: "a piece of bacon blackened (by the smoke)."
The ancient house had no chimney, but the smoke found its way out of a hole in the roof, having previously blackened the interior of the house.

medias fallunt horas: "they while away the intervening time."

555, 556. The family bed is pressed into service as an improvised dining couch, with its sedge-grass mattress (torum) and its bedstead (lecto) of willow frame (sponda) and feet.

et haec vestis, etc.: "even this (their holiday) spread was a cheap thing and well worn (vetus)."

non indignanda: "a good match for."

accubuere dei: this is an anachronism. Ovid assigns the customs of his own times to the heroic age.

bicolor baca Minervae: the Italians used the olive both in its unripe (green) and its ripe (black) condition, and hence were familiar with its two colors. The olive was sacred to Minerva.

lactis coacti: the cheese was made simply by pressing the whey out of curds or "thick milk."

non acri favilla: "warm ashes."

omnia fictilibus: "all (being served) in cheap earthenware dishes."

caelatus eodem argento crater: "an embossed mixing-bowl of the same precious material." The poet indulges in a bit of facetiousness.

qua cava sunt inlita: "coated on the inside."

epulas calentes: i.e. the boiled bacon and cabbage mentioned above.

nec iners pauperque voluntas: "and lively and abounding good will." PAGE 157. — 681. manibus supinis: the gesture of the suppliant — hands outstretched with upturned palms.

concipliant preces: "they fall to praying."

dapibus nullisque paratibus: "for their poor fare and bad service."
684. anser, custodia: custodia is abstract for custos. Ever since the good sentinel service rendered by the sacred geese in saving the capitol from capture by the Gauls in 390 B.C., the goose had an especial reputation as a custos. Ovid twice elsewhere honors the goose in his verse. It is a better sentinel than the dog (Met. XI, 599):

Nec voce silentia rumpunt
Sollicitive canes canibusve sagaciorem anser.

Again, in describing the raven, he says that it was once white—

Nec servaturis vigili Capitolia voce
Cederet anseribus, — Met. II, 538.

690. immunitus: "it shall be granted you to escape the destruction (that threatens your neighbors)."

691. male: H. 452, 2 (399, 1, 3); M. 226, 1; A. 218, a; G. 374, 8; B. 204, 1; L. & M. 573.

695. They were a single bowshot's distance from the top.

699. Illa vetus casa, etiam parva dominis duobus, in templum vertitur.

700. furcas subiere columnae: "marble columns took the place of the forked wooden supports."

711. vota fides sequitur: i.e. their prayer was answered.

712. soluti: "worn," "enfeebled."

PAGE 158. — 724. cura: metrical reasons forbid the more common construction of the dative "for which."

IX. 1, 2. Neptunius heros rogat quae causa deo (sit) gemitus truncaeque frontis.
1. Neptunius heros: Theseus was the reputed son of Aegeus, king of Athens, and Aethra, daughter of Pittheus, king of Troezen. There was a current tradition, however, that he was really the son of Neptune.

2. Calydonius anmis: i.e. Acheloüs, the river god.

PAGE 159. — 7. See II, 280, 281, note.

8. nomine siqua suo Deianira: "if any mention of Deianira."

14, 15. Hercules presses his suit on the ground that he is offering no less a father-in-law than Jove himself to his bride, not to mention his own great and famous prowess.

15. novercæ: for the genealogy of Hercules see I, 728, note. It was through the jealousy of his "stepmother" Juno that he was compelled to perform his famous twelve labors. These will be enumerated in lines 183-197, where see notes.

18. fuentum = (aquirum) quae fluenta.
23, 24. “Jove, from whom you boast that you have sprung, is either not your father, or is so unlawfully.”
25, 26. fictum (ne) esse iovem maliis: “whether you prefer Jove (i.e. his fatherhood) to be falsely claimed.”
29. verba tot: “just these words (and no more ).”
dextera: understand manus.
31. puduit modo, etc.: “I was ashamed to back down after having spoken
so boldly just now.”
32. viridem vestem: being a river god, he is represented as clothed in green.
33, 34. The boxer’s attitude is described, though the contest which follows is a wrestling rather than a boxing contest.
33. brachia opposui: “I put up my arms.”
34. in statione: “in position.”
35. “He caught up a handful of dust and sprinkled it over me.”
Wrestlers were accustomed to come to the contest with their naked bodies besmeared with oil. The river god would naturally be of slippery body. Hercules besprinkles his own body and that of the god with dust, that he may gain the better hold.
36–38. Observe how these lines are connected by echoing words. Cervicem in the second line recalls vicem in the first; while captat in the second is repeated by captare in the third line. See other illustrations of the poet’s fondness for these effects near end of note on the Hexameters of Ovid. These words describe the attempts of Hercules to get an advantageous hold upon his adversary.

PAGE 160.—40. haud secus ac moles: “just like a cliff.” Similarly, Ver-
gil’s boxer, Entellus, is strong by virtue of his bulk (Aeneid, V, 439– 442).
43. certi non cedere: “determined not to yield.”
46. non aliter: “just so.”
50–56. The position which Hercules is endeavoring to break is the one described in lines 44, 55. He now succeeds in breaking his adver-sary’s hold, turning him around and clasping him in his arms from behind, while he bears down upon him with all his weight.
57, 58. Acheloüs seeks to thrust his own arms between his chest and the encircling arms of Hercules, and thus release himself.
59, 60. He succeeds, only to be attacked anew, until at last the arms of Hercules clasp his neck, and further resistance is impossible.
67. This feat of the infant Hercules is famous. He strangled two serpents which the jealousy of Juno had despatched against him. The incident is used in English literature as an illustration of the lusty strength of young states.
Campbell, in his Lines on the Departure of Emigrants for New South Wales, thus apostrophizes that country: —

Delightful land, in wildness ev’n benign,
The glorious past is ours, the future thine!
As in a cradled Hercules, we trace
The lines of empire in thine infant face.

Wordsworth is more direct in his allusion (Prelude): —

Meanwhile, the invaders fared as they deserved.
The Herculean commonwealth had put forth her arms,
And throttled with an infant godhead’s might
The snakes about her cradle.

Dryden’s lines (Britannia Rediviva) enforce the moral of the present passage, that heroes thrive on opposition: —

Thus, when Alcides raised his infant cry,
The snakes besieg’d his young divinity:
But vainly with their forked tongues they threat;
For opposition makes a hero great.

69. The killing of the hydra was the second “labor” of Hercules. In the following lines he describes his conquest of that monster.

PAGE 161.—71. de centum (capitum) numero: the hydra had nine heads, eight of them mortal, and one — in the middle — immortal.

Centum is used here, as frequently, to denote an unusual and large number.

72. geminus: whenever Hercules cut off one head two sprung forth in its place.

esse: H. 595, 4 (504, 1); M. 337; A. 319, d; G. 632; B. 283, 4; L. & M. 915.

73, 74. “This creature branching out with serpents sprung from (their predecessors’) death, and thriving on destruction, I overmastered.” This was accomplished by searing with a burning brand the necks of the hydra as fast as the heads were cut off. The immortal head was cut off last and buried.

76. arma aliena: “borrowed weapons.”

80. devicto: supply mihi.

82–85. Hercules throws his arms about the neck of the bull, catching the creature as he comes on at full speed (admissum), and drags him to a standstill; whereupon he presses the bull’s horns down and thrusts them into the ground. This action lays the bull himself prone upon the earth.

87, 88. This horn, torn from the brow of Acheloüs, became the horn of plenty which Bona Copia, the goddess of abundance, carries. This is a familiar representation in art. See illustration opposite p. 161.
91. _totum autumnum_: _i.e._ "all the fruits of Autumn."

_menas secundas, poma_: apples and other fruits were generally served last at a Roman feast, just as the meal began with eggs. Hence the proverb, _ab ovo usque ad mala_, "from eggs to apples," in general, "from beginning to end."

93. _lux subit_: this takes us back to VIII, 547 and following. The whole night has been spent by the bank of the river in feasting and story telling.

95. _habeant_: H. 603, 11, 2 (519, 11, 2); M. 354; A. 328, 1; G. 572; B. 293, III, 2; L. & M. 921.

---

PAGE 162.—134. _longa fuit_, etc.: "meanwhile, a long time had elapsed,” _i.e._ since the death of Nessus.

135. _implerant terras odiumque_: an instance of zeugma; "had filled the earth (with their fame) and had sated Juno’s hatred."

136. _victor ab Oechalia_: all of the trouble which is related below starts with this incident. Hercules had vanquished Eurytus, king of Oechalia, a city of Euboea, in a contest in archery. The king had promised his daughter Iole in marriage to the man who should defeat him, but after the contest refused the prize to Hercules. The hero thereupon made war upon him, and, after slaying the king, carried off Iole as his captive.

_Cenaeo Iovi_: that is, he was intending to sacrifice to Jove at that place, the northwest point of the island of Euboea.

138, 139. This sounds like a fragment from Vergil’s famous pen picture of Fama (_Aeneid_, IV, 173-190):

---

* * * * * * * * *

Parva metu primo; mox sese attolit in auras, Ingrediturque solo, et caput inter nubila condit.

* * * * * * * * *

Tam ficti pravique tenax, quam munita veri.

140. _Amphitryoniden teneri_ is to be construed with a verb of saying implied in _fama praecessit_. Hercules was the reputed son of Amphitryon, the husband of Alcmena.

145. _properandum_, etc.: "I must make haste and devise some plan."

147. _Calydona_: _i.e._ her father’s home.

149. _Meleagre_: Meleager and Deianira were children of Oeneus and Althaea. Meleager had killed his mother’s brothers at the Calydonian boar hunt. See epitome of VIII, 260–444.

150. _quantum injuria possit_, etc.: "how much a woman’s outraged feelings and grief can do." Compare Vergil (_Aeneid_, V, 5-7): —
Duri magno sed amore dolores Polluto, notumque, furens quid femina possit, Triste per augurium Teucrorum pectora ducunt.

135. Lichas is an innocent bearer of a gift, the terrible power of which the giver herself does not know. She intends it only as a love charm, to recall her husband’s affections to herself.

Page 163.—157. dona det illa: supply ut. The clause is the object of mandat.

heros: i.e. Hercules.

158. induitur is middle (i.e. reflexive) in force; “he throws over (his own) shoulders.”

Lernaeæ virus echidnae: Hercules, after slaying the hydra (see 73, 74, and note), had dipped his arrows in the poisonous gall of the creature. With one of these arrows he had shot the centaur Nessus, in whose blood this tunic was dipped. Medea made a similar garment, which she presented to her rival Creusa. It was steeped in poisonous drugs, which, when warmed by the heat of the victim’s body, burst into clinging and inextinguishable flames.

159. This is a conventional expression. See VI, 164 and note.

161, 162. The heat of the altar fires arouses the virulence of the fatal tunic.

164, 165. Between the actions of these two lines Hercules has gone from Euboea to Mt. Oete in Thessaly, where he caused a funeral pyre to be built for himself. Milton thus recalls these events (Paradise Lost, II): —

As when Alcides, from Oechalia crowned
With conquest, felt the envenomed robe, and tore Through pain up by the roots the Thessalian pines,
And Lichas from the top of Oeta threw Into th’ Euboic sea.

Seneca, in his tragedy Hercules Oetaeus, gives in dramatic form the story of the sufferings and death of Hercules.

170. candens; i.e. “white hot,” “glowing.”

176. Saturnia: i.e. Juno, the real cause of all his woes.

178, 179. vel si miserandus, etc.: “or, if I merit pity from my enemy, I mean from you.”

182–199. ergo, etc.: “was it for this,” etc. Hercules now recalls his mighty deeds, not only his famous twelve labors, but also those which he undertook at his own instance as a public benefactor in character of knight errant. See William Morris (The Sons of Croesus): —

Thou knowest how Hercules
Was not content to wait till folk asked aid,
But sought the pests among their guarded trees.
For the better understanding of these dying words of Hercules, his twelve labors are here stated in order: 1. the killing of the Nemean lion, in whose skin he ever after clothed himself (line 197); 2. the destruction of the Lernean Hydra (192, 193); 3. the capture alive of the stag famous for its speed and its golden horns (188); 4. the bringing alive to Eurystheus of the wild boar which ravaged the neighborhood of Erymanthus (192); 5. the cleansing of the Augean stables (187); 6. the killing of the carnivorous birds near the Stymphalian lake in Arcadia (187); 7. the capture alive of the wild bull which devastated Crete (186); 8. the obtaining of the mares of Diomedes, which fed on human flesh (194); 9. the securing of the girdle of Hippolyta, queen of the Amazons (189); 10. the killing of Geryon and capture of his oxen (184, 185); 11. the securing of the apples of the Hesperides (190); 12. the bringing to the upper world of the dog Cerberus from Hades (185).

182, 183. Busiris, king of Egypt, was accustomed to offer up all strangers upon the altar of Jove. This monarch Hercules slew.

183, 184. Antaeus was son of Neptune and Terra. Engaged in wrestling with Hercules, he gained new strength whenever he fell to earth. Hercules held him aloft in the air and strangled him there. This is an excellent illustration of the principle of "strength from defeat." Milton thus describes the contest (Paradise Regained, IV): —

As when earth's son, Antaeus (to compare Small things with great) in Irassa strove
With Jove's Alcides, and oft foiled still rose,
Receiving from his mother earth new strength,
Fresh from his fall, and fiercer grappled joined,
Throttled at length in the air, expired and fell.

185. forma triplex: i.e. Geryon, who had the bodies of three men united. Horace (Odes, II, xiv, 7) describes him as the ter amplus Geryoen.

Cerbere: see Spenser (Faerie Queene, VI. xii, 35): —

Like as whylome that strong Tirynthian swaine Brought forth with him the dreadfull dog of hell
Against his will fast bound in yron chaine,
And roring horribly did him compell
To see the hatefull sunne.

186. See the seventh labor in the note above.

187. Augeas was King of Elis. Wordsworth (On the Death of Robespierre) makes interesting use of this incident: —

Behold!
They who with clumsy desperation brought
A river of blood and preached that nothing else Could cleanse the Augean stable, by the might
Of their own helper have been swept away.

188. It was at the crossing of the river Ladon in Arcadia that the stag was caught.

Page 164. — 191. The reference is to a brawl which Hercules had had with the Centaurs dwelling upon Mt. Erymanthus in Arcadia, on the occasion of his fourth labor.

192, 193. See Spenser (Faerie Queene, VI, xii, 32) :

Or like the Hell-borne Hydra, which they fain
That great Alcides whylome overthrew,
After that he had labourd long in vaine
To crop his thousand heads, the which still Forth budded, and in greater number grew.

194–196. Again Spenser seeks this cycle of stories for illustration (Faerie Queene, V, viii, 31) :

Like to the Thracian tyrant, who, they say,
Unto his horses gave his guests for meat,
Till he himselfe was made their greedie pray,
And torne in peeces by Alcides great.

In the course of this (the eighth) labor Hercules slew the bloody Thracian king, Diomedes, himself. This king is a type to Ovid of a cruel, heartless man. See Epistulae Ex Ponto, I, ii, 122.

198. hac caelum, etc.: Hercules sustained upon his shoulders the burden of the heavens for Atlas, while that hero obtained for him the apples of the Hesperides.

203, 204. This is the heartbroken cry of many a man since Hercules who has seen the oppressor thrive while he himself came to grief. Ennius voices this skepticism as to the coexistence of God and evil in the world in an extant fragment of his tragedy, Telamo. He cannot go so far as to deny the existence of God, but expresses a loss of faith in his controlling providence.

207–210. Observe the adaptation of the words of this passage to the sense.

232. regna visuras iterum Troiana: Troy had once been taken by Hercules, and its king, Laomedon, had been slain by his arrows, with all the king's sons except Priam. Homer (Iliad, V, 641) puts reference to this event in the mouth of Hercules' son, Telephus, as he taunts Sarpedon:

Not like my daring father, Hercules
The lion-hearted, who once came to Troy
To claim the coursers of Laomedon.
With but six ships, and warriors but a few,
He laid the city waste and made its streets
A desolation.

The famous bow and arrows of Hercules are now given to his faithful friend Philoctetes, the son of Poeas. Years afterward, while Philoctetes was suffering in Lemnos from an incurable wound, an oracle was given to the Greeks before Troy, that the city could not be taken without the aid of the arrows of Hercules. After earnest solicitations, Philoctetes came to the Greek camp, and thus once more Troy felt the power of the weapons of Hercules.

PAGE 165. — 233. quo flamma, etc. = cuius ministerio flamma pyrae subdita est.

241. vindice terrae: Hercules is so called because of the many monsters of which he had rid the earth.
247. hoc: i.e. this fear which you feel for him.
248, 249. sed enim, etc.: “but (you need not fear) for,” etc.
251. materna parte: i.e. his mortal part (his body) which he had received from his mortal mother.
254. id: i.e. quod a me traxit.

defunctum terra: “when done with earth.”

256, 257. Hercule deo: ablative absolute, with causal force.
261. se indoluisse notatam: a second construction with dolere.
262. quodcumque, etc.: “whatever the flames could destroy.”

PAGE 166. — 269, 270. maior videri coepit: the forms of the gods as well as of the shades were represented as larger than material bodies. Ovid recognizes this again in XIII, 441 and 895. Vergil has several references to this belief. When Venus appears to Aeneas in burning Troy (Aeneid, II, 592) she is

qualis videri
Caelicolis et quanta solet.

And the shade of Creusa enlarges to heroic size (Aeneid, II, 772):—

Ipsiis umbra Creusae
Visa mihi ante oculos et nota maior imago.

272. astra: the immortal Hercules is set in the heavens as a constellation.
This is in the northern hemisphere, between Lyra and Corona Borealis.

PAGE 167. — X, 1. inde: i.e. from Crete, where Hymen had been solemnizing the marriage of Iphis and Ianthë.

croceo amictu: Hymen is represented as clad in a yellow robe, his head encircled with a wreath of the plant amaracus, his locks perfumed, and bearing a torch in his hand.

7. motibus: the torch went sputtering out, and could not be rekindled by the usual process of brandishing it in the air.

8. exitus: i.e. of the events attending the wedding.

10. "She fell dead, smitten in her ankle by a serpent's tooth."

12. ne non = ut.

14. simulacra functa sepulcro: only those who had enjoyed the rites of burial were allowed to cross the Styx and mingle with the shades.

21, 22. I.e. "I have no such purpose as had Hercules."

PAGE 168.—32-35. These lines recall many similar sentiments in Horace, of which the following stanza is a good example (Odes, II, iii, 25-28):

```latex
Omnes eodem cogimur, omnium
Versatur urna serius oociaus
Sors exitura et nos in aeternum
Exsillium impositura cumbae.
```

37. iuris vestri: H. 447 (401); M. 217, 2; A. 214, c; G. 366; B. 198, 3; L. & M. 556.

40-48. This experience of Orpheus in Hades, and the prevailing power of his lyre, have probably left a deeper impression upon literature than any other one mythological incident. It is worth while to note the way in which different writers use the story. Vergil tells it at some length with exquisite effect (Georgics, IV, 453-527). For an excellent résumé, see Spenser's version of Vergil's Gnat, 433-480. Horace gives a rational explanation of the story that Orpheus could control wild beasts by his lyre (Ars Poetica, 391).

Among the English poets, Spenser faithfully reflects the simple, classic story without attempt to explain (Shepheardes Calender, X, 27-30):

```latex
Seemeth thou doest their soule of sense bereave,
All as the shepheard, that did fetch his dame
From Plutoes balefull bower withouten leave,
His musicks might the hellish hound did tame.
```

Shakespeare's reference to the story is equally characteristic, and shows his tendency to rationalize myth (Merchant of Venice, V, i):

```latex
Therefore the poet
Did feign that Orpheus drew trees, stones and floods;
Since nought so stockish, hard and full of rage,
But music for the time doth change his nature.
```
Milton has Spenser's power of speaking, not of the classics, but out of them, so fully has he imbibed their spirit. The following passages will illustrate this:

Unwinding all the chains that tie
The hidden soul of harmony;
That Orpheus' self may have his head
From golden slumber on a bed
Of heaped Elysian flowers, and hear
Such strains as would have won the ear
Of Pluto, to have quite set free
His half regained Eurydice.
— L'Allegro.

But oh, sad virgin, that thy power
Might raise Musaeus from his bower!
Or bid the soul of Orpheus sing
Such notes as warbled to the string,
Drew iron tears down Pluto's cheek,
And made Hell grant what love did seek.
— Il Penseroso.

The student should read the whole of Pope's Ode on St. Cecilia's Day in this connection. It is chiefly concerned with the story of Orpheus and Eurydice, in illustration of the power of music. The application of the ode is in its last four lines:

Of Orpheus now no more let poets tell,
To bright Cecilia greater power is given;
His numbers raised a shade from Hell,
Hers lift the soul to Heaven.

In Shelley (Prometheus Unbound) the mythical has become the metaphysical:

Language is a perpetual Orphic song,
Which rules with daedal harmony a throng
Of thoughts and forms which else senseless and shapeless were.

John G. Saxe's burlesque on this story is a good example of the irreverent spirit that is often shown in these modern times toward the old mythologies. For further illustrations of this see Lowell's humorous version of the Apollo and Daphne story (Met. I, 553, note), and Tennyson's Amphion.

There is also a decided tendency among modern poets to revamp the classical stories, though not always in the classical spirit—a kind of Preraphaelite movement in literature. Walter Savage Landor's Orpheus and Eurydice may be taken in illustration. He thus describes the critical moment when Orpheus loses his wife the second time:

On he stept,
And Cerberus held agape his triple jaws;
On stept the bard. Ixion's wheel stood still.
Now, past all peril, free was his return,
And now was hastening into upper air
Eurydice, when sudden madness seized
The incautious lover; pardonable fault,
If they below could pardon: on the verge
Of light he stood, and on Eurydice
(Mindless of fate, alas! and soul-subdued) Lookt back.

Other moderns of this class are E. W. Gosse, Andrew Lang, Lewis Morris, William Morris, and Frederick Tennyson.

48, 49. Upon the absurdity of this conception see III, 504, note.

PAGE 169.—61. quid enim, etc.: “for of what should she complain, save that she was too well beloved?”

PAGE 170.—XI. 102. ille: i.e. Midas.

104. “Bacchus granted his prayer, and gave him the baleful gift (which he sought).”

108, 109. non alta is to be taken with ilice; and fronde is locatival ablative with virentem. Translate this phrase, “with rich, green foliage.”

112. massa: supply auri.

114. Hesperidas: see Vocabulary. The golden apples which were guarded by the Hesperides are a favorite poetic conception. See Milton's description of Eden (Paradise Lost, IV):

Groves whose rich trees wept odorous gums and balm,
Others whose fruit burnished with golden rind, Hung amiable (Hesperian fables true,
If true, here only), and of delicious taste.

117. Danaë eludere posset: in reference to the golden shower, in the form of which Jove approached Danaë, who was shut up in a tower by her father Acrisius. It was Acrisius, however, rather than Danaë, who was “cheated.” Jove took the form of a golden shower, not of a shower of gold. Ovid assumes the latter in order that the comparison with the liquid gold of Midas may be the closer. Horace (Odes, III, xvi, 1–8) still further materializes the medium of Jove’s approach, in illustration of the all-penetrating power of gold.

118. aurea fingens omnia: “imagining all things turned to gold.” He looks forward to this as the consummation of his hopes.

OVID — 25
Page 171. — 120. mec egentes = habentes; and tostae frugis is, by metonymy, bread made of the flour of parched wheat. The whole expression means simply “and with bread.”

125. auctorem numeris: see II, 303, note.

127. diveque miserque: “rich and wretched.”

130. ab auro: Ovid frequently uses the ablative with the preposition ab to express the inanimate source of an action, instead of the simple ablative of means. See Heroides, X, 138. Sometimes the construction approaches almost to the personification of the means as a real agent. Compare Epistulae Ex Ponto, I, ii, 110.

131. splendida: “shining.” His very arms are turning to gold.

133. eripe: supply me.

134. mite deum (= deorum) numen: supply est.

135. “Bacchus restored him (to his former condition), and in proof thereof (factique fide) he relieved him of the boon which he had bestowed.”

137. annem: the Pactolus, the origin of whose golden sands is thus explained. This is the stock golden river of poetry. See in Spenser (The Visions of Bellay, XII):

I saw a spring out of a rocke forth rayle [flow],
As cleare as christall against the sunnye beames;
The bottome yeallow, like the golden grayle [gravel]
That bright Pactolus washeth with his streams.

140. spumigero fonti: construe with subde.

144, 145. The prose order is: nunc quoque, semine venae iam veteris percepto, arva vigent pallentia ("yellow") glaesib auro madidis.

Page 172. — 149. stolidae praecordia mentis = stolda mens, “his folly.”

155, 156. The outcome of this strife is a warning to overweening ambition. So Colin Clout in Spenser’s Shephearde’s Calender, VI, 68:

For sith I heard that Pan with Phoebus strove,
Which him to much rebuke and daunger drove,
I never list presume to Parnasse hyll,
But, pypping low in shade of lowly grove,
I play to please my selfe, all be it ill.

156. Tmolus, like Atlas, is now mountain, now god, as occasion requires.

157, 158. aures liberat arboribus: see V, 488, note.

160, 161. in indicu nulla mora est: i.e. “I am ready.”

167. dentibus Indis: “ivory.”

176. trahit in spatium: “lengthens them out.”

177. instabiles imas: “unstable at the base.”

180. turpi pudore: H. 473, 2 (419, 11); M. 246; A. 251; G. 400; B. 224; L. & M. 643.
PAGE 173. — 182–189. This is one of the few comic situations which develop in Ovid’s stories. Pope (Prologue to the Satires) makes use of this story for comparison: —

'Tis sung, when Midas’ ears began to spring, (Midas, a sacred person and a king),
His very minister who spied them first (Some say his queen) was forced to speak or burst.
And is not mine, my friend, a sorer case,
When every coxcomb perks them in my face?

Persius (Satires, I, 119–122) bases his claim to the right of adverse criticism upon this example: “Shall I not mutter too? not even in secret, nor with a ditch as confidant? nowhere at all? Yes, here (i.e. in his book) I’ll dig my ditch. I’ve seen it, my little book, with my own eyes I’ve seen it. There’s no one who hasn’t ass’s ears!”

190. “A thick growth of rustling reeds sprung up there.”

PAGE 174. — XII. 1. Aesacon vivere is the object of the verbal idea in the adjective nescius.

4. defuit Paridis praesentia: it is by this slender line of connection that the poet passes over to the events of the Trojan war. Paris is away on his nefarious errand to the court of Menelaüs.

8. nec dilata foret vindicta: “nor would vengeance have been postponed.”

10. Aulide: this is the scene of the famous events connected with the sacrifice of Iphigenia. Euripides has based his tragedy of Iphigenia in Aulis upon the incident, and many later poets have followed him.

15–23. These lines are a free rendering of Homer (Iliad, II, 303 and following), where Ulysses recalls these incidents to the Greeks at the end of the ninth year of the war. Homer does not, however, mention the sacrifice of Iphigenia.

PAGE 175. — 19–21. Calchas’ speech in Homer is as follows: —

Oh, long-haired Greeks, why stand ye thus
In silence? All-foreseeing Jupiter Hath sent this mighty omen; late it comes
And late will be fulfilled, yet gloriously,
And with a fame that never shall decay.
For as the snake devoured the sparrow’s brood,
Eight nestlings, and the mother-bird the ninth, —
So many years the war shall last; the tenth Shall give into our hands the stately Troy.

27. nec enim nescitve tacete: “for he was neither ignorant of the truth nor did he withhold it, that,” etc.
METAMORPHOSEOS XII

186. virgins nam deae; i.e. of Diana. Agamemnon had slain her favorite

287. "The is said to have substituted a him, without the knowledge of the

296. supposuit neca; H. 425. 4 (422, note 2); A. 252, c; G. 404, note 1;

301. et H. 425. 4 (422, note 2). For a variation of this construction with

306. see V. 581, 581, and note.

Fact 176. — 588. in vulncrea Phaeithontida: it has been narrated, in

593. lines 205–245 of the book, how Achilles had slain Neptune's son, Cyc-

600. nus, who was changed into a swan at the moment of his death by Nep-

605. tune. This tale is called Pisicasitidis, because of another Cycnus, a

610. friend and relative of Phaethon, who, through grief because of Pha-

615. ethon's death, was changed into a swan. See Metamorphoses, II, 329-

620. etc.

555. concurrens cominus hostis: "to meet my enemy face to face."

614. fassus: supply se.

608. pletis: "of the common herd."

610. femineo Marte: "by a woman's battle-stroke."

611. That is, it would have been better to have fallen in battle with the

615. valiant Amazons. Achilles had fought with and slain Penthesilea, who,

620. with her Amazons, had come to the aid of Troy in the last year of the

624. war.

Page 178. — 614. aserat: i.e. upon the funeral pyre.

616. deus idem: Vulcan, who had forged the arms of the hero, and who now

620. consumes him with fire. There is the same bold confusion of fact and

623. figure here that has been noted elsewhere. See II, 303, note.

626. Shakespeare feels the same pathetic contrast between the living

630. and the dead Caesar (Hamlet, V, i): —

634. Imperious Caesar, dead and turn'd to clay,

638. Might stop a hole to keep the wind away:
O, that that earth which kept the world in awe,
Should patch a wall to expel the winter’s flaw!

See also Vergil’s lines on the dead Priam, Aeneid, II, 554–558.

1. vivit: the subject is gloria eius.

2. haec mensura: i.e. totius orbis.

3. nec inania Tartara sentit: he is not really dead. He is of those whose virtue has wrought out for them a place in heaven among the immortals. See Horace, Odes, III, ii, 21–24. Yet Homer (Odyssey, XI) does not so represent Achilles. The shade of that hero thus addresses Ulysses: —

> Noble Ulysses, speak not thus of death,
> As if thou couldst console me. I would be
> A laborer on earth, and serve for hire
> Some man of mean estate, who makes scant cheer,
> Rather than reign o’er all who have gone down
> To death.

4. ipse: i.e. clipeus.

625. Ajax and Ulysses are the only ones who make bold to claim the arms of Achilles.

5. onus invidiamque: i.e. of himself deciding between the two claimants.

I. 1 and following. The contest for the arms of Achilles, with its tragic result to Ajax, is one of the most dramatic incidents of this period of the Trojan war. Homer makes reference to it in the Odyssey (XI, 543 and following), where the shade of Ajax, still cherishing hatred against his rival, refuses to hold speech with Ulysses. The latter expresses regret at his victory, which had brought the great Ajax to this end: —

> And now how much I wish
> I had not conquered in a strife like that,
> Since for that cause the dark earth hath received
> The hero Ajax, who in nobleness
> Of form and greatness of exploits excelled
> All other Greeks, except the blameless son
> Of Peleus.

Sophocles based his tragedy of Ajax upon the events immediately succeeding the judgment in favor of Ulysses, resulting in the madness and suicide of Ajax. Among the Romans, Pacuvius and Accius wrote each a tragedy entitled Armorum Iudicium, describing the contest itself. Fragments only of these plays remain. Ovid’s Armorum Iudicium, which is here given at length, is the only full account that is left us of that event.
28. virginis iram deae: i.e. of Diana. Agamemnon had slain her favorite stag, and had thus incurred her wrath.

34. "She is said to have substituted a hind, without the knowledge of the Greeks (supposita), for the maiden of Mycenae."

supposita cerva: H. 478, 4 (422, note 2); A. 252, c; G. 404, note 1; B. 218, 5; L. & M. 652. For a variation of this construction with mutare, see VII, 59, 60, and note.

PAGE 176. — 581. in volucrem Phaëthonida: it has been narrated, in lines 39–145 of this book, how Achilles had slain Neptune's son, Cynus, who was changed into a swan at the moment of his death by Neptune. This bird is called Phaëthonis, because of another Cynus, a friend and relative of Phaëthon, who, through grief because of Phaëthon's death, was changed into a swan. See Metamorphoses, II, 329–380.

587–591. Neptune refers to the building of Troy by himself and Apollo under promise of reward by Laomedon. Neptune now forgets the perfidy of the Trojan king, and remembers only that Troy's walls are his handiwork. See lines 25, 26 of this book.

PAGE 177. — 594, 595. det mihi se, etc.: "just let him come within my reach and I'll make him feel," etc.

faxo: properly a future perfect is here used as faciam.

595. concurrere comminus hosti: "to meet my enemy face to face."

601. fassus: supply se.

602. plebis: "of the common herd."

607, 608. "This was the (first) cause which old Priam had for rejoicing since (the death of) Hector."

608. ille victor: "thou, that (famous) victor."

610. femineo Marte: "by a woman's battle-stroke."

611. That is, it would have been better to have fallen in battle with the valiant Amazons. Achilles had fought with and slain Penthesilea, who, with her Amazons, had come to the aid of Troy in the last year of the war.

PAGE 178. — 614. arserat: i.e. upon the funeral pyre.

deus idem: Vulcan, who had forged the arms of the hero, and who now consumes him with fire. There is the same bold confusion of fact and figure here that has been noted elsewhere. See II, 303, note.

615, 616. Shakespeare feels the same pathetic contrast between the living and the dead Caesar (Hamlet, V, i):

Imperious Caesar, dead and turn'd to clay,
Might stop a hole to keep the wind away:
O, that that earth which kept the world in awe,
Should patch a wall to expel the winter's flaw!

See also Vergil's lines on the dead Priam, Aeneid, II, 554-558.

617. vivit: the subject is gloria eius.

618. haec mensura: i.e., totius orbis.

619. nec inania Tartara sentit: he is not really dead. He is of those whose virtue has wrought out for them a place in heaven among the immortals. See Horace, Odes, III, ii, 21-24. Yet Homer (Odyssey, XI) does not so represent Achilles. The shade of that hero thus addresses Ulysses:

```
Noble Ulysses, speak not thus of death,
As if thou couldst console me. I would be
A laborer on earth, and serve for hire
Some man of mean estate, who makes scant cheer,
Rather than reign o'er all who have gone down
To death.
```

620. ipse: i.e., clipeus.

624, 625. Ajax and Ulysses are the only ones who make bold to claim the arms of Achilles.

626. onus invidiamque: i.e. of himself deciding between the two claimants.

XIII. 1 and following. The contest for the arms of Achilles, with its tragic result to Ajax, is one of the most dramatic incidents of this period of the Trojan war. Homer makes reference to it in the Odyssey (XI, 543 and following), where the shade of Ajax, still cherishing hatred against his rival, refuses to hold speech with Ulysses. The latter expresses regret at his victory, which had brought the great Ajax to this end:

```
And now how much I wish
I had not conquered in a strife like that,
Since for that cause the dark earth hath received
The hero Ajax, who in nobleness
Of form and greatness of exploits excelled
All other Greeks, except the blameless son
Of Peleus.
```

Sophocles based his tragedy of Ajax upon the events immediately succeeding the judgment in favor of Ulysses, resulting in the madness and suicide of Ajax. Among the Romans, Pacuvius and Accius wrote each a tragedy entitled Armorum Judicium, describing the contest itself. Fragments only of these plays remain. Ovid's Armorum Judicium, which is here given at length, is the only full account that is left us of that event.
Shakespeare (Lucrece, 1394) describes a painting in which the two heroes of this contest are characterized:

In Ajax and Ulysses, O what art
Of physiognomy might one behold!
The face of either cipher’d either’s heart:
Their face their manners most expressly told:
In Ajax’ eyes blunt rage and rigor roll’d;
But the mild glance that sly Ulysses lent
Show’d deep regard and smiling government.

Page 179. — 10. sed nec mihi dicere promptum: supply est. "But I am not ready of speech."

16, 17. demit honorem aemulus: not "my rival," but "the fact that he is my rival detracts from my honor (in this contest)." Ajax, true to his blunt, untactful character, begins by vilifying and belittling his opponent.

17. tenuisse: "to have gained."

22–24. Telamon was one of the Argonauts and also a companion of Hercules in his raid upon Troy. See IX, 232, note. The following table will show the genealogy of Ajax and his relation to Achilles:

\[
\begin{array}{ccc}
| & | & \\
Jupiter = Aegina (d. of river god Asopus) & | & | \\
\mid & & \\
| & | & \\
Aeacus = Endets (d. of Chiron) & | & | \\
\mid & & \\
| & | & \\
Periboea = Telamon = Hesione & | & Peleus = Thetis & Proclus \\
\mid & & \\
| & | & \\
(d. of Alcathous) & | & | \\
\mid & & \\
| & | & \\
Ajax & | & Teucer & Achilles & | \\
\mid & & \\
| & | & \\
& | & | \\
& | & Pyrrhus \\
\end{array}
\]

25, 26. Jove had made Aeacus a judge in Hades after his death, along with Minos and Rhadamanthus. According to a scandalous rumor, Ulysses was not the son of Laertes, but of Sisyphus. So that the relation of the spirits of the ancestors of Ajax and Ulysses is that of judge on the bench and condemned prisoner at the bar.

31. frater: not "brother," but "cousin." See I, 351, where Deucalion addresses his cousin as soror.

fraterna = fratrius: supply arma.

32. Sisyphio: see lines 25, 26, note.

31–33. This is a family affair. "Why does this lowborn fellow seek to introduce (in this connection) the name of a family entirely outside the Aeacidæ?"

38. sibi inutilior: Palamedes had exposed Ulysses’ feigned madness, and brought him to the war. For this act he finally suffered death through the machinations of Ulysses. See Vergil, Aeneid, II, 83-85.

Page 180. — 43. utinam furo r verus: supply fuisse.

45. Poeantia proles: see IX, 232, note. Ulysses is said to have engineered the practical exile of Philoctetes on the island of Lemnos.

46. expositum: Philoctetes had been “put off” by the Greek fleet and left on Lemnos.

49. See IX, 203 and note.

53. velatur aliturque are good examples of the middle voice. “He clothes and feeds himself on birds;” i.e. he eats their flesh and makes garments of their feathers.

54. debita fatis: see oracle mentioned in IX, 232, note.

60. Ajax charges Ulysses with having hidden some gold in the quarters of Palamedes, which he afterward pretended to discover, and charged that this was a bribe which Palamedes had received from Priam.

63. fidum Nestora, in contrast with desertum Nestora, in the next line.

65-69. On one occasion, when the Greeks were retreating, old Nestor was left behind, and Diomedes, after vainly urging Ulysses to go to the rescue of their aged friend, himself went to his aid. These events are told by Homer (Iliad, VIII, 78 and following).

69. trepidoque, etc.: “and reproached his timorous friend for running away.”

71. eget: i.e. Ulysses, on an occasion when he was wounded and called for help.

72. linquendus erat: “he was doomed to be abandoned.”

Page 181. — 82. Hector adest: the scene shifts again to the day when Hector challenged the Greek chiefs to select a champion to meet him in single combat. When the lots were cast for this selection, the choice fell upon Ajax.

secum deos ducit: Apollo accompanied Hector to the field to watch over and protect him.

88. sortem meam vovistis: this statement is ratified by Homer (Iliad, VII, 181, 182):

Such was their prayer, while the Gerenian knight,
Old Nestor, shook the lots; and from the helm
Leaped forth the lot of Ajax, as they wished.

The events of the struggle, which proved to be a drawn battle, are told by Homer in the lines that follow.

91. These battles at the Grecian wall of ships, where the Trojans, led by Hector, all but forced their enemy’s camp, but were finally repelled largely through the prowess of Ajax, are told in the twelfth and thirteenth books of the Iliad.
Shakespeare (Lucrece, 1394) describes a painting in which the two heroes of this contest are characterized:—

In Ajax and Ulysses, O what art
Of physiognomy might one behold!
The face of either cipher'd either's heart:
Their face their manners most expressly told:
In Ajax' eyes blunt rage and rigor roll'd;
But the mild glance that sly Ulysses lent
Show'd deep regard and smiling government.

Page 179. — io. sed nec mihi dicere promptum: supply est. "But I am not ready of speech."

16, 17. demit honorem aemulus: not "my rival," but "the fact that he is my rival detracts from my honor (in this contest)." Ajax, true to his blunt, untactful character, begins by vilifying and belittling his opponent.

17. tenuisse: "to have gained."

22–24. Telamon was one of the Argonauts and also a companion of Hercules in his raid upon Troy. See IX, 232, note. The following table will show the genealogy of Ajax and his relation to Achilles:—

Jupiter = Aegina (d. of river god Asopus)

| Aeacus = Endels (d. of Chiron) |

Periboea = Telamon = Hesione  Peleus = Thetis  Procus
(d. of Alcathous)

| Teucer  Achilles  |

Ajax  Pyrrhus

25, 26. Jove had made Aeacus a judge in Hades after his death, along with Minos and Rhadamanthus. According to a scandalous rumor, Ulysses was not the son of Laertes, but of Sisyphus. So that the relation of the spirits of the ancestors of Ajax and Ulysses is that of judge on the bench and condemned prisoner at the bar.

31. frater: not "brother," but "cousin." See I, 351, where Deucalion addresses his cousin as soror.

fraterna = fratris: supply arma.

32. Sisyphio: see lines 25, 26, note.

31–33. This is a family affair. "Why does this lowborn fellow seek to introduce (in this connection) the name of a family entirely outside the Aeacidae?"

38. sibi inutilior: Palamedes had exposed Ulysses' feigned madness, and brought him to the war. For this act he finally suffered death through the machinations of Ulysses. See Vergil, Aeneid, II, 83–85.

PAGE 180. — 43. utinam füror verus: supply fuisset.
45. Poeantia proles: see IX, 232, note. Ulysses is said to have engineered the practical exile of Philoctetes on the island of Lemnos.
46. expositum: Philoctetes had been “put off” by the Greek fleet and left on Lemnos.
49. See IX, 203 and note.
53. velatur aliturque are good examples of the middle voice. “He clothes and feeds himself on birds;” i.e. he eats their flesh and makes garments of their feathers.
54. debita fatis: see oracle mentioned in IX, 232, note.
60. Ajax charges Ulysses with having hidden some gold in the quarters of Palamedes, which he afterward pretended to discover, and charged that this was a bribe which Palamedes had received from Priam.
63. fidum Nestora, in contrast with desertum Nestora, in the next line.
65-69. On one occasion, when the Greeks were retreating, old Nestor was left behind, and Diomed, after vainly urging Ulysses to go to the rescue of their aged friend, himself went to his aid. These events are told by Homer (Iliad, VIII, 78 and following).
69. trepidoque, etc.: “and reproached his timorous friend for running away.”
71. eget: i.e. Ulysses, on an occasion when he was wounded and called for help.
72. linquendus erat: “he was doomed to be abandoned.”
PAGE 181. — 82. Hector adest: the scene shifts again to the day when Hector challenged the Greek chiefs to select a champion to meet him in single combat. When the lots were cast for this selection, the choice fell upon Ajax.
secum deos ducit: Apollo accompanied Hector to the field to watch over and. protect him.
88. sortem meam vovistis: this statement is ratified by Homer (Iliad, VII, 181, 182): —

Such was their prayer, while the Gerenian knight,
Old Nestor, shook the lots; and from the helm
Leaped forth the lot of Ajax, as they wished.

The events of the struggle, which proved to be a drawn battle, are told by Homer in the lines that follow.
91. These battles at the Grecian wall of ships, where the Trojans, led by Hector, all but forced their enemy’s camp, but were finally repelled largely through the prowess of Ajax, are told in the twelfth and thirteenth books of the Iliad.
95–97. istis, mihi, armis, Aiaci: poetic datives of the apparent agent.
98. his: "with these deeds of mine."
98–100. He refers to a night expedition of Ulysses in company with Diomedes, in which Rhesus and Dolon were slain and Helenus captured.
103. quo tamem haec Ithaco: "and yet why (give) these to the Ithacan (at all)?"

Page 182. — 108. non onerosa: "otherwise than burdensome."
109. Pelias hasta: Achilles' spear is so called because its shaft came from Mt. Pelion in Thessaly.
122. referentem ornate relatis: Ovid likes to play with different parts of the same word, as illustrated here. "Adorn with the rescued arms their rescuer."
128. si mea vota: "if my prayers and yours had availed."

Page 183. — 138. pro domino: i.e. pro me ipsa.
140. nam: this goes back to sua in the previous line. "Let each one make the most of his own powers; for as to ancestry and the glorious deeds that others have done, those are in no true sense our own."
141. sed enim: "but still (I will meet him on the point of ancestry) for," etc.
142. esse Iovis pronepos = se esse Iovis pronepotem: a rare instance of the attraction, after the Greek fashion, of an infinitive predicate to the case of the subject of the main verb.
145. damnatus et exsul: it is said that Telamon and Peleus had slain their brother Procus, and were on this account banished by their father Aeacus.
146. Ulysses can boast of divine descent on his mother's as well as on his father's side. Following is his family tree:—

```
    Jupiter        Mercury = Philonis
     |
    Arcesius  Amphithea = Autolycus
         |
    Laërtes = Anticlea

Ulysses
```

Page 184. — 171, 172. ego Telephon, etc.: "twas I who conquered Telephus," etc. Telephus, the son of Hercules and son-in-law of Priam, was mortally wounded by Achilles while on his way to the Trojan war. According to the words of an oracle, this wound could be cured only by him who inflicted it. There was another oracle that Troy could be taken by Greeks only by the aid of a son of Hercules. Ulysses, cognizant of both these oracles, persuaded Achilles to cure his wounded enemy, that thus the latter might be won to the Greek cause.
173-176. These places are the scenes of Achilles' destructive raids in the early years of the Trojan war.

180. vivo dederam, etc.: "I gave them to him in his lifetime [i.e. I sent him to the war]; now that he is dead I ask them back again."

181. unius: i.e. of Menelaüs, the seduction of whose wife by Paris was the cause of the war. At her marriage all the Greek chiefs had sworn an oath to avenge any wrong that should ever come to her.

184, 185. These events have been already noted in XII, 1-38.

187. in rege pater est: compare XII, 30, rex patrem vizit.

PAGE 185.—190. "I had a difficult cause to plead, and that too before a partial judge."

192. summa sceptri: i.e. the fact that he held supreme command, and hence was responsible for the general welfare and success.

193. astu decipienda: Ulysses pretended to Clytemnestra that her daughter was wanted at the Greek camp at Aulis for marriage with Achilles.

194-204. Ulysses and Menelaüs were sent by the Greeks, before war was declared, to Priam, to demand back Helen and her wealth.

210. nosti = novisti.

216-235. Homer (Iliad, II, i and following) relates these events. According to this account, Jove's instruction to Agamemnon was that he should bring all his forces to bear upon Troy, for that city should surely fall. But Agamemnon, to test the temper of the Greeks, told them that he had been warned in a dream to return to Greece. Ovid, in lines 216 and 218, overlooks these facts, and would have it that Agamemnon was actually directed to return to Greece.

PAGE 186.—218. ille: Agamemnon.

auctore: Jove.

219. non sinat, etc.: this is equivalent to saying, "Why doesn't Ajax prevent this (movement)?" etc.

221. dat, etc.: "and give something for the confused mob to rally around."

222. "This was not (better, would not have been) too much for one who never speaks except in boasting."

226. captam: i.e. Troy is already in your grasp, and you are going to let her escape after all.

228. disertum: supply me.

233. per me haud impune: Ulysses soundly chastised the insolent Thersites in the presence of the host.

236, 237. Ulysses even lays claim to the deeds of Ajax as his own.

239. Diomede and Ulysses were frequent companions in adventure.

244. ausum eadem, quae nos, Dolona: i.e. Dolon was engaged in the same dangerous business of spying from the Trojan side, as Ulysses and Diomede from the Greek side.
245. interimo: in Homer it is Diomedes who slays Dolon.

PAGE 187.—251, 252. “And so I went back to camp victorious and with my vows accomplished, while in my captured chariot I rode in joyful triumph.” This is one of the few anachronisms in Ovid. The tri-mph was a peculiarly Roman custom.

253, 254. Dolon (hostis) had stipulated that the horses of Achilles should be given him as the prize of his night’s work should he be successful.
See Homer (Iliad, X, 319), where Dolon thus addresses Hector:—

My daring spirit, Hector, urges me
To visit the swift ships and learn the state
Of the Greek host. But hold thy scepter forth,
And solemnly attest the gods that thou
Wilt give to me the horses, and the car
Engrailed with brass, which bear the illustrious son
Of Peleus.

254. fuerit benignior Ajax: this refers to the ironical propositions made by Ajax in lines 101, 102, which Ulysses professes to take in good faith.

263. ipso loco: ablative of cause. They are honorable because they are in front — on his breast.

266, 267. nil sanguinis: “no blood.”
in socios: “in behalf of his friends.”

274. cum defensore: sarcastically of Ajax.

277. nonus in officio: “the ninth in proffered service.” Nine of the Greek chiefs had offered to be the champion against Hector, and the choice fell to Ajax by lot.

PAGE 188.—288, 289. “Was it for this then that (Achilles’) mother, goddess of the sea (caerula), was ambitious for her son?”

291–294. Homer describes the shield which Vulcan made for Achilles in Iliad, XVIII, 483–489:—

For here he placed the earth and heaven, and here
The great deep and the never-resting sun
And the full moon, and here he set the stars
That shine in the round heaven,—the Pleiades,
The Hyades, Orion in his strength,
And the Bear near him, called by some the Wain,
That, wheeling, keeps Orion still in sight,
Yet bathes not in the waters of the sea.

PAGE 189.—308, 309. turpe: supply est. The thought is: “If it is a base thing for me to have accused Palamedes on a false charge, is it any less so for you to have condemned him?”

312. vidistis: see line 60 and note. Ulysses’ answer to the charge of Ajax is: “Of course, Palamedes was guilty; you all saw the gold that was hidden in his tent." But he ignores the real point in the charge, that he himself put the gold there.

obiecta: supply crimina.

313, 314. nec esse reus merui: "nor is it my fault."

313. Vulcania: Lemnos was so called because Vulcan had fallen there after being flung from heaven by Jove, because he attempted to aid Juno against the Thunderer's wrath. Milton poetically describes this fall (Paradise Lost, I):

From morn
To noon he fell, from noon to dewy eve
A summer's day; and with the setting sun
Dropped from the zenith like a falling star,
On Lemnos the Aegean isle.

326, 327. The subjunctive mode in prosit shows that the condition implied in cessante meo pector e is not likely to be fulfilled: "before he would avail the Greeks in case I should cease to help them."

328-338. A dramatic apostrophe to Philoctetes.

332. The variation from mei (which we should expect) to nostri is awkward, and is evidently a concession to meter.

ut introduces fere understood.

fut (supply ut) is one of the objects of cupias above. "And that, as I was given a chance at you, so you may have a chance at me."

334. faveat: a proviso; "should Fortune favor."

335. Dardanio vate: i.e. Helenus, a soothsayer, and son of Priam. See line 99 and note. Ulysses had captured him and compelled him to reveal the oracles upon which the fate of Troy depended.

Page 190. — 339. illo: i.e. the signum Minervae, the Palladium.

341. hic: "at this juncture," when volunteers are being sought for the dangerous service of securing the Palladium.

347. tergora septem: Ajax carried a shield (molem clipei of line 99) made of seven thicknesses of bull's-hide.

350, 351. Tydiden ostentare meum: "to remind us that Diomede was my partner (and that he should have part of the praise)."

356. moderatior Aiax: Ajax the Less, the son of Oileus.

360-369. The great principle, upon which Ulysses rests his case, is that mind, in which he surpasses his rival, is greater than physical strength, in which latter he concedes that Ajax excels. This principle is the text of Horace's great Ode (III, iv, 65-67), in which he enlarges upon the value of wisdom as compared with brute force.

Page 191. — 372. hunc titulum: i.e. "the honor of this armor."

376. deos quos ademi: Minerva only is meant, whose presence and protection left Troy with the captured Palladium.
377. per siquid superest: "by whatever other deed still remains."
378. ex praecipi: "hazardous."
381. huic date: either "to this (statue of Minerva, hence to Minerva herself) if not to me," or "for this (and all the prowess on my part that its possession implies) if not for my other merits."

PAGE 192. — 392. qua patuit ferrum: "where his armor gave place (for the blow)."

395–398. purpureum florem: i.e. the hyacinth. In Met. X, 143–219, it is related how Apollo accidentally slew the beloved youth Hyacinthus, from whose blood sprang up the flower that bears his name. Apollo there prophesies (207) that in time to come this flower shall be connected with the death of a mighty hero, whose name shall be written upon its leaves:

Tempus et illud erit, quo se fortissimus heros
Addat in hunc florem, folioque legatur eodem.

Apollo then marks the flower with the signs of his own grief (215):

Ipse suos gemitus foliis inscribit, et AI AI
Flos habet inscriptum, funestaque littera ducta est.

The Greek name of Ajax, ΑΙΑΣ, is very similar in appearance to the repeated exclamation of Apollo (AI AI = alas! alas!), and hence the connection of the plant with the hero's death.

Vergil alludes to this interpretation of the markings in the Eclogues (III, 106):

Dic, quibus in terris inscripti nomina regum Nascantur flores.

The English poets find the first explanation the more effective. See Milton (Lycidas):

Like to that sanguine flower inscribed with woe;

and Shelley (Prometheus Unbound, II):

I looked, and all the blossoms were blown down;
But on each leaf was stamped, as the bluebells
Of Hyacinth tell Apollo's written grief,
O, follow, follow!

397. communis: the sense in which the inscription is common to both boy and hero is explained in the next line.

mediis is to be read with foliis.
430. Polymnestor, king of Thrace, had married the daughter of Priam, Ilione. To the king and Ilione, Priam had entrusted his youthful son, Polydorus. Vergil dwells at some length upon the story of Polymnestor's treachery and the death of Polydorus (Aeneid, III, 19–68).

434. nisi adieisset: see Vergil (lines 49–51): —

Hunc Polydorum auri quondam cum pondere magno
Infelix Priamus furtim mandarat alendum Threficio regi.

434. animi inritamen avari: Vergil's use of this idea is more dramatic (line 56): —

Quid non mortalia pectora cogis,
Auri sacra fames?

435. cecidit: "waned."

438. scopulo: construe with subjectas; "into the water which washed the foot of a cliff." Ovid, in this description, is preparing the way for the discovery of her son's dead body by Hecuba, as narrated below in lines 481 and following.

441. quantus cum viveret; see IX, 269, 270, note.

444. Homer describes (Iliad, I) how Achilles, enraged with Agamemnon because of Briseis, had drawn his sword upon the king.

Page 193. — 448. Polyxena: Achilles had been enamoured of this beautiful daughter of Priam. While in the temple of Thymbrean Apollo, in response to a private message from Priam, relative to his daughter, Achilles was treacherously slain by Paris and Deiphobus. The sacrifice of the princess upon the tomb of her dead lover is one of the most pathetic incidents in the history of the Trojan war.

461. She is unselfish and thoughtful of others to the last: "I only wish that the knowledge of my death may be kept from my mother."

465–469. The thought is: "Do not bind me as a victim, but let me meet death as free in all my limbs as I am free and eager in soul."

470, 471: Priami vos filia, etc.: "tis the daughter of King Priam, and not a captive maiden, who asks it."

473. The reference is to the rich ransom of Hector's dead body.

Page 195. — 750 and following. Polyphemus in love is one of the rôles in which he is known in classic literature. Theocritus (Idyls, VI and XI) and Ovid, together with many English poets, portray him in this rôle. Among the English writers are Gay (Song of Polyphemus), Dobson (A Tale of Polyphemus), and Buchanan (Polyphemus's Passion). The other rôle of Cyclope terrible is first portrayed by Homer, in the narration of the adventure of Ulysses with the Cyclops (Odyssey, IX), and afterward by Euripides, in his satyric drama The Cyclops, the scene and main incidents of which are the same as in Homer. Vergil (Aeneid, III) gives the sequel to these last mentioned events in connection with the arrival of Aeneas off the coast of Sicily, where the blinded giant is once more brought upon the stage.

771. Telemus: in the Odyssey (IX, 509 and following), when Ulysses reveals to the Cyclops who has blinded him, the latter cries:—

Now, woe is me! the ancient oracles Concerning me have come to pass. Here dwelt
A seer named Telemus Eurymides,
Great, good, and eminent in prophecy,
And prophesying he grew old among
The Cyclops. He foretold my coming fate,—
That I should lose my sight, and by the hand
And cunning of Ulysses.

It will be remembered that the present events precede those narrated by Homer.

782. In Vergil (Aeneid, III, 659) he still carries his huge staff:—

Truncā manu pinus regit et vestigia firmat.

PAGE 196. — 784. centum: so huge a pipe befits so huge a piper.

789–797. Ovid borrows his pastoral metaphors both from Theocritus and Vergil. In the Greek poet (XI, 19–21) we find:—

O milk-white Galatea, why cast off him that loves thee? whiter than is pressed milk to look upon, more delicate than the lamb art thou, than the young calf wantonor, more sleek than the unripened grape.

And in Vergil (Eclogues, VII, 37, 38) Galatea is thus described:—

Nerine Galatea, thymo mihi dulciocr Hyblae, Candidior cynnis, hedera formosior alba.

798. eadem Galatea: "yet the same Galatea is," etc. He now proceeds to give the reverse side of her character.

808. Here follows an inventory of his wealth and of the abundant pleasures of pastoral life.

PAGE 197. — 824. pauperis est numerare pecus: compare IV, 115, where see note.

826. ut: "how."

833. parve: "or a pair."

840. He comes next to himself, and speaks half boastfully, half apologetically. vidi: supply me.
843. nam explains his reference to Jove, though he himself is a contemptor deorum (line 761): "for you are wont to speak of some Jove or other as reigning (in heaven)."

Page 198. — 851, 852. "True, I have but one eye, but then it is big enough for two." This one huge eye gives the Cyclops his name. Vergil (Aeneid, III, 636, 637) thus describes it: —

Lumen
Ingens, quod torva solum sub fronte latebat,
Argolici clipei aut Phoebeae lampadis instar.

854. Cyclops was the son of Neptune.
859. contemptus: note the quantity of the final syllable.
862, 863. "And yet he may please himself, and please you too, Galatea; but oh, I wish he didn't: (but) only let me have a chance at him!"
867. laesuisseque: "and my passion (ignis) aroused (by my wooing) rages more fiercely (within me)."

Page 199. — 883. et extremus angulus, etc.: "and although the merest fragment (of the rock) struck Acis," etc.
886. ut vires, etc.: i.e. that Acis should become a river god. His mother was a water nymph (line 750).
893. subito media, etc.: "suddenly there stood forth waist-deep in the water."

894. nova cornua; Regius, in commenting upon this passage, observes: —

Nam fluviorum Dii cornua habere finguntur, quod boum similes esse dicuntur, et propter strepitum, et propter circumflexiones, quas cornua vocant. Cincta autem cornua cannis idcirco habere finguntur, quod fere in ripis fluminum harundines nascentur.

But see also Amores, III, xv, 17, note.

895. nisi quod maior: see IX, 269, 270, note.
caerulus: the usual color ascribed to river and sea divinities.

Page 201. — XV. 146, 147. Compare Milton's ambitious lines (Paradise Lost, I): —

I thence Invoke thy aid to my adventurous song,
That with no middle flight intends to soar
Above the Aonian mount, while it pursues
Things unattempted yet in prose or rhyme.

149. In this way the poet describes the calm heights of philosophy, with its wide and true views of life.
150-152. Ovid in this utterance imitates Lucretius (De Rerum Natura, II, 7-13), who comments upon the delight of the philosopher in viewing all the turmoil and strife of life from the calm and secure heights of philosophy.

Page 202.—155. materiem vatum, etc.: "the stuff that poets manufacture, and their (fabled) sufferings of a world that never was." Cicero (Tusculan Disputations, I, § 36) says that popular ignorance aided by the poets is responsible for the materialistic terrors of the world beyond the grave: —

Ignoratio finxit inferos easque formidines, quas tu contemnere non sine causa videbare; . . . quam opinionem magni errores consecuti sunt, quos auxerunt poetae.

The whole sixth Aeneid of Vergil, with its vivid descriptions of Hades and its material punishments for sins done on the earth, is a striking illustration of Cicero's point. Similarly, Milton has done much harm theologically by a gross materialization of the abode and sufferings of lost spirits.

158, 159. These are the two tenets at the core of the philosophy of Pytagoras with reference to the future state—the deathlessness of the soul and its transmigration from body to body. Caesar (De Bello Gallico, VI, 14) says that the Druids teach this same doctrine in order to remove fear of death from their warriors: —

Imprimis hoc volunt persuadere, non interire animas, sed ab aliis post mortem transire ad alios, atque hoc maxime ad virtutem excitari putant metu mortis neglecto.

160–164. Pythagoras' proof that the soul of the Trojan Euphorbus now animates his own body is that he saw and recognized as his own the shield of that hero, which Menelaus had hung up in the temple of Juno as a trophy and votive offering.

173, 174. Do not slay an animal for food, lest in doing so you drive the soul of your own friend or relative out of its temporary resting place.

178. vagans is predicative with the passive verb formatur. "Everything is brought into being with a changing nature."

184, 185. nam quod fuit, etc.: "for that which once existed is no more,
and that has come to be which was not."

Page 203.—188–190. The aspect of the heavens is different at different times.

189. media: supply nocte.

exit: i.e. e mari.

190. luci: construe with praecia.

196. nocturnae Dianae: i.e. the moon.

198. si contrahit orbem: "if it is on the wane."
199–213. The similarity between the seasons of the year and the periods of the life of a man is obvious, and has been noted by writers in all periods.

201. tener et lactans: supply annus.

214. nostra ipsorum: it is in this way only that intensive pronouns may be used with the possessive; "our own."

PAGE 204.—223, 224. The first tottering efforts of an infant to stand upright are very pleasingly and realistically told.

228. haec: i.e. senecta.

229–231. Cicero (De Senectute, § 27) tells this story, and condemns the super-annuated athlete for the undue estimate which he has of the mere physical.

231. Herculeis: supply lacertis.

233, 234. Helen had twice been carried away because of her great beauty, onece by Theseus, and later by Paris. As she now looks at the wrinkles of age, she tearfully wonders how she could ever have been attractive.

PAGE 205.—453, 454. ne tamen exspatiamur: “but, not to wander too far out of my course, my steeds forgetting meanwhile to speed toward the goal.”

456. nos is to be construed as subject of sinamus (line 461).

456–458. The clause quoniam . . . condi is parenthetically explanatory.

457, 458. in ferinas domos = in ferina corpora.

462. Thyesteis mensis: the reference is to one of the most horrible of the legends of antiquity, in which Thyestes devours his own sons, served up to him in disguise by his brother Atreus.

468, 469. quantum est, etc.: “how much does such a deed as that fall short of actual murder? What is the end of such a course?”

475. Nets were spread in a convenient place, and cords were stretched with reference to these, to which bright colored feathers were attached.
The deer, frightened by these, would take to flight, and thus be steered into the nets.

PAGE 207.—745. hic: i.e. Aesculapius.

746. Marte togaque: “in war and in peace.”

748. properata gloria: “quickly won glory.”

749. in sidus stellamque comantem: Suetonius (Julius, 88) tells us that after the death of Caesar a comet appeared for several successive days, and that it was given out that this was the soul of Caesar deified and set in the heavens. Compare a reference in Horace (Odés, I, xii, 47) to this point: —

Micat inter omnes
Iulium sidus vel inter ignes
Luna minores.

OVID — 26
Julium sidus refers here primarily to the comet mentioned above, but is intended also to represent the Julian house in the person of Augustus. Vergil (Eclogues, IX, 47) speaks of the Caesaris astra.

750. quam sua progenies: i.e. Augustus. The compliment to the emperor is decidedly forced, considering that he was not the “offspring” of Julius Caesar, but only his grandnephew and adopted son. But perhaps the poet means to say that the crowning act of Caesar’s life was his adoption of the future emperor.

752–757. This is a résumé of Julius Caesar’s various military triumphs.

752. domuisse Britannos: this is an extravagant statement, for, as Tacitus says (Agricola, XIII): “Julius invaded Britain with an army, but succeeded only in frightening the natives in one successful battle, and gaining a mere foothold on the shore. So that his work was merely to discover the island to posterity.”

758. genuisse virum: a more emphatic assumption still that Augustus was the son of Julius.

760, 761. “Caesar must needs be made a god in order that his (adopted) son might not owe his birth to a mortal father!” Verily, they that wait on kings are forced into strange paths in search of compliments.

762. generix: i.e. Venus.

763. Pontifici: Julius Caesar held the office of Pontifex.

coniurata arma: “the weapons of the conspirators,” Brutus and the others.

767. Vergil also derives Caesar in direct lineal descent from Venus, through Aeneas, Iulus, etc.

768. iustis curis: “well-founded cares.” These cares are explained in the lines that follow (769–774).

769. quam modo, etc.: “since now the spear of Diomede wounds me, and now the fall of ill-defended Troy o’erwhelms me,” etc.

772. sedes intrare silentum: the visit of Aeneas to Hades is described by Vergil in the sixth Aeneid; and his war with Turnus, who was aided by Juno, is related in the second half of the Aeneid.

Page 208. — 775. timor hic: i.e. pro Caesare.

781. veterum sororum: i.e. of the Fates. The gods, even Jove himself, while they might know the fates, and reveal them, could not change or thwart them.

782. luctus futuri: “of the imminent disaster.”

783–798. These are the portents which, according to tradition, preceded the death of Caesar. Shakespeare (Julius Caesar, II, ii) puts the rehearsal of them into the mouth of Calpurnia, as she strives to dissuade her husband from going to the senate house on the fatal Ides of March:
There is one within,
Besides the things that we have heard and seen,
Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch.
A lioness hath whelped in the streets;
And graves have yawned and yielded up their dead;
Fierce fiery warriors fought upon the clouds,
In ranks and squadrons and right form of war,
Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol:
The noise of battle hurtered in the air,
Horses did neigh and dying men did groan,
And ghosts did shriek and squeal about the streets.
O Caesar, these things are beyond all use,
And I do fear them.

789. caerulus is coordinate with sparsus as a predicate adjective.
792. lacrimavit ebur refers to the vapor that condensed upon the ivory images of the gods in the temples. Thus a cold perspiration seemed to break out upon the very gods in horror at the impending deed of blood.
793. auditī: supply esse.
795. caesium caput: supply iecoris ("of the liver"). The projecting lobe of the liver was called in augury caput. The vital organs (fibrae or exta) were inspected by the priest (haruspex) and every departure from the normal noted. A double or split (caesium) caput iecoris was significant of disaster to the state. Extispicium, or the reading of omens from the exta of animals, is described at length by Seneca (Oedipus, 291–402).

801. templum, as explained in the following line, was the curia, or senate house.
804. Aeneaden: i.e. Caesar. Venus strives to save him, as she had during the Trojan war saved Paris and Aeneas at critical moments, by throwing around him a cloud of invisibility. Homer thus describes the rescue of Paris from Menelaus (Iliad, III, 380):

But Venus—for a goddess easily
Can work such marvels—rescued him, and, wrapped
In a thick shadow, bore him from the field.

The similar rescue of Aeneas from Diomed is described in the fifth Iliad.

PAGE 209. — 808. intres (supply ut) is the subject of licet. "Thou thyself mayst enter."
809–814. The archives of the Fates, like the Fates themselves, are indestructible and unchanging.
814, 815. It appears from this and many similar passages that Jove had knowledge of the Fates and the privilege of revealing them, but no power to change them.

818, 819. I.e. he shall be deified through your agency and that of his son (Augustus).

819. nominis heres: Octavianus, after his adoptive father's death, assumed his name as a part of his own.

820, 821. caesi parentis, etc.: "and as the most valiant avenger of his father's murder, he shall have us (as allies) for his wars."

823–830. In these lines Jove is made to foretell the military triumphs of Augustus. Much history is condensed into small space. (1) For the affair at Mutina see Life of Ovid (Tristia, IV, 10), line 6, note. Ovid flatteringly speaks of Octavius as the one under whose imperium the siege was raised. As a matter of fact, he was only associated in command with the two consuls. Upon the death of these, however, he was left in sole command. (2) The battle of Pharsalia was fought and won by Julius Caesar against Pompey (B.C. 48). Octavius fought no battle here. Ovid means that in the battle of Philippi (B.C. 42), in which Octavius and Antony defeated Brutus and Cassius, the same general region as Pharsalia was destined to feel the might of Octavius, and to be a second time (iterum) steeped in blood. (3) In 36 B.C., Octavius, in the person of his admiral, Agrippa, defeated Sextus Pompeius, the son of Pompey the Great (magnum nomen), in a naval battle off Naulochus in Sicily. (4) Cleopatra (coniumx Aegyptia) had hoped that by a union with Antony (Romani ducis) she might bring Rome (nuestra Capitolia) under sujection to Egypt (suo Canopo). These hopes, as well as those of Antony, were crushed by Octavius in the battle of Actium (B.C. 31).

826. taedae: dative; construe with fis.

828. servitura: supply esse.

nstra: Jove could say this with especial appropriateness, because his temple adorned the Capitol.

836, 837. prolem sancta de coniuge natam: the reference is to Tiberius, one of the two sons of Livia, the wife of Augustus, by her former husband, Tiberius Claudius Nero. The young Tiberius was adopted by his stepfather, and succeeded him in the empire.

839. cognata sidera: the deification of Julius Caesar had linked Augustus already to the heavens.

841, 842. "Make (him) a star (i.e. set him in the heavens as a god), in order that ever it may be the divine Julius who looks forth upon our Capitol and forum from his lofty temple." Remains of the foundation of the temple of the Divus Iulius are still to be seen in the Roman Forum.

843. media sede senatus = (in) media curia, the senate house, which was the scene of Caesar's assassination.

845. eripuit: the object is animam.

850. natique, etc.: "and (now) he (the deified Caesar), beholding the good deeds of his son, confesses that they are greater than his own."

852. hic: i.e. Augustus.

854. invitum: understand Augustum.

855–858. Other instances in which the son was greater than the father.

857. ipsos is a strong eos, referring to Caesar and Augustus.

861. The poet appeals to those national gods whose images Aeneas brought from Troy through every danger of fire and sword and shipwreck.

865. The worship of Vesta and Apollo was under the especial watchcare of Augustus. The Aedes Vestae, with its adjacent Atrium Vestae, was situated at the foot of the Palatine Hill, on which was the palace of Augustus; while the emperor built a temple to Apollo on the Palatine itself. Hence the epithet domestice.

869. caput Augustum = Augustus.

quam: the antecedent is orbe.

868–870. This prayer for the late return of Augustus to his native skies is duplicated in Horace (Odes, I, ii, 45-49).

Page 211.—871–879. Having finished his history of the world of wonders from the remotest past down to his own time, the poet triumphantly looks forward to his own fame, which is destined to endure to the remotest future. Compare Amores, I, xv, 9–30 and note, and Life, 129, 130 and note. The prophecy of his own immortality of remembrance and mention on the lips of men, made in that poem and repeated more strongly here, is being in part fulfilled even as the present generation of students reads these words.

The student of Horace will readily recognize the thought as well as the phraseology of that poet in these concluding lines of Ovid's great poem. For purposes of comparison, the concluding poem in Horace's first published volume of Odes (III, xxx) should be read.

TRISTIA

Page 213.—I, iii, 1. illius noctis: Ovid has given us the approximate date of his banishment. See Life, lines 95, 96 and note.

4. nunc quoque: this would imply that the poet is looking back upon that sad night after the lapse of a considerable time.
6. finibus extremae Ausoniae = finibus extremis, etc.
7. "Neither had I time for the proper preparations, nor was my mind fit for such a task." It is no wonder that in the presence of so absolute, far-reaching, and sudden a change in his life the poet stood helpless and dazed.

parandi: H. 451, 1 (399, I, 2); M. 226, 1; A. & G. 218, a; G. 374; B. 204, 1; L. & M. 573.

8. longa mora: during the long years of uneventful prosperity his heart had been lulled to a drowsy restfulness, from which he is now rudely awakened.

9, 10. "I could give no thought either to the selection of servants, of companions, or of such clothing and other equipments as an exile would need."

16. The real friends only would stand by him at such a time, and they, it seems, were few. Unus et alter is hardly to be taken in a literal sense, however.

17. uxor: this was that third wife of whose devotion he speaks in his Life, lines 73, 74.

18. clementem: supply me.

19. nata: in Life, 75, Ovid speaks of "my daughter" as if she were his only child. She was married before his exile, and seems to have been living in Africa at this time. Her name is not known.

22. funeris: the occasion could be little less than a "funeral," in view of Ovid's final farewell to his loved ones.

PAGE 214.—23. His wife, he himself, the slaves, the whole household, were moved by a common grief.

25. "If one may compare great things with small."

26. haec facies Troiae, etc.: Ovid may have had the following passage from Vergil in mind (Aeneid, II, 486): —

At domus interior gemitu miseroque tumultu
Miscetur, penitusque cavae plangoribus aedes
Femineis ululant; ferit aurea sidera clamor.
Tum pavidae tectis matres ingentibus errant,
Amplexaeque tenent postes atque oscula fugunt.

29, 30. "Looking upon her (the moon), and from her turning to the Capitol, which was hard by my dwelling — though all in vain, I said," etc.

30. This line incidentally shows that Ovid's house was near the Capitoline Hill.

frustra: it had proved of no avail to him to live beneath the shadow of the splendid temples, for their gods had not protected him from dis- aster.
31. numina: these gods were Jupiter, Juno, and Minerva. The nave of the great temple was sacred to Jupiter, the right aisle to Minerva, the left to Juno.

32. di relinquenti: in Ovid's mind the presence of the gods is confined to their temples, a notion which was more or less general. Similarly, the soul of a man dying in exile goes into an equally foreign land of spirits.
See Heroides, X, 121 and note.

34. tempus in omne: “once for all.”

35. “Now that I am wounded it is too late to attempt defense, still,” etc.

37. caelesti viro: the reference here as well as in deo (line 40) is to Augustus. If Ovid felt any resentment, he certainly does not show it.
But this is natural enough, considering the spirit of the times and his own precarious condition. And besides, Ovid was no Cato.

38. He is very anxious that his unnamed offense be understood to be an error ox culpa, not a scelus. See Life, 89, 90.

38–40. The usual punctuation is an exclamation point after putet, and a comma after auctor. This removes the ut sentiat clause too far from dicite and connects it too closely with line 40; whereas the reverse construction is the more natural and logical. “Tell the divine man how I was overtaken by a fault, that he may not think my offense to be criminal, (but) that he, the inflicter of my punishment, may see the matter as you see it: if his godhead be but appeased, then I can bear my misery.”

44. extinctos focos: the cold hearth with its dead fire is something more than a pathetic picture of desolation. The empty hearth was, in accordance with Roman custom, a sign of the mourning of the bereaved household.

43–45. These lines recall the fact that the hearth was the family altar, where the household gods, the lares and penates, were worshiped.

45. adversos: this is probably to be taken in its literal sense, “placed over opposite,” “facing her”; but the present circumstances would also justify the derived meaning, “unpropitious.”

48. Parrhasis Arctos: for explanation of this constellation see analysis of

50. ultima nox implies that some few days of grace had been given him.
These must, however, have been very few. See line 7.

53, 54. “How often did I pretend that I had fixed upon a certain hour which would be a lucky one (apta) for starting out upon my journey.”

55. ter limen tettigi: it was unlucky to stumble on the threshold as one started on a journey, and to regain the luck one had to start over again. Line 56 implies that the poet stumbled on purpose thus to gain delay, “his heavy foot humoring his reluctant mind.” Fox other references to this superstition see Met. X, 452, where it is connected with the ill-omened hooting of the owl: —

Ter pedis offensi signo est revocata, ter omen
Funereus bubo letali carmine fecit.

Aeneas (Aen. II, 242) says that they might have known that the wooden horse was ill-omened, for Quater ipso in limine portae Substituit.

* sum revocatus is to be taken in the middle sense — “I recalled myself,” “I went back.”

PAGE 215. — 57. vale is to be construed as a separate word in the ablative absolute construction with dicto.

59. me ipse fefelli: “I lost control of my feelings.”
61. quo: “whither,” used here as equivalent to ad quam.
61, 62. This is the same thought, with the names of the places given, that was expressed more indefinitely in line 52.

66. Thesea fide: not that described in Heroides, X! The reference is to the devoted and famous friendship between Theseus and Pirithous.
Allusion is made to this in Met. XII, 227–229: —

“Quae te vecordia,” Theseus
“Euryte, pulsat,” ait, “qui me vivente laccssas Pirithoûm, violesque duos ignarum in uno?”

68. “Every hour which is granted to me now is pure gain.”
69. mora: understand est.
imperfecta: “unsaid.”
70. “Embracing each one of those nearest (i.e. dearest) to my heart.”
72. gravis: it was indeed a “heavy,” “momentous” star to him, for it was the signal for his departure.

73. membrâ: the word is well chosen, for it may refer at the same time to the “members” of his family and the “members” of his body.

75, 76. A striking simile. Mettius, an Alban general, was, for an act of treachery against the Romans, condemned to be torn asunder by being attached to two four-horse chariots driven in opposite directions.
Livy tells the story of the treachery of Mettius in Book I, 28.

83, 84. “For me also the way is open, me also the farthest land receives: I shall be but a small additional encumbrance for the exile’s bark.”

86. pietas haec: “this love of mine shall be my Caesar (driving me into exile).”

PAGE 216. — 88. dedit manus: a military phrase; “she surrendered,” “gave up.”
89. "I set forth, or rather my departure (illo = egressus) was a funeral (jerri = efferrri), without a corpse." This may be better expressed in periphrase: "I set forth, or rather was all but borne forth with funeral rites after the manner of a corpse, except that I was not actually dead (sine funere)." He has before likened the occasion to a funeral (lines 21, 22, 43-46); and now his sad exit from the house forcibly reminds him of such a scene. After leaving Rome, Ovid proceeded to Brundisium, and thence to the place of his exile. At Brundisium he had a farewell interview with his friend Fabius Maximus, to whom he committed the care of his wife.

95. se modo: understand desertam.

97. natae: this was the daughter of Ovid's wife by a former husband. She was at this time married to Publius Suillius Rufus, a man seemingly of some influence in Rome.

100. respectu mei: "out of regard for me."

101. absentem: understand me, and construe with sublevet.

quoniam sic fata tulerunt: "since fate has ordained it so (i.e. that I should be absent)." This use of ferre recalls Vergil (Aen. II, 34):
Troiae sic fata ferebant, "the fate of Troy was tending that way."

102. It is perhaps natural that in his isolation and distress the poet should think only of his own suffering, and desire that his wife should survive her troubles largely that she may be of help to him. Cicero's letters from exile were not much more manly.

III, iii, 2. alterius digitis: the letter was evidently dictated. His wife would know this by the handwriting.

eram: the epistolary imperfect, written from the time standpoint of the receipt of the letter.

7. aquis istis: see Epist. Ex Ponto, I, ii, 89 and note.

8. nescio quo modo: "somehow."

10. Apollinea arte: i.e. the medical art. Aesculapius, the god of healing, was the son of Apollo. See analysis of Met. 622-744.

PAGE 217.—16. plus parte: "more than a part," i.e. "all."

19, 20. "Nay, they say that I even spoke strange things in such a manner that your name was on my raving tongue;" i.e. "they say that even when I was delirious your name," etc.

21-24. si deficiam and restituenda (erit) form the primary condition of which resurgam and erit are the conclusion. A secondary condition is couched in the hortatory nuntiet. Erit in line 24 shows that defi-ciam and resurgam are also future ind. "If I shall be in a dying condition, and my tongue cleaving to the roof of my mouth shall need the infusion of wine to restore its life, let but some one announce that my wife has arrived and I shall arise," etc.

28. "That your time without me does not pass otherwise than sadly."
31. quantum erat: quantum = quantulum, "how small a thing it was (or, would have been)."

35. It would have been well for him had he died while still untouched by misfortune; but, as it is, it seems to have been ordained that he should be spared, only to die in exile.

hanc lucem: understand vitae.

39. corpora: it has been before observed that Ovid occasionally uses the plural for the singular.

40–46. He describes with the vividness of personal expectation the pathetic loneliness of dying forsaken in a strange land. All the usual comforting accompaniments of death will be absent in his case. Long ago he had put a similar complaint in the mouth of Ariadne. See Heroides, X, 119–122.

41, 42. "Nor shall my wife's tears fall upon my face, and thus add some slight reprieve to my dying hour." The reference is probably to the custom of the nearest relative placing the lips upon the lips of the dying man, and so restraining the flight of the spirit, which was connected with the parting breath. See Ars Amatoria, III, 745 and note.

43. mandata: i.e. "dying requests."

PAGE 218.—45, 46. sine honore, indeploratum: compare Scott's famous line—"unwept, unhonored, and unsung" (Lay of the Last Minstrel, VI, 1). Horace, describing the immortality which poetry confers, would say in effect: "unwept, unhonored, because unsung."

47. audieris: i.e. the news of my death.

52. lux mea: an expression of affection, = lux meae vitae.

53. 54. His real existence long since ceased and received its proper mourning on the night on which he departed from his home. The end of this seeming existence, this death in life, should excite no especial grief.

57. extenua, etc.: "lighten your troubles by bearing them with a brave heart."

58. ad quae: understand serenda.

non rude: "experienced."

62. et Samii, etc.: "and if the words of the old Samian philosopher are true," i.e. that the soul survives the body. The doctrines of Pythagoras are explained at large in Met. XV. See also Fasti, III, 153 note.

63, 64. Again Ovid expresses that curious belief that the soul of a man dying in a strange land goes out among strange and presumably hostile spirits. See Heroides, X, 121 and note, and Ex Ponto, I, ii, 113. So Tiphys, dying in a foreign land, was said to dwell among the unknown shades: —

Procul a paternis
Occidens regnis tumuloque vili Tectus ignotas iacet inter umbras.

—Seneca, Medea, 619.

65. facito: understand ut, "have my bones brought back."

66. This intense desire to have one's bones rest in native soil is natural. Compare the dying command of Jacob to his sons in Egypt that they should bury him with his fathers in the land of Canaan (Genesis, 49: 29).

67, 68. The reference is to Antigone, the Theban princess, who, against the command of Creon, the king, administered burial rites to her dead brother, Polynices. This incident forms the opening scene of Sophocles' Antigone.

69. ea: i.e. ossa.

70. The roads leading from Rome were lined with tombs. Extensive remains of these are still to be seen along the Latin and Appian Ways. The poet fondly pictures his tomb in this stately company. He was doomed to disappointment in this.

71. oculo properante: compare the common phrase, "he who runs may read."

72. "Carve upon my marble tomb (this) inscription in large characters."

tituli limits notis.

73. Ovid choosels, even in his epitaph, to be remembered as a writer of amatory verse. He characterizes himself in the same way in Life, 1, where see note.

74. ingenio meo: these words, and quamvis noquere, in line 79, refer to the reason which Augustus assigned for the banishment of Ovid, namely, that the poet's verse was perniciously immoral.

75. He has been the lover's especial benefactor; to this class he most appealed. See Amores, I, xv, 38.

75, 76. "But all ye lovers, find it not irksome to say as ye pass by, 'Softly may the bones of Naso rest.'"

Page 219.—77–80. But after all, his books are his greatest monument. See the concluding lines of the Metamorphoses (XV, 871–879).

81. extincto: "to me when I am dead."

feralia munera: see Fasti, ii, 33, 34 and note.

85, 86. We recall that he has been dictating throughout this letter. See line 2.

88. vale is used in these two lines in two different senses. With dictum it means "farewell"; with quod (of which it is the antecedent) it means simply "welfare."
V, ix. 1, 2. See the introduction to the Tristia, the last paragraph but one.

5, 6. tota in urbe, etc.: in the days of his prosperity his proud boast was that his works were universally popular; and, instinctively, he assumes that he still has the popular ear. This assumption is sadly modified on second thought: "if indeed I still am read at all in the city I have lost."

7–9. The real condition, of which lines 7 and 9 form a part of the conclusion, is si sincere, etc., of line 1. Line 8, like line 6, is parenthetically spoken. "The present age, and future ages, too, should know your kindness (if only my works endure to future ages)," etc.

11. primum throws its force rhetorically with Caesaris: "'tis Caesar's boon first," etc.

12. magnos deos: supply by implication quorum magna pars Caesar est.

14. "And you make it possible for me to enjoy the boon which he has given me." The gracious boon of breathing in this barbarous land of exile!

15–19. A striking metaphor. Ovid represents most of his friends as viewing, or seeming to view, the wreck of his fortunes with distress, but confining their demonstrations of sympathy to wringing their hands helplessly from a safe place on the shore; while this one friend, at some risk to himself, rescues him from utter destruction.

Page 220. — 22. "I could invoke no greater blessing upon you than that," i.e. that his friend should share with Caesar the friendship of the gods.

25. nunc quoque: "even as it is."

27, 28. Ovid represents himself under the figure of a dog scarcely restrained from slipping his leash and starting in loud pursuit of the deer. We may well imagine this would-be-nameless friend as sharing the fear of the deer lest this very thing should happen!

29, 30. Compare the spirited horses of the Sun, eager to be off on their course, Met. II, 153–155.

35. meminisse echoes memoris of line 33. "I should not obey you (and withhold your name) if you were not sure (without that proof) that I am grateful."

38. spiritus iste: Ovid uses the second (iste) instead of the first personal demonstrative (hic), because in his devotion to his friend he feels that all he has — his very life — belongs to that friend.

EPISTULAE EX PONTO

Page 221. — I, ii, 1. Maxime: when there seemed no longer to be danger to his friends in addressing them by name, Ovid's letters, for the most part, contain the names of those to whom they were written. A score or more of these names appear, many of them the literary friends of Ovid. Among these was his chief friend and patron, Fabius Maximus, to whom the present letter is addressed. He was a poet and advocate, and a confidential friend and adviser of Augustus. In Epist. IV, xvi, his last letter, Ovid speaks of him as Pieridum lumen, praesidiumque fori.

Marcia, the wife of Maximus, mentioned in line 140 of the present letter, and again in Fast. VI, 802, was a relative of Ovid's third wife, who also bore the same name. Marcia was a cousin of Augustus, her mother being a sister of his mother. It is to the friendship of these two ladies, Marcia and her mother, for his wife, that Ovid appeals in the latter part of this letter. He had especially intrusted his wife to the care of Maximus, moreover, on leaving Italy.

3. trecenti is frequently used of an indefinitely large number. It has been computed “that from the time of the first Fabius who is mentioned as consul, to the reign of Tiberius, 48 consulships, 7 dictatorships, 8 censorships, and 7 augurships, were filled by members of the Fabian house.” Ovid extravagantly represents this noble family as existing for and culminating in the birth of his friend.

16. tamquam = tamquam si: “just as if.”

17. qui: the antecedent is hostibus (line 15).

21. simul = simul ac: “when,” “as soon as.”

22. semper inresoluta = numquam resoluta: i.e. the bows are never un-strung.

23, 24. One is reminded of early Indian warfare, where the savages rapidly wheeled about a village and rained their arrows into the dwellings.

26. “And that one weary winter follows another without interruption.”

27. cum sagittis: by Ovid’s description above we are made vividly to realize that no small element in his distress was the constant fear and expectation of a poisoned arrow whizzing into his chamber.

28. quarta hiems: we learn from Life, 95, 96, that the poet was banished in about 8 A.D. This present line would therefore date the beginning of the Epistulae ex Ponto as about 12 A.D.

31, 32. Niobe, although she suffered much, at least found a quick and lasting release from her grief.

31. Nioben: H. 421 (381); M. 200; A. 240, d; G. 343, 1; B. 183; L. & M. 512.

32. saeae facta: this is described in Met. VI, 303–312.

33, 34. vos quoque, etc.: i.e. Phaëthon’s mother and sisters. See analysis of Met. II, 329 and following.
35, 36. No such good fortune is in store for him.

PAGE 222. — 37. The petrifying powers of the Medusa head are described in Met. V, 177 and following.

41. Tityi lecur: see Met. IV, 457, and X, 43.

43. medicina ... somnus: Ovid's conception of sleep as "man's universal balm for care" is recalled by such passages as the following:—

Sleep that knits up the ravelled sleave of care,
The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath,
Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course,
Chief nourisher in life's feast.
— Shakespeare, Macbeth.

Tired Nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep!
— Young, Night Thoughts.

O magic sleep! O comfortable bird,
That broodest o'er the troubled sea of the mind
Till it is hushed and smooth!
— Keats, Endymion.

65, 66. He does not hope for a recall to Rome, but only (male) for a mitigation of his exile to some place less severe.

care: take either as unmodified or understand Romā.

PAGE 223. — 71. est mala: understand causa.

72. "Only do speak favorably in behalf of my wretched exile."

80. Orestae deae: i.e. Diana, whose image Orestes carried away from the Tauric Chersonese to Greece. According to tradition, the image was carried to Aricia in Latium. See Met. XV, 487:—

Nam coniunx (i.e. Egeria) urbe relictæ Vallis Aricinae densis latet abdita silvis, Sacraque Orestae gemitu questuque Dianæ Impedit.

81, 82. "And the other nations which, when the Hister is frozen over, pass swiftly on horseback over the icy surface of the stream." Understand quid faciant from above.

83. hominum: i.e. of the men in this region. This is of itself a proof of the utter remoteness and barbarity of the place.

85–88. The chief objects of their thought and care. "Their bows and quivers of arrows fill their thoughts; they are exceedingly (quam) pleased also with horses able to endure long journeys, and the fact that they have learned by experience to bear prolonged thirst and hunger, and that the pursuing foe will have no water."

89. istam has no second personal force here, but retains its contemptuous or disparaging idea. Understand humum from the next line — "to such a place as this." Istis is similarly used in Trist. III, iii, 7.
94. "There is no need of any Getae to produce my death." I.e. had he wanted to slay me he could have done so by the merest word.

97. Nil fecit: what little spirit of self-defense Ovid has been able to show in the last few lines quickly oozes away, and he becomes more abject than before.

Facere: understand cum as subject.

98. "I can almost say that his wrath is even less than I deserve."

100. Ferat: understand ut.

Page 224. — 105. Here, as in line 66, Ovid uses male in the unusual sense of "merely" or "only."

tutius: in Trist. V, ii, 73-78, Ovid suggests that Sicily, with its traditional terrors, would be a suitable place for his exile, and concludes: ---

> Quod petimus poena est; neque enim miser esse recuso,
> Sed precor ut possim tutius esse miser.

105-114. These lines reveal the only hopes that Ovid is still able to cherish.

107, 108. "And that the life which the mighty gods (he probably means only Augustus) have granted me, a dirty Getan with his drawn sword take not away."

110. A humo: see Met. XI, 130 and note.

111, 112. "And that the hoof of no Bistonian horse tread upon my ashes, unburied as, forsooth, besits an exile."

113, 114. See Trist. III, iii, 63 and note.

120. aequandi is used in adjectival sense with viri, "the man equal to (or comparable with) the gods."

121. crudus Atreus: the most "bloody" act of this king was to slay the two sons of his brother Thyestes, and serve them up as a banquet to their father.

122. quique, etc.: i.e. Diomedes, a king of Thrace. See Met. IX, 194, 195 and note.

123-128. This may be taken in the main as a moderate and fair estimate of Augustus.

126. See Fast. I, 282 and note.

130. fuga nostra: "my place of exile."

131-138. The poet now makes his appeal on the ground of his old intimacy with Maximus. See also note on Trist. I, iii, 89.

Page 225. — 138. Ovid's third wife, the one living at the time of his exile, was, as has been said before, a relative of the wife of Maximus.

140, 141. The poet pleads that his wife is an old and esteemed friend of Marcia, the wife of Maximus, and also a favorite of the maternal aunt of Augustus, who was Marcia's mother.

143. Istitis: i.e. such as Marcia and her mother.
143, 144. "Claudia herself, though better than her reputation, with such backers, would have needed no heavenly aid." Ovid in Fast. IV, 291–348, describes the circumstances to which he here refers. When the Romans, in response to an oracle, were bringing the image of Cybele to Rome, the vessel grounded at the mouth of the Tiber. Soothsayers announced that only a chaste woman could move it. At this juncture, Claudia Quinta, the daughter of P. Claudius Pulcher (cos. B.C. 249), whose chastity had been called in question, stepped forward, and, calling upon 'Cybele to vindicate her innocence, took hold of the rope; whereupon the vessel immediately followed her. Livy (XXIX, 14) tells the same story with important modifications.

147, 148. This for the double reason that she was of the Fabian family and that she had been especially intrusted to Maximus on Ovid's departure from Italy.

151, 152. "And she begs you with tears to prevail upon Caesar by your prayers that her husband's tomb be nearer (to her)."

Even this prayer was never granted, and the poet's ashes were buried in his remote land of exile, where the Getae, who had come to hold their unwilling guest in high esteem, erected a monument to his memory.
VOCABULARY

[Where the simple words have passed unchanged into the compounds, the elements in composition are indicated by use of the hyphen. Obsolete or theoretical forms involved in derivation are marked with a *].

A

ā, ab, abs, prep. w. abl. 1. Of place, from, away from; 2. of position, on the side of, on, at; 3. of time, from, since, after; 4. of origin, separation, and agency, from, by.

ā or āb, interj. of distress, ah! alas! Abantēus, adj., pertaining to Abas.

Abās, antis, m., the twelfth king of Argos.

ab-dō, ere, didī, ditus, to put away; withdraw, hide; poet., ferrum abdere, to plunge the sword.

ab-dūcō, ere, dūxi, ductus, to lead away; draw back, withdraw.

ab-ēō, ire, īvi (īlī), itus, to go away, go forth, depart.

abigō, ere, ēgī, ēctus, [ab + agō], to drive away, dispel.

ab-lūō, ire, ī, ītus, to wash away, cleanse, purify.

aboleō, ēre, ēvi, itus, [ab + root ol, to destroy], to efface, abolish, destroy.

ab-rumpō, ere, rūplī, ruptus, to break or tear off, rend asunder, break, violate.

abs-cēdō, ere, cessi, cessus, to go off, depart; get beyond the reach of.

abs-cindō, ere, scidi, scissus, to tear off, tear, rend.

abs-condō, ere, dl (didī), ditus, to put out of sight, conceal.

absēns, entis, [part. of absum], adj., absent.

abs-trahō, ere, trāxi, trāctus, to drag away, draw off.

ab-sum, esse, āful, —, to be away from, be absent, at a distance; be free from, be wanting.

ab-sumō, ere, psī, ptus, to take away; consume; destroy.

abundē, [abundus, copious], adv., in profusion, plentifully.

ac, conj., see atque.

accēdē, ere, cessi, cessūrus, [ad + cēdō], to approach, come near; befall; be added; resemble.

accendē, ere, ī, cēnās, [ad + cēnō, to cause to shine or glow], to kindle, set on fire; heat, inflame, incite.

acceptus, a, um, [part. accipiō], adj., welcome, pleasing.

accessus, ās, [accēdō], m., a going near, an approach.

accipīō, ere, cēpi, ceptus, [ad + capiō], to gird on; in pass. with a middle sense, gird one's self with; make ready for (by girding up the garments).

accipiter, tris, m., a bird of prey, hawk.

Accius (or Attius), Iī, m., a Roman writer of tragedy and comedy of the ante-classical period.

acclīvis, e, adj., uphill, steep, sloping.

acclīvus, a, um, adj., see acclīvis.

accommodō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [ad + commodō, to adjust], to fit, adjust, fit on.
accumbē, ere, cubul, cubitus, [ad + cubō], to lie down; recline at meals.
accusō, āre, āvi, ātus, [ad + causa], to reproach, blame, accuse.
acerb, acris, ācre, adj., sharp; of mental emotions and character, eager, fierce, spirited, keen.
acervus, ī, m., a heap, mass.
Achāls, idis, adj. used as subs., f., Achaia, Greece.
Achelōus, ī (acc. -on), m., a river of Greece emptying into the Ionian Sea; also the river god.
Achilleīs, is (also eī or Iī), m., son of Peleus and Thetis, and one of the most valiant of the Greek heroes at Troy.
Achilleīs, a, um, adj., belonging or pertaining to Achilles.
Achivus, a, um, adj., Grecian; subs., Achivī, ārum, the Greeks.
acēs, eī, f., a sharp edge or point of a weapon; the glance of the eye, the sight; a line of men in battle array.
Ācis, idis, m., a river god, son of Faunus, beloved by Galatea.
aconītum, īn, wolf’s-bane, a poisonous plant.
Aconteus, ī, m., one of the comrades of Perseus.
acta, ae, f., the seashore, beach.
Actoridēs, ae, m., grandson of Actor, i.e. Patroclus.
āctum, ī, [part. of agō], n., a deed, transaction.
acūmen, imis, [acuō], n., a point, projection.
acuō, ere, ī, ātus, to sharpen, whet.
acūtus, a, um, [part. acuō], adj., sharp, pointed.
ad, prep. w. acc., with verbs of motion, to, toward; of position, at, upon, in vicinity of; of time or occasion, for; with verbs, at, in reply to.
adāmantēs, ās, um, [adamās], adj., of adamant, adamantine.
adāmās, antis, m., adamant.
adāpertus, a, um, [part. adapertūs, to open], adj., open.
ad-dicō, ere, dixi, dictus, to speak to, assent to; yield, give up, resign.
ad-dō, ere, didi, ditus, to give or join to, add, give in addition.
adductus, a, um, [part. adducō, to draw to], adj., drawn to; tightened, strained, contracted, drawn.
ad-edō, ere, edī, edus, to eat away, consume.
ad-eō, īre, īvi, (ī) ĭtus, to go to, approach; encounter.
adeō, [ad-eō], adv., so far, so long, so; even, indeed, to emphasize some adj. or adv.
adfectō, āre, āvi, ātus, [freq. of adfectō], to strive after, aim at, pursue; seize, grasp.
adfectus, a, um, [part. adfectō], adj., affected, weakened, discouraged.
adfectus, ūs, [adfectō], m., a state, disposition, feeling.
ad-ferō, adferre, āttuli, ādiātum, to bear or carry to a place; bring to.
adfectō, ere, fācī, fectus, [ad + facīō], to treat, use; to attack, afflict, oppress.
ad-firmō, āre, āvi, ātus, to affirm, assert positively, be sure.
ad-fō, āre, āvi, ātus, to blow or breathe something upon some one; breathe upon some one with something.
ad-fōr, fārī, fātus, to speak to, address, accost.
ad-herō, āre, —, —, to cleave or stick to.
ad-hūc, adv., to this place, hither; until this time, as yet; still; even now.
adiciō, ere, ēsci, lectus, [ad + faciō], to throw to, bring to; add, add to, increase, apply.
adigō, ere, īgi, actus, [ad + agō], to drive or bring to; of weapons, to drive, plunge, thrust.
adimō, ere, ēmi, ēmptus, [ad + emō, to buy], to take away, remove.
adítatrix, adj., [adiuvō], f., an assistant.
ad-iuvō, are, ēvi, ētus, to aid, help, assist.
ad-levō, are, ēvi, ētus, to lift up, raise.
ad-locō, are, ēvi, ētus, to bind to; bind, fasten.
ad-loquor, I, locútus, to speak to, address.
ad-miror, ērī, ētus, to admire, wonder at; gaze at with wonder or admiration.
ad-mittō, ere, misī, missus, to send to, let in, admit; of crime, to commit; admissō passū, with quickened pace.
ad-moneō, are, ui, ētus, to admonish, warn.
admonitus, (īs), [admonēō], m., used only in the abl., a reminding; warning, reproof.
ad-moveō, ēre, mōvī, mōtus, to move or bring to; to place near; to apply.
ad-nitor, I, nīsus (nīxus), to press or lean upon or against.
ad-nuō, ere, i, (nūtus), to nod to, assent by a nod.
adoleō, ēre, ui, —, [ad + root ou, to destroy], to burn on the altar; to destroy by fire, burn up.
ad-opperō, īre, ui, tūs, to cover, wrap, bury.
ad-optō, ēre, āvī, ētus, to select, choose, adopt.
ad-ordō, ēre, āvī, ētus, to adore, beseech, supplicate.
ad-rideō, ēre, risī, risus, to laugh, smile upon.
adripō, ēre, repūtus, [ad + rapīō], to seize, take possession of.
ad-sensus, ās, [ad-sentiō], m., assent, approval, voice of assent.
ad-sentiō, īre, sēnīs, sēnus, to assent, agree to.
ad-serō, ere, ui, tūs, to claim, lay claim to.
adsiduus, a, um, [adsideō, to sit by or near], adj., unremitting, incessant, constant.

ad-sonō, āre, —, —, to resound, respond.
ad-suēscō, ere, suēvi, suētus, intrans., to become accustomed; trans., accustom one's self to something, make anything familiar to one.
ad-suētus, a, um, [part. adsuēscō], adj., accustomed to.
ad-sum, esse, fui, to be present, at hand; appear, come forward; aid, assist.
ad-sūmō, ere, psi, ptus, to take to oneself, receive, obtain.
adulter, eri, m., an adulterer, paramour.
adulterium, ii, n., adultery.
aduncus, a, um, adj., bent, hooked.
ad-ūrō, ere, ussi, ëtus, to scorch, burn, singe.
ad-vehō, ere, vexi, vectus, to carry, bring, or conduct to a place; pass., be carried in a vehicle of any kind, ride, sail.
advena, ae, [advenīō], m. and f., a stranger, an adventurer.
advenīō, ire, vēni, ventus, to come to, arrive at, arrive, reach.
adventus, ūs, [advenīō], m., an approach, arrival.
adversus, a, um, [part. adverterī], adj., turned toward or against, opposite, in front; unfavorable, adverse, opposing.
ad-vertō, ere, i, versus, to turn to or toward.
ad-vocō, āre, ēvi, ētus, to call in, invite, summon.
ad-volō, āre, ēvi, ētus, to fly to, hasten to.
Aescidēs, ae, m., a descendant of Aeacus.
Aeacus, i, m., the fabled son of Jupiter and Europa, father of Peleus and Telamon, grandfather of Achilles and Ajax.
Aēs, antis, m., a river of Epirus.
asēs or aedis, is, f., (sing.), a dwelling of the gods, a temple; (pl.), a human dwelling, house, home.
Aēstēs or Aēsta, ae, m., fabled king of Colchis, son of Sol and accumbē, ere. cubulī, cubitus. |ad — cubō̄, to lie down; reciē, et of. accūsē, āre. Āvī, ātus, [ad —
canes]. — rep-nach. blame, accuse.
acer. scrīa, scrē, adj., sharp: of mental emotions and character, eger, sercē, spirited, keen.
acerrus,ī, m., a heap, mass.
Achāis, idis, adj. used as subs., f., Athēna, Greece.
achēlōs, i, acc. —on, m., a river of Greece, emptying into the Ionian Sea: also, the river god.
Achillēs, is also ci or li, m., son of Περσος and Thetis, and one of the most renowned of the Greek heroes at Troy.
Achillēs, a, um, adj., belonging or related to Achilles.
achivus, a, um, adv., Greciam; subs., Achivi, Grum, the Greeks.
acēs. ēs. —, a sharp edge or point of a weapon; the glance of the eye, the sight: a line of men in battle array.
Aiēs, idis, m., a river god, son of Finnus, beloved by Galatea.
acōnītum, i, n., wolf’s-bane, a poisonous plant.
Aconteus, i, m., one of the comrades of Perseus.
acta. ae. f., the seashore, beach.
Actoridēs, ae. m., grandson of Actor, i.e. Patroclus.
āctum, i, [part. of acō̄], n., a deed, transaction.
acūmēn, inis, [acūō̄], n., a point, projection.
acūō̄, ere, ī, ātus, to sharpen,
whet.
acūtus, a, um, [part. acūō̄], adj.,
sharp, pointed.
ad, prep. w. acc. with verbs of motion,
to, toward; of position, at,
upon, in vicinity of; of time or occaasion, for; with verbs, at, in reply to.
adamāntēs, a, um, [adamās],
adj., of adamant, adamantine.
adamās, antis, m., adamant.
adapertus, ā, um, [part. adape-riō̄, to open]. adj., open.
ad-dicō̄, ere, dixi, dictus, to speak to, asent to; yield, give up, resign.
ad-dō̄, ere, didi, ditus, to give or join to; add, give in addition.
adductus, a, um, [part. addūcō̄, to draw to], adj., drawn to; tightened, strained, contracted, drawn.
ad-edō̄, ere, edī, ēsus, to eat away, consume.
ad-eō̄, īre, īvi, (H), ātus, to go to,
approach; encounter.
adeō̄, [ad-eō̄], adv., so far, so long,
so: even, indeed, to emphasize some
adj. or adv.
addfectō̄, āre, āvi, ātus, [freq. of addficō̄], to strive after, aim at, pursue; seize, grasp.
adfectus, a, um, [part. addficō̄],
adj., affected, weakened, discouraged.
adfectus. us, [addficō̄], m., a state, disposition, feeling.
adferō̄, adferre, attulī, addītum, to bear or carry to a place; bring to.
adficō̄, ere, fēci, fectus, [ad + facicō̄]. to treat, use; to attack, af-dict; oppress.
adfirmō̄, āre, āvi, ātus, to affirm, assert positively, be sure.
ad-fixō̄, āre, āvi, ātus, to blow or breathe something upon some one;
breathe upon some one with something.
ad-for, fāri, fātus, to speak to, address, acrost.
adhaereō̄, ēre, —, —, to cleave or stick to.
ad-hūc, adv., to this place, hither;
until this time, as yet; still; even
now.
adiciō̄, ere, iēci, lectus, [ad + iciō̄], to throw to, bring to; add,
add to, increase, apply.
adigō̄, ere, ēgli, ēctus, [ad + agō̄], to drive or bring to; of weapons, to drive, plunge, thrust.
adimō̄, ere, ēmī, emptus, [ad +
emō̄, to buy], to take away, remove.
VOCABULARY 419

adōnēs, ăne, [adēnēs], m., a descendant of Aeacus.

Aeacus, I., m., the fabled son of Jupiter and Europa, father of Peleus and Telamon, grandfather of Achilles and Ajax.

Aeás, antis, m., a river of Epirus.

Aedēs or Aedes, ās, ās, (sing.), a dwelling of the gods, a temple; (pl.), a human dwelling, house, home.

Aestēs or Aeōta, ae, m., fabled king of Colchis, son of Sol and...
Persa, daughter of Oceanus; father of Medea.
Aesitia, iadis, f., the daughter of Aeetes, i.e. Medea.
Aegaeon, ònis, m., a sea god, son of Pontus and Terra.
Aegger, aegra, aegrum, adj., ill, sick, feeble, wounded, weary; sad, anxious, sick at heart, desponding, dejected, troubled.
Aegaeus, eis, m., son of Pandion, king of Athens, father of Theseus.
Aegyptius, a, um, adj., Egyptian.
Aemulus, a, um, adj. (in a good sense), emulous, rivaling; (in a bad sense), envious, jealous.
Aeneadès, ée, ae, m., a descendant of Aeneas.
Aenäs, aë, ae, m., Aeneas, son of Venus and Anchises.
Aenius, a, um, adj., belonging to Aeneas.
Aënetis, a, um, [aes], adj., of copper or bronze, brazen.
Aënisus, a, um, [aes], adj., brazen, bronze, copper; subs., Aënum, i, n., a brazen or copper vessel.
Aeolidès, aë, ae, m., a descendant of Aeolus.
Aeolius, a, um, adj., pertaining to Aeolus or Aeolia, Aeolian.
Aeolus, i, m., the god of the winds.
Aequális, éa, [aequus], adj., equal, like, similar; subs. pl., aequálēs, equals, companions.
Aequō, áre, ávi, átus, [aequus], to make even, smooth, or level; make equal; come up to, keep even with; match.
Aequor, oris, [aequus], n., an even or level surface, the surface of the sea, the sea; in pl., more frequently, waves.
Aequoreus, a, um, [aequor], adj., of the sea, marine; w. Britannii, island-dwelling.
Aequus, a, um, adj., even, level; equal, fair, impartial, righteous; propitious, favorable; equal, matched, required.
Aër, aëris, m., the air, atmosphere.
VOCABULARY

Agēnōr, oris, [Ἀγήνωρ], a son of Belus, king of Phoenicia, father of Cadmus and Europa.

Agōnōridēs, ae, m., a son or descendant of Ageron.

ager, agri, m., territory, land; a field.

aggregōdor, I, gressus, [ad + grad- dōr], to go to, approach; accost; attack.

agitābīlis, e, [agītō], adj., easily moved, light.

agitō, āre, āvī, ātus, to put in motion, impel, drive, pursue; harass, unsettle, toss, drive about; agitate, keep in motion, move upon.

agmen, inis, [agō], n., something put in motion, a train, a collected body in motion, used of anything, but especially of men or animals, a line, troop, band.

agnus, ae, f., a ewe lamb.

agnōscō, ere, nōvī, nitus, [ad + (g)nōscō], to recognize that which one has seen or known before.

agō, ere, ēgī, ēactus, to put in motion, drive, lead, impel, compel; sail or steer a ship; cause, perform, do, accomplish; spend, pass; age, w. imperative, come! up!

agrestis, e, [ager], adj., pertaining to the country, rustic, rural.

agricola, ae, [ager + colō], m., one who tills the soil, a farmer, countryman, peasant.

Ah, interj., ah!

Alēx, ācis, m., Ajax, the son of Telamon, king of Salamis, renowned for his strength and valor; Ajax, the son of Oileus, king of the Locrians.

Alē, defective vb., to say yes; in general, affirm, say.

Alē, ae, f., a wing of a bird; a wing, as of a god.

Alastōr, oris, [Ἀλάστωρ], m., one of the companions of Sarpedon, killed by Ulysses before Troy.

Albēnōs, ae, um, [Alba], adj., pertaining to Alba, Alban.

albeō, āre, [albus], to be white, whiten.

albidus, a, um, [albus], adj., white.

albus, a, um, adj., white.

Alcander, dīrī, m., a Trojan, slain by Ulysses.

Alcidēs, ae, m., a descendant of Alceus, the father of Amphitryon; Hercules, his reputed grandson.

Alcmēna, ae, f., the daughter of Electryon, wife of Amphitryon, and mother of Hercules by Jupiter.

āles, āltis, [āla], adj., winged; subs., m. or f., a bird.

alēnōs, a, um, [altus], adj., pertaining to another, another's, foreign.

alimentum, I, [alō], n., nourishment, food.

Alpēs, edis, [āla + pēs], adj., wing-footed.

aliqui, qua, quod, [al- + qui], indef. pron. adj., some, any.

aliquis, qua, quid, indef. pron., some one, any one.

aliter, [alls, old for altus], adv., otherwise, in another manner.

altus, a, ud, adj., another, other; in pl., the others, others; repeated, one ... another; in pl., some ... others.

almus, a, um, [alō], adj., nourishing, life-giving, cherishing; kindly, propitious, gracious, genial.

alnus, I, f., the alder.

alē, ere, ul, altus or altus, to feed, nourish, sustain, maintain, cherish, strengthen, encourage.

Alpēs, ium, f. pl., the Alps.

Alphēías, adis, f., the water nymph Arēthusa, whose waters unite with the river Alpheus.

Alphēnōr, oris, m., a son of Niobe.

Alphēus, I, m., the chief river of the Peloponnesus, flowing through Arcadia and Elis.

alē, [altus], adv., on high, aloft, high, high up.

alter, era, erum, adj., the one of two, the other; repeated, the one ... the other.
VOCABULARY

alternus, a, um. [alter], adj., one after another; in turn, by turns, alternate.

altus, a, um. adj., high, lofty, deep, profound: subs., altum, i, n. (understand caelum), heaven; (understand mare), the deep sea, the sea.
alumnus, i. [alō], m., that which is nourished, a foster child, son.
alveus, i. [alvus], m., a cavity, a hollow; the channel of a ricer.
alvus, i. [alō], f., the belly, the body.
amāns, antis, [part. amō], adj., fond of, attached to; fond, loving, affectionate; subs., m. or f., a lover.
amārus, a, um, adj., bitter (to the taste); bitter (to the heart), unpleasant, painful.
Amathūsia, ae. [Amathūs], f., an epithet of Venus, from Amathus, a town in Cyprus.
amātor, oris, [amō], m., a lover.
ambāgēs, is. [ambī + agō], f., a going round about, a winding; pl., turnings, windings, riddles.
ambī- (amb̑-, am-, an-), prep. in comp. only, around, on both sides.
ambiguus, a, um. [ambī + agō], adj., doubtful, uncertain, hesitating, ambiguous, difficult, dangerous.
ambīō, ire, īvi (ī), itus, to go around, surround.
ambītō, ōnis, [ambīō], f., a going about; the soliciting of votes; a striving for fame; the desire for honor.
ambītōsus, a, um. [ambītō], adj., ambitious, eager for honor.
ambō, ae, ō, adj., pl., both.
ambulō, ēre, ēvi, ēstus, [am- + root of bāvī, to go], to walk about, go, traverse.
ambulōro, ere, usūi, ēstus, to burn around, scorch, singe.
ēmēnā, entis. [ē- + ōmēnā], adj., out of one's senses, beside one's self, distracted, mad.
ēmentia, ae. [ēmēnā], f., madness.
amicītia, ae. [amicus], f., friend-the father of Thoas, one of the Greek heroes at Troy.

Androgeōs (εὐς), ὁ, [Ἀνδρόγεως], m., a son of Minos, king of Crete, slain by the Athenians.

angō, ere, —, —, to press tight; to torture, vex.

anguifer, era, erum, [anguis + ferō], adj., serpent-bearing.

anguipeś, edis, [anguis + pēs], adj., serpent-footed.

angus, is, m. and f., a serpent.

angulus, I, m., an angle, corner; secret nook, corner.

anhistitus, ūs, [anhēλός], m., a difficult breathing, panting.

anhēλός, āre, āvi, ātus, to breathe with difficulty, pant.

anima, ae, i, air, wind; breath, breath of life, life; a disembodied spirit, a shade.

animal, ālis, [anima], n., any living creature, an animal.

animāns, antis, [part. animō], adj., living, animate; subs., a living being.

animō, āre, āvi, ātus, [anima], to quicken into life, animate.

animōsus, a, um, [animus], adj., full of spirit, spirited, made spirited by, undaunted by, proud.

animus, I, m., the rational soul (opposed to body), spirit, feeling, the mind, the will, purpose, intention, heart; pl., courage.

annīlēs, tum, [annus], m. pl., annals, history.

Anna Perenna, āe, f., an old Italian goddess, protector of the returning year.

anne, pleonastic for an.

annōsus, a, um, [annus], adj., full of years, old, aged.

annus, I, m., a year, season of the year.

anōsus, a, um, [annus], adj., annual, yearly.

āner, eris, m., a goose.

Antaeus, I, m., a Libyan giant, slain by Hercules.

ante, prep. w. acc., before (of time and space); ante omnēs, before (i.e. more than) all; adv., of (of time) before, formerly, previously; followed by quam, sooner than, before.

ante-ēō, ire, īvi (īi), —, to go before, surpass, excel.

antenna, ae, f., a sail yard.

Antēnōr, oris, m., a Trojan prince related to Priam, who, after the fall of Troy, went to Italy and founded Patavium.

antequam, see ante.

antiquus, a, um, [ante], adj., old, ancient, belonging to ancient times; former.

antrum, I, [ἀντρόν], n., a cave, cavern.

ana, ūs, f., an old woman.

anxius, a, um, adj., anxious, troubled, solicitous.

Aonius, a (Gr. form Aoniēs), um, adj., Aonian, Boeotian.

aper, apri, m., a wild boar.

aperīō, ēre, ui, ētus, [ad+pērēō], to appear, come in sight, be visible.

appendēō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [ad+pellēō], to accost, address; call by name, mention.

Appenninus, I, m., the Apennines, a mountain range of Italy.

appendēō, ere, posui, positus, [ad + pondē], to place by, set near, set before.

Aprilis, is, [aperīō], adj., of April; subs. (understand mensis), m., the month of April.

aptō, āre, āvi, ātus, [aptus], to fit, to put on.
aptus, a, um, [πόσιος], hold, adj., sitted or joined to; suited, suitable.
apud, prep. w. acc., with, at, by, near,
  among.
aqua, ae, f., water.
aquila, ae, f., an eagle.
aquilo, ōnis, m., the north wind; in general, the wind.
aquisus, a, um, [aqua], adj., watery, rainy.
aera, ae, f., an altar, a raised structure of earth, wood, or stone; Aera, the altar, a constellation in the southern sky.
Arachné, Ἀράχνη, a spider, a Lydian maiden, changed by Minerva into a spider.
aratór, ōris, [ἀράτος], m., a plowman.
arātrum, i, [ἀράτῳ], n., a plow.
Arátus, i, m., a Greek poet of about 250 B.C., author of an astronomical poem.
arbitrator, trī, m., an eyewitness; umpire, judge.
arbitrium, i, [arbiter], n., judgment, authority, will, power.
arbor, oris, f., a tree, woods.
arboresus, a, um, [arboreus], adj., belonging to a tree; treelike, branching.
arbus tum, i, [arboreus], n., a grove,
  thicket, orchard.
arbuteus, a, um, adj., of the arbuteus.
arbutus, i, f., the wild strawberry tree, the arbuteus.
Arcadia, ae, f., a mountainous province in the center of the Peloponnesus, Arcady.
árca, a, um, [árca, a chest], adj., secret, hidden, private; subs., árcānum, i, n., a secret, a mystery.
Arcas, adīs, m., an Arcadian.
arca, aer, ut, (tus), to shut up, inclose, confine; keep at a distance,
  keep off, drive away.
Arceus, i, m., a son of Jupiter, father of Luertes, and grandfather of Ulysses.
Arctenēs, entis, [arcus+tenēs],
  adj., wielding or carrying a bow;
  subs., the archer god, Apollo.
Arctos, i, f., the double circumpolar constellation of the two bears, or the Great Bear alone; poet., the north.
arca, aer, m., a bow; anything bow-shaped, e.g. the zones or divisions of the heavens.
árdeō, ōre, ōral, ōræ, to burn,
  blaze, glow, gleam, glitter; be eager,
  long; burn with love for, love.
ardeō, erē, eral, —, [inch. ardēō],
  to take fire, kindle, begin to burn.
arðor, ōris, [ārðē̄s], m., a burning heat; ardor, enthusiasm, eagerness.
arDRAW, a, um, adj., high, lofty, steep, towering aloft; subs., ar-duum, i, n., a high place, a height.
ārea, ae, f., ground, space, expanse.
ārēns, entis, [part. ārē̄n], adj., dry, arid, dried up.
arēō, ōre, ut, —, to dry up, become parched or withered.
Arestoridēs, ae, m., the son of Ares-tor, i.e. Argus.
Aresthūsa, ae, f., a celebrated fountain in Sicily.
argentēus, a, um, [argentum],
  adj., of silver, silvery, of the silver age.
argentum, i, n., silver.
Argō, Us, [Ἀργός], f., the ship which bore Jason and his crew to Colchis in search of the golden fleece.
Argolicus, a, um, [Argolica], adj., pertaining to Argolis, Argolic, (meton.)
  Grecian.
Argos, [Ἀργος], n., (only nom. and acc.), also pl., Argi, ōrum, m., Argos, a city in the Peloponnesus, (meton.) Greece, in general.
argumentum, i, [arguō], n., an argument, evidence, proof.
arguō, ere, i, utus, to argue, show, declare, prove.
Argus, I, [Ἀργος], m., the hundred-eyed keeper of Io after she was changed into a heifer by Jupiter.
VOCABULARY

argũtus, a; um, part. [arguō], clear, clear-sounding, tuneful.

āricīnūm, m. pl., the inhabitants of Āricī, an ancient town in Latium, not far from Alba Longa.

āridus, a, um, [āreō], adj., dry, parched.

ārīnūs, onis, [Ārīnus], m., a famous musician of Lesbos, rescued from drowning by a dolphin.

ārionītus, a, um, [Ārīnōn], adj., belonging to Arion.

arīnga, ae, f., a beard of wheat; a head of wheat, ear of corn.

arma, ērum, n. pl., arms, weapons, armor.

armātus, a, um, [part. armō], adj., armed, equipped.

armēntum, ērum, n., cattle for plowing; herd, drove.

armifer, ērum, ērōrum, [arma + ferō], adj., arm-bearer, war-like.

armigēr, ērum, ērōrum, [arma + gerō], f., an armor bearer.

armipotēns, entis, [arma + po-tēns], adj., powerful in arms, war-like.

armōniosus, a, um, [arma + sonus], adj., resounding with arms.

armō, āre, āvi, ātus, [arma], to arm, equip.

armōs, ī, m., the shoulder; of an animal, the flank, side.

ārō, āre, āvi, ātus, to plow, till, cultivate, inhabit.

āre, ārtis, f., art, skill, dexterity; the employment of art, a trade, profession, art; artifice, craft, cunning, trickery.

articulīus, ī, [dim. artus], m., a joint, finger.

artifex, īcis, [ars + faciō], m., an artificer, artist; in bad sense, schemer, plotter.

artus, ūs, ūs, (mostly in pl.), a joint; limbs, parts, the body.

artus, ērum, a, um, [part. arceō], adj., shut up, close, tight.

arvum, ī, [arvō], n., arable land, a field; country, region; shore, as opposed to water.

arx, arcis, f., a citadel, a fortified height, a stronghold; a height, pinnacle.

ascendō, ere, ērī, ascensus, [ad + scandō, to mount], to climb up, ascend.

ascensus, ūs, [ascendō], m., the act of climbing, an ascent.

Ascraeus, ī, m., Hesiod, so named from Ascria, his birthplace, a village in Boeotia, near Mount Helicon.

asella, ae, [dim. asīna, she-ass], a small she-ass.

asellus, ī, [dim. asinus, ass], m., a small ass.

aspectus, īs, [aspicīō], m., a looking at, a glance, gaze.

asper, ērum, adj., rough, uneven, rugged, prickly, thorny; harsh, hard, fierce, cruel.

aspergō, inis, [vb. aspergō = ad + spargō], f., a sprinkling; that which is sprinkled.

asperitās, ātis, [asper], f., roughness, harshness, severity.

aspicīō, ere, spexī, spectus, [ad + *spectō, to look], to look at, behold, see.

aspirō, āre, āvi, ātus, [ad+spirō], to breathe or blow upon; favor, assist.

asternō, ere, —, —, [ad+sternō], to strive upon; usually in the middle voice, to prostrate one’s self, to lie stretched.

astō, stāre, stiti, —, [ad+stō], to stand by or near, stand; stand up, arise.

Astraea, ae, f., the goddess of justice.

astringō, ere, strinxī, strictus, [ad + stringō], to tie fast, bind up; with glaciō, freeze.

astrum, ī, [astrōn], n., a star.

astupeō, ēre, —, —, [ad+stupeō], to be amazed at.

astus, ūs, m., craft, cunning, stratagem.

Astrygōs, īs, m., one of the assailants of Perseus.

at, ast, conj., but, yet, now, moreover, however, at least, still.
VOCABULARY

auce, ætra, ætrum, adj., black, dark, shadowy.

Aithôs, genitive not found, [Aithôs].
m. a town in Macedonía.

Aithiadès, ae. m., a descendant of Aithôs, i.e., Macedonía, Mercury.

Atêas, aris. [Atêas], m., a high mountain in Macedonía, in the western part of Lybía, on which, according to the fable, the heavens rested.

auque or ac. conj., and also, and besides, and indeed, generally giving emphasis to the second of two coordinate expressions.

Atreus, el. m., a son of Pelops, and king of Argos and Mycenae.

Atridès, ae. m., a son or descendant of Atreus: his son, Agamemnon.

Atrium, fi. ['atrr], n., the principal apartment of a Roman house, the hall; in gen., halls, rooms.

at-tamen. conj., but nevertheless.

attenuō. ëre, ēvi. ëtus, [ad ++

[make thin], to make thin, lessen, reduce, diminish: weaken.

at-tollō. ëre, —, —, [ad ++
tollō], to lift or raise up.

attolinitus. a um. [part. attollō, to thunder at, stun], adj., thunder-struck, astounded, amazed, aweed; poet., applied to inanimate things.

attrahō. ëre, trāxi, trāctus, [ad ++ traħō], to draw, draw in, pull.

auctor, ëris, [auegō], m., f., a creator, progenitor, founder, source; author, inventor, instigator, giver, promoter; [rare] prophet.

audâcia, ae, [audâx], f., daring, courage, boldness.

audâx, âcia, [audeō], adj., bold, daring, in good or bad sense; courageous, resolute.

audeō, ëre, ausus sum, to dare, venture.

audeō, ëre, îvi (III), ëtus, to hear, listen to.

auferō, auferre, abstulī, ablāitus, [ab++ferō], to bear or carry off or away, remove.

augeō, ëre, auxi, auctus, to increase, augment, cause to grow.

augur, uris, m., f., an augur, soothsayer; a prophet, seer.

augurium, fi, [augur], n., the science or art of divination; a pres-timent, foreboding; an omen, sign, portent.

auguror, ëri, ëtus, [augur], to prodict, foretell; surmise, imagine.

augustus, a, um, [augeō], adj., sacred, venerable, noble, majestic.

Augustus, I., m., the surname of Ottarius Caesar, after he gained the supreme power of Rome; the name was afterwards assumed by all the emperors; adj., of Augustus, imperial.

aula, ae, [aïlæ], f., a hall, palace, royal court.

aulaeum, i, [aïlaeæ], n., a piece of tapestry, a curtain.

Aulis, idis, f., a seaport in Boeotia,
where the Greeks assembled before sailing for Troy.

aura, ae, (old gen. aurâi), [aïp], f., the air in motion, a breeze; air, the vital breath; the air of heaven, the sky, the light of day, the air (generally in the pl.); ad auras or sub aurâs, on high, aloft, heavenward.

aurâtus, a, um, [aurum], adj., overlaid with gold, gilded, golden.

aurēus, a, um, [aurum], adj., made of gold, golden; bright, glittering.

aurifer, era, erum, [aurum + ferō], adj., gold bearing.

auriga, ae, m., a charioteer, driver.

auris, is, f., the ear.

aurōra, ae, f., the dawn, morning;
person, the goddess of morning.

aurum, i, n., gold.

Ausania, ae, f., a poetic name for Italy, derived from the name of an ancient people inhabiting Middle and Lower Italy.

Ausanis, idis, adj., Ausonian, Italian.

Ausanis, a, um, adj., Ausonian, Italian.

auspictum, ii, [auspex], a diviner from the omens given by birds), n., divination from observations of birds; auspices; gen. in pl., auspices, chief command, guidance, direction.

auster, tri, m., the south wind; person, Auster.
austrophilus, e, [auster], adj., southern.
austrid, I, [austeō], n., daring, a daring deed.
aust, conj., or; aut . . . aut, either . . . or.
autesm, conj., but, however, now, moreover, again.
Automedon, ointis, [‘Automedon], m., the charioteer of Achilles.
autumnalis, e, [autumnus], adj., of autumn, autumnal.
autumnus, I, m., the season of increase, abundance; autumn.
auxiliaris, e, [auxilium], adj., aiding, helping, assisting.
auxilium, II, n., aid, assistance.
avarius, a, um, [aveō, to long for], adj., covetous, greedy, avaricious.
avēō, ere, veliō (vulai), vulsus, to tear off or away.
avēna, ae, f., oats; an oaten pipe, a pipe of Pan.
Avernus, I, [aevnus], m., a lake near Cumae, almost entirely inclosed by steep and wooded hills, whose deadly exhalations were said to kill the birds flying over it. Hence the myth placed near it the entrance to the Lower World; poetic for the Lower World.
Avernus, a, um, adj., pertaining or belonging to Lake Avernus.
aversor, eur, ēs, [intens. avertō], to turn from; repulse, scorn, decline.
aversus, a, um, [part. avertō], adj., turned away; alienated, hostile, unfriendly.
avertō, ere, I, versus, to turn away or aside (trans. and intrans.); pass., with middle sense, to turn (one's self) aside or away.
avidus, a, um, [aveō, to long for], adj., eager, greedy.

avis, is, f., a bird.
avitus, a, um, [avus], adj., of a grandfather, ancestral.
avius, a, um, [ā + vīs], adj., out of the way, unfrequented; subs., avium, II, n., an unfrequented place or way, a byway.
avus, I, m., a grandfather; poet, an ancestor.
axis, is, m., an axle; meton., a car or chariot; the axis of heaven, the heavens, the sky, vault of heaven.

B
Babylonicus, a, um, adj., belonging or pertaining to Babylon, Babylonian.
bāca, ae, f., a berry, or any small fruit of trees.
Bacche, ae, f., a Bacchante.
Bacchantes, um, [subs. from part. of bacchor, to celebrate the festival of Bacchus], f., Bacchantes, priestesses of Bacchus.
Bacchiadai, ārum, m., an ancient royal family of Corinth, who removed to Sicily and founded Syracuse.
Bacchus, I, m., the god of wine; (meton.) wine.
baculum, I, n., a stick, staff.
Baleāricus, a, um, adj., Balearic, pertaining to the Balearic Islands, whose inhabitants were famous slingers.
ballaena, ae, [βαλλαία], f., a whale.
baltēsus, I, m., a belt, strap, girdle.
barba, ae, f., the beard.
barbaria, ae, [barbarus], f., a strange or foreign land from the standpoint of Greece or Italy.
barbarus, a, um, [βαρβαρος], adj., barbarous, rude, uncivilized, savage.
Bassus, I, m., a Roman poet, friend of Ovid and Propertius, otherwise unknown.
Battiiadēs, ae, m., the poet Callimachs, a native of Cyrene, in Libya, so called because the name of Battus had been given to Ariatote of Thera, the founder of Cyrene.
VOCABULARY

Bancia, iud., the wife of Philemon; in Phrygia.

beōtus, a, um, [part. beō, to make happy], adj., happy, blessed, favored.

Bēlides, um, f., the granddaughters of Belus, the father of Danaus, better known as the Danaides.

bellātor, ōris, [bellō, to make war], m., a warrior; as adj., martial; bellātor equus, a warhorse.

bellicus, a, um, [bellum], adj., warlike, fierce in war.

bellum, i. n., war, warfare, a combat.

bētus, ae, f., a large animal of any kind, a beast, a monster.

bene, [bonus], adv., well.

benefactis, ōrum, [bene + faciō], n., things well done, meritorious acts, brave deeds.

benignus, a, um, [bonus + genus], adj., benignant, kindly, friendly.

Berecyntius, a, um, adj., pertaining to Berecyntus, a mountain in Phrygia, sacred to Cybele, Berecyntian; herōs, i.e. Midas, a Phrygian king.

bibō, ero, i, —, to drink, drink in.

bibulus, a, um, [bibō], adj., bibulous, thirsty, porous.

bicēps, cipitis, [bi + caput], adj., having two heads, peaks or summits.

bi-color, ôris, adj., two-colored, dappled.

bicornis, e, [bi + cornu], adj., with two horns, two pronged.

bi-foris, e, adj., with two doors, folding.

bi-fôrmis, e, adj., two formed.

bimâris, e, [bi + mare], adj., on or between two seas.

blēs, ae, a, adj., two by two, two apiece; two, a pair, a couple.

bipennis, e, [bi + penna], adj., two winged; two edged; subs. (poet.), bipennis, is, f., a two edged axe, a battle axe.

bivōris, is, [bi + bivōmus], f., (understand nāvis), a galley with two banks of oars, a bireme.

bles, [bi-], num. adv., twice.

Bistonius, a, um, adj., pertaining to the Bistonides, a people of Thrace; Thracian.

bi-sulcūs, a, um, adj., having two furrows, forked, cloven.

blæsus, a, um, [bîasōs], adj., lipis.

blandior, līrī, itus, [blandus], a soothing, careess; to flatter.

blanditias, ae, [blandus], f., flattering; pl., flatteries, blandishments.

blandus, a, um, adj., smooth tongued, flattering, caressing, persuasive, soft, pleasant, quiet.

Boebō, ës, f., a village in Thessaly, on the shore of Lake Boebetis.

Boeōtia, ae, f., a country of Greece, northwest of Attica.

Boeōtus, a, um, adj., Boeotian.

bonus, a, um, adj., good; propitiou.

Booēs, ae, m., a northern constellation situated behind the Great Bear.

Boreās, ae, m., the north wind.

bōs, bovis, m., f., a bull, bullock, cow; in pl., oxen, cattle.

bracchium, iī, [brakhiōn], n., the lower arm, the forearm, the arm.

brevis, e, adj., short, brief, fleeting.

brūmālis, e, [brūma, winter], adj., wintry, winter’s.

būbō, ōnis, m., an owl.

būcina, ae, f., a trumpet, horn.

Būsiris, iīs, acc. Būsirin, m., a savage king of Egypt who was slain by Hercules.

būstum, i, [būrō = ūrō; compare combūrō], n., a burning and burying place; a mound, tomb.

buxum, i, [buxus, the box tree], n., the wood of the box tree, boxwood.

C

cacimen, iīs, n., the summit, top, peak.

Cadmēs, iīs, f., adj., of Cadmus, Cadmean; Theban.

Cadmus, iīs, m., son of the Phoenician king Agenor, and founder of Boeotian Thebes.

cadō, ere, cecidīs, cāsus, to fall, drop; fall in battle, perish, die a
VOCABULARY

Went death; sink down, subside; fail, drop; befall, happen.

Odicifer, i., [căducēus, herald's staff + fertō], adj., m., bearing a herald's staff, an epitaph of Mercury.
căducēs, a, um, [cădō], adj., fallen, failing, destined to fail.
cădeus, a, um, adj., blind; vague, confused, obscure, indiscriminate; hidden, secret, private, dark, obscure, gloomy; uncertain, doubtful.
cădeĉ, is, [cădō], f., a cutting down, slaughter, murder.
cădō, ēre, ēfī, ātus, [calx, the heel], to tread, tread upon, trample.
căculus, i., [dim. calx, limestone], m., a small stone, pebble.
căleō, ēre, ēl, —, to glow with heat.
călīdus, a, um, [călēō], adj., warm, hot.
cāligō, ēs, f., a mist, fog, vapor, darkness, obscurity.
callidus, a, um, [căleō, to be experienced], adj., expert, adroit, skillful; crafty, artful.
calor, ēris, [căleō], m., warmth.
Calydōn, ōnis, [Kāλyōn], f., an ancient town of Aetolus, the seat of Oeneus, father of Detanira.
Calydōnius, a, um, adj., Calydonian.
Calympē, ēs, [Kālympe], an island in the Aegean sea, not far from Rhodes, distinguished for its honey.
camellē, ae, [dim. camera, a vault], f., a cup, goblet.
caminus, i., [kāminos], m., a furnace, forge.
campus, i., m., a plain field, open country, the level surface of the sea.
Cancer, cāris, m., the constellation Cancer, the Crab.
candēo, ēre, ēl, —, to be white, shine, glisten; glow with heat.
candēscē, erē, —, [inch. candēō], to become bright; to begin to glow with heat, to become hot.
candidus, a, um, [candēō], adj., lustrous, brilliant, white, fair, beautiful.
candor, ēris, [candēō], a dazzling whiteness.
cānēō, ēre, ēl, —, [cānus], to be white, gray, or hoary.
cānēscō, erē, —, [inch. candēō], to become hoary, whitish.
VOCABULARY

carbas, őrum, n. pl., fine foz; sail cloth; a sail.
carcer, eria, m., a prison; the barrier or starting place in the race course.
carchæstum, ii, [carkæstær], n., a Greek drinking cup, slightly contracted in the middle, with slender handles reaching from the rim to the bottom.
cardō, inst, m., the pivot and socket on which ancient doors hung, a hinge.
careō, ēre, ui, itūrus, to be without, be wanting in, free from, be deprived of, lack, miss.
carica, ae, [Cārīa], f. adj., of Caria, a province in Asia Minor; sub. (understand ficus), a Carian fig, a dried fig.
carina, ae, f., the keel of a ship; (meton.) a ship, a vessel.
carmen, inis, [for casmen from root in canō], n., a song, chant, note, strain; a charmed song, an incantation; a verse, a poetic composition.
carō, carnis, f., flesh.
carpō, ero, ei, tus, to pluck, tear off, pull away, pluck out, pull out, crop; take, catch, snatch; criticize harshly, carp at; w. viam, take one’s way, pursue one’s road.
cárurus, a, um, adj., dear; loving, affectionate, fond.
case, ae, f., a hut, cottage.
cæsus, I, m., cheese.
cassiolē, ăs, [kasolē], f., the wife of Cepheus, mother of Andromeda.
cassis, is, m., a hunting net, snare, toil.
cassia, idis, f., a metal helmet.
castalus, a, um, adj., Castalian, from the famous fountain on Mt. Parnassus, sacred to Apollo and the Muses.
castanea, ae, f., the chestnut.
castra, őrum, n. pl., a fortified camp, an encampment.
castus, a, um, adj., chaste, pure, spotless, virtuous, upright, pious, holy.
Cæsus, θς, [cadō], m., a falling, a fall; that which befalls or happens, an event, misfortune, calamity, danger, adventure, peril; chance; cæsū, by chance.

catēna, ae, f., a chain, fetter.

Catullus, I., m., a Roman poet, born at Verona in 86 B.C.

Catulus, I., [dim. catus, cat], m., a young dog; also the cub or whelp of other animals.

Caucasus, I., m., a chain of mountains in Asia, between the Black and Caspian seas, Caucanus.

cauda, ae, the tail of an animal.

cause, ae, f., a cause, reason, influence; occasion, pretext; legal, a cause, a case, suit.

cautēs, is, f., a rough, pointed rock, a crag.

cautus, a, um, [part. caveō], adj., careful, cautious, provident.

caveō, ōre, ēvi, cautus, to take care, beware, guard against, avoid; to provide, decree, stipulate.

caverna, ae, [cavus], f., a hollow, cavity, cavern, cave.

cavus, a, um, adj., hollow, cavernous.

Cæystros or us, I., [Kástoros], m., a river in Lydia, which rises in Mt. Tmolus; it is celebrated for its swans.

Cācrophīs, ae, [Cācropōs], m., a descendant of Cēcrops, an ancient king of Attica, the founder of the citadel of Athens; in pl., the Athenians.

Cācrophīs, idis, f. adj., of Cēcrops.

Cēcrops, I., Kēcrops, m., a river in Phocis and Boeotia.

cēra, ae, f., wax.

Cērēta, a, um, [cēra], adj., covered with wax, wazed, set in wax.

Cērurnia, grūm, [Kpnonios], n. pl., a ridge of mountains along the coast of Epirus.

Cērberus, I., [Kpberos], m., the three-headed dog of Pluto that guarded the entrance of Hades.

Cērēs, ēris, f., the goddess of agriculture.

cernē, ere, crēvi, crētus (cērus), to perceive, see, discern, behold; perceive with the mind, understand.

Cērēs, idis, f. adj., of or belonging to Ceres.

Ceres, ēris, f., the goddess of agriculture.

cērē, ere, crēvi, crētus (cērus), to perceive, see, discern, behold; perceive with the mind, understand.

certēmen, inis, [certē], n., contest, struggle, race, game, strife; strife, rivalry, contention, emulation.

certē, [certus], adv., certainly, surely, truly; at least, yet surely.
certō, are, āvi, ātus, [certus], to contend, strive, vie with.
certus, a, um, [part. cerno], adj., determined, resolved, bent on; certain, fixed, regular, permanent; certain, inevitable, sure; straight, direct, unerring; undoubted, genuine; alquem facere certum, to inform any one.
cerva, ae, [cervus], f., a hind, doe.
cervix, icis, f., the neck.
cervus, I, m., a stag, a deer.
cessō, āre, āvi, ātus, [freq. cūdō],
to stop, cease, leave off, pause, falter;
delay; be idle, inactive.
cēterus, a, um, adj., the rest of, the remaining, other.
ceu, adv., as, just as, as if.
chasos (nom. and acc.), abl. chaōs, [xōos], n., boundless, empty space;
the confused, primitive mass out of which the universe was made.
Charops, opis, m., a Lycian ally of the Trojans against the Greeks.
Charybdis, is, [Xáρυβδις], f., a whirlpool between Italy and Sicily.
chelēdrus, i, [χέλεδρος], m., a fetid water snake.
Chersidamēs, antis, m., a Lycian
ally of the Trojans.
Chirōn, ōnēs, [Χιρόν], m., one of the Centaurs.
chorda, ae, [χορδή], f., a string of a musical instrument.
Chromius, I, m., a Lycian ally of the Trojans.
Chryēsē, ēs, [Χρυῆσα], f., a town on the coast of Troas, sacred to Apollo.
chrysoolithos, i, [Χρυσόλιθος], m., chrysolite, topaz.
cibus, I, m., food, nourishment.
Cibyrēius, a, um, adj., of Cibyra, a town in Magna Phrygia.
Clionēs, um, m., a Thracian people nearest the Hebrus.
clēs, ēre, civēs, citius, to move, stir,
shake, stir up; call upon for help, invoke.
Clīx, icis, adj., Cilician, of Cilicia, a province in the southern part of Asia Minor.
Cilla, ae, f., a town in Troas, distinguished for the worship of Apollō.
cingō, ere, cīnxi, cinctus, to surround, gird, encircle, invest.
cinis, eris, m., ashes.
Cinyphius, a, um, adj., pertaining to or found in or near the Cinyps, a river in Libya.
circa, prep. w. acc., and adv., around,
about, near.
Circē, ēs or ae, [Κιρκή], f., a famous sorceress, daughter of the Sun, living on an island off the western coast of Italy.
circuēs, ire, ivī, (ii), ĭtus, [circum
+ ēs], to go around, encircle, encompass.
circuitus, ūs, [circuēs], m., a going around, a circuit.
circum, prep. w. acc., and adv.,
about, around, near.
circum-dō, dare, dedī, datūs, to put or place around; surround, encircle.
circum-fērō, ferre, tuli, ĭtus, to bear, turn or carry around.
circum-flūs, ere, fluxī, —, to flow around.
circumfusus, a, um, [circumfusus],
adj., flowing around, circumfuent.
circum-fundō, ere, fūdī, fūsus,
to pour around; in pass. w. reflex.
force, surround, encompass.
circummitus, a, um, [part. circum-mitō, to smear over], spread over, besmeared, bathed in.
circum-sonō, are, —, —, to sound
or resound on every side.
circumspiciō, ere, specī, spectus, [circum + speciō, to look], to look about upon, survey, examine.
circum-stō, stāre, stetī, —, trans.
and intrans., to surround, to stand around, encompass.
Cithaerōn, ōnēs, [Κιθαέρων], m., a mountain in Boeotia, sacred to Bacchus.
cithara, ae, [κιθάρα], f., a lute, harp,
tyre.
cito (comp. citius, sup. citsimē),
citēs, adv., quickly, soon, too soon.
cīrā, [citer from cis], adv., on this side, this way.
cītus, a, um, [part. cītō], adj., quick, swift.
cīvīscus, a, um, [cīvis], adj., civil, civic.
cīvīla, e, [cīvis], adj., belonging to a citizen, civic.
cīvīlītēr, [cīvilīs], adv., as becomes a private citizen; plus quam cīvīlis, excessively.
cīvis, is, m., f., a citizen, fellow citizen, fellow countryman or countrywoman.
clādēs, is, f., slaughter, havoc, disaster.
clām, adv., secretly, unawares.
clāmō, āre, āvi, ātus, to call aloud to, call by name, call upon.
clāmor, āris, [clāmō], m., a loud cry, shout, wailing, shriek, yell, applause, noise, din, roar.
Clārius, a, um, [Clarois], adj., Clarian, an epithet of Apollo.
Clarois, i, [Klārois], f., Clarois, a town in Ionia containing a temple and oracle of Apollo.
clārus, a, um, adj., clear, bright; clear, loud; illustrious, renowned, famous.
clāsia, is, f., a fleet.
Claudia, ae, f., the daughter of P. Claudius Pulcher, Cos. B.C. 249.
claudō, ere, si, sus, to close, shut, shut up; shut in, inclose, hide.
clāve, ae, f., a club.
clāvis, is, f., a key.
clāvus, i, m., a nail or anything nail-shaped; a purple stripe on the tunic, broad (latus) for senators, narrow for knights.
clāmentia, ae, [clāmēns, mild], f., mildness, clemency, mercy.
clipeātus, a, um, [clipeus], adj., armed with a shield.
clipeus, i, m., a large, round shield.
clivus, i, m., a descent, slope.
clitus, i, [clitō = claudō], m., a cognomen of Janus, whose temple was closed in peace.
Clymenē, sē, [Klāmēnē], f., the wife of Merops, king of Ethiopia, and mother of Phaethon.
Clymenēs, a, um, adj., of or belonging to Clymenē.
coāgulām, i, [coāgō], n., that which causes to conglutinate, rennet; that which is curdled; pl., curds.
coarguō, ere, ul, —, [com- + arguō], to expose, convict, prove guilty; to betray.
coctilīs, e, [coquō], adj., burned; mūrī coxtiūs, walls of burned brick.
coēō, īre, īvi (ī), ītus, [com- + eō], to go or come together.
coepī, isse, coequēs, to begin, commence.
coequētum, i, [coeqētum], n., a work begun, undertaking, enterprise, design.
Coeranus, i, m., a Lycian ally of the Trojans.
coērceō, īre, ul, ītus, [com- + arceō], to inclose, confine, restrain.
coeetus, is, [coēsō], m., a coming together; (meton.) an assemblage, company.
Coeus, i (dissyll.), m., a Titan, the father of Latona.
cōgnātus, a, um, [com- + (g)nācor], adj., related by blood; kindred.
cōgnōmen, inis, [com- + (g)nōmen], n., a surname, added name; poet. for nomen, a name.
cōgnōscō, ere, gnōvi, gnitus, [com- + (g)nōscō], to become acquainted with, ascertain, hear of; notice, observe; recognize; in perf. tenses, know.
cōgō, ere, coēgī, coēctus, [com- + agō], to drive or bring together, collect, assemble; compress, condense, narrow, contract; thicken, curdle; bring up the rear of an army; drive, force, compel.
Colchis, idis, f. adj., Colchian, of Colchis, a province in Asia, east of the Black Sea.
Colchus, a, um, adj., Colchian; subs., a Colchian.
collis, is, m., a hill, high ground.
collum, I, n., the neck.
colō, ere, ul, cultus, to cultivate, till a country, inhabit; nourish, cherish, foster, be fond of; honor, revere, worship; court, cultivate the acquaintance or friendship of; of the gods, with reference to places where they were worshiped, to frequent, cherish, care for, protect.
colōnus, I, [colō], m., a husbandman; a countryman.
color, òris, m., color, hue, tint; external appearance.
colubra, ae, [coluber, a serpent], f., a female serpent, a serpent, snake.
columba, ae, f., a dove.
columna, ae, f., a column.
colus, i, m., a distaff.
com-, old form of cum, prep., found only in composition.
coma, ae, f., the hair; leaves, foliage.
com-bibō, ere, I, —, to drink up, imbibe; to absorb, take up.
comes, itis, [com- + eō], m., f., a companion, associate, comrade, partner; an overseer, guide, tutor, teacher.
comitātus, ūs, [comitor], m., a retinue, a train, a following.
comitātus, āre, āvi, ātus, or comitor, ārī, ātus, [comes], to accompany, attend, follow.
com-memorātus, āre, āvi, ātus, to call to mind, remember; recount.
commendātus, āre, āvi, ātus, [com- + mandō], to commit, commend, intrust to.
commentum, I, [commminiscor, to contrive], n., an invention, falsehood.
communis, [com- + manus], adv., hand to hand, at close quarters.
committō, ere, misi, missus, to bring together, unite, join; be guilty of, do, commit, perpetrate; deliver, commit, intrust.
commodum, I, [commōdus = com- + modus], n., convenience, advantage, profit, gain.
commūnis, is, [commūnis], n., that which is common; a community, state.
commūnicātus, āre, āvi, ātus, [commūnis], to divide with, share.
commūnis, e, [com- + root mu-, to bind], adj., common, shared by all.
commūniter, [commūnis], adv., together, in common, jointly.
compārō, āre, āvi, ātus, to arrange, dress, comb.
compārētus, a., um, [part. com- pingō, to join together], adj., joined together, compactly made.
compāgēs, is, [com- + root pag-in pango, to fasten], f., a joint, seam, fastening.
compāgō, inis, [rare for compāgēs], f., a joining, joint, fastening.
compārētus, a., um, [compārētus, a], to join together, match, compare.
compellō, ere, pulī, pulsus, to drive together; drive, force.
com-perī, īre, ītus, [com- + root par-in pāriō], to find out, ascertain, learn.
compāsō, ere, ul, —, [compēs, a fetter], to confine, repress, curb; to quench, appease, slake.
compitum, I, [competō, to coincide with], n., a place where roads cross; pl., a crossway, crossroads.
com-plector, I, plexus, to encircle, enfold, embrace, seize upon.
com-pleō, āre, āvi, ātus, to fill, fill up, throng; complete.
complexus, ūs, [complexor], m., an embrace.
com-plōrō, āre, āvi, ātus, to bewail, lament.
com-pōnō, ere, posui, positus, to put together, construct, build; put to rest, set at rest; lay to rest, inter, bury; arrange, compose, settle one's self, quiet, calm; put side by side, compare.
com-prehendō (prēndō), ere, I, hēnusus, to seize, grasp; recount, enumerate, describe.
comprimō, ere, presār, pressus.
[com- + premē], to check, quell, repress, restrain, stay.

çonmen, inis, [çonnor], n., an effort, struggle; a prop, support.

concavō, ēre, —, ātus, [conca-vus], to make hollow, curve.

concavus, a, um, [com- + cavaus], adj., hollow, vaulted, arched, curved.

concēōdē, ēre, cesel, cessus, [com- + cēdō], depart, go away, withdraw, retire; grant, permit, allow.

concha, ae, [kóxy], f., a shell-fish; a shell, snail shell; anything shaped like a shell, a Triton's trumpet.

concilium, ii, [com- + root cal, to call], n., a gathering, assembly; a council; union, bond of union, tie.

concīō, ēre, ui, —, [com- + canō], to sing harmoniously, sing.

concīo or concīōdē, ēre, vi, citus, [com- + cleō], to bring together; move violently, shake, stir up; rouse, excite, inspire, move.

concipō, ēre, cēpl, cepus, [com- + capēō], to take up, take in; take, receive; conceive, become possessed by; conceive, imagine, grasp in imagination; take to, have recourse to.

concitō, ēre, vi, ātus, [freq. con-citō], to rouse, excite, urge, drive.

concilēmō, ēre, vi, ātus, [com- + calēmō], to cry or shout out; shout or name aloud, exclaim.

concolor, ēris, [com- + color], adj., of the same color.

concordia, ae, [concors, of the same mind], f., harmony, union, accord.

concordō, ēre, vi, ātus, [concors, of the same mind], to agree, harmonize; be in harmony.

concrēscō, ēre, crevī, crētus, [com- + crēscō], to grow together, take on form by hardening, to harden, stiffen; grow, increase.

concurrō, ēre, currī (cucurrī), cursus, [com- + currō], to run or rush together; encounter, fight.

concussus, us, [concubīō], m., a shaking, concussion, shock.

concutīō, ēre, cussēl, cussus, [com+ quātiō], to shake; smile, shatter; agitate, alarm, arouse, excite.

condiciō, ōnis, [condicio, to agree], t., an agreement, condition, compact; situation, nature, condition, state.

condō, ēre, didī, ditus, [com- + dō], to found, establish, build; store up, put away; preserve, pickle; hide, conceal; lay to rest, bury, consign to the tomb; shut, close; w. ferrum, strike deep, plunge, bury.

conducō, ēre, dúxi, ductus, [com- + dūcō], to draw together, assemble, collect.

conferō, ferre, contuli, conlātus, [com- + ferō], to bring together, collect; to bring together in comparison, match, compare.

confidō, ēre, fisus, [com- + fidō], believe, hope, put confidence in, have faith in.

confinis, e, [com- + finis], adj., bordering, adjoining, contiguous.

confiteor, ērī, ressus, [com- + fateor], to confess, acknowledge.

confremō, ēre, ui, —, [com- + fremō], to resound, murmur loudly.

confugiō, ēre, fugēi, —, [com- + fugēō], to flee to for help, have recourse to.

confundō, ēre, fundī, fūsus, [com-+ fundēō], to pour together, mingle; confuse, heap up together; confuse, perplex.

congelō, ēre, vi, ātus, [com- + gelō, to freeze], to freeze together, congeal, stiffen.

congeriēmus, ēs, [congerō], t., a heap, mass, pile.

congerō, ēre, gesśi, gestus, [com+ gerō], to pile together, heap up.

congregior, gredi, gressus, [com-
+ gradior], to encounter in fight, meet in battle, attack.

coniciō, ēre, iēcī, ictus, [com-
+ iacīō], to throw together; hurl, cast, throw, thrust.
CONJUGIUM, ill., [coniungō], n., a union; marriage, wedlock.

CONIUNGÉ, ere, fānxi, fāntces, [com-+ lunge], to join, join together, unite.

CONİÜNX, ugis, [coniungō], m., f., a husband, wife.

CONIŪRŌ, āre, āvi, ātus, [com-+ lūrō], to swear together, form a conspiracy, plot, conspire.

CONIĀBOR, ī, lāpsus, [com-+ lābor, to slip], to fall or sink together; faint.

CONIĪGŌ, ere, lēgī, lēctus, [com-+ legō], to bring together, collect, assemble; to infer.

CONLOCŌ, āre, āvi, ātus, [com-+ locō, to place], to arrange, put in place, put, set.

CŌNOR, āri, ātus, to try, endeavor, attempt.

CONQUEROR, ī, questus [com-+ queror, to express grief], to complain, bewail, lament.

CŌNSCENDŌ, ere, ī, scēnsus, [com-+ scandō, to rise], to mount, climb, ascend, embark upon.

CONSECLERŌ, āre, āvi, ātus, [com-+ scelerō, to pollute], to stain with guilt, pollute.

CŌNSCIES, a, um, [com-+ scīō], adj., knowing or conscious of something in common with another, privy to; knowing something within one’s self, conscious.

Cōnsēnēscō, ere, senul, —, [com-+ senēscō, to grow old], to grow old together.

CōnsentīRE, īRE, sēnsī, sēnsus, [com-+ sentīō], to agree, consent, take part.

CŌNSECUOR, ī, secūsas, [com-+ sequor], to follow, follow close, pursue.

CŌNΣERŌ, ere, ui, tus, [com-+ serō, to bind together], to tie together, fasten; join, make as one.

CŌNΣERŌ, ere, sēvī, situs or satus, [com-+ serō], to sow, plant, set out.

Cōnsēssus, īs, [cōnsīdō], m., a sit-cōnsurgō, ere, surrēxi, surrēctus, [com- + surgō], poet., rise, rise up from.
contāctus, ūs, [contingō], m., touch, contact.
(contāgium, uī), [contingō], n., only in pl., contagion, infection.
contēgō, ere, tēxi, tēctus, [com- + tegō], to cover up, bury, hide, conceal.
contemnō, ere, tempel, temptus, [com- + temnō], to despise, defy.
contemptor, ūris, [contemnō], m., a scorrer, contemner, despiser.
contemptrix, icis, [contemnō], f., a scorrer, contemner, despiser.
contendō, ere, i, tentus, [com- + tendō], trans., to stretch, strive, fight, contend.
contentus, a, um, [part. contendō], adj., stretched tight, tense.
contentus, a, um, [part. contendō], adj., held together; hence, satisfied, content.
contermīnus, a, um, [com- + terminus, boundary], adj., bordering upon, neighboring, adjacent.
conterreō, ēre, ui, itus, [com- + terreō], to terrify greatly, frighten.
conticēscō, ere, ticul, —, [com- + inch. taceō], to become silent, be hushed to rest, cease speaking.
contiguus, a, um, [contingō], adj., bordering, neighboring, ad-joining.
contineō, ēre, ui, tentus, [com- + teneō], to hold together; restrain, check, stop.
contingō, ere, tīgi, tāctus, [com- + tangō], to touch, take hold of; reach, touch, concern; attain, obtain, seize upon, take possession of; reach, arrive at, come to; impers., befall, happen, be one’s lot.
continuō, ēre, āvi, ātus, [continuus, joining], to join, make continuous; extend, prolong.
contorqueō, ēre, torsī, tortus, [com- + torqueō], to turn or twist violently or with great effort; hurl, throw, discharge.
contrā, adv., in turn, in reply; opposite, in front; against, in opposition.
contrā, prep. w. acc., opposite; against.
contrahō, ere, trāxi, trāctus, [com- + trahō], to draw together, bring into harmony; draw in, contract, narrow, abridge.
contrārius, a, um, [contrā], adj., lying over against; opposite, opposing; opposed, hostile.
contribuō, ere, I, ūtus, [com- + tribuō], to unite; contribute, add.
conūbium, uī, [com- + nubō, to veil one’s self], n., marriage, wedlock; often used in the pl.
contumulō, ēre, āvi, ūtus, [com- + tumulō], to cover with a mound, bury.
cōnus, I, [kῶν], m., a cone; the apex of a helmet.
convalescō, ere, lūi, [com- + inch. valeō], to recover, regain health, grow strong.
convellō, ere, vellī, vulsus, [com- + vellō], to tear away, tear up, pull up, wrench off, pluck off or up.
convenīō, ēre, vēnī, ventus, [com- + venīō], to come together, assemble; fit, be fit, be adapted to, be appropriate for, be suitable, agree.
convirtō, ere, I, versus, [com- + vertō], to turn, turn around, turn, direct, attract attention of; turn, change, alter.
convexus, a, um, [convehō, to carry together], adj., convex, concave, vaulted, arched, rounded.
conviciūm, uī, [com- + root of vox], n., a loud noise, outcry; wrangling, altercation; reproach, abuse, insult; conviciā nemorum, common scolds of the woods.
convictus, ūs, [convivō, to live together], m., a living together, social intercourse, society.
convincō, ere, vicī, victus, [com- + vincō], to overcome, conquer.
conviva, ae, [convivō, to live together], m. and f., a table companion; guest.
VOCAULABY

convivium, i, [convívō, to live together], n., a living together; a feast, banquet.
convocō, āre, āvi, ātus, [com- + vocō], to call together, convolve, assemble.
cōpia, ae, [com- + ops, aid, help], f., abundance, plenty; opportunity, chance; chance at, access to, power over.
cōpula, ae, [com- + root ap, to fasten], f., a band, rope, thong; leash.
cōquō, ere, coxi, coctus, to cook; burn, parch, dry up.
cor, cordis, n., the heart, as a physical organ; the heart, as the seat of emotions.
Corinna, ae, f., a feigned name of the object of Ovid's affections.
Corinthus, i, f., Corinth, a city of Greece.
corneus, a, um, [cornū], adj., made of horn.
corniger, eras, erum, [cornū + gerō], adj., having horns, horned.
cornix, icis, f., a crow.
cornū, ās, n., a horn of animals; the horns or points of the moon; the horn, point, or end, as of a bow; a horn-shaped projection of land, a cape; a horn, trumpet.
cornum, i, [cornus, a cornel-cherry tree], n., the cornel-cherry.
corōna, ae, [kōrōnā], f., a crown, garland, or wreath of flowers or leaves; a circle, assembly, crowd, ring.
Corōnis, Idis, [Kōrōnis], f., daughter of the Thessalian Phlegyas, and mother of Aesculapius by Apollo.
corōnō, āre, āvi, ātus, [corōna], to crown, wreath, encircle.
corpus, oris, n., the body of men or animals; body, limbs, members; the body, main body, center, source; pl., substances, elements.
corrīgō, ere, rēxi, rēctus, [com- + regō], to set right, improve, amend, correct, revise, change.
corripō, ere, ui, reptus, [com- + rapīō], to seize eagerly, snatch, snatch up, away, seize upon, catch; catch the attention of, fascinate; attack, seize, sweep away, carry away.
cortex, icis, m., the bark of a tree.
Corcyrdēs, um, [Kṓrkyrdēs], f. adj., a name applied to the nymphs who were supposed to inhabit the Corycian cave on Mount Parnassus. They were the daughters of the river god Plētus.
coruscus, a, um, adj., wavy; flashing, gleaming, glittering.
costa, ae, f., a rib or side of an animal.
cothurnātus, a, um, [cothurnus], adj., shod with the cothurnus, busked, tragic.
cothurnus, i, [kṓthornus], m., a buskin, a high shoe worn by tragic actors.
coturnix, icis, f., a quail.
crās, adv., to-morrow; in the future, hereafter.
crassus, a, um, adj., thick, clotted; turbid, swollen.
crātēr, ēris, m., and crātēra, ae, [kṓrēs], f., a mixer, a bowl in which wine was mingled with water.
crēber, crēbrā, crēbrum, adj., frequent, incessant, repeated, numerous, constant; abounding in, teeming with, thick set with.
crēdidīlis, e, [crēdō], adj., to believe, worthy of belief, credible.
crēdō, ere, dīdī, ditus, to commit or intrust anything to any one; believe, trust, put faith or confidence in, give credence to; in general, suppose, think, believe.
crēdulus, a, um, [crēdō], adj., believing, trusting; credulous, easy of belief, simple.
crēmō, ere, ēvi, ētus, to consume with fire, burn.
crēō, āre, ēvi, ētus, to bring forth, produce, create, beget; creōtus, the son of.
VOCABULARY 439

crepíō, āre (āvī, ātus), [freq. crepō, to rattle], to rustle, crackle, rattle, resound.

crepusculum, I, [creper, gloomy], n., twilight, dusk.

crēscō, ere, crēvi, crētus, to come into existence, spring from, be born; to rise, grow, increase, swell, enlarge.

Crētus, a, um, adj., belonging to Crete, Cretan.

Crēsea, ae, f., a Cretan woman.

Crētē, ēs, [Kērīs], f., Crete, an island in the Mediterranean.

Crētæus, a, um, [Crētē], adj., Cretan.

crimen, inis, [cernō], n., a charge, accusation; crime, guilt, sin, offense, blame.

crinālis, e, [crinis], adj., of the hair.

crinis, is, m., the hair, locks; the tail or tail of a comet or shooting star.

crista, ae, f., a crest or plume.

crocus, a, um, [crocus], adj., suffron colored, yellow, golden.

crocus, i, [crospōs], m., the crocus, suffron.

cruciātus, us, [crucīō, to torture], m., torture, torment, suffering.

crūdēlis, e, [crūdus], adj., cruel, pitiless, merciless, fierce, harsh, hard hearted.

crūdus, a, um, adj., bloody; cruel, merciless.

crūentō, āre, āvi, ātus, [cruentus], to make bloody, stain with blood.

crūentus, a, um, [crurō], adj., bloody, blood stained; bloodthirsty, cruel, murderous.

cruor, ōris, m., blood that is shed, gore.

crus, ēris, n., the leg, Shank.

cubitō, āre, āvi, — [freq. cubō], to be accustomed to lie, lie.

cubō, āre, ītus, to lie down, recline; lie at rest, rest.

culmen, inis, [for columnem, from *cellō, to rise], n., the top or summit of anything; the roof of a building; a height, pinnacle, acme.

culpa, ae, f., guilt, fault, offense, weakness.

culter, trī, m., a knife of any kind.

cultor, ōris, [colō], m., a tiller, husbandman; tending, worshiper.

cultus, us, [colō], m., a tilling, cultivation; mode of life, culture, civilization, signs of civilization; mode of dress, attire.

cultus, a, um, [part. colō], adj., cultivated, tilled; polished, elegant, cultivated.

cum, prep. w. abl., with, in every sense.

cum, conj. adv., when, since, although; cum ... tum, both ... and, not only ... but also.

cumba, ae, [cūmbō], f., a hoot, shriek.

cumulō, āre, āvi, ātus, [cumulus], to heap up, pile.

cumulus, i, m., a mass, heap, pile.

cūnae, ārum, f. pl., a cradle.

cunctor, āri, ātus, to delay, hesitate, linger, wait, be reluctant.

cūnctus, a, um, [contracted from cūnctus], adj., all together, in a body, the whole, all, entire.

cuneātus, a, um, [cuneus, wedge], adj., wedge shaped.

Cupidineus, a, um, [Cupidō], adj., of Cupid.

cupidō, inis, [cupīō], f., a desire, longing, eagerness, passion, greed, lust, avarice, the passion of love.

Cupidō, inis, [person. cupidō], m., Cupid, son of Venus, god of love.

cupidus, a, um, [cupīō], adj., eager, desirous, loving, fond, passionate.

cupīō, ere, īvi, (ī), ītus, to desire, wish, long, long for.

cupressus, i, [cuprisōs], f., the cypress.

cūr, adv., why? wherefore? for what reason?

cūra, ae, f., care, solicitude, concern, regard; care, grief, sorrow, anxiety; care, pain, pangs of love; care, business, duty, office; the object of care, the beloved one.

cūralium, ilium, [kourāllion], n., corul.
cūria, ae, f., a court, curia; the senate house; the senate.
cūrō, āre, āri, ātus, [cūrō], to care, care for, regard, heed, pay attention to.
currō, ēre, ēcurrī, currus, to run, move swiftly, of any object; of rivers, to flow; hasten, scud along, sail, glide.
currus, ūs, [currō], m., a chariot, car.
cursus, ūs, [currō], m., a running, race, chase, flight, course; a course, voyage, journey, road, route.
curvāmen, inis, [curvō], n., a bending, bend, curve.
curvātūra, ae, [curvō], f., a bend; w. rotae, the rim.
curvō, āre, āvi, ātus, [curvus], to curve, bend.
curvus, a, um, adj., curved, curving, bending.
cusps, idis, f., the pointed end of anything; a spear point, or by meton., the spear itself; the spear or trident of Neptune.
custōdia, ae, [custōs], f., the act of guarding; one who watches, a guard, custodian.
custōdiō, īre, īvi, ītus, [custōs], to watch, keep, protect, guard.
custōs, ōdis, m., f., a guard, watch, keeper, protector.
cutis, is, f., the skin.
Cyōnē, ēs, [Κυόνη], f., a fountain near Syracuse; the nymph who was changed into this fountain.
Cyclades, um, [Κυκλάδες], f. pl., a cluster of islands in the Aegean sea, the Cyclades.
Cyklōps, opis, [Κυκλώψ, round eye], m., a Cyclops, one of a savage race of giants, living in Sicily near Mt. Aetna; they had but one eye, lying in the center of the forehead.
cyrnus, I, [κύρνος], m., a vran.
Cyōdōnus, a, um, adj., Cydonian, of Cydonia, an ancient town in Crete, Cretan; w. māla (apples), or subs., n. pl., cydōnia, ērum, quinces.

Cyllēnē, ēs and ae, [Κυλλήνη], f., a mountain in Arcadia, the birthplace of Mercury.
Cyllēnius, a, um, of Cyllene; Cyllonian.
Cynthia, ae, [Cynthus], f., the Cynthian goddess, Diana.
Cynthus, I, [Κῦνθος], m., a mountain of Delos, the birthplace of Apollo and Diana.
Cythēra, Órum, [Κυθήρα], n. pl., an island in the Aegean, northwest of Crete; near this island Venus is said to have risen from the foam of the sea.
Cytherēa, ae, [Cythēra], f., Venus.
Cythēriacus, a, um, [Cythēra], of Cythera, sacred to Venus.
 cytisus, I, [κυτίσος], m., f., the shrub by lucerne, trefoil, clover.

D
Daedalus, I, m., the mythical Athenian architect, father of Icarus, and builder of the Cretan Labyrinth.
Damasichthōn, ōnis, [Δαμασίκθων, earth subduer], m., a son of Amphion and Niobe, slain by Apollo.
damma, ae, m., f., a fallow deer, doe.
damno, āre, āvi, ātus, [damnum], to condemn, sentence; devote, consign; blame, disapprove, reject.
damnōsus, a, um, [damnum], adj., injurious, destructive, pernicious.
damnum, I, n., harm, damage, loss, injury, misfortune, ruin.
Danaē, ēs, [Δαναή], f., daughter of Acrisius, and mother of Perseus by Jupiter.
Danaïs, a, um, [Danaē], adj., pertaining to, descended from Danaê; hērōs, i.e. Perseus.
Danaus, a, um, adj., pertaining to Danaus, an ancient king of Argos; (meton.) Grecian; subs., Danai, Órum, m. pl., the Greeks.
daphnē, ēs, f., the laurel tree, bay tree; hence Daphnē, ēs, f., the daughter of the river god Peneus, who was changed into a laurel tree.
VOCABULARY

441

dapes, dapis, f., used regularly in the pl., a sacrificial feast; a feast, a banquet; food, viands.
Dardanianus, a, um, [Dardanianus], adj., Dardanian; poet, Trojan.
Dardanus, I, [Δάρδανος], m., Dardanianus, one of the founders of the royal house of Troy.
dē, prep. w. abl., of source, place whence, of, from out of, down from; with expressions of material, of, out of; in derived sense, in regard to, concerning, about.
dea, ae, f., a goddess.
dēbeō, ēre, uī, ētus, [for dēhībeō, from dē + habēō, to keep back], to owe (in pass.), be due, destined.
dēbilis, e, [dē + habīlis, manageable], adj., unmanageable; weak, maimed, crippled.
dēbilitō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [dēbilis], to cripple, hurt, weaken.
dēcercō, ere, si, ētus, [dē + carpō], to pluck off or away.
dē-certō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [dē + certō], to fight, contend, strive.
decet, ēre, ult, —, to be fitting, proper, suitable, becoming.
dēcidō, ere, cidī, —, [dē + cadō], to fall, fall down.
decisō, [decem, ten], num. adv., ten times.
decimus, a, um, [decem, ten], adj., tenth.
dēcipiō, ere, cēpi, ceptus, [dē + capiō], to deceive, beguile, catch.
dē-clinō, āre, āvi, ētus, to turn aside or away; close, shut, lower.
dēclīvis, e, [dē + clīvis], adj., inclining downwards, sloping; as subs., n., a slope.
decor, ōris, [decaus], m., that which is seemly; grace, beauty.
decorō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [decaus], to decorate, adorn.
decorōs, a, um, [decaus], adj., becoming, fitting, seemly; comely, beautiful.
dē-crēscō, ere, crēvi, crēstus, to grow less, decrease, diminish, disappear.
dēcrēstum, I, [dēcrēsum, to decide], n., a decree, ordinance, decision.
dē-currō, ere, currī, or currī, cursus, to run down; have recourse to.
decus, oris, [from root dec, in decet], n., an ornament, adornment; grace, beauty; glory, dignity, honor.
dē-decet, ēre, ult, —, to be unseemly; to disgrace.
dē-decus, oris, n., disgrace, dishonor, shame; cause of shame, blemish.
dē-dūcō, ere, duīxī, ductus, to lead, bring, draw down or away; turn aside.
dē-fendō, ere, I, fēnsus, to defend, guard, protect.
dē-fēnsor, ōris, [dēfendō], m., one who defends, a protector, defense.
dē-ferō, ferre, tuli, lātus, to take, bear, bring, carry from one place to another.
dēfessus, a, um, [part. dēfetiscor, to become weary], adj., wearied, weary, fatigued.
dē-ficiō, ere, fēci, factus, [dē + faciō], to fail, desert, be wanting; faint, sink down.
dē-flō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, to weep over, lament.
dē-fluiō, ere, fluxi, fluxus, to flow, glide, slip, fall down.
dē-formis, e, [dē + formēs], adj., misshapen, shapeless, ugly, unsightly.
dē-frēnātus, a, um, [dē + part. frēnō, to bridle], adj., unrestrained.
dē-fungor, i, fūnxī, to have done with, get through with, discharge, finish.
dē-grandinat, impers., it stops hail- ing.
dē-gravō, ēre, —, ētus, to weigh down, burden.
dē-hiscō, ere, hīvi, —, to yawn, open wide.
Dēianira, ae, [Διαίανίρα], f., the daughter of Oeneus, and wife of Hercules.
dē-iciō, ere, iēci, iectus, [dē + iaciō], to cast, hurl down; destroy.
dēiectus, ës, [dēclō], m., a throwing down; fall.

dēinde, (disyll.), [dē + inde], adv., from there, thenceforward; thereafter, thereupon, then; next, next in order, then, after that.

dē-lābor, i, lāpsus, to fall down, fall into; glide down, descend softly, steal down; fly, swoop down.

dēlectō, āre, āvi, ātus, [dē + intens. *lāciō, to allure], to delight, charm, please.

dē-lēniō, ire, īvi, ītus, to soothe, charm, fascinate.

dēleō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, to efface, abolish, destroy, extinguish.

dēlicitae, ārum, [dēlīciō, to allure], f. pl., a delight; darling, favorite, sweetheart.

dēlictum, i, [dēlinquō, to fail], n., a fault, offense, trespass.

dē-ligō, ēre, lēgi, lēctus, [dē + logō], to choose, choose out, select, pick.

dē-lītēscō, ere, litui, —, [dē + lātēscō, to hide one’s self], to hide, conceal one’s self, lie hidden.

Dēlius, a, um, [Dēlos], adj., of Delos, Delian; an epiteth of Apollo and Diana.

Dēlos, i, [Δήλος], f., Delos, an island in the Aegean, the birthplace of Apollo and Diana.

Delphi, ōrum, [Δῆλος], m., a city in Phocis, famous as the seat of the Oracle of Apollo; (meton.) oracles, mysteries.

Delphicus, a, um, [Delphi], adj., Delphic, belonging to Delphi.

delphin, inis, m., a dolphin.

dēlūbrum, i, [dēluō, to wash out, cleanse], n., the place of expiation; a sanctuary, shrine, temple.

dē-mēns, entsis, adj., out of one’s mind or senses, mad, distracted, demented, foolish.

dēmentia, ae, [dēmēns], f., madness, folly.

dēmissus, a, um, [part. dēmittō], adj., let down, lowered; hanging down.

dē-mittō, ere, misf, missus, to send down, cast down, let down; thrust down or into.

dēmo, ere, dēmpel, dēmpitus, [dē + emō, to buy, obtain], to take away, remove.

dē-mōllor, irī, itus, to tear down, demolish, destroy.

dēnum, [a superlative form of dē], adv., at length, at last, finally.

dē-negō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, to reject, refuse.

dēni, ae, a, [decem, ten], num. adj., ten at a time, ten each; poet., ten.

dēnique, adv., finally, at length; in short, in fact, at all; tum or tunc dēnique, then for the first time, not till then; modo dēnique, never until now.

dēns, dentis, [from root in edō, to eat; compare ὡδης], m., a tooth, of man or animal; tusk.

dēnus, a, um, adj., close together, dense, thick, crowded; thick set: continuous; in active sense, making dense, solidifying.

dē-pellō, ere, pull, pulsa, to drive away, ward off, put to flight.

dē-pendeō, ēre, —, —, to hang down from, hang down.

dē-pereō, ire, ii, iturus, to go to ruin, perish, be lost.

dē-plōrō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, to weep, lament, deplore.

dē-pōnō, ere, posui, positus, to lay aside, lay down, set aside or apart; set in, plant; get rid of; quench: dēpositus, a, um, [part. dē- pōnō], adj., laid down; laid out as a corpse, dead.

dē-posco, ere, poposci, —, to call for, require; demand for punishment.

dēpositum, i, [dēpōnō], n., that which is deposited, a trust; poet., the seed planted in the ground, the product of the seed, the harvest.

dē-precor, ārī, ātus, to plead against, seek to avoid.

dē-prehendō (deprēndō), ere, i, hāensus, to catch, overtake; comprehend, understand; detect, apprehend, find out.
dēprīmō, ere, pressū, pressuās, [dē + premō], to press down, weigh down.
(dē-rigēscō), ere, dērigul or dirigul, —, to grow rigid, become stiff, harden, turn to stone.
děscendō, ere, 1, scēnsuās, [dē + scandō, to climb], to go down, climb down, descend; sink down, penetrate into.
dē-soō, āre, ul, tus, to cut away, prune off.
dē-serō, āre, ul, tus, to desert, leave, forsake, abandon.
dē-servīō, īre, —, —, to serve zealously, be devoted to.
dē-signō, āre, āvi, ātus, to mark out, point out.
dēsiliō, īre, ul, sultus, [dē + salīō, to leap], to leap down.
dē-sinō, āre, āvi (sil), situs, to leave off, cease.
dē-sistō, āre, stīti, situs, to stand off from; leave off, cease.
dē-siliō, āre, āvi, ātus, [dē + solus, alone], to forsake, abandon, leave alone.
dē-spectō, āre, —, —, [intens. dēspiciō], to look down upon.
dēspiciō, ere, spekxi, spectus, [dē + *speciō, to look], to look down upon; despise, reject, scorn.
dēstituō, īre, 1, ātus, [dē + statuā], to set apart; leave, abandon.
dē-stringō, ere, strīxi, strictus, to strip off; unsheathe, draw.
dē-struō, ere, strūxi, strūctus, to pull down, destroy, demolish.
dē-suēstus, a, um, [part. dēsuēscō, to become unaccustomed], adj., unaccustomed, unfamiliar, strange.
dēsultor, āris, [dēsiliō], m., a vault- er; désultor amōris, inconstant, fickle.
dē-sum, esse, ful, —, to be wanting, absent, missing.
dē-tegō, ere, tēxi, tēctus, to uncover, expose, lay bare.
dēsterior, iūs, [comparative of dēter, an obsolete form of dē], adj. comp., lower, worse, of less value.
dē-terō, ere, trivi, tritus, to rub, away, wear away.
dē-tineō, āre, ul, tentus, [dē + teneō], to keep back, detain, stay, hold; hold any one to an act or work, train.
dē-trāctō, āre, āvi, ātus, to refuse, shirk; depreciate, disparage.
dē-trabhō, ēre, trāxi, trāctus, to drag off, take away from.
Deucalīōn, ōnis, [Δευκαλιών], m., son of Prometheus, and husband of Pyrrha.
deu, i, m., a god, deity.
dē-vāstō, āre, —, ātus, to lay waste, devastate.
dē-vertor, i, versus, to turn away, turn aside; betake one’s self to, turn attention to.
dē-vincē, ēre, vici, victus, to subdue completely, overcome.
dē-vius, a, um, [dē + via], adj., out of the way, remote.
dē-volvō, ēre, 1, volūtus, to roll down, roll off.
dē-voveō, ēre, vōvi, vōtus, to devote to, give up to, doom to, as a victim to sacrifice: curse, execute.
dēvōtus, a, um, [part. dēvoveō], adj., devoted, faithful.
dexter, era, erum, or tra, trum, adj., on the right, the right hand, the right; suitable, favorable, propositions; subs., f., the right hand.
Dīa, ae, [Dea], f., an old name of the island of Naxos.
Diāna, ae, [for Divāna], f., daughter of Jupiter and Latona, sister of Apollo, goddess of the chase.
dīcō, āre, āvi, ātus, to give up, set apart, appropriate anything to or for any one; dedicate, consecrate to a god.
dīcō, ere, dīxi,ductus, to say, speak: tell, relate; tell, order; speak of, mention; call; foretell, proclaim, predict.
Dictaeus, a, um, [Dictē], adj., pertaining to Dicte, a mountain in Crete; (meton.) Cretan.
dictō, åre, åvi, åtus, [freq. dicō], to pronounce, declare; to dictate to one for writing.
dictum, I, [dicō], n., a word, a speech.
Dictynna, ae, [טיב, a hunting net], I., an appellation of Diana, who was probably so called in allusion to her favorite pursuit of the chase.
di-dicō, ere, dūxi, ductus, to draw apart, draw off, draw aside.
diēs, ēs, ē, f. and m., a day; a set day, an appointed time, time in general; a period of time, an age; the light of day, the daylight.
differō, ferre, distuli, dillētus, [dis- + ferō], to carry different ways, spread abroad, scatter; put off, defer, postpone, delay.
difficilius, e, [dis- + facilis], adj., difficult, hard; obstinate, morose, churlish.
diffidō, ere, —, fāsus, [dis- + fidō], to distrust, lose faith in.
diffugīō, ere, fūgī, —, [dis- + fugīō], to flee in different or all directions, scatter, disperse.
diffundō, ere, fūdī, fūsus, [dis- + fundō], to pour in different directions; spread, scatter, diffuse, spread abroad, publish; give vent to, give free course to.
di-gerō, ere, gessi, gestus, to carry in different directions; explain, interpret; divide, separate, extend (in parts) over.
digitus, i, m., a finger; a toe.
dignor, āri, ātus, [dignus], to count or deem worthy; deign.
di-gnōscō, ere, —, —, to know apart, tell apart.
dignus, a, um, adj., worthy, suitable, fit, proper.
digredior, I, gressus, [di- + gradior], to go away, go apart, separate.
dilabōr, I, læpsus, to glide or slip away, disappear, vanish.
dilēctus, a, um, [part. diligō], adj., chosen out, loved, beloved, dear.
diligō, ere, læxi, lēctus, [di- + legō], to choose out, esteem, love.
diluviō, il, [diluō, to wash away], n., a flood, deluge, inundation.
di-mittō, ere, mīsius, to send in all directions; send away, dismiss; give up, let go, abandon.
di-movere, ere, mōvi, mōtus, to move or put aside, part, separate, divide; drive away, dissipate, scatter, remove.
Dindyma, òrum, [Δίνδυμα], n., a mountain in Mysia, sacred to Cybele.
Diomēdos, is, [Διομήδης], m., son of Tydeus, king of Aetolia, one of the Greek chiefs before Troy.
Diomēdēs, a, um, [Diomēdēs], adj., of or belonging to Diomedes.
Dirō, ès, [Δίρις], I., a fountain in Boeotia.
dirēctus, a, um, [part. dirigō], adj., straight, direct.
dirigō, ere, réxi, rectus, [dis- + regō], to cause to move in a straight line, guide, direct.
dirimō, ere, ĕmi, ĕmptus, [dis- + emō, to buy, obtain], to part, divide, separate; interrupt, break off, put an end to.
diripō, ere, ui, reptus, [dis- + rapiō], to tear in pieces; tear away, strip off.
dirus, a, um, adj., fearful, dreadful, awful; ill omened, portentous, dire; horrid, blasting, cursed, wild, cruel, fierce, fell.
dis- (di-), an inseparable particle used in composition with other words, and having the force of under, in pieces, in different directions; it also has sometimes the force of a negative.
dis, ditis, [comp. ditior, superl. ditissimus], adj., rich.
Dis, Ditis, m., the god of the Lower World, Pluto.
dis-cēdō, ere, cessi, cessus, to go in different directions; depart, withdraw from, leave, go away.
VOCABULARY

diacëdium, n., [discindë, to tear apart], n., a parting, separation.
discë, ere, didicë, —, to learn, become acquainted with, learn how.
discordia, ae, [discors], f., disagreement, discord, strife.
discors, cordis, [dis- + cor], adj., discordant, unlike, different.
discrimen, inis, [discernë, to separate], n., that which separates two things; an intervening space, interval, distance; a discrimination, distinction, difference; a decision, test.
disertus, a, um, [for dissertus, part. dissertë, to discuss, speak], adj., skilful, clever, fluent, eloquent.
discicë, ere, iëci, lectus, [dis- + facië], to throw apart, disperse, scatter.
dis-pär, parls, adj., unequal, of uneven length.
dispectë, ere, specti, spectus, [di- + spectë, to look], to behold, look upon, see, descry.
dis-pöni, ere, posui, positus, to place here and there, at intervals, arrange, distribute.
dis-sepëli, ere, el, tus, to part off, separate, divide.
dissilië, ire, ul, —, [dis- + salië, to leap], to leap or spring apart or asunder.
dis-similis, e, adj., unlike, different.
dis-simulæ, âre, avi, âtus, to make a thing appear other than it is, disguise, hide, conceal, keep secret; disregard, ignore.
dis-socië, âre, avi, âtus, to disjoint, disunite.
dis-suâdeo, âre, suâsi, suâsus, to dissuade, advise against, oppose.
dis-tendë, ere, t, tentus, to stretch out, distend, fill.
dis-tinguë, ere, stënxi, stinctus, to separate, divide, mark off.
dis-stë, âre, —, —, to stand apart, be distant, be different.
dîts, adv., for a long time, long.
diurnus, a, um, [diës], adj., of the day, daily.
diâturnus, a, um, [diä], adj., of long duration, lasting, long.
divë, ae, [divus], f., a goddess.
di-velië, ire, I (vulsi), vulsus, to rend asunder, tear in pieces, tear away.
diversus, a, um, [part. divertë], adj., turned in different directions, separated, apart, opposite; different, various, remote.
di-vertë, ere, I, versus, to turn away, turn aside; in pass. with reflexive force, to turn one's self away to, resort, have recourse to.
dives, itis, adj., rich, wealthy, abounding in.
dividë, ere, visi, visus, to part asunder, divide, separate; distribute, share, apportion; separate, remove from, keep apart.
dividuës, a, um, adj., divisible; divided, separated, parted.
divinüs, a, um, [divus], adj., divine, sacred as pertaining to a deity.
divitiae, ârum, [dives], f., riches, wealth.
divus, a, um, adj., divine; regularly as subs. divus, i, [tios], m., a god (compare diva).
dö, dare, dedi, datus, to give, bestow, grant, permit, allow, give up, consign; put, place; to bring or send forth, utter; produce, cause; make; w. vëlia, lintea, spread sail, set sail, sail; w. verba, attempt to deceive, pretend; w. poenam, pay a penalty; w. prömissa, keep, fulfill a promise; w. lacrimës, weep; w. terga, turn the back, flee.
doceö, âre, ul, tus, to teach, instruct, show, tell, point out.
doctor, oris, [doceö], m., a teacher, instructor.
doctus, a, um, [part. doceö], adj., taught; learned, well versed, experienced.
documentum, I, [doceö], n., evidence, proof.
doleö, âre, ul, tus, to grieve, bear or suffer pain or grief.
Dol ön, ënis, [Dööös], m., a Trojan spy.
dolor, òris, [doleó], m., sorrow, grief, distress; resentment, vexation, indignation.
dolóeus, a, um, [dolus], adj., crafty, deceitful.
dolus, i, [doleó], m., a wile, stratagem, trick, fraud, deception.
domábilis, e, [domó], adj., conquerable, yielding.
domesticus, a, um, [domus], adj., domestic, familiar, native, home.
domina, ae, [domínus], f., a mistress.
dominor, ári, átus, [dominu̇s], to be lord, lord it over, rule.
dominus, i, m., a master, ruler, lord; a tyrant.
dómi, áre, ul, itus, to conquer, subdue, tame, overcome.
domus, ús, and i, f., house, home, abode, mansion, palace; household, family, race, house.
dónc, [shortened dónicum], conj., as long as, while; until, till.
dóno, áre, ávi, átus, [dônun], to give, present with, bestow, grant.
dónum, i, n., a gift, present, prize; a votive offering.
Dóris, idís, f., the wife of Nereus.
dósa, ótis, [dósi], f., a dowry; endowment, gift.
dótális, e, [dós], adj., pertaining to a dowry or marriage portion; given as a portion.
dráco, ónís, [dráco], m., a serpent, a dragon.
Drúsus, i, m., a surname in the Livian family, especially the younger Drusus, son of Tiberius, adopted brother of Germanicus.
Dryades, um, [Dryádes], f. pl., wood nymphs, dryads.
dubitábilis, e, [dubitó], adj., doubtful.
dubitó, áre, ávi, átus, [dubitus], to waver, be uncertain, be in doubt, hesitate, have misgivings, question.
dubitus, a, um, adj., wavering, irresolute, hesitating; uncertain, doubtful, to be doubted.
dúco, ere, dúxi, ductus, to lead, draw, bring, conduct, carry, take; draw, draw forth, heave a sigh; project, prolong; pass, spend; form, fashion, construct, make, produce; take on, assume; derive one's origin; w. rémōs, ply; w. auras, breathe.
dulcéó, ins, [dulcis], f., sweetness, charm.
dulcis, e, adj., sweet to the taste; sweet, pleasant, delightful, charming; dear, beloved.
Dúlichium, ii, n., an island in the Ionian sea, south of Ithaca.
Dúlichius, a, um, adj., pertaining to Dulichium, belonging to Ulysses.
dum, conj., while, as long as; until; provided that, if only; as adv., yet; non-dum, not yet, etc.; dum modo, provided that, if only.
dúx, ae, ö, num. adj., two.
duplicó, áre, ávi, átus, [dúplex, double], to double, increase; double up, bow.
dùritiás, ae, [dúras], f., hardness.
dùritiós, ól, [dúros], f., hardness.
dúró, áre, ávi, átus, to harden, make hard; be hardened, patient, endure, be strong, be firm.
dúrus, a, um, adj., hard to the touch; of water, frozen; hardy, vigorous, stout, sturdy; rough, dangerous; hard, severe, arduous; harsh, cruel, unfeeling, unsympathetic.
dux, ducis, m., f., a leader, guide, conductor.
Echō, ἐχ, [person. ἐχε], f., a nymph, one of Juno's attendants, who, having offended the goddess, lost all power of speech except that of mere repetition of sound.

edōx, ἐδῶς, [ἐδεω, edo], adj., devouring, destroying, consuming.

ἐ δισφό, ὀρεί, didicil, —, to learn completely, by heart; learn.

ἐ δόσω, ὀρεί, ditus, to give out, put forth; publish, announce, say, declare; bring forth, bear, produce, beget; produce, perform, bring about, cause.

ἐ δισλο, ὀρεί, δυξι, ductus, to lead or draw out or forth.

efferō, ferre, extuli, ἐλτάσω, [ἐ + ferō], to bring or carry out or forth or away; carry out for burial; raise, lift up.

efervescō, ἐρέ, ferbul, —, [ἐ + fervescō, to begin to boil], to boil up; light up, glow.

effusus, a, um, [ἐ + fēsas, that has brought forth young; exhausted with bearing], adj., worn out, exhausted.

emīclō, ἐρεί, fēcl, lectus, [ἐ + fīclō], to work out, accomplish, make, form.

emīgnōs, ἐμ, [ēmīgnō, to form], f., an image, effigy, statue, form.

emō, ἐμ, ἐμι, ἐμτα, [ἐ + fō, to blow], to blow out, breathe out, exhale.

emōū, ἐρεύ, ἐμωτ, —, [ἐ + mōō], to flow out, flow forth, slip away, escape.

effōdō, ἐρευ, fōdus, [ἐ + fōdō], to dig out or up, excavate.

effugō, ἐρεγλ, —, [ἐ + fugiō], to flee away, escape; flee from, avoid, shun.

ef-fulgeō, ἐρευ, fulal, —, [ἐ + fulgeō], to shine forth, gleam, glitter, glow.

effundō, ἐρευ, fūsus, [ἐ + fundō], to pour forth, pour out; give forth, put forth.

ĕ-gelīdus, a, um, adj., not cold, tepid, mild.

egēmēs, entis, [part. egeō], adj., mealy, poor, in want, wanting, without.

egeō, ἐρε, —, to be in want of, have need of, be without.

ego, pers. pron., I.

Ĕgeria, ae, f., a nymph in Roman mythology, the wife of Numis.

ĕ-gō, ἐρε, obsto, gustus, to carry out, take away, remove.

ĕgnedor, I, gressus, [ex + grandior], to go or come out or forth; mount, ascend.

ĕgressus, ēs, [ĕgnedor], m., a going out, egress, departure.

ĕhev, interj., ah! alas!

ĕi, interj., ah! alas! w. mihi, ah me!

ĕlaciulor, ēri, ētus, to shoot out, t'row out.

ĕ-iciō, ἐρεί, fēcl, lectus, [ἐ + iaciō], to cast out, cast or throw up.

ĕlecdō, ἐρεί, ἐvī, ἐtus, [ἐ + iactō, freq. iaciō], to cast forth, throw up.

ĕlabor, I, ἐρέπχει, to slip or glide away, escape.

elegēsia, ea, [ἐλεγεια], f., elegiac song or strophe, the first line of which is a hexameter, and the second a pentameter; personified, the muse of elegiac poetry.

elegi, ērum, [ἐλεγο], m., elegiac verses or poems.

Ĕleus, a, um, [Ĕleis], adj., Elean, belonging to Ellis (see below); fühmen Ėleum, the Alpens.

elementum, I, [probably from root al, to nourish; compare alimentum], a first principle, element; generally in pl., beginnings, first acts or duties.

ĕlidō, ere, lisī, lisus, [ex + laedō], to strike or dash out or up; dash to pieces, shatter, crush.

ĕlīgō, ere, lägī, lēctus, [ex + legō], to pick out, choose, select, elect.

Ĕlis, idis, [Ĭlīs], f., the most westerly district of the Peloponnesus, with a capital of the same name, near which the Olympic games were held.

ĕlix, icis, f., a ditch.
VOCABULARY

ėloquium, n. [loquor, to speak out], m., expression, speech, eloquence.

ēłūdō, ere, i, ētus, to avoid, escape, skua: delude, cheat, mock.

ēłūdō, ere, i, ētus, to wash out or away, cleanse.

Ēlysius, a, um. [Ēlysium], adj., Elysia, pertaining to Elysium, the home of the Blessed in the Lower World.

Ēmathides, um. [Ēmathia], f., the daughters of the Macedonian king, Piers, the Pierides.

Ēmathius, a, um, [Ēmathia], adj., Ėmathian: (meton.) Macedonian.

Ēmathia was a district of Macedonia.

ēmendō, ere, āvi, ētus, [ex + mendum, a fault], to correct, improve, revise.

ē-mentor, iri, ītus, to speak falsely, lie, feign.

ē-mereō, ēre, ui, ētus, to merit, deserve; to serve out, complete.

ē-mētōr, iri, mēnsus, to measure off, travel over, traverse.

ē-micō, ēre, ui, ētus, to spring or leap out, dart or bound forth; leap up.

ē-mineō, ēre, ui, —, to stand out, reach upward, project.

ēminus, [ex + manus], adv., at a distance.

ē-mittō, ere, misi, missus, to send forth, let loose.

ē-modulō, āri, —, to sing, celebrate.

ēn, interj., lo! behold! see!

enim, conj., for, namely, for instance, truly, indeed.

Ēnipeus, I, [Ēnipeis], a river in Thessaly.

ē-nitor, i, nisus or nixus, to exert one's self, struggle; mount upward; bring forth, bear offspring.

Ēnnius, I, m., a Roman poet of the ante-classical period, father of Roman epic poetry.

Ēmmomus, I, m., a Lycian, slain before Troy.

ēnesis, is, m., a sword, a knife.

ē-numerō, ēre, āvi, ētus, to enumerate, count up, recount, relate.

ēo, ire, īvi, (II), ītus, to go, go forth, rush forth.

ēōdem, adv., in the same place, together; to the same place.

Ēōs, a, um, [Ēōs, Hēōs], adj., of the dawn, of the morning, eastern, oriental; subs., Ēōs, i, m., the morning star, the morning; a name of one of the houses of Phoebus.

Ēphaphus, I, [Ēphaphos], m., son of Jupiter Ammon and Io.

Ēphyrē, ēs, [Ēphyrēs], f., a mythical name for Corinth, after a sea nymph of that name.

Ēpimēthis, idis, [Ēpimēthis], f., Pyrrha, the daughter of Ēpime-theus.

ēpistula, ae, [ēpistolē], f., a letter, epistle.

ēpos, (only nom. and acc.), [ēpos], n., a heroic poem, an epic.

ēques, itis, [ēquus], m., a horseman, a rider, a mounted soldier, a knight; a knight, one of the equestrian order, next below the senatorial class.

ēquidem, adv., truly, indeed, by all means.

ēquinus, a, um, [ēquus], adj., of a horse; w. nervus, a bowstring of horsehair.

ēquus, i, m., a horse, a steed.

ēra, ae, [ērus], f., a mistress, lady, sweetheart.

ērgō, adv., therefore, then.

Ēridanus, I, [Ēridāneos], m., another name of the river Po.

ērigō, ere, rēxi, rēctus, [ex + regō], to raise up, set up, lift up.

Ērīnys, yos, [Ērīnys], f., one of the Furies; (meton.) a scourge, a curse.

ēripō, ere, ui repus, [ex + repīs], to snatch away, snatch, remove, take away; rescue from any danger.

ērrē, ēre, āvi, ētus, to wander, wander about or around; wander off, stray; wander or hover around; be in error, go wrong, go astray.
error, Ὠρίς, [errō], m., a wandering, straying; an error, mistake; a deception, trick, delusion.

ἐρασκόμενος, ere, rubul,—, to redder; blush.

ἐρυθίος, Ire, [Ivī], Itus, [ex + rudis, unformed], to teach, communicate, instruct in.

ἐροῦσ, ere, I, tus, to pluck or tear up; overthrow, ruin, destroy utterly.

ἐρυς, I, m., a master of a house, lord, master, owner.

ἐρυμόμενος, I, n., the bitter vetch or wild pea.

Ἐρυκέα, ae, [Ἐρύκεια], f., an epithet of Venus, who had a temple near Mt. Eryx.

Ἐρυμανθός, Ὁ, [Ἐρύμανθος], m., a chain of mountains in Arcadia; also a river in Arcadia.

Ἐρύχ, ὦς, [Ἐρῦχ], m., a mountain in the western part of Sicily.

ἐσκα, ae, [ἐδό, to eat], f., food, viands, meat.

ἐτα, conj.; and; also, even, too; et—et, both—and.

ἐτίαμ, adv. and conj., and also, too, likewise; even.

ἐτιαμοῦ, adv., still, even now, even yet.

ἐτίς, conj., even if, although.

Ἐὐβοῖκος, α, um, [Ἐὐβοῖκος], adj., of Euboea, an island in the Aegean, Euboean.

Ἐὔμενίδης, um, [Ἕυμενίδης], f. pl., the kindly goddesses, a euphemistic title of the Furies.

Ἐὐφορβός, Ὁ, [Ἐὐφορβός], m., a Trojan, son of Panthoös.

Ἐὐφράτης, ὁ, [Ἐὐφράτης], m., one of the largest and most famous rivers of Asia.

Ἐὐρίτης, ae, [Ἐὐρίτης], m., the chief river of Laconia, on which Sparta stood.

Ἐὐρύς, Ὁ, [Ἐὐρός], m., the southeast wind, the east wind.

Ἐὐρυςκέ, ὡς, [Ἐὐρυδίκη], f., the wife of Orpheus.

Ἐὐρύμηδας, ae, [Ἐuryμύδας], m., Telemus, the son of Eurymus, a seer.

Εὐρύππυρος, Ὁ, [Ἐυρύππυρος], ὁ, a Grecian leader in the siege of Troy.

Εὐρυστής, Ὁ, [Ἐυρυστής], m., son of Thetis, son of Mycenaeae, who, at Juno’s command, imposed upon Hercules his twelve labors.

ἐὐβᾶδος, ere, ὑβίς, ὑβίμα, intrans., to go forth, mount up, ascend, climb up; transit., pass over, leave behind.

ἐὐπάνασκομενος, ere, ἐπανοικία, —, to vanish away, disappear.

ἐὐφάνιδως, α, um, [ἐυφάνιδως], adj., vanishing, passing away.

ἐὐφανής, ere, vexi, vectus, to carry out, bear away, bear.

ἐὐφελός, ere, I, vulns, vectus, to carry out, bear away, bear.

ἐὐφελώς, ere, I, vulns, vectus, to carry out, bear away, bear.

ἐὐφενώς, ὁ, ἐυφενων, versus, to come forth, come to pass, happen.

ἐὐφήνες, ὁ, [ἐυφήνη], m., an event, occurrence, happening, fortune.

ἐὐφέρτης, ere, I, versus, to overturn, overturn, overthrow, ruin, destroy.

ἐὐφερτιγώτος, α, um, [part. ἐ + ἐφερτιγώτος, to follow in the track of], adj., discovered, investigated, traced out.

ἐὐφινος, ere, vicl, victus, to overcome completely, vanquish.

ἐὐφίλες, ε, [ἐφιλέ, to avoid], adj., avoidable.

ἐὐφόλος, ἄρη, ἕλω, ἄτος, to fly out, forth, rush forth.

ἐὐφόλος, ere, I, volthus, to roll out, evolve; unroll.

ἐξ or ἐ (ἐ always before a vowel, and often before a cons.), prep. w. abl., out of, from, in different senses; ex merito, in accordance with desert; ex illā parte, on that side, in that region; vivere ex raptō, to live on plunder; ex aequō, equally; ex ordine, in order; ἐ nōbis maxima, the eldest of us.

ἐξακτίς, α, um, [part. exigō], adj., completed; precise, accurate, exact.

ἐξαιστοῦ, ἄρη, ἕλω, ἄτος, to boil up, foam up, seethe, surge.

ἐξαίφιος, ἁίμας, [for exægmen, from ἐκ + ἀγω], n., a swarm.

ἐξαναμάτων, α, um, [part. exanam-
VOCABULARY

exercēō, ērē, ul, itus, [ex + arceō], to drive, keep busy, employ, keep in action; exercise, train, practice; vex, torment, harass.
ex-hālō, āre, āvi, ātus, to breathe out.
ex-hauriō, īre, haustr, haustrus, to draw out, drain to the dregs, empty; undergo, endure.
exhibeō, ēre, ui, itus, [ex + habēō], to present, deliver, give up, produce; show, display, exhibit.
exhorrēscō, ere, horrui, —, [inclin., ex + horreō], to tremble, shudder, be terrified.
ex-hortor, āri, ātus, to exhort, encourage, urge on.
exigo, erē, ēgi, āctus, [ex + agō], to drive out, drive forth; drive or thrust through; demand, require, inquire; bring to an end, complete, finish.
exiguus, a, um, [exigō], adj., small, little, scanty, petty, slender, thin.
exillis, e, [for exigilis, from exigō], adj., slender, thin, small.
eximus, a, um, [eximō], adj., select, choice, excellent.
eximō, ere, ēmi, ēmpus, [ex + emō, to buy], take away, remove, free, release.
exītābilis, e, [exitātum], adj., fatal, deadly, destructive.
exītium, ii, [exītus], n., destruction, ruin, death.
exītus, ūs, [exītus], m., egress; outcome, issue, end.
ex-onerō, āre, āvi, ātus, to free, disburden, relieve.
ex-orior, orīf, ortus, to rise forth, arise, spring up.
ex-orō, āre, āvi, ātus, to entreat earnestly, beg, implore.
exōsus, a, um, [part. exōdī, to hate], adj., hating, detesting.
expallēscō, ere, pallui, —, [inclin. ex + palēō], to grow or turn pale.
ex-pellō, ere, pulli, pulsus, to drive out, eject, expel.
VOCABULARY

ex-stō, stāre, —, —, to stand forth, rise above, be prominent, conspicuous.
ex-strūō, ere, struō, strūctus, to build, erect, load, heap, cover.
ex-sulū, ulī, [exsilīō, to spring out], m., I., an exile, a wanderer, refugee.
ex-sultō, āre, āvi, ātus, [freq. exsilīō], to spring or leap up; rejoice, exult, boast.
exta, ārum, n. pl., the more important vital organs of victims, the vitals, the exta, those parts which were consulted in divination.
extempō, [for ex + *tempūlō, dim. of tempus], adv., at once, immediately, straightforward.
ex-tendō, ere, ī, tentus or tēnsus, to extend, stretch, stretch out.
ex-tenuō, āre, āvi, ātus, to reduce, lessen, diminish.
externus, a, um, [exter, outside], adj., outward, exterior, foreign, strange.
ex-terrebō, āre, ī, ītus, to frighten suddenly, greatly, to strike with terror, terrify.
extimēscō, ere, ulī, —, [ex + inch. timeō], to fear greatly, shudder at.
extrimēmus, a, um, adj. (superlat. of externus, outer), outermost, farthest, extreme, remotest, last; extrēma īōna, the waning moon; extrēmus (angulus), the merest corner, fragment; adv., extrēmum, for the last time.
ex-turbō, āre, āvi, ātus, to drive out, thrust out.
ex-ululō, āre, āvi, to howl.
exuō, ere, ī, ītus, to put off, lay aside, strip off.
exuviae, ārum, [exuvō], f. pl., anything which is taken from a body, clothing, garments; the skin of an animal.

F
Fabil, ārum, m., members of the famous gens Fabia or Fabian family.
VOCABULARY

fäma, ae, [for], t., rumor, report; common talk; fäma est, rumor has it, the story goes; reputation, renown, fame.
famēs, is, f., hunger, famine.
famula, ae, [famulus], f., a female slave, a maid servant, an attendant.
famulus, i, m., a slave, servant, attendant.
fānum, i, [for], n., a shrine, temple.
fār, farris, n., sprît, the earliest grain cultivated by the Romans; coarse meal, used in sacrifice.
fās, [for], indecl., n., the law or will of the gods, divine law; hence, that which is right, proper, permitted, a sacred duty or obligation.
fascis, is, m., a bundle; in pl., a bundle of rods with an axe in the middle, carried by the lictors before the chief Roman magistrates, the fasces.
fästi, ūrum, (properly an adj., fasti diēs), [fās], m., a register of judicial days; a list of the days of the year, calendar, annals.
fastigium, ii, n., the top of a gable, a roof, pinnacle, battlement, top, ridge.
fātālis, e, [fātum], adj., given or ordained by fate, fated, allotted; fateful, doom fraught, destructive, deadly.
fateor, ērī, fasīsus, [for], to confess, own, acknowledge, admit; speak out, declare.
fātīdicus, a, um, [fātum + dicō], adj., prophesying, fate revealing.
fātīfer, era, erum, [fātum + ferō], adj., death dealing, destructive.
fatīgō, āre, ātus, [fātis + agō], to tire, weary, plague, torment, vex, harass.
fātum, i, [for], n., a prophetic utterance, prophecy; destiny, fate, the will of heaven, evil destiny, misfortune, doom, death.
faucēs, ium, f. pl., the throat, jaws.
Faunus, i, m., a sylvan deity, identified with Pan.
faustra, e, um, [for *favostus, from faveō, adj., well-omened, fortunate, favorable, auspicious.
fsautrix, fœces, [for *favetrix, from faveō], one who aids, a protectress.
faveō, ēre, fāvi, fatus, to be pleased, have good-will toward, be favorable to.
favilla, ae, f., hot and glowing ashes, cinders, embers.
favor, ōris, [faveō], m., favor, goodwill, app. cause, public approval.
favus, i, m., a honeycomb, honey.
fax, facis, f., a torch, a firebrand; a nuptial torch, marriage; the torch, flame, passion of love.
febrous, ōrum, n. pl., expiatory rites, offerings for purification.
fuscundus, a, um, [fœsō, to produce], adj., fruitful, fertile, prolific.
felix, icis, adj., fruitful; favorable, favoring, propitious; happy, fortunate, blessed; wholesome.
fēmina, ae, [see fuscundus], a woman, a female.
femineus, a, um, [fēmina], adj., belonging to woman, woman's.
fel, fellis, n., gall, poison.
fera, ae, [ferus], f., a wild beast.
fœis, e, adj., funereal; death-biding, baleful, ill-omened.
ferax, acis, [ferō], adj., fertile, productive, fruitful; abounding in.
ferō, adv., nearly, almost; usually, commonly, mostly.
feretrum, i, [fœpterum], n., a bier.
ferinus, a, um, [ferus], adj., belonging to a wild animal.
ferō, ēre, —, —, to strike, smite; cut with a blow; kill by striking, slay.
fertilis, āsīs, [forus], f., wildness, fierceness.
ferō, ferre, tuli, lātus, to bear, carry, bring; — efferre, to carry forth to burial; w. reflex. pron. or w. passive voice in middle sense, bear one's self, betake one's self, go; w. vestigia, gradus, etc., turn, direct; bear with one as a possession, wear, have; carry away, take away; bear on, urge on, impel; bear, produce, bring forth, cause to be; bear off, get, obtain, receive; direct, require, demand, ordain, allow, permit, suffer; bear, endure, suffer, tolerate; say, tell, relate, report; do, perform, celebrate; w. legēs, bring forward, propose, promote.
ferōx, ōcis, [ferus], adj., bd. bd., warlike, fierce, ferocious; high-spirited, fiery.
ferreus, a, um, [ferrum], adj., of iron, iron; hard; stern, pitiless, unyielding.
ferrugō, inis, [ferrum], f., iron-rust; the color of iron-rust, dark red, dusky, dingy.
ferrum, i, n., iron; anything made of iron, an iron spear-head, an ax, sword, arrow.
fertillus, e, [ferō], adj., fertile, fruitful, luxuriant.
fertilítas, ātis, [fertilla], f., fertility, fruitfulness, abundance.
ferus, a, um, adj., wild, untamed; cruel, savage, fierce; waste, wild, rude, uncultivated.
ferveō, ēre or fervō, ēre, —, —, to boil, glow with heat, burn.
fervidus, a, um, [fervor], adj., glowing, burning, fiery, hot.
fervor, ōris, [ferveō], m., glowing heat; heat, vehement, ardor.
fesus, a, um, [akin to fatigō, to weary], adj., wearied, worn out, exhausted, weak, feeble, weary, spent.
festinō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [festinus, husti], to make haste, hurry, be quick.
festum, i, n., a festival day, a festival, a holiday.
festus, a, um, adj., festive, festal, joyful.
fētūra, ae, [fētus], f., a breeding; young, offspring, flock.
fētus, a, um, [see fuscundus], adj., pregnant, filled with, teeming with.
fētus, ās, m., a bringing forth, a production, generation; (meton.) that which is brought forth, offspring; fruit; growth.
fībra, ae, f., a fiber, nerve, muscle;
the vital organs in general, especially the liver, used in taking the omens.

fictilia, e, [fōngō], adj., made of clay molded into shape, earthen; subs., n., an earthen vessel, earthenware.

fectus, a, um, [part. fōngō], adj., false, feigned; subs., fictum, i, n., that which is false, falsehood.

fīdēlis, e, [fīdēs], faithful, sincere, true; trustworthy, safe, secure.

fīdēns, entis, [part. fīdō], adj., confident; bold; trusting in, relying upon.

fīdōs, 01, [fīdō], f., confidence, reliance, faith; faithfulness, probity, honor, fidelity, truth; promise, pledge; proof, evidence, conviction, truth; expectation, belief; reality.

fīdōs, ium, f. pl., a stringed instrument, a lyre; the strings of such an instrument.

fīdō, ere, fisus sum, to trust, confide; to have faith or confidence in, rely upon.

fīdūcia, ae, [fīdō], f., confidence, reliance, assurance.

fīdus, a, um, [fīdō], adj., trusty, trustworthy, trustworthy.

fīgō ere, fixi, fixus, to fix, fasten, fasten up; fix, establish; set, firmly, plant; w. sōcula, imprīt; pierce, transfix.

figūra, ae, [fīngō], f., figure, form, shape.

fīlia, ae, f., a daughter.

fīlius, i, m., a son.

filum, i, n., a thread.

findō, ere, fīdi, fissus, to cleave, split, divide, separate.

fīngō, ere, finxi, fictus, to form, fashion, make, shape, mold; chase, press; control; feign, invent, devise; form mentally, think, suppose.

finīō, ire, ivi, itus, [finis], to limit, bound; check, restrain; put an end to, finish; come to an end, cease.

finis, is, m., f., a boundary, limit, border; an end, conclusion.

finittimus, a, um, [finis], adj., bordering upon, neighboring; subs., finittimī, ērum, m. pl., those bordering upon, neighbors, neighboring tribes.

fōctus, ater, factus, to happen, result; take place, be made, become; mīhī fit timor, fear comes upon me, takes possession of me.

fīrmō, āre, āvi, ātus, [firmus], to make firm, support; secure, assure, make lasting.

fīrmus, a, um, adj., firm, strong, resolute.

fascina, ae, [fācūs, basket], f., a woven basket, hamper.

fistula, ae, f., a tube, pipe; shepherd’s pipe, Pan-pipes.

flagellō, āre, —, —, [flagellum, whip], to scourge, lash.

flagrō, āre, āvi, ātus, to burn, blaze, glow.

flāmen, inis, [flō, to blow], m., a blowing; (meton.) a wind, a blast.

flāmen, inis, [from the same root as flagrō, he who burns, e.g., offerings], m., a priest, flamen.

flāminica, ae, [flāmen], f., the wife of a flamen.

flamma, ae, [from root in flagrō], f., a flame, fire; the flame of love or any other passion, passion; a torch.

flammifer, era, erum, [flamma + ferō], adj., flame-bearing, burning, fiery.

flammō, āre, āvi, ātus, [flamma], to inflame, set on fire.

flātus, us, [flō, to blow], m., a blowing of the wind, a blast.

flāveō, āre, —, —, [flāvus], to be yellow or golden; part. flāvens, entis, golden.

flāvēscō, ere, —, —, [inch. flāvēs], to grow yellow, ripen.

flāvus, a, um, adj., golden yellow, flaxen, auburn, light-colored.

flēbilis, e, [flēs], adj., lamentable, deplorable; weeping, tearful, doleful.

flēctō, ere, flexi, flexus, to turn, bend, curve; direct, guide, turn, move, influence, prevail upon.

flēs, ēre, flēvi, flētus, to weep; trans., weep for, lament, bewail.
flātus, ūs, [flēō], m., a weeping, crying, lamentation, tears.
flexīlis, e, [flēctō], adj., flexible, bent, curved.
flexus, ūs, [flēctō], m., a bending, turn, curve, winding.
fōrēns, entis, [part. fōrēō], adj., bright, blooming, gay.
fōrēō, āre, ul. —, [fōs], to bloom, be in flower.
fōridus, a, um, [fōs], adj., in bloom; flowery, of flowers; blooming, beautiful.
fōs, āris, m., a flower, blossom; bloom of youth, freshness, prime.
fucctus, ūs, [flūō], m., a billow, wave, flood, tide, the sea in general.
fūdus, a, um, [flūō], adj., fluid, flowing; soft, languid, slack; flabby, flaccid.
fūtō, āre, āvi, ātus, [freq. flūō], to float, float.
flūmen, inis, [flūō], n., flowing water, a stream, river, flood, torrent.
flūmineus, a, um, [flūmen], adj., of a river, riverflūō, ere, fluxī, fluxus, to flow; drip; be in a state of flux.
fluvialis, e, [fluvius, stream], adj., belonging to a river, river-focus, ūs, m., a hearth, fireplace, altar.
fodiō, ere, fōdī, fossus, to dig; prick, pierce, thrust, wound.
foedēs, [foedus], adv., basely, shamefoedēs, āre, āvi, ātus, [foedus], to befoul, make filthy; defile, pollute.
foedus, a, um, adj., foul, filthy, abominable, loathsome; hideous, horrible.
foedus, eris, n., an agreement, contract; treaty, alliance, truce, covenant; law.
fōlium, ii, n., a leaf.
fōns, fontis, m., a spring, fountain, source of river; water.
fōntānus, a, um, [fōns], adj., from a fountain, spring.
(for), ēri, ātus, to speak, say.
forāmen, inis, [forō, to bore], n., an opening, aperture, hole.
forceps, cipis, f., a pair of pincers, forceps.
fore, forem, for futūrus esse and essem.
forēnsis, e, [forum], adj., of the forum, public.
foris, is, f., a door, gate, entrance.
fūrma, ae, f., form, shape, figure, appearance; the form, the person; personal beauty, beauty.
formica, ae, f., an ant.
formidabilis, e, adj., terrible, formidable.
formidō, āre, āvi, ātus, to fear, dread; formidātus, dreaded, inspiring terror.
formidō, inis, f., fear, terror, dread.
fūrmō, āre, āvi, ātus, [fūrma], to shape, fashion, form, mold.
fūrmōsus, a, um, [fūrma], adj. beautiful in form, lovely, fair.
formācālis, e, [formāx], adj., of ovens; dea formācālis, Fornax, the goddess of ovens.
formāx, ācis, f., a furnace, oven, kiln.
fors, fortis, f., chance, hap, hazard; adv., forte, perhaps, perchance, by chance.
forstān, [fors sit an], adv., perhaps, possibly.
fortasse, [for fortassis = forte an si vis], adv., perhaps, possibly.
fortis, e, adj., stout, strong, mighty, powerful, heroic in size and strength; brave, bold, courageous, valiant.
fortiter, [fortis], adv., strongly, powerfully, valiantly, bravely.
fortūna, ae, [fors], f., fortune, fate, chance, lot.
forum, ūs, n., a forum, public place of assembly, a court of justice.
fossa, ae, f., a ditch, trench.
foveō, āre, fōvi, fōtus, to warm, keep warm; cherish, foster; cling to, keep to; fondle, caress.
frāctus, a, um, [part. frangō], adj., broken, weakened, discouraged.
VOCABULARY

fragilis, e, [frangō], adj., breakable, brittle, fragile; slight, frail.
frangor, ēris, [frangō], m., a crash, din, roar, uproar.
frāgrāns, antis, [part. frāgrō, to emit fragrance], adj., sweet-scented, fragrant.
frāngō, ere, frēgī, frāctus, to break, dash in pieces; break in pieces, crush, grind.
frāter, tris, m., a brother.
frāternus, a, um, [frāter], adj., brother’s, brotherly, fraternal, friendly.
fraudō, āre, āvi, ātus, [fraus], to deprive, cheat out of, deprive of unjustly.
fraus, fraudis, f., deceit, deception, fraud, trickery.
frēmō, ere, ui, ītus, to roar, rage, howl; resound; wail, bewail, lament.
frēnō, āre, āvi, ātus, [frēnum], to put on a bridle on, bridle; curb, check, restrain; govern, control.
frēnum, i, n., a bridle, rein, bit, curb.
frēquēns, entis, adj., often, frequent; assembled in large numbers, in throngs, in crowds.
frēquenter, [frēquēns], adv., often, frequently; in great numbers.
frēquentō, āre, āvi, ātus, [frēquēns], to frequent, visit or resort to, visit in crowds, throng.
frētum, i, n., and frēetus, ās, m., a strait, channel; the sea.
frigidus, a, um, [frigēō, to be cold], adj., cold, frigid, chill, chilling, frosty.
frigus, oris, n., the cold, frost of winter; coolness.
frondēs. ēre, —, —, [frōns], to put forth leaves, leaf out; be in leaf.
frondōsus, a, um, [frōns], adj., full of leaves, leafy.
frōns, frondis, f., a leaf; leaves, foliage; a branch, bough, twig; a garnament, wreath.
frōntis, frondis, f., the forehead, the brow, front, face; the brow, face, countenance as index of feeling.
VOCABULARY

fūnis, is, m., a rope, line, cord.
fūnus, eris, n., funeral rites, obsequies; a dead body, corpse; death; ruin, disaster.
furca, ae, f., a fork; a fork-shaped prop, pole, stake.
furibundus, a, um, [furō], adj., raging, wild, frantic.
furlōsus, a, um, [furla, fūry], adj., full of fury, mad, raging.
furnus, i, m., an oven.
furō, ere, (ul), —, to rage, rave, be furious, wild, mad, frantic, inflamed.
fūror, āri, ātus, [für, thief], to steal, take away, withdraw.
fūror, ēris, [furō], m., fury, madness, rage, frenzy, the passion of love.
fūrtim, [furtum], adv., secretly, stealth.
fūrtum, i, [fur, thief], n., a secret, stealthy action, stealth, artifice, stratagem; a cheat, trick, fraud; a stolen thing.
fulōs, e, [fundō], adj., molten, liquid.
futūrus, a, um, [part. sum], adj., destined to be, future, to come; subs., futūrum, i, n., that which is to come, the future.

G

Galatēa, ae, [Γαλάταια], f., a sea nymph, daughter of Nereus.
Galaec, ae, f., a helmet.
Gallicus, a, um, [Gallus, a Gaul], adj., Gallic; Gallicus canis, a greyhound.
Gallius, i, m., C. Cornelius, a Roman elegiac poet, friend of Vergil.
Ganges, is, [Γάγγες], m., a famous river in India.
garrullitas, ātis, [garrīō, to chatter], f., a chattering, bubbling, prating.
garrulus, a, um, [garrīō, to chatter], adj., chattering, talkative, garrulous.
gaudeō, ēre, gāvīsus, to rejoice, be glad, take delight or pleasure in.

gaudium, ii, [gaudeō], n., joy, gladness, delight.
gelidus, a, um, [gelū, only in abl. s. > frost], adj., icy, very cold, chill, chilling.
geminō, ēre, āvi, ātus, [geminus], to double, increase, augment.
geminus, a, um, adj., twin, in pairs, two, double.
gemitus, ās, [gemō], m., a sighing, groaning, sigh, groan, moan, lamentation, waiting; a cry of rage or pain.
gemma, ae, f., a bud; gem, precious stone; an eye, as in a peacock’s tail.
gemō, ere, ul, ītus, to groan, lament, sigh.
gen, ae, f., generally pl., the cheek.
gener, eri, m., a son-in-law.
generōsus, a, um, [genōs], adj., of noble birth, highborn, noble; of a good kind, superior, excellent.
genetrix, icis, [genitor], f., she that produces, a mother.
genālis, e, adj., pleasant, joyous, festive.
genitor, ēris, [gignō], m., a begetter, a father.
gēns, gentis, [root gen in gignō], f., a race, people, nation; in pl., the peoples or nations of the world.
genō, ās, n., a knee.
genius, eris, [see gēns], n., birth, descent, origin; a descendant; a race, nation, people; kind, sort, species.
Germanicus, i, m., nephew and adopted son of the Emperor Tiberius.
germanus, a, um, [germen, an offspring], adj., having the same parents or at least the same father; subs., germanus, i, m., a brother; germana, ae, f., a sister.
gerō, ere, gessi, gestus, to bear, carry, wield, wear, have about one; bear, bring forth, produce; part.
ergēns, horing, with; have, possess, enjoy; carry out, carry on, accomplish, do, perform; w. bellum, wage war.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>VOCABULARY</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>gestämén, inis, [gestō], n., that which is borne or worn, an ornament, equipment, accoutrement.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>gestō, ire, ivi, —, [gestus], to express strong feeling by bodily action, be eager, long.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>gestō, āre, āvi, ātus, [freq. gerō], to bear, wear, carry.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>gestus, õs, m., bearing, posture, attitude, gesture.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Getae, õrum, m., a barbarous people on the western shore of the Black Sea; in sing., Getae, ae, and Getēs, ae, m., a Getan.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gigantēs, a, um, [Gigäes], adj., of or belonging to the giants.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gigäes, antis, [yί̣̄nas], m., a giant, one of the fabled sons of Earth and Tartarus.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>gignō, ere, genul, genitus, to bear, bring forth; beget, produce.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>glacätēs, e, [glacıēs], adj., icy.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>glacēs, ēī, f., ice.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>gladius, i, m., a sword.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>glæbae, ae, f., land, soil.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>glāna, glandēs, f., an acorn.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Glaucus, i, m., a fisherman of Anthedon in Boeotia, who was changed into a sea god.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>globus, i, m., a ball, round mass, sphere, orb.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>glomerō, āre, āvi, ātus, [glmūs, a ball made by winding], to gather into a ball or mass, roll up.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>glōria, ae, f., glory, fame, renown, reputation.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>glorērō, ārē, ātus, [gẹ̄̄ria], to boast, glory, pride one's self.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gorgō, or Gorgōn, onis, [Gōrov], f., a Gorgon, Medusa, whose head was cut off by Perseus, and presented to Minerva, who placed it in the center of her shield.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gorgoneus, a, um, [Gorgō], adj., of or belonging to Gorgon, Gorgonian.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>gracilitēs, e, adj., thin, slight, slender, meager, lean.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>grāculus, i, m., a jackdaw.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>grādivus, i, [perhaps from gradus], m., a surname of Mars.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>gradus, õs, m., a step, a pace; step, stage, degree; pl., a flight of steps or stairs.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Graecia, ae, [Graecî, Πανα], f., the country of the Greeks, Greece.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Grāli, õrum, m., the Greeks.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Grāius, a, um, adj., Greek, Grecian.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>grāmen, inis, n., grass, herbage, an herb, plant.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>grandēvus, a, um, [grandis + aevum], adj., old, aged.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>grandis, e, adj., full grown, large, bulky, great; grandior aevō, older, elder.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>grānifer, era, erum, [grānum, grain + ferō], adj., grain bearing, laden with grain.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>grātēs, ibus, [grātūs], f. pl., thanks.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>grātia, ae, [grātus], f., grace, charm, beauty, favor; regard, liking, fondness, taste; gratitude, thanks, grateful remembrance.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>grātor, ārī, ātus, [grātūs], to congratulate, wish joy.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>grātus, a, um, adj., pleasing, pleasant, acceptable, dear, agreeable, grateful, received with thanks.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>gravidus, a, um, [gravis], adj., heavy with anything; pregnant; full, abundant, fruitful.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>gravis, e, adj., heavy, weighty, firm, ponderous; of things without physical weight, heavy, deep, impressive; overmastering, oppressive; weighed down, laden, burdened; w. somnō, heavy, overcome with sleep; w. lacrimis, drenched with tears; heavy, burdensome, hard to bear, severe, grievous, bad; w. vulnus, a deep, deadly wound; of persons, in bad sense, harsh, severe, stern, implacable; subs., gravīōra, n. pl., worse, more grievous things.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>gravitas, ātis, [gravis], f., weight, heaviness; dignity, influence.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>gravō, āre, āvi, ātus, [gravis], to burden, weigh down; clog as with a weight, oppress.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
VOCABULARY

gramium, ì, n., a lap; the bosom, embrace.
gressus, ís, [gradior], m., a walking, gait; a step, course, way.
grex, grégis, m., a herd, flock.
gubernátor, óris, [gubernō, to steer], m., a steersman, helmsman, pilot.
gurges, ítis, m., a whirlpool, abyss; waters, rapids, stream, flood.
gutta, ae, f., a drop.
guttur, uris, n., the throat, neck.
gyrrus, í, [γορρός], m., a circle, circular course, round.

H
habēna, ae, [habēnō], f., generally in pl., reins.
habeō, ēre, úl, itus, to have, hold, possess.
habilis, e, [habēnō], adj., handy, fit, apt, expert.
habítábilis, e, [habitō], adj., fit for abode, habitable.
habitō, ēre, āvi, ētus, [freq. habeō], to have as a possession, to inhabit; live, dwell.
habitus, ës, [habēnō], m., appearance, dress, attire, garb.
haec, adv., on this side, here, by this way.
haec-tenus, thus far, up to this time, up to this point.
haedus, í, m., a kid.
haemonia, ae, [Aímonis], f., a poetic name for Thessaly.
haemonius, a, um, adj., Haemonian, Thessalian.
haemos, í, [Aímos], m., a range of mountains in Thrace.
haereō, ēre, haesēl, haesūrus, to hang, cling, be fixed to; hold fast, remain, fixed to, cleave; abide, continue in any place, be rooted to the spot.
haélitus, ës, [hālō, to breathe], m., a breath; a vapor, exhalation.
halius, í, m., a Lycian, slain before Troy.
hamádryas, adís, [άμαδρυᾶς], f., a wood nymph, hamadryad.
hamātus, a, um, [hāmās], adj., furnished with a hook, hooked, barbed.
hamus, í, m., a hook, barb.
harēna, ae, f., sand; seashore, beach.
harēnōsus, a, um, [harēna], adj., sandy.
harūndō, inis, f., a reed; that which is made of a reed, a shaft, arrow; a syrinx, pipes of Pan.
hasta, ae, f., a lance, spear.
hastilō, is, [hasta], n., the shaft of a spear, a spear, javelin.
haud, adv., not, not at all, by no means; haud alter, not otherwise, just so.
hauroō, ire, hausē, haustus, to drain, empty, drink up; take in, drink in, receive; scrape or dig out; scrape up, gather.
haustus, ës, [hauroō], m., a drawing, draining, draught.
hebes, etis, adj., blunt, dull; stupid, sluggish.
hebetō, ēre, āvi, ētus, [hebes], to dim, impair, make dull, blunt.
hebrus, í, [Έβρος], m., a river of Thrace.
hecatē, ēs, [Έκατός], f., a goddess of the Lower World, frequently identified with Luna in heaven and Diana on earth.
hector, oris, [Έκτωρ], m., a son of Priam and the bravest of the Trojans.
hectoreus, a, um, [Hector], adj., of Hector, Hector's, Hectorian.
herena, ae, [Έλενη], f., the wife of Menelaus, carried off to Troy by Paris, and thus the cause of the Trojan war.
herenus, í, [Έλενος], m., a son of Priam, a soothsayer.
helcē, ṣēs, [Χίης, a winding], f., the constellation of the Great Bear.
helēkōn, ónis, [Έλεκών], m., a mountain in Boeotia, sacred to Apollo and the Muses.
helēkōnus, a, um, [Helēkon], adj., of Helicon, Helēkōnian.
hennaeus, a, um, [Henna], adj., of or belonging to Henna, an ancient city in the center of Sicily, Henna’s.
herba, ae, t., herbage, grass, a plant, herb, vegetation, green blades, green leaves.
Herculeus, is, [Ἡρκλῆς], m., Hercules, a famous hero, renowned for his strength and his twelve labors.
Herculeus, a, um, adj., Herculean, of Hercules.
hērēs, ēdis, m., an heir, successor.
Hernicus, a, um, adj., Hernic, of or belonging to the Hernici, an Italian people in Latium.
hēros, ēs, [ἥρως], m., a hero, a godlike man, a brave or illustrious man.
hērōus, a, um, [hērōs], adj., heroic; w. versus, epiv. poetry.
Hesperis, idis, [Hesperus = Ἑσπερός], adj. of the West, western; subs., Hesperides, um, f. pl., the Hesperides, daughters of Hesperus, keepers of the garden of golden fruit in the extreme West.
Hesperius, a, um, adj., Hesperian, western, Italian.
hesternus, a, um, [root hes in heri, yesterday], adj., of yesterday, yesterday’s.
heu, interj., of grief or pain, ah! alas! oh!
hiātus, ūs, [hiō, to yawn], m., a gaping, yawning, chasm, gulf.
Hiberus, a, um, adj., Iberian, Spanish; pāstor Hibērus, Geryon, a mythic king in Spain having three bodies, whose oxen were carried off by Hercules.
hic, adv., in this place, here; at this time, at this juncture.
hic, haec, hoc, demonstr. pron., this.
iēms, emis, t., the winter, the stormy season; person, Winter, Hiems.
hinc, adv., from this place, hence; hence; hinc atque hinc, on this side and on that, on each side; from this time, henceforth.
hinnitus, ūs, [hinniō, to whinny], m., a whinnying.
Hippotadēs, ae, [Hippotēs], m., Aelianus, the grandson of the Trojan Hippotes.
hirsutus, a, um, [related to hirtus], adj., rough, shaggy, hairy.
hirtus, a, um, adj., rough, hairy, shaggy.
hiscō, ere, —, [inch. hiō, to yawn], to open, gape, yawn; open the mouth, speak, stammer, falter.
Hister, tri, m., the lower part of the Danube.
hodiē, [hoc + diē], adv., to-day, now.
hodiernus, a, um, [hodiē], adj., of to-day, to-day’s.
holus, eris, n., kitchen herbs, cabbage.
Homērus, I, [Ὅμηρος], m., the famous Greek epic poet.
homme, inis, m., f., a human being, a man; in pl., men, mankind, the human race.
honestus, a, um, [honor], adj., honored; honorable, worthy.
honor (honōs), oris, m., honor, esteem, respect; a mark of honor, place of honor, in pl., honors; honorary gift, offering, sacrifice; reward, recompense; beauty, charm, grace.
honōrātus, a, um, [part. honōrī, to honor], adj., honored, revered, venerated.
hōra, ae, t., an hour; time; person. in pl., the Hours.
Horatius, I, m., Q. Horatius Flaccus, the famous Augustan poet.
hordēa, orum, n. pl., barley.
horrendus, a, um, [part. horreō], adj., to be shuddered at, horrible, dreadful, awful, terrible, fearful, frightful; awe inspiring, dread, venerable.
horrenēs, entis, [part. horreō], adj., bristling, gloomy, somber, shaggy, rough.
horreō, ēre, ul, —, to bristle, be rough; shudder at, fear, be afraid of; quake, tremble, shiver.
horridus, a, um, [horreō], adj., bristling, rough, shaggy; horrid, frightful, dreadful.
 Vocabulary

borrifer, era, erum, [horror, horror + ferō], adj., terrible, dreadful, horrible.
hortāmen, inis, [hortor], n., an incitement, exhortation.
hortātor, āris, [hortor], m., an inciter, organizer, prompter.
hortor, āri, ātus, to encourage, urge, incite, exhort.
hortus, i, m., a garden.
hospes, itis, [hostis, a stranger + pes, the root in pāscō, to feed], m., f., one who entertains a stranger, a host; by transfer, a guest, one who receives hospitality; a stranger, foreigner.
hospita, ae, [hospes], f., a stranger, forsworn, wanderer, visitor.
hospitium, ii, [hospes], n., hospitality; shelter.
hostia, ae, f., a victim, a sacrifice.
hostis, e, [hostis], adj., belonging to an enemy, hostile, an enemy's.
hostis, is, m., f., a stranger, an enemy.
hūc, adv., to this place, hither; to tīs, in addition, besides.
hūmānus, a, um, [homō], adj., human, pertaining to mankind.
humīlis, e, [humus], adj., low, lowlying.
humus, i, f., the earth, ground, soil; land, country, region.
Hyades, um, [Yādisthe, the rainers], f. pl., the Hyades, a group of seven stars in the head of the constellation Taurus.
Hydra, ae, [Ydrā], f., the Hydra, the water serpent of Lerna, slain by Hercules.
Hymēn, −, and Hymenaeus or os, i, [Ymēn], m., Hymen, the god of marriage.
Hymēttus, i, [Ymētōs], m., a mountain near Athens, famed for its honey and marble.
Hypaepea, ērum, [Ypaepea], n. pl., a small town in Lydia.
Hypsipylus, a, um, [Hysipylēs], adj., belonging to Hypsipyle, queen of Lemnos in the time of the Ar-gonautic expedition; w. tellus, Lemnos.

I
laceō, ēre, ul, ētus, to lie, lie down, recline; be situated; lie low; lie prostrate, lie slain, lie dead.
laciō, ere, ēclī, lactus, to throw, cast, hurl.
lactāns, antis, [part. lactū], adj., bountiful, rain-glorious, arrogant.
lactū, āre, āvi, ētus, [freq. laciō], to throw, cast, hurl, scatter, fling; toss about, shake, flourish; állis lactātīs, on beating wings; throw out, pour forth, utter wildly, pronounce, speak, say; revolve, ponder, consider, talk about, discuss; w. reflex. pron., boast, glory, vaunt.
lactūra, ae, [laciō], f., a throwing away, a loss.
lactus, ēs, [laciō], m., a throwing, casting.
lacūlātrix, icas, [laculātor], f., a javelin thrower, huntsress.
lacūlor, āri, ētus, [laculum], to hurl.
laculum, i, [laciō], m., a dart, javelin.
lam, adv., now, already, at length, but now, just now, from this point, from that time on, thereafter, soon, presently; iam dūdum, now for a long time, long since, now at length; iam pridem, long since; iam nunc, even now, already.
lambus, i, [lambos], m., an iambic foot; iambic poem, poetry.
lānitor, āris, [lānus], m., a doorkeeper, janitor.
lānus, ae, [related to lānus], f., a door of a house, a door, an entrance.
lānus, i, [see Fasti, I. 108, note], m., an old Italian deity, god of entrances, all beginnings, and the month of January.
lαpetus, i, [lαpetos], m., a Titan, son of Coelus and Terra, father of Atlas, Prometheus, and Epimeetheus.
lāsōn, onis, [lāsw̯], m., a famous
VOCABULARY

Greek hero, son of Aeson, leader of the Argonauts.

Ibygges, um, m., a Sarmatian people on the Danube.

Ibi, adv., there, then, thereupon.

Icarus, i, m., a son of Daedalus, who, accompanying his father in his flight from Crete, fell into that portion of the Mediterranean called from him the Icarien Sea.

Icō, ere, ich, icus, to strike, smite.

Ictus, us, [icō], m., a stroke; a blow, a thrust.

Idcircō, [id + circā], adv., for this, that reason, on that account, to this end.

Idē, ēs, [1ō], f., a mountain in Crete, also a mountain in Phrygia near Troy named from Cretan Ida.

Idem, eadem, idem, [is + dem], demonstr. pron., the same; also, likewise.

Id-ēs, adv., on that or this account, for that or this reason.

Idomeneus, ei, (quadrisyly.), m., [1ōmēnēvs], m., a king of Crete, leader of the Cretans against Troy.

Idcur, oris and tecinoris, n., the liver.

Iēsūniun, it, [iēsūnus, hungry], m., fasting; hunger.

Igitur, conj., then, therefore.

Ignārus, a, um, [in- + gnārus, knowing], adj., not knowing, ignorant of, unacquainted with, unaware, unsuspecting; w. fors, blind fate.

Ignāscō, ere, —, [Ignis], to take fire, burn, kindle, burst into flame.

Ignēus, a, um, [Ignis], adj., of fire, fiery.

Ignifer, era, erum, [Ignis + ferō], adj., fire bearing, fiery.

Ignis, is, m., fire, flame; a thunderbolt, lightning, flash of lightning; a blazing heavenly body, a star; the flame of passion, love; fiery passion, wrath; the object of passion, loved one, flame; love songs.

Ignorantia, ae, [Ignōrans, not knowing], f., want of knowledge, ignorance.

Ignōrō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [in- + root gna as found in gnārus, knowing], to be ignorant of, not to know.

Ignōscō, ere, nōvi, nōtus, [in- + (g)nōscō], to overlook, pardon, forgive, excuse, make allowance.

Ignōtus, a, um, [in- + (g)nōtus], adj., unknown, undiscovered, strange, foreign; unknown, without reputation, low born, mean; unacquainted with, ignorant of.

Illex, icis, f., a holm-oak.

Illis, òrum, n. pl., the groin, flank, bowels.

Ilacus, a, um, [īlium], adj., of Ilium, Trojan.

Ilioneus, ei, (quadrisyly.), m., the youngest son of Niobe.

Illic, [abl. f., Illīc, supply viā], adv., that way, on that side, there.

Ille, a, ud, demonstr. pron., that, that (wonder); the famous, the well known; subs., he, she, it.

Illic, [illī (locat. of ille) + ce], adv., there, in that place.

Illinc, [illīm + ce], adv., from that place, from that side.

Illic, [Illic], adv., to that place, in that direction.

Imāgō, inis, f., an image, likeness, form, figure, shape; aspect, impersonation; reflected image, reflection; recollected image, picture, recollection; conceived image, conception, thought.

Imbellis, e, [In- + bellum], adj., unwarlike.

Imber, bris, m., a rain storm, storm, rain.

Imbuō, ere, i, ētus, to wet, moisten, stain.

Imıtāmen, inis, [imitor], n., an imitation, likeness, copy.

Imıtātrix, icis, [imitor], f., one who imitates, an imitator.

Imitor, ēri, ētus, to imitate, represent.

(Im-mādēscō), ere, madul, —, to become wet.

Immānis, e, adj., of monstrous size, huge, vast, enormous, mighty.
mmedicābilis, e, [in- + medicā- bils, curable], adj., incurable.
immemor, oris, [in-+memor], adj., unmindful, heedless, forgetful, unappreciative.
immōnsus, a, um, [in- + mōnsus, part. mōtor], adj., without measure, immense, boundless, vast, huge; in immōnsum, without end, exceeding ly, to a boundless extent.
immergō, ere, mersē, mersus, [in + mergō, to plunge], to plunge into, immerse, drown, overwhelm.
immeritus, a, um, [in- + meritus], adj., undeserving (of punishment), innocent, guiltless.
immineō, āre, —, —, [in- + root in minor], to hang over, overhang, project over; be at hand, impend; be eager for, long for, be intent upon.
immiscēō, āre, ul, mixtus, [in+ miscēō], to mingle in or with, stir up together.
immittīs, e, [in- + mitēs], adj., harsh, cruel, merciless, pitiless, fierce, savage; rough (in appearance).
immittō, ere, misī, misus, [in + mittō], to send or let in, admit; let loose, let go; slacken, let flow freely.
immōbilis, e, [in- + mōbilis], adj., immovable, stubborn, hard hearted.
immorlor, trī, mortuus, [in + morlor], to die upon, fall dead upon.
immōtus, a, um, [in- + mōtus, part. moveō], adj., unmoved, unchangeable, fixed, steadfast, unshaken, motion less.
immūnis, e, [in- + mūnus], adj., free from obligation; w. tellus, untilled, unoccupied; unburdened, untaxed, neglected, excused; free from, exempt from; shunning.
immurmurō, āre, —, —, [in+ murmurō, to murmur], to murmur in or into.
immutō, āre, āvi, ātus, [in + mutō], to change, alter, transform.
impar, aris, [in- + pār], adj., unequal, uneven.
impatiens, entis, [in- + patiēnsa], adj., intolerant, impatient; avoid ing; unable to bear, govern, or control.
impēdiō, ire, iver (īi), itus, [in+pēs], to entangle; obstruct, check, impede.
impellō, ere, pulī, pulus, [in + pellō], to push or strike against, strike, hit, smite; drive or push on, set in motion, urge on, move, impel, stir.
impendō, ere, I, pēnsus, [in + pendō], to weigh out; expend, employ, use; w. sanguinem, to shed.
impercussus, a, um, [in- + part. percūtiō], adj., not struck; w. pedēs, noiseless.
imperfectus, a, um, [in- + perfectus, part. perficiō], adj., unfinished, incomplete, imperfect.
imperium, ii, [imperō], n., a word of authority, behest, command, mandate; authority, power, control.
imperō, āre, āvi, ātus, [in + parō], to order, command; control, govern.
impes, pes, [impetō, to rush upon], m., only abl. sing., violence, force.
impetus, us, [impetō, to rush upon], m., attack, onset, assault, violence; impetus, momentum.
impiger, gra, grum, [in- + piger], adj., not indolent, quick, active, eager, nothing loath.
impius, a, um, [in- + pius], adj., irreverent, sacrilegious, impious, accursed, wicked, fell.
implicābilis, i, [in- + plācābilis, appeasable], adj., unappeasable, implacable.
implicēō, āre, āvi, ātus, [in + plicēō, to fill], to fill up, fill full, fill out, fill.
implicō, āre, āvi, ātus, or ul, itus, [in + plicō, to fold], to fold into, infold, twine around, encircle.
implōrō, āre, āvi, ātus, [in + plōrō, to lament], to implore, beseech, entreat.
impluo, ere, —, —, [in + pluō, to rain], to rain upon.
imponō, ere, posui, positus, [in + pōnō], to place or put in, into, or upon; place, put, give to.
improbus, a, um, [in- + probus, honest], adj., bold, shameless, insolent, rude, malicious, cruel, ruthless, wanton.

imprudens, entis, [in- + prudens = prvidens, foreseeing], adj., without knowing, unaware, unsuspecting.

impūbēs, is, [in- + pūbēs, adult], adj., youthful, young, beardless.

impūgnō, āre, āvi, ātus, [in + pū- gnō], to fight against, attack, assail.

impulsō, ūs, [impellō], m., push, pressure, impulse.

impune, [impūnus, in- + poena], adv., without punishment, with impunity, safely, unharmed, without danger.

imūs, a, um, adj. (see Inferus).

in, prep. w. abl. and acc.; (1) w. abl., (a) of space, in, among, on; (b) of time, in, during, at; (c) of other relations, in, in respect to, as, by way of, considering, in the case of, in regard to, in connection with, toward, at; (2) w. acc., (a) of space, w. vbs. of motion, into or to, up to, down to, toward; (b) of time, until, for; (c) of other relations, in accordance with, after the manner of, to, toward, against, for, for the purpose of.

in-, inseparable negative particle, un-, in-, not.

Inachidēs, ae, [Inachus], m., a male descendent of Inachus; the name is applied to Epaphus, as the son of Io; and Perseus, as descended from Argus kings.

Inachis, idēs, [Inachus], f., a female descendent of Inachus, e.g., Io.

Inachus, I, [’īwaxos], m., the first king of Argos, father of Io.

inaequālis, e, adj., uneven, unequal, of different sizes.

inamābilis, e, adj., unlovely, hateful, gloomy.

inamoenus, a, um, adj., unpleasant, uneasy, gloomy.

inānis, e, adj., empty, void, vacant, bare; empty, useless, meaningless, vain; unavailing; lifeless.

in-armatus, a, um, [in- + part. arī], adj., unplowed, untiiled, fallow.

inārdēscō, ere, ārsi, —, [in + inch. ardeo], to kindle, take fire, burn.

inādēius, a, um, [caedō], adj., uncut, not felled.

inācalēscō, ere, calūf, —, [in + inch. caleō], to grow warm, be heated, glow, kindle.

inācandēscō, ere, canduli, —, [in + inch. candeo], to grow warm, be heated, glow, kindle.

inācautus, a, um, adj., unsuspecting, off one’s guard.

inācēdō, ere, cessē, cessus, to go, walk, proceed, advance.

incendium, ii, [incendō, to set fire to], n., fire, conflagration; blaze, glow, flame.

inceptum, i, [incipiō], n., an undertaking, attempt, beginning.

incertum, [incertus], adv., doubtfully; w. vigilāns, half awake.

incertus, a, um, adj., uncertain, unsettled; ill aimed, erring.

incessō, ere, —, —, [freq. incādō], to assail, attack.

incidō, ere, cīdī, cīsus, [in + cae- dō], to cut into, cut; engrave.

incingō, ere, cīnxi, cīnctus, to gird, bind about, wreath.

inciπiō. ere, cēpi, ceptus, [in + capīō], to begin something or begin to do something; begin, to begin, to be.

incitāre, āvi, ātus, to set in rapid motion; incite, stimulate, urge on, rouse.

incilitus, a, um, [part. of *includeo, to make illustrous], adj., illustrous, renowned, famous.

incluīdō. ere, cūsī, cūsus, [in + claudō], to shut up, shut in, inclose, secrete.

incognitus, a, um, adj., unknown, strange.

incola, ae, [incola, to inhabit], m., an inhabitant, resident, native.

incumbētus, a, um, adj., unattended, without an attendant or escort.

incônśolābilis, e, adj., inconsiderable.
in-consumptus, a, um, adj., un Consumed.
in-coquū, ere, cōxi, coctus, to boil, See the.
incrementum, l. [incrēscō], n., Growth, increase, increment.
in-crēpō, āre, uī, itus, to sound, re Sound, cause to sound; cry aloud to, chide, rebuke.
in-crēscō, ere, crēvi, —, to grow in or upon; grow, swell, be swollen.
in-cubō, āre, uī, itus, to lie upon; rest upon.
in-cumbō, āre, cubul, cubitus, to Lay one’s self upon anything, rest or lie upon; fall upon; throw one’s self upon; hang over, lean over or upon.
in-currō, āre, currī (occurrī), currus, to run into, rush in, attack.
in-curārī, āre, āvī, ātus, [frec. in currō], to run into, run against, attack.
incursus, us, [incurrūs], m., an assault, attack, onset; impetus, effort.
in-curvō, āre, āvī, ātus, to bend, curve; incurvāta w. membra, writhing.
in-curvus, a, um, adj., bent, curved, hooked.
in-custōditus, a, um, adj., unwatched, unguarded.
inde, adv., from that place, thence; from that time, after that; from that source, from that one.
in-dēfessus, a, um, adj., unwearied.
in-dēiectus, a, um, adj., not thrown down, not overwhelmed.
in-dēlēbilis, e, adj., imperishable.
in-deplorātus, a, um, adj., unwept.
index, icis, m., one who points out, an informer; a sign mark, indication, proof.
Indī, ōrum, m. pl., the inhabitants of India, the Indians; used loosely for the Persians, Ethiopians, etc.
indicium, lī, n., a disclosure, discovery, charge, testimony, evidence.
Indiges, etis, [Indu, old form of in genō, to beget], m., a deified hero; patron deity of a country.

OVID — 30

in-digestus, a, um, adj., unorganized, confused.
inignō, [indignus], adv., unworthy, unmercifully.
inignor, āri, ātus, [indignus], to be indignant, deem unworthy, disdain; chafe, fret, be enraged, angry.
inignitus, a, um, adj., unworthy, undeserving, shameful, undeserving.
inlēscō, ere, dolui, —, [in + freq. dolēs], to feel pain, be grieved, be distressed.
in-domitus, a, um, adj., ungovernable, stubborn, fiery; unconquered, untamed.
in-duō, ere, duxi, ductus, to draw on, draw over, bring in or on, put on.
indulgeō, āre, duei, dultus, to indulge in, give one’s self up to, yield to, humor.
induē, ere, I, indūtus, to put on, assume; in pass. w. reflex. meaning, put on, clothe one’s self in, wear, have.
indūrēscō, ere, indūrul, —, [inch. indūrō, to make hard], to harden, stiffen; w. saxō, turn to stone.
indūtus, a, um, [part. induē], adj., clad, covered, arrayed, enveloped.
in-fūctābilis, e, adj., inevitable.
in-emptus, a, um, adj., unbought, without a ransom.
in-eō, īre, ivi (II), itus, to enter, go into.
inermis, e, [in + arma], adj., unarmed, defenseless, without arms.
inera, eritis, [in + ara], adj., unskillful; helpless, weak, effeminate, lazy, sluggish, tame; lifeless, dead.
in-explētus, a, um, adj., not filled, unsatisfied.
in-expūgnābilis, e, adj., impregnable, invincible; w. grāmen, not to be rooted out.
in-extinctus, a, um, adj., unextinguished, unextinguishable.
infāmia, ae, [infāmis], f., ill fame, disgrace, injustice.
infāmis, e, [in + fama], adj., of ill repute, ill omened, disreputable, disgraceful.
Infans, fantis, [in- + for], m., f., one without speech, an infant.
Infaustus, a, um, adj., illomened; ill-fated, unfortunate.
Infactus, a, um, [in- + factus], adj., not made or done, unfinished.
In-felix, fis, adj., unhappy, unlucky, unfortunate, ill-fated.
Inferiae, arum, [Inferus], f., sacrifices in honor of the dead.
Infernus, a, um, [Inferus], adj., underground, infernal, belonging to the lower world.
In-fero, ferre, tuil, inficium, to bring, carry or bear to or into.
Inferus, a, um, [see Infræ], adj., below, underneath, in the Under World; comp. inferior, inferior, lower, worse, meaner; superi, imus, a, um, the lowest, deepest, the bottom of, inmost, the depths of, the end of, the lowest part of; of or belonging to the lower world.
Infestō, are, —, —, [Infestus], to disturb, infest.
Infestus, a, um, adj., made unsafe, disturbed; that makes unsafe, hostile, dangerous, deadly, fatal, threatening.
Inficiō, ere, faciō, fectus, [in + faciō], to stain, tinge, dye, color; to pollute, corrupt, infect.
Infigō, ere, fixō, fixus, to fix upon, impale; fasten, fix in.
Inficiōri, āri, ātus, [in- + fateor], to deny, disown.
Inflō, are, avi, ātus, to blow or breathe into or upon, inflate.
Infræ, [for Infera, supply parte], adv., below, underneath; w. comparative sense, lower.
Infringō, ere, frēgi, frāctus, [in + frangō], to break off, break, bruise.
Infundō, ere, fūdī, fūsus, to pour on, in; pour or spread over; pour through, infuse, communicate to, impart.
Ingeminō, are, avi, ātus, to redouble, reiterate, repeat.
In-gemō, ere, gemulī, —, to groan, lament, sigh over.

Ingeniosus, a, um, [Ingenium], adj., able, clever, ingenious.
Ingenium, i, [in- + root gen, to produce], innate quality; nature, temperament; character, disposition, natural feelings; mind, intellect; wit, craft, cunning, skill, natural ability.
Ingens, entis, [in- + root gen], adj., not natural, monstrous, enormous, huge, vast, immense, great, mighty, massive, stalwart.
Ingenua, a, um, [in- + root gen], adj., native, natural; freeborn; noble, upright, candid, ingenious.
In-gerō, ere, gesi, gestus, to throw in, heap upon, heap up.
In-gratōrius, a, um, adj., ungrateful, irreligious, unappreciative.
Ingredior, i, gressus, [in- + gradior], to go or walk in or into, walk, go along, advance, proceed.
In-haerē, ēre, hæsi, hæsus, to stick fast, cleave, cling to or upon, fasten upon.
Inhibēō, ēre, utus, [in- + habēō], to hold in, keep back, restrain, curb, check.
In-honestus, a, um, adj., ignominious, shameful, dishonorable.
In-honōrius, a, um, adj., unhonored, disregarded, unrewarded.
In-hospitōs, a, um, adj., inhospitable.
In-humātus, a, um, adj., unburied.
Iniciō, ere, læci, lectus, [in- + faciō], to throw, cast, hurl at, upon or into; w. manum and dat. of persons, to lay hands on, seize; w. super, throw over or around.
Inimicus, a, um, [in- + alicus], adj., hostile, unfriendly, hateful; injurious, hurtful, destructive.
Iniquus, a, um, [in- + sequus], adj., unfair, unjust, partial, hostile, spiteful, adverse; unfavorable, disadvantageous; hurtful, injurious; unsleeping, impatient, discontented.
Initium, i, [ineō], n., a beginning; auspices; secret sacred rites, sacred mysteries.
initus, tis, [inēd̪], m., approach, generative union.

infiria, ae, [infirius, from in- + fus], f., injury, injustice, wrong; insult, affront; a sense of injury, wrong, leading to a desire for revenge.

in-fāstus, a, um, adj., unjust, unrighteous, cruel; wrongful; one-sided, uneven.

in-fōdō, ere, ēdā, ēsus, [in- + laedō, to hurt], to strike, dash into or upon, drive upon; crush into, crush.

in-imis, e, [in- + limus], adj., without mud, clear.

in-līnō, ere, līvilis, litus, to smear over, spread upon.

in-lōdō, ere, ēdā, ēsus, to play with, make sport of, mock, jeer at; cheat, snare.

in-lustris, e, adj., bright, clear; illustrious, famous, renowned.

in-nūbilis, e, adj., in which nothing can swim.

in-nātus, a, um, native, inborn, inherent, natural.

in-nectō, ere, nēxulī, nexus, to tie, fasten, bind; bind about, wreath.

in-nitor, i, nīxus, to lean upon, support one's self by, rest upon.

in-nocuus, a, um, adj., harmless, innocent, inoffensive.

in-numerus, a, um, adj., innumerable, countless, without number.

in-nuptus, a, um, adj., unmarried, virgin.

in-ops, opis, adj., poor, needy, bereft of, destitute of.

in-ōmnītus, a, um, adj., unadorned, without ornament.

inquam, is, it, defect. vb., after one or more words of a quotation, to say.

inquirō, ere, quisīvi, quisitūs, [in- + quaserō], to seek after, search for; search into, examine, investigate.

in-requisītus, a, um, adj., unquiet, restless.

in-resolūtus, a, um, adj., not loosened.

inrideō, āre, rīdā, rīsus, [in- + rideō], to laugh at, mock, deride.

inrītēmen, inis, [inrītō], n., an incitement, incentive.

inrītēmentum, i, [inrītō], n., an incitement, incentive.

inrītō, āre, āvi, ātus, to incite, excite, stir up, inflame.

inritis, a, um, [in- + ratus, fixed by calculation], adj., invalid; vain, in vain, without effect; to no purpose.

in-rōrō, āre, āvi, ātus, to bedew, moisten, besprinkle, wet.

in-rumpō, ere, rūpi, ruptus, to burst or rush in or into.

in-sānus, a, um, adj., of unsound mind, insane, mad.

in-scius, a, um, adj., not knowing, ignorant, unconscious, unwitting.

in-scribō, ere, scripsi, scriptus, to write on, mark, trace.

in-sequor, i, secūtus, to follow; follow up, pursue.

in-serō, ere, ui, tus, to put in, insert, introduce, thrust in or into.

in-sidiae, ārum, f. pl., an ambush; stratagem, trick, plot, snare, wiles, treachery.

in-sidior, ari, atus, [Insidiae], to lie in ambush, plot against, make plots.

in-signis, e, [in- + signum], adj., marked, distinguished, remarkable, extraordinary, beautiful, noted.

in-sistō, ere, stiti, —, to stand or tread upon, set foot on, take one's stand upon.

in-sitīō, ōnis, [Inserō], f., a grafting; time of grafting.

in-solidus, a, um, adj., not solid, tender.

in-solitus, a, um, adj., unaccustomed, unusual, unfamiliar, strange.

in-somnia, e, [in- + somnus], adj., sleepless, ever watching.

in-sōnā, āre, ui, —, to sound loudly, resound, roar; make music with, play upon.

in-sōns, sonis, adj., guiltless, innocent, harmless.

in-sōpitus, a, um, adj., sleepless, wakeful.

in-spiciō, ere, spēxi, spectus, [in
VOCABULARY

+ *speciēō, to look], to look into, inspect.
In-spirō, āre, āvi, ātus, to breathe into, blow upon.
In-stabils, e, adj., unsteady, unstable, not firm, giving no support, offering no foothold.
Instar, indeclin. n., an image, likeness; in apposition = adj., like.
In-stillō, āre, āvi, ātus, to pour in by drops, drop in.
Instituō, ēre, ī, ātus, [in + statuō], to build, erect, found; establish, ordain, appoint.
In-stō, stāre, stītī, status, to press upon, pursue; press forward, push on, approach; urge, press, insist.
Instrictus, a, um, [part. *instringō, to bind], adj., bound, fastened; inward with, set with.
In-struō, ēre, strūxi, structus, to draw up, arrange, set in order, prepare, make ready; furnish, provide with, fit out, equip; instruct, train.
In-suētus, a, um, adj., unaccustomed, unused; unusual.
Insula, ae, t., an island.
In-sultō, āre, āvi, ātus, to spring or leap at or upon.
In-sum, inesse, inful, to be in, be there.
In-super, adv., moreover, besides, in addition.
In-superābilis, e, adj., unconquerable.
In-tēbēscō, ere, tabul-, —, [in + inch. tabēō, to melt away], to waste away; melt away, dissolve.
In-tactus, a, um, adj., untouched; pure, undesiled.
Integer, gra, grum, [in- + root tag in tangō], adj., whole, unimpaired, vigorous, fresh; unharmed, untouched by misfortune.
Intellegō, ēre, ēxi, ēctus, [inter + legō], to perceive, understand, appreciate.
In-tendō, ēre, ī, tentus, to stretch out, stretch, spread, extend.
Intendō, āre, āvi, ātus, [intens. intendō], to stretch out, hold out threateningly, brandish.
In-tēpēscō, ere, tepul, —, [inch. intepēō, to be lukewarm], to become warm, be warmed.
Inter, prep. w. acc., between, among, during, in the midst of; w. reflex., with one another, together, mutually.
Inter-dum, adv., sometimes, now and then, meanwhile.
Inter-eā, adv., meanwhile.
Inter-eō, īre, ītūrus, to perish, go to ruin, die, be destroyed.
Interimō, ēre, ēmi, ēemptus, [inter + emō, to buy], to take away, do away with; destroy, slay.
Interior, ius [Inter], comp. adj., interior, on the inside, inner, within.
Interius, [from neut. of interior], adv., on the inside, within.
Inter-mittō, ēre, miel, missus, to leave off, suspend, interrupt, neglect.
Internōdium, ī, [inter + nodus, a knot, joint], n., the space between two joints.
In-territus, a, um, adj., untried, undaunted, fearless.
In-texō, ēre, ui, tus, to weave in, embroider.
Intibūm, ī, n., endive, succory.
Intimus, a, um, adj. (superl. of interior), inmost.
In-tonō, āre, ui, ātus, to thunder, resound.
In-tonsus, a, um, adj., unshaven, unshorn, untrimmed, shaggy.
Intra, [contr. from interā, supply parte], adv. and prep., within.
In-tremō, ēre, ui, —, to tremble, quake, shake.
In-trepidus, a, um, adj., fearless, undaunted.
Intrō, āre, āvi, ātus, [compare intrā], to go into, enter, penetrate.
Introitus, ūs, [introēō, to go within], m., a going in, entrance.
Intumēscō, ere, tumul, —, [in + inch. of tumēō, to swell], to swell up.
Intus, [in], adv., on the inside, within.
In-ulitus, a, um, adj., unrevenged, unavenged.
In-utilis, e, adj., useless, impotent, unprofitable.
in-vādō, ere, vāsī, vāsus, to go into, enter; rush upon, rush into, attack, invade, assail.
in-venīō, ire, vēnī, ventus, to come upon, find; find out, discover; procure, obtain.
inventum, i, [Inventus, part. inventīō], n., device, contrivance, invention.
in-vergō, ere, —, —, to pour upon.
in-victus, a, um, adj., unconquered, invincible.
in-videō, ēre, vidī, visus, to look askance at, envy, grudge, begrudge.
invidia, ae, [Invidia], f., envy, grudge, hatred, ill will.
invidīōsus, a, um, [Invidia], adj., full of envy, indignant, spite, hate, envious; exciting envy, an object of envy, coveted, envied.
invidus, a, um, adj., envious, hateful.
invidus, a, um, [part. invidēō], adj., hated, hateful, detested, odious.
invitus, a, um, adj., against the will, unwilling, reluctant, unfriendly.
invisus, a, um, [In- + via], adj., pathless, inaccessible, impassable.
in-volvō, ēre, i, volūtus, to wrap up, envelop, involve, infold.
in, interj., O! oh! quick!
Io, Iō, [Iēa], a daughter of Inachus, beloved by Jupiter, and changed by him, through fear of Juno, into a heifer.
Iolciacus, a, um, [Iolchus], adj., Iolchian, belonging to Iolchus, a town and harbor of Thessaly whence Jason is said to have sailed with the Argonauts.
Iolō, ēs, [Iōna], f., a daughter of Eurytus, king of Oechalia.
Iphigenia, ae, [Iphīgēnēa], f., a daughter of Agamemnon and Clytemnestra.
Iphitidēs, ae, [Iphitus], m., the son of Iphitus, one of the Argonauts.
ipse, a, um, intens. pron., self, himself, herself, itself, themselves, I myself, etc.; the very.
ira, ae, f., anger, wrath, rage, resentment.
Irāscor, i, Irātus, [Ira], to be angry, be in a rage, be furious.
Iris, idis, [Īpis], f., the messenger of Juno.
Is, ea, id, demonstr. pron., he, she, it, this, that, such.
Ismarius, a, um, [Ismarōs], adj., of or belonging to Ismarus, a mountain in Thrace; Ismarian, Thracian.
Ismēnis, idis, f., a Thewan woman, poetically so called from the river Ismenus.
Ismēnois, I, [Ismēνēs], m., a river near Thebes; one of the sons of Niobe.
Iste, a, ud, demonstr. pron., this or that of yours, referring to the person spoken to, often with an idea of contempt; such.
Ita, adv., thus, so.
Iter, itineris, [for itiner, from Ierē], n., a way, journey, march, road, path, passage.
Iterō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [Iterum], to repeat, renew, redouble.
Iterum, adv., again, a second time.
Ithaca, ae, [Iēvak], f., an island in the Ionian Sea, the home of Ulysses.
Ithacus, a, um, [Ithaca], adj., Ithacan; subs., Ithacus, i, m., Ithacus, i.e., Ulysses.
Iτys, Ityos, [Iūvēs], m., the son of Tereus and Progne, killed by his mother and served up to his father for food.
Iuba, ae, f., the mane of an animal.
Iuba, ae, m., a Numidian king.
Iubar, aris, n., a ray of light, sunshine, radiance; a star.
Iuβēō, ēre, iussi, iussus, to order, bid, command; urge, advise, exhort, entreat.
Iucundus, a, um, adj., pleasant, delightful, genial.
Iūdex, ica, [Iūs + dicō], m., f., a judge, umpire.
Iūdicium, ii, [Iūdēx], n., a judgment, decision; estimation, opinion.
Iugālis, e, [Iugum], adj., pertaining to a yoke; bridial, nuptial, conjugal, of marriage.
VOCABULARY

Igurum, I, n., a juger of land, a little more than half an English acre.

Iugōsa, a, um, [jugum], adj., mountainous.

Iugulō, āre, āvi, ātus, [jugulum], to cut the throat, kill, slay, murder.

Iugulum, I, [dim. jugum], n., the collar bone; the throat, neck.

Iugum, I, [from root in lungō], n., a yoke, collar; a height, mountain ridge, hill.

Iulius, I, m., the name of a Roman gens, the most noteworthy members of which were C. Julius Caesar, and his adopted son, Augustus.

Iulus, I, m., a name of Ascanius, son of Aeneas, and grandson of Venus.

Iuncōsa, a, um, [iuncus, a rush], adj., full of rushes, reedy.

Iunctus, a, um [part. iungō], adj., united, connected, attached, mated, associated, kindred, contiguous, adjacent, related.

Iungō, ēre, ēnxi, iunctus, to join, unite, connect, attach, fasten; yoke, harness.

Iuno, ōnis, f., a goddess, daughter of Saturn, sister and wife of Jove.

Iūnōnius, a, um, adj., pertaining to June, Juno’s, Junonian.

Iuppiter, Iovis, m., Jupiter, the supreme deity of the Romans, the same as the Greek Zeus.

Iārgium, II, [iārgo, to quarrel], n., a brawling, strife.

Iūrō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [ius], to take an oath, swear, conspire; swear by something.

Iūs, iūris, n., right, justice, obligation, law, a system of law.

Iussum, I, [iusus, part. iubeō], n., an order, command.

Iāstē, [iāstus], adv., rightly, justly.

Iāstus, a, um, [iās], adj., just, upright, righteous; impartial, equitable, fair; due, proper, suitable, sufficient.

Iuvenālis, ē, [juvenilis], adj., youthful, of youth, juvenile.

Iuvenālitēr, [iuvēnilis], adv., in a youthful manner; rashly, with rash haste.

Iuvencā, ae, [iūvenca], f., a heifer.

Iuvencus, I, [iūvenis], m., a bullock.

Iuvenilīs, ē, [iūvenils], adj., youthful, juvenile, early.

Iuvenis, is, m., a young man, a young person, a youth.

Iuventā, ae, [iūvenis], f., youth, the period of youth; person, the goddess of youth.

Iuvō, āre, īavi, ītus, to assist, help, aid, benefit; quid iuvat? what avails it? please, be pleasant, delight.

Ixōn, ōnis, [iōn], m., king of the Lapithae, and father of Pirithous; in punishment of his crimes, he was bound fast to an ever revolving wheel in Tartarus.

Kalendae, ārum, [cālō, cālēs, to call], f., the day of proclamation, Calends, the first day of the month.

L

Labefaciō, ēre, fēcl, factus, [labē + factō], to cause to totter or waver, shake, weaken, loosen.

Lābēs, is, [lābor], f., a fall, falling down, a downfall; a spot, stain, blemish.

Labo, āre, āvi, ātus, to totter, stagger, be loosened, given way, yield, be unsteady, roll as a ship, waver.

Lābor, i, lāpsum, to slide or glide along, about or away; fall, fall or slip down; sink, fail, decline in death, die.

Labor [old form labōs], ōris, m., labor, toil, struggle; work, task; hardship, disaster, toil, trouble; lūnæ labōrēs, eclipses of the moon.

Labōrē, āre, āvi, ātus, [lābor], to labor, exert one’s self, strive, struggle; be in difficulty; be in danger; grieve, be concerned, be solicitous, anxious.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Word</th>
<th>Meaning</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>lábrum, I.</td>
<td>[for lavábrum from lavó], n., a basin, tub, bath.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lác, lactis,</td>
<td>milk.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lacer, era, erum, a., I., lacerated, mutilated, mangled, broken, wrecked.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lacerós, are, ávi, átus, [lacer], to tear, rend, lacerate, mutilate.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lacertus, I. m., the muscular part of the upper arm from the elbow to the shoulder, the arm.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lacescós, are, ívi (II), ítus, [lació, to entice], to excite, provoke, stir up, arouse, challenge; assail, strike.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lacrima, ae, f., a tear.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lacrimós, are, ávi, átus, [lacrima], to weep, shed tears. drop tears.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lacrimósus, a, um, [lacrima], adj., full of tears, tearful; causing tears, dolorous, gloomy.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lacténas, entis, [part. lactéus, to suck milk], adj., taking milk; yielding, milky, sappy, juicy, tender.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lacteus, a, um, [lác], adj., milky, milk white; w. vis., the Milky Way.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lacus, õs, m., a lake, pond, pool.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ládnón, õnis, [Ládon], m., a river of Arcadia which flows into the Alpheus.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>laedo, are, laesi, laesus, to strike, injure, mar, damage by striking, pierce, wound; to hurt, vex, offend, thwart, injure, harm, violate, betray; quantum lacedat, how harmful it is; stir up, arouse.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Láertés, ae, [Làértés], m., the father of Ulysses.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Láertiadés, ae, [Làertiadés], m., the son of Laertes, Ulysses.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Láertius, a, um, [Làertés], adj., of Laertes, Laertian.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lactor, ärí, átus, [laetus], to rejoice, be glad.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>laetus, a, um, adj., joyful, glad, cheerful, happy; fortunate, lucky, auspicious; rich, fertile, abundant, luxuriant.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lævus, a, um, [lávós], adj., left, on the left hand or side.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lambós, are, —, —, to lick, lap.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lámina, ae, f., a thin plate, leaf, layer.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>láña, ae, f., wool.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lancea, ae, f., a lance, spear.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>languageós, are, —, —, to be faint; droop, be languid, listless, dull.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>languageóc, are, langui, —, [inch. languageós], to become faint, grow weak, be languid, droop.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>languidus, a, um, [languageós], adj., weak, faint, dull, languid.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lániger, era, erum, [lāna + geró], adj., wool bearing, woolly, fleecy.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lanló, are, ávi, átus, [lanius, a butcher], to tear, rend, mutilate, mangle.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lándugós, finis, [lāna], f., down.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lapidosus, a, um, [lapis], adj., stony, full of stones.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lapillus, I, [dim. lapsis], m., a little stone, pebble, precious stone, gem.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lapsis, idis, m., a stone.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lápsus, õs, [lábos], m., a sliding or gliding motion of any kind; flowing, course.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>laqueus, I, [lació, to entice], m., a noose, snare, gin, trap.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lár, laris, chiefly pl., larés, um, m., a tutelar deity, guardian spirit; (meton.) a house, home, dwelling.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lascivus, a, um, adj., wanton, frisky, sportive.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lassó, are, ávi, átus, [lassus], to tire, weary, exhaust.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lassus, a, um, adj., wearied, tired, exhausted, faint.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>láté, [látus], adv., broadly, widely, far and wide, extensively.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>latebra, ae, [latebō], f., a hiding place, place of ambush, a dark hollow; obscurity.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>latebō, are, ul, —, to lie hid, be concealed, lurk.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>latex, icis, m., a liquid, fluid.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>latittó, are, ávi, átus, [freq. latebō], to lie hid, lie concealed.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Latius, a, um, [Latium], adj., of Latium, Latin, Roman.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Látöna, ae, [Làtön], f., the mother of Apollo and Diana.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Látönia, [Làtöna], adj., f., of or belonging to Lutona; subs., Diana.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Lätonigena, ae, [Lätona + root in gigno], m. and f., child of Latona.
Lätona, a, um, [Lätona], adj., Latona's.
läträtus, ūs, [lätro], m., a barking, baying.
lätro, äre, ävi, ätus, to bark, bay.
lätus, a, um, adj., broad, wide, extensive.
latus, eris, n., the side, flank of anything; side, region.
laudō, ärē, ärī, ärūs, [laus], to praise, laud, commend.
laurea, ae, [laurus], f., the laurel tree; leaves, twigs, or branches of the laurel; a laurel crown or garland.
Laurentēs, um, [Laurentum], m., the Lauretines, inhabitants of Laurentum.
laurus, i or õs, f., a laurel or bay tree; a laurel or bay wreath.
laus, laudis, f., glory, fame, honor, renown, praise; praiseworthy deed, noble action, merit.
lavō, ere and āre, lävi, lavāvus, lautus and lōtus, to lave, bathe, wash; wet, moisten, sprinkle.
laxus, e, um, adj., slack, loose; loose, loosened, open.
lea, ae, [compare leō], f., a lioness.
leēna, ae, [leēna], f., a lioness.
Lebinthus, i, f., one of the Sporadic isles.
lēctor, āris, [legō], m., a reader.
lectulus, i, [dim. lectus], m., a small bed, a couch.
lectus, i, m., a couch, bed.
Lēda, ae, [Ληδα], f., the wife of Tyndarus, mother, by Jupiter, of Helen.
lēgitimus, a, um, [lēx], adj., fixed by law, lawful, just, proper, regular.
legō, ere, lēgi, lēctus, to bring together, gather, collect, gather up, pick up; choose, select; read; skin, scour, sweep over, course along; w. vestigia, to follow the footsteps of any one, follow.
Lelex, egis, m., the name of an old man.
Lemnos, i, [Λήμνος], f., an island in the Aegean Sea.
lēna, ae, f., a confidential messenger, a go between.
Lēnaeus, a, um, [Ληναῖος], adj., belonging to the wine press; an epithet of Bacchus as god of wine.
lēniō, ire, ivi (iī), ītus, [lēnis], to soothe, assuage, calm, soften.
lēnis, e, adj., soft, gentle, light, mild.
lentēs, [lentus], adv., slowly, sluggishly.
Centus, a, um, [compare lēnis], adj., pliant, flexible, tough; lingering, slow, smoldering, sluggish; at ease, at rest, easy, calm, indifferent.
leō, ōnis, [λέω], m., a lion; the constellation Leo.
lepus, eris, m., a hare.
Lerna, ae, [Λέρνη], f., a forest and marsh near Argos, where lived the Hydra which was slain by Hercules.
Lēnaeus, a, um, [Lerna], adj., Lernaean, of Lerna.
Lesbicus, isis, [Lēsbois], adj., f., Lesbian.
Lesbos, i, [Λήσβος], f., a celebrated island in the Aegean Sea, the birthplace of the three famous Greek poets, Alcaeus, Arion, and Sappho.
lēthis, e, [lētum], adj., deadly, fatal.
Lēthaeus, a, um, [Lēthèque, Gr. Λήθη], adj., of Lethe, a river of Hades, whose waters, if drunk, produced forgetfulness of the past; Lethean.
lētifer, eras, erum, [lētum + ferō], adj., death dealing, deadly.
lētō, āre, āvi, ātus, [lētum], to kill, slay.
lētum, i, n., death, ruin, destruction.
lever, e, adj., light in weight, motion, or importance; shadowy, unsubstantial; swift, fleet, quick flying; light, tripping, trivial, unimportant, petty, slight.
lēvis, e, adj., smooth, polished.
levitas, ōsis, [levis], f., lightness.
leviter, [levis], adv., lightly, slightly.
levō, āre, āvi, ātus, [levis], to lift up, raise, elevate, bear up; lift up preparatory to removing from below,
VOCABULARY

Lilybaeum, I, n., Lilybaeum, a promontory on the southwestern coast of Sicily.

limen, inis, [ligō], n., a threshold, sill; a doorway, an entrance; a house, palace, temple; realm, region.

limes, itis, m., a path, track, trail; boundary, limit, line of demarcation or division.

limösus, a, um, [limus], adj., muddy, miry.

limus, I, m., mud, mire, slime.

lingua, ae, f., the tongue; speech, word, language.

liniger, era, erum, [linum + gērō], adj., linen wearing, clothed in linen.

linō, ere, lēvi, litus, to daub, besmeur, anoint.

linquō, ere, liqui, — to leave, desert, abandon, forsake, quit, depart from, leave behind.

linteum, I, [linteus, from linum], n., linen cloth; a sail.

linum, I, n., flax; a thread, chord, rope.

liquēfaciō, ere, —, factus, [liqueō + faciō], pass., liquefliō, fier, factus, to make liquid, melt, dissolve; weaken, enervate.

liquēfactus, a, um, [part. liquēfaciō], adj., liquid, molten, fluid; clear.

liqueō, ēre, licui, — to be fluid; (only third person sing.), to be clear, manifest, evident, apparent.

liqueō, ēre, licui, — [inch. liqueō], to grow fluid; grow soft, melt, dissolve.

liquidus, a, um, [liqueō], adj., liquid, fluid, mobile; clear, limpid; w. sorōres, water nymphs.

liquor, liquī, — [liqueō], to become liquid, melt, dissolve.

liquor, ēris, [liqueō], m., a fluid, liquid.

lis, litis, f., strife, contest.

litō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, to sacrifice; make atonement, appease; give favorable omens.

litoreus, a, um, [litus], adj., of the seashore, on the shore.
littera, ae, f., a letter, letter of the alphabet; epistle.
litus, oris, n., the seashore, beach, coast, strand.
livēns, entis, [part. livēō, to be black and blue], adj., bluish, dark colored, livid.
lividus, a, um, [livēō], adj., of a dark blue or lead color, leaden, dusky; envious, spiteful, malicious.
livor, čris, [livēō], m., bluish, leaden color; envy, spite, malice.
locēs, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [locus], to place, put in place, set.
locus, i, [pl. loci and loca], m., a place, spot, region, locality; room, place, opportunity, chance.
 lolium, ii, n., darnel, tares.
longēs, [longus], adv., far, long, of place, time, and degree.
longius, [comp. of longēs], adv., further, longer.
longus, a, um, adj., long, long continued, of long duration, tedious; deep, vast.
loquāxis, aquis, [loquor], adj., talkative, chattering, loquacious, talking, speaking.
loquor, i, locitus, to speak, say.
lōrica, ae, [lōrum], f., a leather cuirass, a coat of mail, corselet, doublet.
lōrum, i, n., a leather thong; in pl., reins.
lūceō, ōre, ēxi, —, to shine, beam, gleam.
lūcidus, a, um, [lūceō], adj., bright, shining, clear.
lūcifer, era, erum, [lux + ferō], adj., light-bearing; subs. Lúcifer, eri, m., the light bringer, the morning star; dawn, day.
Lucretius, i, m., the poet T. Lucretius Carus, author of the poem De Rerum Natura.
lūctisonus, a, um, adj., sad sounding, doleful.
lūctor, ári, ātus, [lūcta, a wrestling], to struggle, wrestle, strive.
lūctus, us, [lūgeō], m., sorrow, lamentation, mourning, grief, woe.
lūcus, i, m., a sacred grove, a grove or wood in general.
lūdius, ii, [lūdus], m., a stage player, actor.
lūdō, ere, lūsi, lūsus, to sport, play, frolic; do for amusement, practice as a pastime; cheat, mock, delude, deceive.
lūdus, i, [lūdō], m., a game, contest, a public show or play; play, sport, jest, joke.
lūgeō, ōre, lūxi, lūctus, to mourn, lament, bewail.
lūgubris, e, [lūgeō], adj., mourning, sad, mournful.
lūmēn, inis, [lūceō], n., light, glow, fire; the light of day, day; the light of life, life; the light of the eye, the eye.
lūna, ae, [compare lūceō], f., the moon; moonlight.
lūnāris, e, [lūna], adj., of the moon, the moon’s.
lūnō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [lūna], to bend like a half moon, bend, curve.
lūs, ere, i, —, to wash away, atone for.
Lupercus, i, [lupus + arceō], m., a protector against wolves, an epithet of Pan; also a priest of Pan.
lupus, i, m., a wolf.
lūridus, a, um, adj., pale, wan, lurid, ghastly; that which makes to appear pale, ghastly.
lūsor, ēris, [lūdō], m., one who plays, sports; a playful, sportive writer.
lūstrō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [lūstrum], to purify by an expiatory sacrifice; survey, examine, review; traverse, search.
lūstrum, i, [luō], n., a purificatory sacrifice offered for the people by the censors every five years; the interval between such sacrifices, a period of five years; in general, a period of several years; of the Julian calendar, a period of four years.
lūsus, us, [lūdō], m., play, sport.
lutulentus, a, um, [lutum, mud], adj., muddy.
lux, lūcis, f., light, brightness; the light of day, daylight, day; the light of life, life.
VOCABULARY

luxuriō, āre, āvi, ātus, [luxural, luxury], to be luxuriant, abound; to exhibit the freshness and roundness of youth, to assume new and abundant life.
Lyaeus, l, [Λαίας], m., a surname of Bacchus, the god of wine, who delivers from care; (meton.) wine.
Lycaeus, l, [Λάκεας], m., a mountain in Arcadia devoted to the worship of Jupiter and Pan.
Lycaōn, onis, [Λάκαων], m., a king of Arcadia, whom Jupiter changed into a wolf.
Lycaōniius, a, um, [Λακάων], adj., of or belonging to Lycaon.
Lyctus, a, um, [Lycia], adj., Lycian, of Lydia, a district of Asia Minor.
Lycoōris, idis, f., the fictitious name of the mistress of the poet C. Cornelius Gallus.
Lycormas, ae, [Λυκόρμας], m., a river of Aetolia.
Lydia, ae, [Λυδία], f., a country in Asia Minor.
Lydius, a, um, [Lydia], adj., Lydian.
lymps, ae, f., pure spring or river water.
Lyncidsēs, ae, [Lyncetus], m., a descendant of Lyncetus.
lyre, ae, [Λύρα], f., a lute, lyre; (meton.) poetry, song.
Lyrceus, a, um, adj., Lycean, of or near Mount Lyceum, which is between Arcadia and Argolis.
lyricus, a, um, [lyra], adj., of the lyre, lyric.
Lyrnēsiius, a, um, [Lrynēsiius], adj., Lyrnesian, of Lyrnesus, a town in Troas, the birthplace of Briseis.

M
Macer, orl, m., Aemilius Macer, a Roman poet, friend of Vergil and Ovid.
maciās, ēi, f., leanness, emaciation.
maciō, āre, āvi, ātus, [mactus, of the gods, honored], to magnify, ex-tol, honor; to offer, sacrifice, immolate, kill, slaughter as a victim.
maculō, āre, āvi, ātus, [macula, a spot], to spot, stain, pollute.
maďeďacō, ere, feci, factus, [madeō, to be wet + faciō], to wet, soak, steep, drench.
maďēns, entis, [part. madeō, to be wet], adj., wet, moist, dripping.
maďēscō, ere, madul, —, [incho.
mađēs, to be wet], to become wet, soaked.

Maidus, a, um, [madeō, to be wet], adj., wet, drenched, soaked.
Maenandros, dri, [Mαινάνδρος], m., a river in Asia Minor, proverbial for its winding course.
Maenala, õrum, [Mαινάλαω], n. pl., a mountain range in Arcadia sacred to Pan.
Maenalis, idis, [Maenala], adj. f., of or belonging to Maenala; Arcadian.
Maenalius, a, um, [Maenala], adj., pertaining to Maenala, Maenalian, Arcadian.

Maenonia, ae, [Mαινονία], f., a province in Lydia; used poetically for Lydia.
Maenondēs, ae, [Maeonia], m., a native of Maenon or Lydia; a poetic name for Homer.
Maenius, a, um, [Maeonia], adj., Maenonian, Lydian.
maeō, ēre, —, —, to mourn, grieve, lament.
maestus, a, um, [maeō], adj., sad, mournful, sorrowful, gloomy, melancholy.

magicus, a, um, [māγικός], adj., magic.

magis, adv., more, rather.
magister, tri, [from same root (mac) with māgnus], m., a master, leader, commander; nautical, a pilot, helmsman, captain; pastoral, a shepherd.

māgnanimus, a, um, [māgnus + animus], adj., great souled, magnanimous, high spirited.

māgnus, a, um, [comp. māior, superl. māximus], adj., of physical proportions, great, large, heavy;
of sound, loud; of quantity, abundant, plenteous; of time, long; of abstract qualities, great, noble, important, grand, momentous, strong, mighty; of persons, great, mighty, noble, illustrious; of age w. comp. and superl., elder, oldest.

magus, m., a Magian, a learned man and magician among the Persians.

mâla, ae, f., the cheek bone, cheek.

male, [malus], adv., badly, wrongly, ill; wickedly, cruelty, maliciously; unskilfully, awkwardly, unfortunately, unwisely; badly, imperfectly, scarcely, barely, only, merely; not at all; male compositus, unburied; male sâna, deranged, beside one's self; excessively, more than is right; male sedulus, overzealous.

maledicô, ere, dixi, dictus, to abuse, revile, slander, asperse.

maledictum, n., an evil speech, abusive word, curse.

malignus, a, um, [from malignus = malus + gen, root of gignô], adj., malignant, malicious, wicked, spiteful.

mâlô, mâlle, mâlui, —, [magis + volô], to wish rather, prefer.

malum, I, [malus], n., an evil happening, a misfortune, misery, woe, ill, calamity; an evil deed, a crime, evil.

mâllum, I, n., an apple.

malus, a, um, adj., evil, bad, wicked, faâse: noxious, harmful, poisonous.

mandâtum, I, [mandô], n., a command, mandate, charge, order.

mandô, âre, âvi, âtus, [manus + dô], to order, command, give commission to; commit, consign, intrust to.

mânê, adv., in the morning.

maneô, âre, mâns, mânsus, to remain, stay, abide; tarry, stop; await, wait for.

mânês, fum, m. pl., the souls of the dead, the ghosts, or shades of dead persons, departed spirits.

manifestô, âre, —, —, [manifestus], to discover, disclose, betray.

manifestus, a, um, adj., clear, evident, manifest, plain, apparent.

mânô, âre, âvi, —, to flow, drip, trickle, run, ooze out.

Mantô, âs, [Mantê], f., the daughter of Tiresias, a prophetess.

Mantua, ae, f., a city of northern Italy, on the Mincius.

manus, âs, f., a hand; force, power, might, valor, brave deeds; a band of soldiers, a force.

Mácria, ae, f., the wife of Fabius Maximus, the friend of Augustus and of Ovid.

mare, is, n., the sea.

margô, inis, m., edge, brink, border, margin, shore.

marinus, a, um, [mare], adj., pertaining to the sea, sea-, marine.

marita, ae, [marítus], f., a married woman, wife.

maritus, I, [mâs], m., a husband.

marmor, oris, [mârmaros], n., marble.

marmoreus, a, um, [marmor], adj., made of marble, marble; smooth and white like marble.

Mârs, Mârtis, (old form Mâvers), m., the god of war; (meton.) war, battle, encounter, strife.

Mârtius, a, um, [Mâres], adj., of, belonging to, sacred to Mars.

mâs, maris, m. adj. as subs., a male, a creature of the male sex.

massa, ae, [mâsae], f., a lump, mass; w. lactis coctâ, cheese.

mâter, tris, f., a mother.

mâteria, ae, and mâteriâs, ae, [from same root with mâter], f., stuff, matter, material; subject-matter, theme.

mâternus, a, um, [mâter], adj., of a mother, maternal, mother's.

mâtertera, ae, [mâter], f., a mother's sister, aunt.

mâtrôna, ae, [mâter], f., a married woman, wife, matron.

mâtrûscô, ere, mâtûrul, —, [incho. mâtûrus], to ripen, come to maturity.
mātrus, a, um, adj., ripe, mature, advanced, of proper age, seasonable.
mātūrinus, a, um, [Mātūta, the goddess of dawn], adj., of the morning, morning, early.
Mēde, ae, [Mēnea], the daughter of Aeces, king of Colchis.
medicāmen, inis, [medicō, to imbue with healing power], n., a drug, medicament.
medicātus, a, um, [part. medicō], adj., sprinkled with the juices of herbs, medicated, drugged.
medicina, ae, [medicus, medicinalis], f., medicine, remedy, cure.
medius, a, um, adj., in the middle or midst, mid, middle, intermediate; sube, medium, II, n., the middle, the midst, center.
medulla, ae, f., the marrow, the innermost part, the heart, pith.
Medusa, ae, [Mēṣu[na], f., one of the three Gorgons, daughters of Phor-cus.
Medusaeus, a, um, [Medusa], adj., of Medusa, Medusan.
meil, melis, n., honey.
Melae, anes and ae, m., a river of Thrace.
Mcleager, grī, [Mēlaγe[r]̄es], m., the son of the Calydonian king Oeneus and Althaea, the leader in the famous Calydonian boar hunt.
mellior, tus, comp. adj., [see bonus], better.
mellius, adv., better; in melius, for the better.
membrāna, ae, [membrum], f., a skin, slough.
membrum, i, n., a limb, member of the body, part; the body as composed of parts, the body itself; a member of a household, or society.
memini, isse, to remember, recall, be mindful of.
memor, oris, adj., mindful, remembering, heedful.
memorō, āre, āvi, ātus, [memor], to mention, recount, relate, speak.
mendācium, ium, II, [mendāx], n., a lie, falsehood.
mendāx, ācis, adj., false, deceitful.
mēna, mentis, f., the mind, intellect, reason, judgment, heart, soul, disposition, plan, design, purpose.
mēnās, ae, [mēnas, part. mētior], f., a table; (meton.) food, viands.
mēnis, is, m., a month.
mēnōr, ōris, [mētior], m., a measurer, surveyor.
mēnōs, ae, [mētior], m., a measuring; measure, extent, size; limit, capacity, power, extent.
menta, ae, [mētēsa], f., mint.
mentor, irī, Itus, to assert falsely, lie, pretend.
Mercurius, ī, [merx, as god of traders], m., son of Jupiter and Maia, and messenger of the gods.
merō, āre, ul, Itus, and mereor, āri, Itus, to deserve, merit, be worthy of; earn, gain by desert.
mergō, ere, merei, mersus, to plunge, sink, overwhelm; hide, bury, conceal.
mergus, i, [mergō], m., a diver, a kind of waterfowl.
Mērionēs, ae, [Mēriōnēs], m., the charioteer of Cretan Idomeneus.
meritum, i, [meritus], n., desert, merit.
meritus, a, um, [part. mereō], adj., deserved, due, just, proper.
Merops, opīs, [Mērops], m., a king of Ethiopia, husband of Clymene, and reputed father of Phaethon.
mersō, āre, āvi, ātus, [freq. mergō], to dip, immerse, plunge.
merus, a, um, adj., pure, unmited; subs., merum, i, n., pure wine, wine.
merx, mercis, [merēs], f., merchandise, ware.
messis, is, [metē, to reap], f., a reaping, harvest.
mētē, ae, f., a turning point, turning post; goal, limit, end, bound.
mētior, irī, mēnus, to measure, estimate.
Mettus, i, m., better known as Mettius Fufetius, dictator of Alba, executed for his treachery by Tullus Hostilius.
metuēns, entis, [part. metuō], adj., fearing, fearful, afraid; reverent.
metuō, ere, i, —, [metus], to fear, be afraid of, shun; revere.
metus, ës, m., fear, dread, apprehension.
meus, a, um, [mēs], poss. pron., my.
mica, ae, f., a grain, e.g., of salt.
micō, ēre, ui, —, to vibrate, dart, quiver, tremble, beat, palpitate; gleam, glitter, flash.
Midas, ae, [Mīdās], m., a king of Phrygia to whom was given the power of transforming all that he touched into gold.
migrō, ēre, ēvi, ātus, to go away, depart, migrate.
miles, itis, m., a soldier.
militia, ae, [miles], f., military service, warfare, care; service, employment.
mille, adj., a thousand; in pl. subs., milia, lūm, n., thousands; understood passuum, miles.
Milōn, onis, [Mīlōn], m., a celebrated athlete of Crotona.
milius, i, m., a bird of prey, kite.
Mimās, antis, [Mīmās], m., a mountain range in Ionia.
mīnāx, ācis, [minor], adj., threatening, menacing.
Minerva, ae, [from root man, whence mēns, memini, etc.], f., the goddess of wisdom, arts, and sciences, corresponding to the Greek Pallas Athene.
minimē, [minimus], adv., least.
minimus, a, um, superl. adj., least.
minister, trī, m., a servant, attendant.
ministra, ae, [minister], f., a female servant, attendant.
ministrō, ēre, ēvi, ātus, [minister], to tend, serve, attend to; provide, furnish.
minitor, āri, ātus, [freq. minor], to threaten, menace.
Minōs, æ, um, [Minōs], adj., of Minos, Minoan.
minor, āri, ātus, to threaten, menace.
minor, minus, comp. adj., less; of age, younger.

Minōs, òis, [Mīnōs], m., a famous king and lawgiver in Crete, and after death a judge in the lower world.
minuō, ere, i, ëtus, to make small, break into small pieces, break up; lessen, diminish, reduce, weaken.
minus, adv., less.
Minyae, ërum, [Mīnyae], m. pl., the Argonauts, called Minyans from Minyas, an ancient king of Thessaly.
mirābilis, e, [miror], adj., wonderful.
mirāculum, ī, [miror], n., a wonder, marvel, miracle.
mirandus, a, um, [part. miror], adj., wonderful, singular, strange, remarkable.
miror, āri, ātus, to wonder at, marvel, admire, see with wonder.
mirus, a, um, adj., wonderful, marvelous.
misceō, ēre, ui, mixtus, to mingle, mix with; unite, join; stir up, excite, disturb, throw into confusion.
miser, eras, erum, adj., sad, wretched, miserable, unfortunate, pitiable.
miserābilis, e, [miseror], adj., miserable, deplorable, wretched.
miserandus, a, um, [part. miseror], adj., to be pitied, pitiable, lamentable, wretched.
miseror, āri, ātus, [miser], to pity, take pity on, have compassion for, commiserate.
miseror, āri, ātus, [miser], to compassionate, take pity on, pity.
Mithridātēs, a, um, [Mithridātēs], adj., Mithridatic, of Mithridates, the famous king of Pontus who so long waged successful war against the Romans.
mittis, e, adj., mellow, ripe; mild, soft, gentle, lenient, kind.
mittō, ere, mis, missus, to let go, send, send off, dispatch; send, provide, give; throw, hurl, launch, cast.
mōbilis, e, [for movilis, from moveō], adj., movable; nimble, fleet.
moderāmen, inis, [moderor], n., guidance, management, control.
moderator, [moderator], adv., with moderation, carefully.

moderator, a, um, [part. modernus], adj., within bounds, moderate, modest.

moderator, ari, atus, [modus], to set bounds; manage, guide, control.

modestus, [modestus], adv., with moderation, discreetly.

modestus, a, um, [modus], adj., moderate; modest, gentle, discreet.

modicus, a, um, [modus], adj., moderate; ordinary, little, small.

modus, [modus], adv., only, indeed; merely, but; but now, a little while ago; now; modo — modo, now — now.

modular, ari, atus, to measure; tune, sing, play.

modus, i, m., a way, method, manner; a measure, melody, strain, rhythm; an end, limit, bound.

moenia, ium, n., pl., walls, ramparts.

mola, ae, f., a millstone, mill.

molaris, is, [mola], m., a millstone, rock.

mollis, is, t., a shapeless mass, a bulk, a huge mass, monster, a rocky mass, cliff; weight; a massive building or structure; a dam, mole, barrier; a battering ram or other engine of war; a task, difficulty, labor; might, power, strength.

mollimen, inus, [mollor], n., an effort, attempt, undertaking; mollime, vasto, of massive structure.

mollor, iri, itus, [mollis], to labor upon; undertake, attempt; cause; prepare, fit out, get ready; set in motion, cast, hurl.

mollis, is, tvi (i), itus, [mollis], to soften, grow soft; soothe, mitigate; moderate, calm.

mollis, e, adj., soft, pliant, tender, delicate, gentle; easy, favorable.

molliter, [mollis], adv., gently, softly, sweetly.

Molessus, a, um, adj., Molossian, of the Molossi, a people in the eastern part of Epirus.

momentum, i, [for movimentum from moveb], n., a movement, motion; a short time, moment, instant.

moneo, ere, ul, itus, to remind, admonish, warn, advise, instruct.

montium, i, [from montus, part. moneo], n., an admonition, warning; advice, suggestion.

montus, us, [moneo], m., an admonition, warning.

mōns, montis, m., a mountain.

mōnstrō, āre, āvi, ātus, [mōnstrum], to show, point out, indicate, advise, teach, tell, direct, guide.

mōnstrum, i, n., a prodigy, sign, omen, portent; a monster.

mōntānus, a, um, [mōns], adj., of a mountain, mountain.

mōnticola, ae, [mōns + colō], m. and f., a mouthe, mountain dweller.

monumentum, i, [moneo], n., a memorial, monument; evidence, trace.

mora, ae, f., a delay, pause, cause of delay, hindrance; morā, after some time, gradually.

morbus, i, m., disease.

mordeō, āre, momordi, morsus, to bite, bite into, gnaw.

moribundus, a, um, [morior], adj., dying, in a dying condition.

morior, i, tuus, to die, perish.

moror, ari, atus, [mora], to delay, linger, wait, tarry; trans., retard, hinder, detain.

mors, mortis, f., death.

morsus, us, [mordeō], m., a biting, bite, fangs.

mortālis, e, [mors], adj., mortal, human, earthly; temporary, transient; subs., mortāles, isum, m. pl., mortals, human beings.

mortuus, a, um, [part. morior], adj., dead.

mōrum, i, [mōrōs], n., a mulberry; blackberry.

mōrus, i, [mōrōs], f., a mulberry tree.

mōs, mōrs, m., custom, manner; way, fashion, wont; in pl., conduct, manners, character; sine mōre, in an unprecedented, unusual way; law, precedent.
motus, a, [moveō], m., a motion, movement, swiftness.
moveō, ēre, movī, motus, to move, shake, set in motion; of the strings of a lyre, strike, play upon; of arms, take up, employ, use, exercise; of the earth, upturn, plow up, till; in pass. with middle sense, to move one's self, set out; give impulse to, stimulate; move, influence; exert influence or power upon; take up, begin, commence, undertake; disturb, trouble; arouse, excite, cause, produce; revolve, ponder, meditate.
nox, adv., soon, soon after, presently, then; afterwards, at a later period.
mucrē, ōnis, m., the sharp point or edge of anything, a sword point, a sword.
mūgliō, ēre, ἕν (II), ētus, to bellow, rumble, roar, mutter, murmur.
mūgītus, ās, [mūgiō], m., a bellowing, a roaring, a roaring.
mulcēō, ēre, mulēi, mulēus, to stroke, touch lightly; of the wind, to rustle through; to calm, soothe, allay.
Mulciber, ēris and erī, [mulceō], m., Vulcan, represented as the softer.
multīfās, a, um, [multus + findō], adj., split into many parts or pieces.
multiplex, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [multiplex, with many folds], to multiply, increase, augment.
multō, [multus], adv., by much, by far, far.
multum, [multus], adv., much, greatly, very.
multus, a, um, [comp. plūs, superl. plūrimus], adj., much, abundant, many, many; great; multā pars, the greater part, larger part; multus, adverbially for multum, much; plūrimus, used adverbially, abundantly; multa, subs. n. pl., many things, much.
mundus, i, m., an ornament; cosmos, the universe, the world.
mundus, a, um, adj., clean, cleanly, neat.
mūnimen, inis, [mūnīō, to defend with a wall], a defense, fortification, rampart.
mūnus, eris, n., an office, charge, duty, task; a boon, favor, service; a present, gift, offering.
mūreō, ēris, m., the purple fish, a species of shellfish; purple dye, purple.
murmur, uris, n., a murmur, murmuring, muttering, rumbling, roaring; a shouting, tumult of applause.
murus, i, m., a wall, city wall.
Mūsa, ae, [Mōsō], f., a muse, one of the goddesses of the liberal arts.
māscus, i, m., moss.
mustum, i, n., fresh grape juice, must.
mūtābilis, e, [mūtō], adj., changeable, fickle.
Mutina, ae, f., a city in Cisalpine Gaul.
mūtō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [freq. moveō], to change, alter; intras., change, alter; change, exchange.
mūtus, a, um, adj., mute, dumb, speechless, silent, still.
mūtus, a, um, [mūtō], adj., in exchange, reciprocal, mutual, of both, the same.
Mycale, ēs, [Mykā❧a], f., a promontory and city in Ionia.
Mycoēnae, ērum, [Mykōwai], f. pl., a city in Argolis, of which Agamemnon was king.
Mycoēnis, idis, f., a Mycenaean woman, i.e., Iphigenia, the daughter of Agamemnon.
Mygdonius, a, um, adj., Mygdonian, Thracian.
myrica, ae, f., the tamarisk shrub.
Myrrha, ae, f., a daughter of Cinyras, king of Cyprus.
myrtēus, a, um, [myrtaeus], adj., of myrtle, myrtlemyrtaus, i, and ēs, f., a myrtle tree; a myrtle branch.
N

Nabataeus, a, um, adj., of Nabattae, a country in Arabia; Arabian.
Nais, idoœ, and Nais, idoœ, [rais],
1. a water nymph, naiad.
Nam, conj., for.
Namque, conj., for, for indeed, for truly; and (this is so) for.
Nanciscor, i, nactus, to get, obtain,
meet with, reach, find.
Naris, is, usually in pl. f., the nostrile,
the nose.
Narœ, are, avi, aitus, to tell, relate,
report, recount.
Nascor, i, natus, to be born; rise,
spring up, spring forth, grow.
Naso, onis, m., P. Ovidius Naso, the poet.
Nata, ae, [natus], f., a daughter.
Natalis, e, [nascor], adj., birth,
natal; supply dies, a birthday.
Natœ, are, avi, aitus, [freq. nœ], to swim, float.
Nature, ae, [nascor], f., birth;
nature; property, quality, characteristic, disposition.
Natus, i, [nascor], m., one born, a son, a child.
Naufragium, ii, [navis + frangœ],
n., shipwreck; loss, destruction.
Naupliadœ, ae, [Nauplius], m.,
the son of Nauplium, i.e. Palamedes.
Navigo, are, avi, aitus, to sail; sail upon or over.
Navis, is, f., a ship.
Navita, ae, [navis], m., a sailor, a boatman.
Naviœ, are, avi, aitus, [navus, busy, active], to perform diligently, accomplish, prosecute.
Ne, adv. and conj., no, not; with quidem, not even, emphasizing the word placed between the two; in expressions of prohibition, not; in final clauses, that not, lest; after verbs of fearing, when it is feared that something will happen, that;
after verbs of hindering and the like, from.
Ne, interj., truly, verily, indeed.

Ovid — 31

-ne, interrog. partic. enclitic; it is attached to the first or most important word of an interrogative sentence which may be answered by yes or no, and does not imply either answer;
it is untranslatable into English; in indirect questions, whether.
Nebula, ae, f., a cloud, mist, fog.
Nec, conj., see neque.
Necnon, nec non, conj., and also,
likewise.
Necœ, are, avi, aitus, to kill, slay.
Nec-opinus, a, um, adj., unexpected;
unsuspecting.
Nectar, aris, [viteres], n., nectar; any sweet pleasant drink or liquid, e.g.
honey.
Necô, ore, nexul (xi), nexus, to bind, tie, fasten.
Nefandus, a, um, [nœ (shortened)
+ fandus from for, not to be mentioned], adj., impious, abominable, wicked.
Nefas, [nœ (shortened) + fœs, not right], n. indecl., a sin, crime, transgression of the divine law, an impious act; an impious thing, an accursed person or thing; impiety;
as an adj., impious, wicked, not permitted.
Negô, are, avi, aitus, to say no, deny,
refuse.
Nemeaeus, a, um, [Nemea], adj., of Nema, a city in Argolis; Nemean.
Nemô, inis, m., f., no one.
Nemoralis, e, [nemus], adj., of a grove, sylvan, woody.
Nemorœus, a, um, [nemus], adj.,
full of woods, woody.
Nempe, [nam + -pe], conj., certainly,
assuredly, of course, indeed.
Nemus, oris, n., a wood, a grove.
Neoptolemus, I, [Neoptolæus, new warrior], m., the son of Achilles, called also Pyrrhus.
Nepês, otis, m., a grandson; any descendant; pl., descendants, posterity.
Neptûnus, a, um, [Neptûnus],
adj., of Neptune, Neptunian.
Neptunus, i. m., Neptune, the son of Saturn, and god of the sea.
neque or nec, adv., not: conj. and not, nor: neque—neque, neither—nor.
nequeō, ire. ivi (II), [nē (shortened) + quēō], to be unable, not to be able.
nēquiquam, [nē + old abl. of quisquam], adv., in vain, to no purpose, useless.
nē-quis, qua, quod or quid, = nē quis, indef. pron., that not or lest any one.
nēquitia, ae, [nōquam, worthless], 1., worthlessness.
Nērōs, idōs, [Nērōus], f., a Nereid, a sea-nymph, a daughter of Nereus.
Nērōs, a. um, [Nērōus], adj., of or belonging to Nereus.
Nereus, i. and eos, m., a sea god, husband of Doris, and father of the Nereids.
Nēritus, a. um, [Neritos], adj., of or belonging to Neritos, a mountain in Ithaca; Ithacan.
nervōsus, a. um, [nervus], adj., full of cords, sinewy.
nervus, i. m., a sinew, tendon, muscle; a cord, string of a musical instrument; a string of a bow.
nesciō, ire. ivi (II), [nē (shortened) + scīō], not to know, not to know of, to be unacquainted with; nescio quod, I know not what, some or other.
nescius, a. um, [nesciō], adj., ignorant, unaware, not knowing.
Nesseus, a. um, [Nessus], adj., of Nessus, a centaur, slain by Hercules.
Nestor, oris, [Nēstor], m., a son of Neleus, king of Pylius, famous among the Greeks before Troy for his great wisdom and age.
neu, see néve.
néve, conj. and not, nor; néve—néve, neither—nor.
nez, necis, f., a violent death, slaughter.
nexus, —, (only abl. sing. and pl., and nom. and acc. pl.), [nectō], m., a binding together, joining, clasping; of a serpent, coils.
nī, conj., = nisi, if not.
Nīdus, i. m., a nest.
niger, gra, grum, adj., black, dark, dusky, swarthy; mournful, gloomy; deadly.
nihil or nil, [nē + hilum, a shred, trije], n., indecl., nothing; as adv., not at all, in no respect.
Nileus, ei, m., one of the enemies of Persius.
Nīlus, i. [Nīlos], m., the river Nile.
nimbus, i. m., a rain storm, a rain cloud, a cloud.
nimis, adv., beyond measure, overmuch, too.
nimius, a, um, [nimis], adj., too much, excessive; adv., nimium, too, used to intensify an adjective or adverb.
Ninus, i. [Nīnis], m., the first king of Assyria, husband of Semiramis and builder of Ninerrch.
Niobē, ēs, [Nībēs], f., the daughter of Tantalus and wife of Amphiion, king of Thebes.
nisi, [nē + si], conj., if not, unless, except.
nītēns, entis, [part. nīteīō], adj., shining, gleaming, glistening, bright; sleek.
nīteō, ēre, ul, —, to shine, gleam, glitter.
nītīdus, a. um, [nīteīō], adj., shining, gleaming, sleek.
nītor, i. nīsus and nīxus, to rest upon, lean upon; press for or card, advance, tread or walk upon, move, climb, fly; strive, endeavor; et sīgile.
nītor, ēris, [nīteī], m., bright est, splendor, gleam; sleekness, beauty.
nīveus, a. um, [nīx], adj., of snow, snowy; snow white.
nīx, nīvia, f., snow.
nō, nāre, nāvi, —, to swim, float ē.
nōbīlis, e, [for gnōbīlis from (g)nōscīō], adj., well known, famous, noted, renowned; high born, of noble birth, noble.
nōbilitàs, stis, [nōbilis], f., celebrity, fame, renown; high birth, nobility; nobleness, excellence.
nōcēs, entis, [part. nōceō], adj., hurtful, harmful, baneful, pernicious.
nōceō, ēre, ui, itus, to harm, hurt, injure, do mischief; to be against one, be a disadvantage.
nocturnus, a, um, [nox], adj., of the night, nocturnal, nightly, by night.
nōdōsus, a, um, [nōdus, a knot], adj., full of knots, knotty.
 nólo, nōle, nōlui, [nē + volō], to wish not, will not, be unwilling, be reluctant.
nōmen, inis, [for gnōmen from root gno in (g)nōscō], n., a name; name, renown, reputation.
nōmīnō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [nōmen], to call by name, name.
nōn, adv., not.
Nōnācrinus, a, um, [Nōnācris, Nōnākris], adj., of Noacris, a mountain in Arcadia; Arcadian.
nōn-dum, adv., not yet.
nōn-numquam, adv., sometimes.
nōnus, a, um, [for novēnus from novem], adj., the ninth.
nōscō, ere, nōvi, nōtus, to become acquainted with; in perf., know, have knowledge of by experience; know, recognize.
noester, tra, trum, [nōs], poss. adj., our, ours.
nota, ae, [nōscō], f., a mark, sign; proof, evidence; in pl., a letter, writing, a written character of any kind.
notābilis, e, [nota], adj., conspicuous notable.
notitia, ae, [nōtus], f., a being known; acquaintance; knowledge.
notō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [nota], to mark, make a mark on, scratch; mark, note, designate; note, take note of, observe; mark for censure, reprimand.
nōtus, a, um, [part. nōscō], adj., known, well known.

Notus, I, [Nōros], m., the south wind; the wind in general.
novellus, a, um, [dim. novus], adj., new, young, tender.
novem, num. adj., nine.
noverca, ae, f., a stepmother.
noviēs, [novem], num. adv., nine times.
noviēs, stis, [novus], f., newness, strangeness.
novō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [novus], to make new, renew; invent, devise, change, alter.
novus, a, um, adj., new, fresh, recent; new, strange, unheard of, novel, different from previous experience; novissimus, a, um, the last, latest.
nox, noctis, f., night.
nox, ae, [noceō], f., hurt, harm, injury, fault, offense, crime.
nūbēs, is, f., a cloud, mist, vapor.
nūbifer, era, erum, [nūbēs + ferō], adj., cloud bearing, cloud capped.
nūbilium, i, [nūbilus], n., cloudy weather; nūbla, ērum, n. pl., clouds.

nūbilus, a, um, [nūbēs], adj., cloudy, lowering, gloomy, sad.
nūdō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [nūdus], to strip, lay bare, uncover; expose, leave unprotected.
nūdus, a, um, adj., bare, uncovered, open, unprotected, naked, lightly clad.
nūlus, a, um, [nē + allus], adj., no, none, not any, no one.
num, interrog. conj., in a direct question, signifying that a negative answer is expected; in an indirect question, whether.
Numa, ae, m., Numa Pompilius, the second king of Rome.
nūmen, inis, [for nūmen from root nu, to nod], n., a nod of the head as showing the will; the divine will or purpose; godhead, divinity, deity; divine presence, aid, divine favor; a god or goddess, a deity.
numerābilis, e, [numerō], adj., able to be counted.
VOCABULARY

num eros, ære, Ævi, Æstus, [numerus], to number, reckon, count.
numerus, a, um, [numerus], adj., in full number, of full number; full of rhythm, melodious, tuneful.
numerus, i, m., a number; complement; part, member; measure, rhythm, harmony, numbers.
Numidae, ärum, [Nœös], m. pl., the Numidians.
numquam, [nœ + ënumquam], adv., never.
um-quid, interrog. adv., a strengthened num.
nunc, [num + -ce], adv., now, at this time: but now, as it is.
nunitia, ae, [nœntius, a messenger], f., a female messenger.
nunitio, ære, Ævi, Æstus, [nœntius, a messenger], to announce, report, declare.
nuper, adv., lately, recently.
nupta, ae, [nœptus, part. nœbœ, to veil one's self], f., a bride, wife.
nurus, ës, f., a daughter-in-law.
nusquam, [nœ + ënquam], adv., nowhere.
nutos, ære, Ævi, Æstus, [freq. nuto, to nod], to nod, shake, sway, tremble, totter.
nutriio, ære, Ævi, Ætus, to suckle; nourish, foster, feed.
nutus, — abl. ë, m., a nodding, nod.
nux, nucis, f., a nut.
ymphsa, ae, and nymphé, ës, [viump], f., a nymph.

O

O, interj., an exclamation expressing all kinds of feeling, O! oh!
ob, prep. w. acc., towards, to; at, about, before; on account of, for.
ob-dœ, ere, didi, ditus, to put against, shut, close.
ob-eo, ære, Ævi (II), Ætus, to go towards or against; go to, visit, traverse; surround, encompass, overspread, cover.
obiciö, ære, iœci, lectus, [ob + "jë], to throw to or before, put before, offer, present; throw anything up to one, upbraid, cast in the teeth; bring upon, inflict with; expose, give up.
obitus, ës, [ob + eö], m., a going down, downfall, ruin, death.
oblicitio, ære, Ævi, Æstus, [ob + lactö, to allure], to delight, divert, interest.
ob-ligio, ære, Ævi, Ætus, to bind up; bind, oblige, put under obligation, pledge.
obliquus, a, um, adj., sideways, across, lying across, slanting, oblique.
obliviscor, I, oblivus, to forget.
oblivium, ii, [obliviscor], n., forgetfulness, oblivion.
ob-nxius, a, um, adj., guilty; submissae, seröile; abject, weak, timid.
ob-orior, ëri, ortus, to spring up, arise, rise; appear.
ob-rœd, ere, ë, Ætus, to bury, cover over, hide; sink, overwhelm; overcome, surpass, overwhelm, crush; surpass, eclipse, obscure.
obscœnus, a, um, adj., vile, foul, abominable; ill omened.
obscœirus, a, um, adj., dark, dim, shady, obscure; obscure, unknown; uncertain, dark, mysterious.
ob-securor, I, secütus, to comply, yield, submit.
ob-serö, ere, sœvi, Ætus, to sow, plant.
ob-servö, ëre, Ævi, Ætus, to watch, note, observe.
obses, idis, [obsideö], m. and f., hostage.
obsideö, ëre, ëdö, sessus, [ob + sedeö], to sit at, remain in; to besiege, blockade.
ob-sistö, ere, stëti, status, to make stand against, oppose, resist.
obstitus, a, um, [part. obserö], adj., covered over, thick set.
ob-stöpëscö, ere, stipul, —, [ob + inch. stupëcö], to be astonished, dumbfounded, amazed, horrified, overstricken.
ob-stë, ëre, stëti, Ætus, to stand
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>VOCABULARY</th>
<th>485</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>in the way of; oppose, hinder, restrain.</td>
<td>odrus, a, um, [odor], adj., scented, fragrant.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ob-struō, ere, struxi, stractus, to block up, close, stop.</td>
<td>Oeägrius, a, um, [Oeägrus], adj., of Oeagrus, a king of Thrace; Thracian.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ob-sum, esse, ful, to be against, prejudicial to, to one’s hurt; hinder, oppose.</td>
<td>Oebalus, a, um, [Oebalus], adj., of Oealus, a king of Sparta; Spartan; hence of Hyacinthus, a Spartan youth, son of Oealus.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>obtāsus, a, um, [part. obtundō, to blunt], adj., blunted, blunt, dull.</td>
<td>Oeta, ae, or Oetā, ēs, [Oīta], f., a mountain in Thessaly.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ob-umbrō, āre, āvi, ātus, to overshadow, shade.</td>
<td>Oetaeus, a, um, [Oeta], adj., of or belonging to Oeta; Oetean.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ob-vertō, ere, 1, versus, to turn toward or to, turn.</td>
<td>offerō, ferre, obtuli, obliātus, [ob + ferō], to present, offer, show, put in the way.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>obvius, a, um, [ob + vis], adj., in the way, to meet, meeting, opposite, opposing.</td>
<td>officiōsus, a, um, [officiūm], adj., obliging, ready to serve; in bad sense, too ready to serve or bring to pass, officious.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>occasūsus, ās, [occidō], m., a falling, going down, setting.</td>
<td>officium, ī, [for opificium, from opus + faciō], n., a voluntary service, kindness, kindly offices, favor; a work done as a service or favor; an obligatory service, duty, function, part, office.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>occidō, ere, cidi, cāsus, [ob + cadō], to fall down, fall, perish, die.</td>
<td>Ogygius, a, um, [Ogygēs], adj., of Ogyges, a mythic king of Thebes; Theban.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>occidūus, a, um, [occīdō], adj., going down, setting; sinking, failing.</td>
<td>Olleus, ei and eos, [Ωλλεύς], m., a king of the Locri, father of Ajax the Less.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>occulō, ere, ui, tus, to cover, hide, conceal.</td>
<td>olēns, entis, [part. oleō], adj., smelling, fragrant; ill-smelling.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Occultus, a, um, [part. occultō], adj., hidden, unseen, secret.</td>
<td>oleō, ēre, ui,—, to emit a smell; give forth fragrance.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Occupō, āre, āvi, ātus, [ob + capō], to seize, take possession of; occupy, fill, overspread.</td>
<td>olīva, ae, f., an olive, olive tree, olive branch.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>occurrō, ere, curri and cucurri, cursus, [ob + currō], to run to meet, go to meet, meet; present one’s self, appear.</td>
<td>olivifer, era, erum, [olīva + ferō], adj., olive-bearing.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oceanus, I, [Ὠκεανός], m., the ocean.</td>
<td>olor, ēris, m., a swan.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oceanus, I, [dim. oculus], m., a little eye, an eye.</td>
<td>Olympus, I, [Ὀλύμπος], m., a mountain between Macedonia and Thessaly, regarded as the abode of the gods.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oculus, i, m., an eye.</td>
<td>Ómen, inis, n., a sign, token, omen.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ódī, Ódisse, Ósus, vb. defect., to hate.</td>
<td>Odium, ii, [โอδί], n., hatred, hate; enmity, animosity, grudge.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Odor, ōris, [from root od in oleō], m., odor, fragrance, smell.</td>
<td>Odorōsus, a, um, [part. odorō, to make fragrant], adj., fragrant.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
omnipotens, entis, [omnis + potens]. adj., almighty, omnipotent.

omnis, e, adj., all, every, the whole.

oneiro, are, avī, ātus, [onus], to load, to burden, oppress, overburden.

onerōsus, a, um, [onus]. adj., heavy; burdensome, oppressive.

onus, eris, n., a burden, weight, load.

opus, e, adj., dark, shadowy, shady, dusky, gloomy; that casts a shade, shady.

operō, are, ui, tus, [ob + pariō], to cover, cover over.

operor, ari, ātus, [opus], to work at, be busy with, devote one's self to.

operōsus, a, um, [opus], adj., full of labor, active, busy with, engaged upon; elaborate, well wrought.

opifer, era, erum, [ops + ferō], ad., aid bringing, helping.

opitex, icis, [ops + faciō], m. and f., a worker, artisan, maker.

oppelitor, iri, pertus, [ob + perior], compare peritus and experior, to await, wait.

oppidum, i, n., a town, city.

oppōnō, ere, posul, positus, [ob + pōnō], to place against, before, in front of, opposite.

opportūnus, a, um, [ob + portus], adj., fit, convenient, suitable.

opus, e, adj., opposite, opposing, placed over against.

opprimō, ere, pressi, pressus, [ob + premō], to crush, to weigh down, press down, oppress, crush, overwhelm.

opprobrium, i, n., reproach, scandal; taunt, abuse, insult.

oppūgnō, are, avī, ātus, [ob + pugnō], to storm, assault, besiege.

ops, opis, f., in pl., wealth, resources, riches; power, ability; help, assistance, aid.

optātus, a, um, [part. optō], adj., desired, longed for.

optō, are, avī, ātus, to choose, select; wish, wish for, desire.

opus, eris, n., work, labor; work, art; a work, work of art, the product of toil; opus est, there is need of.

ōra, ae, f., the extremity of anything, a border, boundary; coast, shore, region, country.

ōrāculum or ōrāculum, i, [ōrō], n., an oracle.

ōrātor, oris, [ōrō], m., an orator, ambassador, legate.

orbis, is, m., anything circular, a ring, orb, circle, disk; wheel; the coils or folds of a serpent; the course of night or a heavenly body; orbis terrārum, the world.

orbis, a, um, adj., deprived, bereft, destitute; bereaved, e.g. of children, childless.

Orchomenus or -os, i, [Orkhemōnos], m. or f., a city in Arcadia.

ōrdō, inis, m., a row, line, regular succession of things, order; ex ordine, without intermission or interruption, in succession; sine ordine, aimlessly, recklessly, extravagantly; a class, rank, order.

Orestēs, is or ae, [Oreσtēs], m., the son of Agamemnon and Clytemnestra.

Orestēs, a, um, [Orestēs], adj., of or belonging to Orestes, Orestean.

ōrōs, entis, [part. orior], adj., used as subs., m., the dawn, the day; the place where the sun rises, the East, the Orient.

origō, inis, [orīor], f., origin, birth, descent; the beginning.

ōrōn, ōnis or onis, [ūnōs], m., one of the heavenly constellations, formerly a mythical giant on earth.

orīor, iri, tuus, to arise, rise, appear, spring up, spring from, be born.

ōrōnātus, a, um, [part. ōrōn], adj., fitted out, accoutered, attired, adorned.

ōrō, are, avī, ātus, to furnish, provide; ornament, adorn; honor.

ōrō, are, avī, ātus, [ōs], to plead, speak, argue; beg, entreat, pray, implore.
VOCABULARY

Orontēs, is or ae, [Ὀρώντη], m., the principal river of Syria.

Orpheus, el and eos, [Ὀρφεύς], m., a celebrated poet and musician of Thrace, the husband of Eurydice and son of Calliope.

Orphēus, a, um, [Orpheus], adj., of or belonging to Orpheus, Orphic.

ortus, ēs, [orōr], m., a rising, origin, birth; understand sōlēs, the rising of the sun, the morning, the East.

Ortygia, ae, [Ὀρτυγία], f., (1) an old name for the island of Delos; (2) an island in the harbor of Syracuse.

Ortygicus, a, um, [Ortygia], adj., pertaining to Ortygia, Delian; Ortygica, ae, Diana, who was born in Delos.

ōs, ēris, n., the mouth; the face, features, countenance; lips, with connotation of speech; voice, speech, utterance of the mouth; a mouth, entrance.

os, ossis, n., a bone.

osculum, ēs, [ōskulō], n., in pl., the lips; a kiss.

Ossa, ae, [ōskō], f., a high mountain in Thessaly.

ostendō, ere, I, tentus, [obs (ob) + tendō], to show, reveal, point out, display.

ostendō, āre, ēvi, ātus, [freq. ostendō], to present to view, show, exhibit; point out, call attention to, remind one of.

ōstium, ēs, [ōstīs], n., a mouth, entrance of any kind.

ōtium, ēs, n., leisure, time; inactivity, idleness, quiet, peace.

Othrys, yos, [ōthros], m., a mountain in Thessaly.

ovile, is, [ōvīs], n., a sheepfold.

ovis, is, f., a sheep.

ōvō, ēre, —, —, to rejoice, exult.

ōvum, ēs, n., an egg.

pācātus, a, um, [part. pācō, to make peaceful], adj., peaceful, quiet, calm; propitious, kindly.

Pachynus, I, [pākhynos], f., the southeastern promontory of Sicily.

pāciscor, I, pācitus, to bargain, stipulate.

pācitus, a, um, [part. pāciscor], adj., agreed upon, stipulated, covenanted; betrothed.

Pades, I, m., the Po, the principal river of Italy.

Paeān, ānis, [pāēan], m., an appellation of Apollo as the healing deity.

paelex, icis, f., a mistress, the rival of a wife.

paene, adv., almost.

paenitet, ēre, ult, —, [root in poena], it repents; it repents one, he is sorry, he regrets.

Pagasaeus, a, um, [Pagasæa], adj., of Pagaia, a maritime town of Thessaly; Paganæan, Thessalian.

pāgina, ae, f., a page or leaf; a writing, poem.

palaestra, ae, [palaistra], f., a wrestling place, a palaestra; a wrestling match.

Palamēdēs, is, [palamēdēs], m., the son of Nauplius, king of Euboea, who was put to death by the Greeks at Troy, through the artifice of Ulysses.

Pallātium, ī, n., the Palatine hill, on which was the residence of Augustus; in pl., a palace. Pallātia is also used of the hill.

pallātum, ī, n., the palate.

palēaria, [palea, chaff], n. pl. (only nom. and acc.), the dew lap, the skin that hangs down from the neck of an ox.

Pallēs, is, f., the tutelary goddess of shepherds and cattle.

Pallici, ērum, m., two deities, the sons of Jupiter and the Sicilian nymph Thalia.

Pallilia, e, [Pallēs], adj., of Pales; n. pl. subs., pallilia, the feast of Pales, shepherd festival, palla, ae, f., a long upper garment, a robe, mantle.
Pallantids, adis, [Pallas], f., Aurora, descended from Hyperion, the uncle of the giant Pallas.
Pallas, adis, [Πάλας], f., the name of the Greek goddess corresponding to the Roman Minerva, goddess of wisdom and war; by metonymy for the Palladium, a stone image supposed to be of Pallas and preserved in the citadel of Troy.
pallēns, entsis, [part. pallēdō], adj., pale, wan; pale green, pale yellow.
pallēdō, ēre, ui, —, to be pale, turn pale: lose color, fade; be discolored.
pallēsco, ere, pallul, —, [inch. pallē], to turn pale, blanch; turn yellow; lose color, fade.
pallidus, a, um, [pallēdō], adj., pallid, pale.
pallor, ēris, [palleō], m., pallor, paleness.
palma, ae, [παλάμα], f., the palm of the hand, the hand; a palm tree; the fruit of the palm, date.
palor, ēri, ētus, to straggle, wander about.
palās, ūdis, f., a swamp, marsh, marshy water, bog, pool.
palluster, tris, tre, [palūs], adj., fenny, marshy, swampy, of the marsh.
Pan, ānos, (acc. Pāna), m., the god of the woods and shepherds.
pandō, ere, i, passus, to spread out, extend, unfold, expand, stretch out; disclose, make known, reveal, relate, explain.
pandus, a, um, [pandō], adj., bent, crooked, curved.
pānīs, is, [from root pa in pāsco], m., bread, a loaf.
Panopē, ēs, [Πανόπη], f., a town in the south of Phocis.
Panthoidēs, ae, [Panthoīs], m., the son of Panthois, Euphorbus.
papaver, eris, n., the poppy.
papyrifer, era, erum, [papyrus + ferō], papyrus bearing.
pār, pāris, adj., equal, well matched; like, similar; even, balanced, level.
pārātus, a, um, [part. parātī], adj., ready, prepared, furnished, equipped.
pārātus, ās, [parātī], m., preparation, provision.
Parca, ae, f., usually in pl., the Fates, the Parcae.
parcō, ere, pepererī or paresī, parcitūs or parcesus, to spare, refrain from using; spare, refrain from injuring; spare, refrain from, cease from, omit, forbear.
parcūs, a, um, [parcō], adj., sparing, frugal, parsimonious; scanty, small, slight.
parentēs, entsis, [part. parentē], m., f., a parent, father or mother.
parentēlis, e, [parentēs], adj., of parents, parental.
pārēcō, ēre, ui, —, to obey, yield to, comply with.
parēs, etsis, m., a wall (of a house); a partition wall.
parīlis, e, [par], adj., equal, like.
parsiō, ere, pepererī, partus, to bring forth, bear.
Paris, idis, [Πάρις], m., the son of Priam, who carried off Helen from Greece, and thus was the cause of the Trojan war.
pariter, [par], adv., equally, at the same time, in the same manner, together, on equal terms.
Parīs, a, um, [Paros], adj., of Paros, one of the Cyclades, famous for its fine white marble; Parian.
parma, ae, [πάρμα], f., a shield.
Parnāsia, idis, [Parnāsos], f. adj., pertaining to Parnassus, Parnassian.
Parnāsus, I, [Παρνάσος], m., a mountain in Boeotia, sacred to the Muses.
pārō, ēre, avi, ētus, to make ready, prepare, furnish, provide; intend, resolve, purpose, meditate.
Paros, I, [Πάρος], f., an island of the Cyclades, famous for its fine white marble.
Parrhasia, idis, f. adj., of Parrhasia, a town of Arcadia; poet., Arcadian.
pars, partis, f., a part, place, quarter, side, direction; part, portion, share.

Parthôn, onis, [Παρθών], m., son of Agenor, king of Astolia and father of Oeneus.

Parthenius, a, um, adj., of Parthenius, a mountain of Arcadia, Arcadian.

partim, [pars], adv., partly, in part.

partus, ës, [pariō], m., a bearing, a birth.

parum, adv., too little, not enough.

parumper, adv., for a while.

parvus, a, um, adj., small, little.

pāscō, ere, pāvi, pāstūs, to drive to pasture, pasture, feed; intrans., in pass. or mid. sense, feed, graze, pasture, browse; feed on.

pāscuum, I, [pāscō], n., a pasture.

passim, [passus from pandō], adv., in every direction, here and there, everywhere.

passus, a, um, [part. pandō], adj., loose, disheveled, flowing.

passus, ës, m., a step, pace, footstep.

pāstor, ëris, [pāscō], m., a shepherd.

pāstōrius, a, um, [pāstor], adj., a herdsman's, shepherd's.

Patarās, a, um, [Patarā], adj., of Patara, a seaport town of Lycia, with a celebrated oracle of Apollo.

patefaciō, ere, fēci, factus, [pateō + faciō], to lay open. throw open.

patella, ës, [dim. patina, a shallow dish], f., a little dish or saucer used in sacrificing.

pateō, ëre, uf, —, to be, lie, or stand open; stretch, extend; be manifest, evident.

pater, tris, m., a father, sire, a forefather, ancestor.

patera, æ [pateō], f., a broad, shallow drinking cup or libation bowl.

paternus, a, um, [pater], adj., belonging to a father, paternal, a father's.

patiēns, entis, [part. patior], adj., enduring, submissive, patient, able to endure; enduring, firm, hard.

patientia, ës, [patiēns], f., patience, endurance.

patior, I, passus, to suffer, endure, submit to; suffer, permit, allow.

patria, ës, [patrius], f., a fatherland, native land, home.

patrius, a, um, [pater], adj., belonging to a father, paternal, ancestral; belonging to a native country, native.

patrōcinium, II, [patrōcinor, from patrōnus, a protector], n., protection, advocacy, defense.

patrūsīs, e, [patrius], adj., of a father's brother, uncle's; of a cousin, cousin's.

patrūs, I, [pater], m., a paternal uncle.

Patulcius, ës, um, [pateō], adj., standing open; a surname of Janus.

patulus, a, um, [pateō], adj., opening wide, wide spreading, wide.

paucus, a, um, adj., few.

paulātim, [paulum], adv., little by little, gradually.

paulisper, adv., for a little while.

paulum, adv., a little, somewhat.

pauper, eris, adj., not wealthy, poor; scanty, meager.

paupertās, ëtis, [pauper], f., poverty.

pavefactus, a, um, [part. pavefaciō, to frighten], adj., in terror, alarmed, frightened.

paveō, ëre, pāvi, —, to be struck with fear, tremble, quake, be afraid, be terrified.

pavidus, a, um, [paveō], adj., trembling, fearful; timid, anxious.

pāvō, ënis, m., a peacock.

pāx, pācis, f., peace; grace, favor, pardon.

pecō, ëre, avī, ëtus, to mistake, do amiss, transgress, commit a fault, sin.

pecten, ënis, m., a comb; rake.

pectō, ere, pexi, pexus, to comb.

pectus, oris, n., the breast, the heart;
feelings, disposition; soul, mind, thoughts.

gicus, oris, n., a herd, flock, drove.
gicus, udis, f., a beast, brute, animal as opposed to man; in particular, a sheep.
gedec, ae, [pheric], f., a fetter, snare.
gelag, i, [gelago], n. (poetic for mare), the sea.

gelag, om, [gelagon], m. pl., the Pelasgians; poet., the Greeks.
gelag, um, adj., Pelasgian; poet., Grecian.

gelus, ei and eos, [gelon], m., a king of Thessaly, father of Achilles.
gelus, a, um, [gelon], adj., of or belonging to Pelion.
gelus, adis, [gelon], f. adj., that comes from Pelion.
gelides, ae, [gelus], m., son of gelus, Achilles.

gelignus, a, um, adj., of or belonging to the Peligni, a people of Central Italy, descendants of the Sabines.
gelion, i, [gelion], n., a high mountain in Thessaly, a continuation of Ossa.

pellis, is, f., a hide, a skin.

pell, ere, pepuli, pulsus, to drive out, expel, banish; put to flight, rout, strike, set in motion.

pelopelas, adis, [pelope], f. adj., of Pelops, Pelopian, Peloponnesian.

pelopelus, a, um, [pelope], adj., of Pelops, Pelopian; Phrygian, of Phrygia, the native country of Pelops.

pelorus, i, [pelorus], m., a promontory on the northeast coast of Sicily.

penates, ium, [from root pa in pascro], m. pl., the Penates, the old Latin household gods, or guardians of the home; a dwelling, home.

pendeo, ere, pependi, —, to hang, hang down, be suspended; overhang.

pendo, ere, pependi, pensus, to weigh out, pay; w. poenam, pay or suffer penalty.

pendulus, å, um, [pendeo], adj., hanging, hanging down, pendant.
VOCABULARY

Daedalus, changed at the moment of imminent death into a lapwing.

per-dō, ere, didi, ditus, to destroy, ruin. waste, lose.

per-domō, āre, ul, itus, to tame thoroughly, conquer, overcome.

peregrinus, a, um, [peregrine, per + ager], adj., from foreign parts, strange, foreign, alien.

perennis, e, [per + annus], adj., lasting throughout the year; everlasting, unnecessary, perpetual.

per-ēō, āre, if (vsi), itus, to pass away, be destroyed; perish, die; be ruined, undone.

per-errō, āre, āvī, ātus, to wander through or over.

per-ferō, ferre, toll, lātus, to bear through, carry; bear, support, endure to the end.

perficīō, ēre, fāctūs, fāctus, [per + faciō], to go through with, execute, accomplish, finish.

perfidus, a, um, adj., faithless, false, perfidious.

perfringō, ēre, frēgī, frāctus, [per + frangō], to break through, break in pieces, shatter.

perfundo, ēre, fūdi, fāsus, to pour over, anoint; bathe, wash; drench, steep, dye.

Pergama, Ὀρυμ, [Πέργαμος], n. pl., the citadel of Troy; poet. for Troy.

Pergus, I, m., a lake in Sicily, near the city of Henna.

per-horretō, ēre, —, —, to shudder at.

per-horrestōcō, ēre, horrul, —, [inch. perhorreō], to tremble greatly, shuddering, shudder.

periculum, I, (contr. periculum), n., danger, peril.

perimō, ēre, ēmi, ēmpetus, [per + emō, to take], to ruin, destroy, stay, kill.

perītūrus, a, um, [per + ītus], adj., oath breaking, false, perjured.

perīuō, ēre, I, ītus, to wash off, wash, bathe.

per-maneō, ēre, mānēi, mānērus, to stay through, stay, hold out, last, continue.

dus, to ripen fully.

per-mittō, ere, misi, missus, to let pass, let go; permit, allow.

per-mulcēō, ēre, mulus, mulus, and mulcēus, to soothe, calm, appease.

per-nox, noctis, adj., through the night, all night.

per-ōdī, ōdisse, ōsus, to hate thoroughly, detest.

perpetior, I, pesseus, [per + patior], to bear steadfastly, abide, endure.

perpetuus, a, um, adj., whole, entire, perpetual, uninterrupted.

perquirō, ēre, —, quisitus, [per + quaerō], to ask diligently after, make eager search for.

Persēia, ἵδα, f., a female descendant of Pernia, the daughter of Oceanus and mother of Persea, the father of Hecate; adj., magic. (See note R.A. 263.)

Persephone, Ὑς, [Περσεφόνη], f., Processina, the daughter of Ceres and Jupiter.

per-sequor, I, secūtus, to follow after, follow up, pursue; set forth, relate, describe.

Perseus, Ἐ, and EOS, [Περσεύς], m., the son of Jupiter and Danaé.

Persis, ἰδα, (acc. ida), f. adj., Persian.

perspicīō, ēre, spēxi, spectus, [per + speciō], to look through; look closely at, examine, inspect, perceive clearly, note, observe.

perspicuus, a, um, [perspicīō], adj., transparent, clear.

per-stō, ēre, stītī, stātus, to stand fast, persist, continue steadfast, remain unaltered, last, endure.

per-terreō, ēre, —, itus, to frighten greatly, terrify.

per-timēscō, ēre, timul, —, [per + inch. timeō], to be frightened, alarmed, fear greatly.

per-veniō, ēre, vēni, ventua, to come through, reach, arrive at.
per-vigil, is, adj., ever watchful, sleepless.

pervius, a, um, adj., passable, easily accessible, open.

pēs, pedis, m., a foot of a human being; of a table or couch; of a verse of poetry.

pestifer, era, erum, [pestis + ferō], adj., destructive, baleful, pestilential.

pestis, is, f., plague, pestilence, infection, taint; destruction, ruin; pest, scourge, curse, bane.

petō, ere, ēvi (ll), ētus, to fall upon, attack, seek, in hostile sense; seek, go to, make for, in good sense; aim, aim at; ask, beg, request.

Phaedimus, I, m., one of the sons of Niobe.

Phaethon, ontis, [φαεθῶν, the shining one], m., the son of Phoebus and Clymene.

Phaethontis, idis, (acc. ida), [Phaethon], f. adj., of or belonging to Phaethon, Phaethontian.

pharetra, ae, f., a quiver.

pharetrātus, a, um, [pharetra], adj., wearing a quiver, quiver bearing.

Pharsālia, ae, [Pharsālus, Φαρσάλος], f., the region around Pharsalus, a city in Thessaly, where Caesar defeated Pompey.

Phāsiscaus, a, um, [Phāsis], adj., of the Phasis; (meton.) Colchian.

Phāsis, idis or idos, [φάσις], a river in Colchis.

Phēglacu, a, um, [Phēglia], adj., of Phégia, a town in Arcadia; Arcadian.

Philēmōn, onis, [φιλημῶν], m., a pious Phrygian rustic, the husband of Bucis.

Philippēr, ūrum, [φίλιππος], m., a city in Macedonia, where Octavianus and Anthony defeated Brutus and Cassius.

Philoctētēs, ae, [φιλοκτήτης], m., son of Pœas, king of Meliboea, in Thessaly, and a companion of Hercules, who at his death gave him the poisoned arrows without which Troy could not be taken.

Philkôma, ae, [φιλοχόμα], f., the daughter of Pandion, king of Thebes, changed into a nightingale.

Philyrēsia, a, um, [Philyra], adj., Philyrean.

Philyridēs, ae (Phil.), [Philyra], m., Chiron, the son of Philyra and Saturn; she was afterward changed into a linden tree.

Phineus, ei and eos, m., brother of Cepheus, who fought with Perseus about Andromeda; king of Salmoneus in Thrace.

Phlegōn, onitis, [φλέγων, burning], m., one of the four horses of the sun.

Phōca, ae, [φόκα], f., a seal, sea dog, sea calf.

Phōcēus, a, um, [Phōcis], adj., of Phocis, Phociot.

Phōcis, idis, [φόκις], f., the country between Boeotia and Aetolia.

Phoebē, ēs, [φοιβή], f., the moon goddess, sister of Phoebus, Diana; the moon.

Phoebēs, a, um, [Phoebus], adj., of Phoebus.

Phoebus, I, [φοῖβος, the radiant], m., the sun god, a name of Apollo, the god of light; the sun.

Phoinīcēs, um, [Phoinīcē, φώινιξ], m. pl., the Phoenicians.

phoenix, idis, m., the phoenix, a fabulous bird in Arabia. (See Am., II. vi. 54, note.)

Phorōnios, idos and idis, [Phorōnios], adj. f., of Phoroneus, son of Inachus and brother of Io; subs., Io.

Phorcynis, idos and idis, [Phorcynis], f., Medusa, the daughter of Phorcus, son of Neptune.

Phrixēs, a, um, [Phrixus], adj., of or belonging to Phrixus, the son of Athamas and Nephele.

Phryges, um, m. pl., the Phrygians, Trojans.

Phrygia, ae, [φρυγία], f., the country of Phrygia in Asia Minor.
Phrygia, a, um, adj., Phrygian, Trojan.

Phthia, ae, f., a city of Thessaly, the birthplace of Achilles.

Phyllacidēs, ae, [Phylacē], m., Protesilas, so called from Phylace, a city in Thessaly, over which he reigned.

pismēn, inis, [pīō], a means of expiation, atonement.

pīca, ae, f., a pie, magpie.

pīceus, a, um, [pix], adj., pitchy, black as pitch, pitch black.

pīctus, a, um, [part. pīngō], adj., painted, colored, bright colored, "red letter."

Pleridae, um, [Pleria, Pēria], f. pl., the Muses, daughters of Jupiter and Mnemosyne, named from their favorite haunt in their native Pieria in Macedonia; the name is also given to the nine daughters of Pierus, king of Emathia, a district in Macedonia. These daughters once challenged the Muses to a contest in song.

pītē, ātis, [pīōs], f., dutiful conduct towards the gods, one's parents, children, relatives, friends, country; piety, affection, loyalty, patriotism, filial devotion.

pīger, gra, grum, adj., slow, dull, lazy, sluggish, inactive; benumbing.

pīget, āre, ult, it irks, displeases, afflicts, disgusts one, causes to repent.

pīgnus, oris, n., a pledge, token, assurance, proof; pledge of love, child.

pīla, ae, f., a ball.

pīlum, l, n., a heavy javelin.

Pindus, l, [Pīnōs], m., a mountain-range between Thessaly and Epirus, sacred to the Muses.

pīnētum, l, [pīnus], n., a pine grove.

pīneus, a, um, [pīnus], adj., of pine, pinepīngulis, e, adj., fat; thick, dense, dull, heavy, stupid, cross.

pīngiler, era, erum, [pīnus + gerō], adj., pine-bearing.

pīna, ae, f., a feather, plume; in pl., wings; an arrow.

pinus, ās and f., a pine, pine tree, fir, fir tree; anything made of pine, a ship.

pīō, āre, āvi, ātus, [pīōs], to appease, propitiate; purify.

Pīrēnēs, idis, [Pīrēnē, Pīripēnē], f. adj., of Pirene, a fountain in the citadel of Corinth; Pirenean.

Pīsa, ae, [Pīsa], f., a city of Elis, on the Alpheus, near which the Olympic games were celebrated.

Pīseus, a, um, [Pīsa], adj., of or belonging to Pisa, Pisean.

pīcis, is, m., a fish.

pīscōsus, a, um, adj., abounding in fish, fish-haunted.

pīstor, āris, [pīsōs, to pound], m., a bread maker, baker.

Pithēlos, idos, [Pīttheus], f., daughter of Pittheus, i.e. Aethra, the mother of Theseus.

Pīttheus, eī and eōs, [Pīttheōs], m., king of Troezen, an ancient city of Argolis.

pīus, a, um, adj., pious; pious, sacred, holy, pure.

placeō, ēre, ul, ītus, to please, be pleasing; impers., placet, it is pleasing, it seems good or right.

placidē, [placidus], adv., peace-fully, quietly, calmly.

placidus, a, um, [placeō], adj., calm, quiet, peaceful, tranquil, placid, steady; propitious; kindly, compassionate.

placitus, a, um, [part. placeō], adj., pleasing, acceptable.

plācō, ēre, ēvi, ītus, to calm, soothe, quiet, appease; reconcile, conciliate, placate.

plāga, ae, f., a region, quarter, tract.

plāga, ae, [plagē], f., a blow, stroke, thrust.

plangō, ere, ānxi, anctus, to strike, beat; beat the breast, lament aloud, wail.

plangor, ēris, [plangō], m., a striking or beating producing noise, a beating of the breast, loud lamentation, waiting.
planta, ae, f., a sprout, shoot, twig; a young plant, set, slip.
plānus, a, um, adj., level, flat, plane.
platanus, I, [πλάτανος], f., the platane tree, plane tree.
plaudō, ere, pluasti, pliusus, to beat, clap, flap.
plaustru, I, n., a wagon, wain, cart; the Great Bear, conceived of as Boötes’ wagon; compare Cari’s wain.
plausus, us, [plaudō], m., a beating, clapping, flapping; a clapping of the hands in approbation, applause.
plēbe, plēbis, f., the common people, the lower class, the vulgar throng; of gods, the lower ranks.
płęctrum, I, [πλέκτρον], n., a stick or quill for playing on a stringed instrument, a plectrum.
Plēias, adis, [Πλεῖας], f., one of the seven daughters of Atlas and Pleione. These were Electra, Halcyone, Celaeno, Maia, Sterope, Taygete, and Merope.
plēnus, a, um, adj., full, complete; filled, satisfied; laden; rounded out, full; deep, profound.
plūma, ae, f., a feather; in pl., plumage.
plumbum, I, n., lead.
plūrimus, a, um, adj. (superlat. of multus).
plūs, plūris, adj. (comparat. of multus).
pluvia, ae, [pluvius], f., (supply aqua), rain.
pluvius, a, um, [pluō, to rain], adj., rainy, causing rain, rain-bringing.
pōculum, I, n., a drinking-cup, a goblet.
Poēt Antiades, ae, [Poēs], m., the son of Poēs, i.e. Philoctetes.
Poētius, a, um, [Poēs], adj., of or belonging to Poēs; próōs, i.e. Philoctetes.
Poēs, antis, [Hoiæs], m., the father of Philoctetes.
poēna, ae, [ποινή], f., a punishment, expiation, penalty, torment, vengeance.
Poenus, I, m., a Carthaginian.
poēta, ae, [ποιητή], m., a poet.
pollēs, entis, [part. pollēs, to be strong], adj., strong, mighty, powerful, potent.
pollex, icis, m., the thumb.
pollitum, I, [part. polliteor, to promise], n., something promised, a promise.
polulu, ere, I, ëtus, [prō + luō], to pollute, defile; desecrate, violate.
polus, I, [πολός], m., a pole, the northpole; the heavens, sky, celestial vault.
Polydorus, I, [Πολύδωρος], m., a son of Priam.
Polyneustor, orlis, [Πολυνευστήρ], m., a king of Thrace, the husband of Ilione, the daughter of Priam.
Polyphemus, I, [Πολύφημος], m., a one-eyed giant in Sicily, the Cyclops who was in love with Galatea, and whose eye Ulysses and his companions afterward put out.
Polyxena, ae, [Πολυξένη], f., a daughter of Priam, sacrificed at the tomb of Achilles.
pompa, ae, [πομπή], f., a solemn procession as at public festivals, games, funerals, etc.
Pomplius, a, adj., the name of a Roman gens; Numula Pomplius, the second king of Rome.
pōnum, I, n., any kind of tree-fruit, especially the apple, pear; fruit.
pōndus, eris, [pendō], n., (concrete) weight, mass; (abstract) weight, heaviness.
pōns, pontis, m., a bridge.
Pontius, I, m., a Roman poet, an older contemporary of Ovid.
pontifex, icis, [pons + faciō], m., a high priest, pontiff.
vocabulary

pontificālis, e, [pontifex], adj., pontifical; sacred.
pontus, l, [rōrov], m., the sea, the deep.
Pontus, l, m., the Black Sea; a district in Asia Minor, between Bithynia and Armenia, the kingdom of Mithridates, afterward a Roman province.
poples, itis, m., the part behind the knee, the hollow of the knee; the knee.
populābilis, e, [populō], adj., destructible.
populāris, e, [populus], adj., the people's, popular; of the same people, of the country, of the district; subs., a compatriot, a fellow-countrymen.
populātor, ōris, [populō], m., a devastator, destroyer.
pōpulifer, era, eruum, [pōpulus + ferō], adj., poplar-bearing, shaded by poplars.
pōpulus, āre, āvi, ātus, to lay waste, ravage, plunder; spoil, destroy.
populus, I, m., a people, tribe, race, nation; a crowd, host, multitude, people.
pōpulus, I, f., a poplar tree.
porrigō, ere, réxi, réctus, [por (for pró) + regō], to stretch or spread out, extend.
porta, ae, f., a gate, passage, outlet.
portō, āre, āvi, ātus, to bear, carry, bring.
portus, us, m., a harbor, port, haven.
posco, ere, possci, —, to ask, beg, request, seek, demand, call for.
possidēo, āre, sēdi, sessus, [por (for pró) + sedēo], to have, hold, possess, own; hold possession of, occupy.
possidēo, ere, sēdi, sessum, [por (for pró) + sidō, to settle], to take possession of, occupy, seize.
possum, posse, potui, —, [potis + sum], to be able, one can.
post, adv., of place, after, behind; of time, after, afterward, hereafter; prep. w. acc., of place, behind; of time, after.

posteritas, ātis, [posterus], f., the future, after-ages; after-generations, posterity.
posterus, a, um, [post], adj., the following, next, ensuing.
postis, is, m., a post, door-post, a door.
post-modo, adv., afterward, a little later.
post-pōnō, ere, posui, positus, to put after, esteem less.
post-quam, conj., after, as soon as, when.
postulō, āre, āvi, ātus, to ask, demand, request, desire.
potēns, entis, [part. possum], adj., mighty, powerful; having power over, ruling over, master of.
potentia, ae, [potēns], f., power, might.
potestās, ātis, [potis], f., power, ability, chance, opportunity.
potior, iri, itus, (frequently of the third conjugation), [potis], to get, gain, obtain, reach, get possession of, become master of.
potis, e, adj., able; comparat., potior, preferable, better, superior, more important.
potius, [potis], adv., comparat., rather.
pōtō, āre, āvi, ātus or pōtus, to drink.
prae, adv. and prep. w. abl., before, in front of; in comparison with; because of, by reason of, on account of.
prae-acutus, a, um, adj., sharpened in front, sharpened, pointed.
praebeō, ēre, ul, itus, [prae + habeō], to hold forth, reach out, proffer, offer; give, grant, furnish, supply, provide.
praecēdō, ere, cessi, cessus, to go before, precede.
praecessus, cipiťis, [prae + caput], adj., headlong, head foremost, swift; rapid, rushing, violent; steep, precipitous, abrupt; in praecessus, headlong; ex praecipiti, reckless, daring, dangerous.
praeceptum, f, [praeciptiō], n., a precept, rule, command, order, warning.
praecingō, ere, nxi, nctus, to gird, encircle.
praecipīō, ere, cēpi, cepūs, [praē + capiō], to anticipate, get ahead of; advise, admonish, instruct, bid, order.
praeciptūō, āre, āvi, ātus, [praecipeps], to throw headlong, throw down; in pass. w. mid. signification, understand sē, sink, set, decline,—of the sun, etc.; rush headlong, hasten.
praecipuō, [praecipuus], adv., especially.
praecipuus, a, um, [praeciptīō], adj., taken before other things, singled out; especial, particular, peculiar; distinguished, excellent.
praecūdō, ere, cūdūs, cūsus, [praē + claudō], to shut off, shut close.
praecordia, ĕrum, [praē + cor], n. pl., the diaphragm; breast, heart; vitals; loins.
paedae, ae, [for praehenda, from pr(a)ehendō], f., booty, spoil, plunder; prey, game.
prae-dives, itis, adj., very rich, abundant.
pædō, ōnis, [praēda], m., a robber, plunderer.
pǣe, ĕre, ēvi (īi), ētus, to go before, lead the way.
pæe-ferō, ferre, tuli, ētus, to bear before; prefer, place before.
pæeficiō, ere, facēi, fecūs, [praē + faciō], to set over, place in command of.
pæe-fīgō, ere, fīxi, fīxus, to fix in front, on the end, to tip, point.
pæe-fodiō, ere, fōdiō, —, to dig in front of; bury in advance. (praē-for), āri, ētus, to utter in advance; utter a preliminary prayer; invoke.
pæēmium, ii, [praē-emō, to buy], n., a reward, prize, recompense.
pæe-moneō, ēre, ui, ētus, to forewarn; foretell, predict, presage.
pæemonitus, īus, [praēmoneō], m., a forewarning, premonition.
pæe-nōscō, ere, —, —, to foreknow, know beforehand.
pæes, etis, [praē-petō], adj., swift, fleet; subs., a bird.
pæe-pōnō, ere, posuī, positus, to place in front of; to set before, prefer.
pæe-rīpiō, ere, ui, reptus, [praē + rapīō], to seize first, snatch away, usurp, carry off.
pæeruptus, a, um, [part. prae-rumpō, to break off], adj., broken off, broken, steep, rugged.
pæesaepe, is, [praē + saepēs], n., a pen, stall, stable.
pæēsāgum, ii, [praēsāgiō, to feel beforehand], n., a presentiment, foreboding, presage.
pæē-sāgus, a, um, adj., divining, prophetic, presaging.
pæē-scius, a, um, adj., foreknowing, prescient.
pæēsēns, entis, [part. prae-sum, to be before], adj., present, at hand, in person, before one’s eyes; of time, present; present, aiding, favorable, propitious; powerful, efficacious, influential.
pæessentia, ae, [praēsēns], f., the being at hand, presence.
pæē-sentō, ĕre, sēnsī, sēnsus, to perceive beforehand, have a presentiment of, divine.
pæesae, ēdis, [praēsideō], m. and f., a protector, guardian, defender; chief, ruler.
pæe-sideō, ēre, sēdi, sessus, to sit before; protect, defend, preside over.
pæē-signis, e, [praē + signum], adj., pre eminent, distinguished.
pæestāns, antis, [part. prae-stō], adj., excellent, surpassing, illustrious, distinguished.
pæē-stō, ĕre, stīti, stītus, to stand before, be superior; füũlē, maintain, perform, bring to pass; show, exhibit, prove.
VOCABULARY

praesēs, adv., at hand, ready, present.
praē-tendō, ere, I, tentus, to stretch forth, extend; hold or stretch out in front.
praēter, prep. w. acc., of place, beyond; of other relations, beyond, contrary to, besides, except.
praēter-ēs, ire, 1, 6 (11), ītus, to pass by; go beyond, outstrip, surpass, excel.
praetinctus, a, um, [part. praetingingō, to dip in beforehand], adj., previously steeped, moistened beforehand.
praevius, a, um, [praevia], adj., going before, leading the way.
prātum, i, n., a meadow.
precārius, a, um, [precor], adj., obtained by entreaty; uncertain, precarious.
precor, āri, ātus, [prex], to pray, beg, supplicate, implore, invoke; of evil, invoke upon.
prehendō or prēndō, ere, I, ënsus, [praehendō], to lay hold of, seize, grasp.
primō, ere, presāi, pressus, to press, press upon, overwhelm; tread or walk upon; press hard after, pursue closely; oppress, overwhelm, weigh down, restrain, check, stop; press upon, lie, sit or be upon; spread over; press, squeeze, w. ubera, milk; press down, depress, deflect; pressus, pressed down, low lying; mark, trace, write; follow up, press home, insist upon.
pressō, āre, āvi, ātus, [freq. premō], (poet.), to press.
pretēsus, a, um, [pretium], adj., of great value, costly, precious.
pretium, i, n., price, value, purchase money, money; (poet.), a reward.
prex, cis, i, a prayer, supplication, entreaty.
Prīamidēs, ae, [Priamus], m., a son of Priam.

Priamus, i, [Πριαμός], m., Priam, king of Troy.
prīdem, adv., long ago, long since.
primō, [primus], adv., in the beginning, at first.
(primōrdium), i, [primus + ōrdior, to begin], n., a beginning, origin.
prīnum, [primus], adv., at first, first; w. ut, cum, etc., when first, as soon as.
prīmus, a, um, adj., (superl. of prior), first, foremost, earliest; the first part of; primus aliquid facit, he is the first to do, etc.
prīnciae, ipsīs, [primus + capiō], adj., first, in time or space; subs., a chief, leader, emperor, prince.
princippium, ii, [principe], n., a beginning, commencement; adv., principiō, in the beginning, in the first place, first.
prior, āris, adj. comp., before some one else in time or order, first, former, previous, prior; subs., priorēs, um, m. pl., ancestors, forefathers, men of olden time.
prīsucus, a, um, [for prīscus], adj., old, ancient; former, old-time.
prīstinus, a, um, [for prīustinus], adj., former.
prius, [prior], adv., before, sooner, first.
prius-quām or prius quam, conj., before that, before, until.
privō, āre, āvi, ātus, [privus, deprived of], to bereave, deprive, rob, strip.
prō, prep. w. ahl., before, in front of; for, in behalf of, in return for, in defense of; instead of; for, as; in proportion to.
prō! interj. expressing wonder or lamentation, O! ah!
pro-avus, i, m., a great-grandfather; in gen., an ancestor.
probō, āre, āvi, ātus, [probus], to try, test, prove, demonstrate; approve, deem well or desirable.
probrum, i, n., a shameful act, base deed.
probus, a, um, adj., estimable, good, upright, honest.
procella, ae, f., a blast, storm, tempest.
procellōsus, a, um, [procella], adj., full of storms, tempestuous; bringing storms.
procer, eris, m., usually pl., chiefs, nobles, princes.
prōcērus, a, um, adj., high, lofty, tall.
prō-clīnō, āre, āvi, ātus, to bend forward, incline.
Procris, is, [Πρόκρις], f., the wife of Cephalus, who shot her in a wood, mistaking her for a wild beast.
procūl, [procēlā, to drive away], adv., far off, at a distance, afar.
prō-cumbō, ere, cubulī, cubitus, to bend or lean forward, bend; fall, fall in death, sink down; fall forward, fall in, be beaten down.
prō-currō, ere, cucurri, and currī, cursus, to run forward; jut out, project.
procus, I, m., a suitor, wooer.
prōdeō, āre, ā (vi), ātus, [prō + edī], to go forward, come forth, advance; appear.
prōdigiōsus, a, um, [prōdigium, a portent, prodigy], adj., unnatural, wonderful, marvellous.
prōditātis, ānis, [prōditās], f., treason.
prō-dō, ere, didī, ditus, to bring forth, put forth, produce; betray; give up, abandon, desert.
prō-dūcō, ere, ductū, ductus, to lead forth or out, produce; bring, bring forth.
proelium, ii, n., a battle, fight.
profānus, a, um, [prō + fānum], adj., unholy, profane, uninitiated in sacred rites.
prōfectus, — abl. ò, [prōfāctō], m., advance, effect, success.
prō-ferō, ferre, tollī, lātus, to carry forward, extend.
prōficiō, ere, faciō, fectus, [prō + faciō], to make headway, succeed; profit, avail.
prōfiscor, i, profectus, [prō-ficiō], to set out, depart, come from.

profugus, a, um, [prōfugīō, to flee before], adj., fleeing, exiled, banished; pertaining or belonging to an exile, exile’s; subs., an exile.
pro-fundō, ere, fūdī, fūsus, to pour out, shed copiously.
pro-fundus, a, um, adj., deep, profound, vast; subs., the deep sea, the deep.
prōgenīs, īs, [prō + root gen in gignō], f., descent, race, stock, offspring, progeny.
prohibēō, āre, ul, ātus, [prō + habēō], to hold back, keep off, ward off, avert; debar, forbid, prohibit; w. object clause, hinder, prevent.
prōficiō, ere, iści, fectus, [prō + iaciō], to throw forth, fling away, throw down, throw aside.
prōīsēs, īs, f., an offspring, child, posterity, progeny, race.
Promēthīdēs, ae, [Promētheus], m., the son of Prometheus, one of the Titans, the son of Iapetus, and father of Deucalion. (For Prometheus, see Met. 1. 82, note.)
prō-minēō, āre, ā, —, to stand out, jut out, overhang, project.
prōmissum, I, n., a promise.
prō-mittō, ere, misā, missus, to hold out, give hope of, assure, promise.
prōmō, ere, pai (ma), ptus, [prō + emō, to buy], to bring out, bring forth, bring forth to light; put forth, display.
prōmptus, a, um, [part. prōmō], adj., at hand, ready, quick, prompt, inclined; easy.
(prōmptus, stās), [prōmō], m., a bringing forth to view; used only in the phrase in promptā, public, open, manifest; at hand, ready, easy.
pro-nepōs, ātis, m., a great-grandson.
prōnus, a, um, adj., bending or leaning forward; of an animal in flight, flying swiftly; prone, inclined downward, downflowing.

prōpāgō, inas, [prō + root pac in pango], 1., stock, progeny, race.

prope, adv. and prep. w. acc., near; almost.

properātus, a, um, [part. properō], adj., hurried, rapid, quick, speedy.

properō, āre, āvi, ātus, [properus, quick], to hasten, make haste, do anything in haste.

Propertius, l, m., a celebrated elegiac Roman poet, an older contemporary of Ovid.

propior, ius, adj. comp. (no positive, but see the adverb propē, nearer.

prō-pōnō, ere, posuī, posuitus, to set before, display, propose, offer; purpose, intend, design.

prōpositum, l, [from prōpositus, part. prōpōnī], n., that which is proposed, a plan, purpose, resolution, expressed desire; principal subject, theme.

proprius, a, um, adj., one’s own; peculiar, particular, proper.

propter, prep. w. acc., near, close to; on account of, because of.

prō-scindō, ere, —, —, to plow, break up.

prōsecta, ērum, [from part. prō-secat, to cut off], n.pl., the parts cut off for sacrifice, the entrails.

prō-sequor, 1, secūtus, to accompany, attend, follow, follow after; wait upon, attend, honor.

Prōserpina, ae, [Πρόσερψινη], l., Prōserpine, daughter of Ceres and Jupiter, and wife of Pluto.

prōstillō, ire, ul, —, [prō + salīō, to leap], to spring, leap, or start forth.

prōspectō, āre, āvi, ātus, [freq. prōspiciō], to look forth, look at, view, behold.

prōspectus, us, [prōspiciō], m., the prospect, outlook, view; sight, power of sight.

prōsperus, a, um, adj., favorable, fortunate, prosperous; propitious.

prōspiciō, ere, speciō, spectus, [prō+speciō, to look], to look out, forth, or forward; trans., see in the distance, descry, perceive, discern, see, look out upon, look forward to or upon.

prō-sternō, ere, strāvi, strātus, to cast down, overthrow, throw to the ground.

prōstituō, ere, ītus, [prō + statuō], to set forth in public, prostitute, offer for sale.

prō-sum, prōdēsse, prōful, to be of assistance or use, avail, profit.

prō-tegō, ere, tēxi, tēctus, to cover in front, protect.

protervus, a, um, [prōterō, to tread under foot], adj., violent, vehement, bold, wanton, impudent.

Prōteus, el and eos, [Προτέας], m., a sea-god who had the power of assuming many different forms.

prōtinus, [prō + tenus], adv., forthwith, immediately, right on, from there on.

prō-turbō, āre, āvi, ātus, to drive on, repel, repulse; prostrate.

prō-veniō, ire, vēni, ventus, to come forth, appear, arise, be produced.

prōvidus, a, um, [prōvideō, to foresee], adj., foreseeing, prescient; cautious, provident, prudent.

proximitās, ātis, [proximus], l., nearness, proximity.

proximus, a, um, [superl. of propītor], adj., nearest, nearest in place; next, in time.

pruinā, ae, f., hoar-frost, rime.

pruinōsus, a, um, [prūna], adj., covered with hoar-frost; frosty, riny.

prūnum, l, n., a plum, prune.

Prytanis, is, m., one of the Lycian allies of Priam.

psittacus, l, [πιθανός], m., a parrot.

Psophis, Ídis, [Ψωφίς], l., a city in Arcadia.

pūbēs, is, t., collective, youth, young men; offspring.

pūbicus, a, um, [for populus from populus], adj., of the state, public, common; common, general, public, universal.
pudeo, are, ul or puditum est, to make or be ashamed; impers., pudet, one is ashamed.
pudor, õris, [pudeo], m., shame, modesty, decency, chastity; sculples.
puea, ae, [dim. puer], f., a girl, a maiden.
pueilaris, e, [puella], adj., of a girl, girlish, maidenly.
puer, eri, m., a child in general, a boy.
puerillis, e, [puer], adj., boyish, youthful.
püguna, ae, f., a battle, combat.
pügnax, õcis, [püguna], adj., fond of fighting, pugnacious, combative, opposed to.
pügna, are, avi, atus, [püguna], to fight, contend in battle; strive, struggle; resist, oppose.
pulcher, chra, chrum, adj., fair, beautiful; goodly, noble, illustrious; glorious.
pullus, a, um, adj., dark-colored, dusky, blackish.
pümo, õnis, m., a lung.
pulpita, õrum, n. pl., a scaffold, pulpit, stage.
pulse, are, avi, atus, [freq. pelló], to beat or strike again and again, beat constantly, strike repeatedly; dash against, strike against; beat, lash.
pulvereus, a, um, [pulvis], adj., dusty.

puverulentus, a, um, [pulvis], adj., dusty, dry; attended with labor, toilsome.
pulvis, eris, m., f., dust.
pümex, õcis, m., a pumice stone, porous rock of any kind, rock.
pümceus, a, um, [pümex], adj., of pumice stone, of lava; of stone.
pümceus, a, um, [Fümucus], adj., purple, red.
Pümucus, a, um, [Poenit], adj., Punic, Carthaginian; of the Phoenician color, purple, purple-red.
puppis, is, f., the stern of a ship; a ship.

(pürgmen, inlis), [pürgö], n., only pl., a means of cleansing, expiation, atonement.
pürgö, are, avi, atus, to cleanse, purify, make clear.
purpura, ae, [pöpöa], f., purple color, purple.
purpureus, a, um, [purpura], adj., purple; poet., of many hues, dark red, violet, etc.; rosy, blushing; bright, ruddy, glowing, beautiful; wearing purple, clothed in purple.
pürus, a, um, adj., clean, pure, clear, unstained; pure, unspotted, chaste, undefiled, faultless, perfect; in active sense, making pure, purifying, used in purification.
püdo, are, avi, atus, [putus], clean, to think, suppose, consider.
Pylius, a, um, [Pyls], adj., of Pylus, the kingdom of Nestor; Nestorian, Nestor's.
pyra, ae, [pyra], f., a pyre, a funeral pile.
Pyramus, I, [Pöpam], m., an Assyrian youth, the lover of Thébe.
Pyrois, entis, [Pöpöis], fery, m., the name of one of the horses of the sun.
pyrópus, I, [pöpöpö], m., gold-bronze, bronze.
Pyrrha, ae, [Pöpra], f., the wife of Deucalion, and daughter of Epimetheus.
Pyrrhaus, I, [Pöpragma], m., a son of Achilles and Deidamia, also called Neoptolemus.
Pythius, a, um, [Pythöö, Pöööö, the former name of Delphi], adj., Pythian, Delphic, of Apollo; subs., Pythia, õrum, n. pl., the Pythian games, celebrated every fourth year at Delphi in honor of Apollo.
Pythön, õnis, [Pöööööööööö], m., the serpent slain near Delphi by Apollo.

Q
qua [abl. fem. qui], adv., rel., where, how; interrog., where? how? indef., in any way.
quadrigus, a, um, [quattuor +
VOCABULARY

jugum, adj., of a team of four; drawn by four horses; subs., m. pl., a four-horse team.

quadrupēs, edis, [quattuor + pēs], m., a quadruped, animal.

quaeō, ere, sivi (ii), situs, to seek, search for; seek to learn; ask, inquire; ask for, seek to gain; seek in vain, miss.

quālis, e, adj., interrog., of what sort? rel., of such sort, such as, as.

quam, adv., in what way, how much, how, as much as; after tam, as; with comparat., than; exceedingly, very, quite, indeed; with superlat. it intensifies the meaning, e.g. quam maximum, the greatest possible; quam primum, as soon as possible.

quan-libet, as much as one will, however much, to any extent.

quan-quam, conj., although; and yet.

quan-vis, conj., although.

quantulus-cumque, [dim. quantus + cumque], indef. adj., however small.

quantus, a, um, adj., interrog., how great? how much? how many? rel., as great, as much as.

quā-rē, adv., wherefore.

quārtus, a, um, [quattuor], adj., the fourth.

qua-ēl, adv., as if, just as if, as though.

quater, [quattuor], adv., four times.

quātiō, ere, —, quassus, to shake; shake, beat, flap; agitate, cause to quiver or tremble.

quattuor, adj., decl. i., four.

-que, conj., enclit., and, expressing a more intimate relation than et.

queō, quire, tvi (ii), itus, to be able.

querous, ēs, t, an oak, oak tree, a garland of oak leaves.

querēla (querella), ae, [queror], t, a complaint, lamentation.

queror, i, questus, to complain, lament, bewail.

quia, conj., because.

quicumque, quaecumque, quodcumque, indef. rel. pron., whoever, whatever.

quid, interrog. adv., in what respect? why? quid quod, what of the fact that?

quidam, quaedam, quoddam, indef. pron., a certain, certain one, some one, something; a certain, a kind of.

quidem, adv., indeed, at least, forsooth.

quiēs, ēs, t, rest, quiet, peace, repose.

quiēscō, ere, ēvi, étus, [quiēs], to rest, repose; become quiet, cease, leave off, desist.

qui-libet, quaelibet, quodlibet, indef. pron., any you please, any whatever, quin, [quē + -ne], conj., that not, but that; adv., why not? nay, nay even, moreover; nay but.

quini, ae, a, [quinque], distr. num. adj., five each, or in gen., five.

quinque, num. adj., five.

quinquennium, ii, [quinque + annus], m., a period of five years, five years.

Quintilius, is, [quintus], m., adj., supply mēnsis, the fifth month, July.

quintus, a, um, [quinque], num. adj., the fifth.

quippe, adv., indeed, surely; ironically, forsooth; conj., since, inasmuch as.

Quirīna, i, m., a surname of the deified Romulus.

quis-quam, quaequam, quidquam (quiream), indef. pron. subs., any one, any thing; adj., any.

quis-que, quaeque, quodque, and subs., quidque, indef. pron., whoever, whatever, each, every.
quils, quisquis, quicquid, indef. rel. pron., whoever, whatever; every one who, every thing which.
quils, quaevis, quidvis, and (as adj.) quodvis, indef. pron., whom you please, any whatever, any thing.
quō, [dat. and abl. of qui], inter. and rel. adv., where, whither, how far, wherefore; conj., in order that.
quō-cumque, adv., whithersoever.
quod, conj., that, in that, the fact that, because.
quod si, but if.
quondam, [quam, old for cum + -dam], adv., once, formerly; at times, sometimes.
quomiam, [quam + iam], conj., since now, because.
quoque, conj. (placed after the emphatic word), also, too.
quōt, adj., indecl., how many? as many as.
quōtēns, [quot], adv., how often? as often as.
quōtus, a, um, [quot], interrog. adj., of that number? how small? how trifling?

R
rabiēs, em, e,f., rage, madness, fury, frenzy.
racēmus, l, m., a cluster of grapes.
rēdī, ēre, —, —, [radius], to gleam, beam, shine.
rēdīus, l, m., a staff or rod; a spoke of a wheel; poet. in pl., the rays of light; a crown of light.
rādīx, līcis, f., a root, as of a tree; an edible root, a radish.
rādī, ēre, rāsl, rāsus, to scrape, shave; skim, graze, sail close to, skirt.
rāmālia, līm, [rāmus], n., twigs, sticks, branches.
rāmōsus, a, um, [rāmus], adj., full of branches, branching.
rāmus, l, m., a bough, branch, twig.
rāpāx, ōnis, [rāpō], adj., violent, greedy, insatiable.
rāpidus, a, um, [rāpō], adj., swift, quick, rapid, in rapid course or flight; devouring, consuming, fierce.
rāpina, ae, [rāpō], f., a snatching away, carrying off; robbery, plunder.
rāpō, ere, ui, raptus, to seize and carry off, hurry, snatch, tear, pluck away, take, snatch up; catch or catch up quickly; snatch away, rescue; pillage, plunder, rob, steal, ravish.
raptor, ōris, [rāpō], m., a robber, plunderer.
raptum, i, [raptus, part. rāpō], n., that which has been stolen, booty, plunder.
rārus, a, um, adj., loose in texture, thin, with wide meshes; with large intervals, far apart; pecten rārus, a rake; scattered, scattering, random, here and there; uncommon, scarce, rare, remarkable; adv., rārō, rarely, seldom.
rāstrum, l, [rādō], n., generally pl., rāstri, ōrum, m., a heavy pronged hoe, a rake, a mattock.
ratiō, ōnis, [reor, ratus], f., a reckoning, calculation; mode, manner, method, plan; judgment, reason.
ratis, is, f., a raft, a boat, ship in general.
ratus, a, um, [part. reor], adj., thought out, fixed, settled, established, confirmed.
rāucus, a, um, adj., hoarse, deep, or harshly sounding; hoarsely roaring, resounding.
re- or red-, an inseparable particle, back, again; also with intensive force.
rebellis, e, [re- + bellum], adj., insurgent, rebellious.
rebellī, ēre, ēvi, ētus, to wage war again, renew the combat.
reatassō, ere, candul, —, [re- + inch. candēs], to grow white again, whiten; glow again, glow with heat.
reatantēs, ēre, avi, ētus, [re- + freq. canēs], to charm back, charm away.
VOCABULARY

re-cōdō, ere, cessi, cessus, to go back, retire, withdraw, give way, give place, draw back, go away; go away, leave, vanish, flee.

recēns, entis, adj., fresh, young, green, recent, new.

receptus, ūs, [recipīō], m., a falling back; retreat, withdrawal, leaving off.

recessus, ūs, [recedō], m., a remote place, nook, retreat, recess; mar- moreō recessus, in the marble hall.

reclido, ere, i, cāsus, [re- + cadō], to fall back, return; be visited upon, recoil.

reclido, ere, i, cīlus, [re- + caedō], to cut away, cut down, cut off.

re-śīngō, ere, śīnī, cinctus, to ungird, unloose.

recipīō, ere, cēpl, ceptus, [re- + capīō], to bring, take or get back, recover, rescue; admit, receive.

re-śītō, āre, āvi, stūs, to read aloud, recite, declaim.

reclūdō, ere, citāl, cīlaus, [re- + claudō], to unclose, open, disclose, reveal; lay bare, cut off, sever.

re-cōgnōscō, ere, gnōvi, gnitus, to recall to mind, recognize.

re-śīndō, ere, didi, ditus, to lay up, stow away, hide, conceal, bury; w. osculōs, to close.

re-śīngō, ere, lēgī, lectus, to gather again, collect; regain.

recōndor, āri, stūs, [re- + cor], to recall to mind, remember.

rēctor, āris, [regō], m., leader, master, ruler, helmsman.

rēctus, a, um, [part. regō], adj., drawn straight, straight; right; subs., rēctum, i, n., that which is right, rectitude, virtue.

recumbō, ēre, cubul, —, to lie down, recline.

recurvō, āre, —, stūs, [recurvus], to bend backward, wind, curve.

re-cūrus, a, um, adj., turned back, bent, curved.

reō, āre, ēvi, stūs, [re- + causa], to refuse, be reluctant.

redō, ere, didi, ditus, to put or give back, return, restore, give back words, reply, answer, echo; give, render, grant.

redō, ere, īl, ītus, [redempiō], to return, make back, return.

redigō, ere, ēgī, āctus, [re- + agō], to drive, lead, bring back; reduce.

redimō, īre, īl, ītus, to bind around, encircle.

redimō, ere, īmī, ēmpatus, [redempiō], to buy back, redeem, ransom.

reditus, ūs, [recedō], m., a return.

red-ōleō, āre, olīu, —, to smell of, be redolent of.

re-dūcō, ere, dūxi, ductus, to lead, bring or draw back.

re-fellō, ere, fellī, —, [re- + fallō], to disprove, refute.

re-ferō, ferre, retuli, relātus, to bear or bring back, give back, return, restore; turn to, toward; w. animum, turn the mind to, give attention to; report, relate; w. reflex. or in pass., betake oneself, go back; recall, reproduce, remind one of; speak back, answer; speak, say, utter; render, perform.

re-fert, ferre, tuli, —, [rēs + ferō], it matters, concerns, is of consequence.

refīciō, ere, féci, fectus, [re- + faciō], to make again, remake, restore, repair, rekindle.

refftus, a, um, [reffō, to flow back], adj., flowing back, refruent.

refringō, ere, frēgī, frāctus, [re- + frangō], to break off, tear off.

reffugō, ere, fugē, —, to flee back or away, retreat; recoil; recede; trans., flee back from, shun, avoid.

reffugus, a, um, [reffūtō], adj., fleeing back, receding, vanishing.

reffulgeō, ēre, fulsi, —, to flash back, shine, glitter; gleam, shine resplendent.

regālis, e, [rēx], adj., regal, royal.

re-gerō, ēre, gessi, gestus, to bring back, throw back.

regia, ae, [regius], f., a royal palace, castle, fortress, court.
rëgína, ae, [rôx], f., a queen, a princess.
regiò, ònis, [rego], f., direction, quarter, region, territory.
regius, a, um, [rêx], adj., royal.
regnó, are, ávi, átus, [rego], to reign as king, be king, lord it; trans., govern, rule over.
regnum, I, [rêx], n., kingly government, sovereignty, power, seat of government, kingdom, realm.
regó, ere, réxi, réctus, to direct, guide, keep straight; rule, govern, sway, control.
reició, ere, ieci, iectus, [rê- + iacio], to throw back or off.
relabor, I, lápsus, to slide, glide, sink back.
re-langueuscó, ere, languúi, —, [re- + inch. languó], to sink down, become faint.
relaxó, are, ávi, átus, to stretch out, widen, open, loosen.
relévó, are, ávi, átus, to lift up, raise; free from a burden, lighten; relieve, free, ease, soothe, console.
relligó, are, ávi, átus, to bind back, fasten, bind fast; move.
relinquó, ere, liqui, lictus, to leave behind, leave, give up, surrender, desert, neglect, forsake, abandon.
relúceó, ère, láxi, —, to shine back, shine, glow, gleam again.
remaneó, ere, mánâi, —, to stay behind, be left, remain; stay, continue, remain, endure.
remex, igrís, [reamus + agó], m., a rower, oarsman.
remigium, II, [remex], n., a rowing; machinery of rowing, oarage; transf., wings.
reminiscor, I, [re- + root man in méns, memini, etc.], to recall to mind, remember.
remitto, ere, misí, missus, to send back; send forth, give out, produce; let go back, loosen, relax; give up, resign, yield.
remolléscô, ere, —, [re- + inch. *molléo], to soften; be moved, be influenced.
remoror, ári, átus, to hold back, delay, detain, obstruct, hinder.
removeó, are, móvi, móitus, to move away, clear away, withdraw, remove; set aside, put out of question.
remugió, ire, —, to bellow back, resound, reécho.
remus, I, m., an oar.
renarró, are, ávi, átus, to tell again.
renascor, I, nátus, to be born again, be ever renewed.
renidéns, entis, [part. renideó, to shine back], adj., shining, beaming; joyful, smiling.
renovó, are, ávi, átus, to renew, revive.
reor, réri, ratus, to believe, think, suppose, deem.
repágula, órum, n. pl., barriers, bolts, bars.
reparábils, a, [repáró], adj., that may be repaired, retrievable, repairable.
reparó, are, ávi, átus, to get again, restore, repair, renew, revive.
repeleo, ere, repull, repulsion, to drive back, repel, repulse; push back, thrust back, away; spur; refuse, reject.
repercussus, a, um, [part. repercussió, to strike back], adj., struck back, throws back; shining back, reflected.
reperiet, ire, repperi, repertus, to find, find out, discover, perceive.
reptor, òris, [reperió], m., the discoverer, inventor, author.
repeto, ere, Ivi, (II), Itus, to attack again, strike again; seek again, return to, go back to; recall, remember; repeat, renew, begin over again; say again, repeat.
repleó, are, ávi, átus, to refill, fill up, fill.
replétus, a, um, [part. repeleó], adj., full, choked.
reponó, ere, posuí, positus, to put or place back, restore; lay aside, lay down, give up.
re-pono, ere, —, —, to demand back, demand, require, exact.
reprimo, ere, presai, pressus, [re- + premo], to press back, check, restrain.
re-pungo, are, avii, atus, to fight back, oppose, resist; disagree with, be incompatible with.
repulse, ae, [part. repellor], f., a refusal, denial, repulse.
re-quiris, estis, f., rest, repose, relaxation, respite, a place of rest, a resting place.
requiesco, ere, avi, atus, to rest.
requiror, are, sivis, (1), situs, [re- + quaeror], to seek again, seek out, seek; ask, seek to know, inquire after.
rēs, rēl, f., a thing, affair, event, circumstance, cause, reason, interest, advantage, reality, fact, substance, property, possessions.
resecō, are, secul, sectus, to cut loose, cut off.
re-sero, are, avi, atus, to unlock, uncloze, open; disclose.
re-servō, are, avi, atus, to keep back, reserve, save up.
re-sideō, are, sedi, sessus, [re- + sedō], to remain behind; stay, remain, abide.
re-sidio, ere, sedi, —, to sit down; settle, settle down, sink down; subside, abate.
re-sistō, are, stiti, —, to stand still, remain standing, stand forth; stop, halt; resist, oppose, make resistance.
re-solvō, ere, I, solitus, to unloose, unbind; open; set free, free, release.
re-sound, are, avi, —, to resound, echo.
resonus, a, um, [resonō], adj., resounding, reechoing.
respectus, us, [respicio], m., a looking back; respect, regard, consideration.
respicio, ere, speci, spectus, [re- + speciō], to look back or around; look back for, upon or at.
respondeō, are, I, spōnsus, to answer, respond to; correspond to.
responsum, I, [responsum, part. respondeo], n., an answer, a response, reply.
restituō, ere, i, titus, [re- + statuō], to set up again, restore, reestablish; restore, revive.
restō, stāre, stiti, —, to withstand, resist, oppose; be left, remain.
re-sumō, ere, psi, ptus, to take up again, resume; recover.
re-supinus, a, um, adj., bent back, thrown back, leaning back or backward, lying on the back, supine.
re-surgō, ere, surrēxi, surrēctus, to rise again, lift one's self, be restored.
re-tardō, are, avi, atus, to hinder, delay, impede, retard.
rete, is, n., a net, toils.
re-tegō, ere, tēxi, tēctus, to uncover, open; disclose, reveal.
re-temptō, are, —, —, to try anew, attempt again.
re-texō, ere, ui, tuis, to unravel, reverse, annul.
retico, ere, ui, —, [re- + taceō], to be silent, keep silence.
retenō, ere, ui, tentus, [re- + teneō], to hold back, restrain; hold fast, keep, retain; stop, check, hinder.
re-torqueō, are, torse, tortus, to twist, turn, throw back.
re-trahō, ere, trāxi, trāctus, to draw or drag back; recall.
retrō, adv., backward, back.
reus, [rēs], adj., m. and f., accused, arraigned, defendant; subs. m., a defendant, one bound by or answerable for anything.
re-vellō, ere, I, vulsum, to pluck, pull or tear off or away.
reverentia, ae, [revereur], f., respect, regard, reverence.
re-vertor, I, versus, to turn back, revert, return.
re-vocābiles, e, adj., that can be recalled, revocable.
VOCABULARY

re-vocō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, to recall, call back.

re-volvō, ere, I, volvātus, to roll back; in pass., w. deponent sense, fall or sink back, return.

rēx, rēgis, m., a king, chief, ruler, master.

Rhamnūsia, ae, [Rhamnūs, 'Rham-nūs], f., the goddess Nemesis, of whom a famous statue stood in Rhamnus, a town in the north of Attica.

Rhēsus, I, m., the Rhine, flowing between Gaul and Germany.

Rhēsus, I, [Rīros], m., a Thracian king killed before Troy by Diomede and Ulysses.

Rhodanus, I, m., the Rhone.

Rhodopē, es, [Rōdōns], f., a mountain range in Thrace.

Rhodopēsia, a, um, [Rhodopē], adj., Rhodopean, Thracian, i.e. Orpheus.

richtus, ūs, [ringor, to open wide the mouth], m., the aperture of the mouth, gaping jaws.

rideō, ēre, rīs, rīsus, to laugh, smile; trans., laugh at, ridicule.

rigeō, ēre, —, —, to be stiff, numb; stand on end, bristle, stiffen, harden; stand stiff, stand upright, rise.

rigidus, a, um, [rigēō], adj., stiff, unyielding, hard, inflexible, rigid.

rigor, ēris, [rigēō], m., stiffness, hardness, firmness.

riguus, a, um, [rigō, to water], adj., abounding in water, well-watered.

rima, ae, f., a cleft, crack, chink.

ripa, ae, f., the bank of a river.

rite, adv., with proper religious rites; fitly, correctly, properly, well, rightly.

ritus, ūs, m., ceremony, rite; usage, fashion, style, manner.

rivus, I, m., a stream.

rōbur, oris, n., an oak tree, oak; in general, any kind of hard wood; strength, vigor, power, freshness.

robustus, a, um, [rōbur], adj., hardy, strong, sturdy.

rogō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, to ask, question, request; ask for, demand; woo; beg, implore, pray.

rogus, I, m., a funeral pile.

Rōma, ae, f., the city of Rome.

Rōmanus, a, um, adj., of or belonging to Rome, Roman.

Rōmulus, I, m., the founder and first king of Rome.

rōrī, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [rōs], to drip.

rōs, rōris, m., dew, moisture, liquid.

rosa, ae, f., a rose.

rōstrum, I, [rōdō, to gnaw], n., a beak, bill, snout, mouth, muzzle.

rota, ae, f., a wheel.

rotō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [rota], to turn round, revolve.

rotundus, a, um, [rotō], adj., round, spherical, rotund.

rubefaciō, ere, fēōc, factus, [rubēō + faciō], to make red, redden.

rubēns, entis, [part. rubēō], adj., glowing, red, rosy.

rubēō, ēre, —, —, to be red, rosy.

ruber, bra, brum, adj., red, rosy.

rubēscō, ere, rubul, —, [inch. rubēō], to grow red, redden.

rubēta, ūrum, [rubus], n. pl., bramble-thickets.

rubor, ēris, m., a redness; a blush, flush.

rudēns, entis, m., a rope.

rudis, e, adj., unwrought, unformed, unused, rough, raw, wild, coarse; inexperienced; unskilled, clumsy, ignorant; w. somni, sleepless.

rūga, ae, f., a wrinkle.

rūgōsus, a, um, [rūga], adj., wrinkled, shrunvelled.

ruina, ae, [ruō], f., a falling down, a fall, downfall, ruin, destruction, overthrow.

rūmor, ēris, m., rumor, report, gossip.

rumpō, ere, ūplī, ruptus, to break, burst, tear, rend, rupture, break asunder; break into, interrupt, shatter, cut short.

ruō, ere, I, tus, to fall or rush violently down, fall in ruins; rush, hurry, dash, hasten; rush forth.
rūpeis, is, f., a rock, cliff, crag.
rūricola, ae, [rūs + colō], m. and f., a tiler of the ground, husbandman, countryman.

rūrsus and rūrsum, [for reversus, part. revertō], adv., backward; of time, again.

rūs, rūris, n., the country; in pl., the fields.

rūsticus, ae, um, [rūs], adj., rural, rustic; clownish.

rutilus, a, um, adj., red, golden red, reddish yellow.

S
Sabinius, a, um, adj., Sabine, of the Sabines, an ancient Latin people adorning the Latins.
sacer, cra, crum, adj., consecrated, sacred, holy, venerable, through consecration or association with a divinity.
sacerdōs, ōtis, [sacer], m., f., a priest; a priestess.
sacrificus, a, um, [sacrum + faciō], adj., sacrificial, priestly.
sacrilegus, a, um, [sacrum + legō], adj., sacrilegious, impious, profane.
sacrō, āre, āri, ātus, [sacer], to consecrate or dedicate.
sacrum, I, [sacer], n., used chiefly in pl., sacred things, sacred rites.
saeculum (saeculum), I, n., generally in pl., age, generation, century.
saepe, adv., often, frequently.
saepēs, is, f., a hedge.
saeta, ae, f., a bristle, a stiff hair.
saevīo, Ire, if, Itus, [saevus], to rage, be furious, fierce or angry.
saevus, a, um, adj., raging, furious, cruel, savage, fierce, dire, pitiless.
sagāx, acis, [*sagīō, to perceive quickly], adj., of acute senses, keen-scented.
sagittās, ae, f., an arrow, shaft, bolt.
sagittifer, fera, ferum, [lagitta + ferō], adj., arrow-bearing.
sal, salis, m., n., salt.
salāx, acis, [salīō, to leap], adj., lustful, salacious.
salictum, I, [salix], n., a willow grove or hedge.
sallgnus, a, um, [salix], adj., of willow wood, willow.
salix, icis, f., a willow, osier.
saltem, adv., at least, at all events.
saltus, ës, m., a leap, bound, spring.
saltus, ës, m., a forest pasture, woodland, glade.
salubris, e, [salus], adj., health-giving, healthful, salubrious.
salum, I, n., the open sea, the deep, the sea in general.
salus, ãtis, f., safety, welfare, deliverance.
salūtō, āre, āri, ātus, [salus], to salute, greet, hail, welcome.
(salveō), āre, —, —, [salvus], to be well; usually in the imperative as a greeting, hail, welcome.
salvus, a, um, adj., in good health, well, sound, safe, uninjured.
Saminus, a, um, [Samos], adj., of Samos; an epithet of Pythagoras, who was born and lived on that island.
Samos, I, [Σāmos], an island off the coast of Asia Minor.
sānābilis, e, [sānō, to cure], adj., curable, remediable.
sanctus, a, um, [part. sanctō, to make sacred], adj., sacred, inviolable, holy, venerable, august, pious, just.
sanguineus, a, um, [sanguis], adj., bloody, blood-stained, blood-red.
sanguis, inis, m., blood; bloodshed, slaughter; descent, race, stock; a descendant, offspring.
sānus, a, um, adj., sound, well; of the mind, sane, rational, in one's right mind.
sapa, ae, f., must, new wine boiled thick.

sapiēns, entis, [part. sapiō, to have sense], adj., wise, discreet, judicious.
sapenter, [sapiēns], adv., sensibly, prudently, wisely.
sarcina, ae, f., burden, load; burden, care.
Sardis, Ínum, [Σάρδης], f. pl., Sardis, the ancient capital of Lydia, on the Pactolus river.
Sarmatae, ārum, [Σαρμάτης], m. pl., the Sarmatians, a great Slavic people represented in territory by modern Poland and Russia.

Sarmaticus, a, um, adj., Sarmatian.

Sarmatis, idis, f. adj., Sarmatian.

Sarpēdōn, onis, [Σάρπεδών], m., son of Jupiter, king of Lycia, an ally of the Trojans.

sata, ūrum, [part. serō], n. pl., standing grain, crops.

satiō, āre, āvi, ātus, [satis], to satisfy, appease, sate, glut.

satis, adv., indecl. adj., and subs., enough, sufficiently or sufficient.

satur, ure, urum, [satis], adj., full, well-fed.

Sāturnius, a, um, [Sāturnus], adj., of or belonging to Saturn; as subs., Sāturni, i. m., Jupiter; Sāturnis, ae, f., Juno.

Sāturnus, I., [from root sa in serō], m., Saturn, the most ancient king of Latium, the god of agriculture and civilization in general; he was regarded as the father of Jupiter, Juno, Neptune, Pluto, etc.

saturō, āre, āvi, ātus, [satur, full], to fill, glut, satisfy, assuage.

satus, i. m., see serō.

saturus, i, [sατυρός], m., a satyr, a fabulously being, half man and half goat.

saucīō, āre, āvi, ātus, [saucius], to wound, hurt, tear; tear up.

saucus, a, um, adj., wounded, pierced, smitten, rent.

Sauromatae, ārum, m. pl., see Sarmatae.

saxeus, a, um, adj., [saxum], of rock, of stone, stony.

saxīcōs, a, um, [saxum + faciō], adj., turning into stone, petrifying.

saxum, i. n., a rock, large rough stone.

scaber, bra, brum, adj., rough.

scænæ, ae, [σκηνή], f., a stage scene, the background of the play on the stage, a background; the stage.

scænum, i. n., a bench, stool, step.

scelerātus, a, um, [part. scelerō, to pollute], adj., polluted, profaned, accursed; impious, wicked, infamous.

scetus, eris, n., an impious deed, a crime, a sin; abstr., wickedness, sin.

scēptrum, I., [σχιπτρον], n., the staff of royalty, a scepter; rule, dominion, authority, sway.

scilicet, [scire + licet], adv., no doubt, forsooth, indeed.

scindō, ere, scidī, scissus, to split, cleave, divide, rend, tear.

scintilla, ae, f., a spark.

scio, ire, sciī (ii), scitus, to know, in all senses.

scitor, āri, ātus, [freq. scīō], to seek to know, inquire.

scopus, i, [σκοπός], m., a cliff, crag, a ledge of rock in the sea, rock.

Scorpius, I., [σκορπιός], m., the Scorpion, one of the signs of the Zodiac.

scribē, ere, scripsī, scriptus, to write, write out, compose, produce.

scriptum, i, [scriptus, part. scribē], n., something written; a writing, book, work.

scrobilis, is, m. and f., a ditch, trench.

Scylla, ae, [Σκύλλα], f., a dangerous rock on the Italian coast between Italy and Sicily.

Scyros, I., [Σκύρος], f., an island of the Aegean Sea, opposite Euboea; the place of Achilles' concealment before the Trojan war, and the birthplace of his son Pyrrhus.

Scythia, ae, [Scytha, Σκύθων, a Scythian], f., Scythia.

Scythicus, a, um, [Scytha], adj., Scythian.

sē- (sēd-, [old form of sine], inseparable prep., apart, by itself, aside; apart from, without.

sē-cēdō, ere, cessi, cesso, to go apart, go away, separate, withdraw.

sē-cernō, ere, crēvi, crētus, to put asunder, divide, separate.

seco, āre, ul, tus, to cut, cut apart, divide, cleave; cut through, run through, pass through, traverse.
VOCABULARY

sēcrētus, a, um, [part. sēcernō], adj., retired, remote, lonely, secret.
sectōr, ārī, ātus, [freq. sequor], to pursue, hunt.
secundus, a, um, [sequor], adj., following, next in order, second; following, favoring, favorable, prosperous, propitious.
secūris, is, f., an ax.
sēcūrus, a, um, [sē + cūra], adj., free from care, composed, tranquil; untroubled, serene; safe, secure.
secus, adv., otherwise; haud secus, not otherwise, just so; haud or non secus ac, in like manner as, just as.
sed, con., but.
sedēō, āre, sēdī, sessus, to sit, be seated; sit, remain seated, sit still; remain, continue, tarry, abide; sink, settle, subside, rest; sink or strike in, sink deeply; be fixed, firm, steadfast, established.
sēdēs, is, [sedēō], f., a seat; abode, palace, temple; abode of the dead; place, situation, position; place, spot, ground, foundation, bottom.
sedile, is, [sedēō], n., a seat, bench.
sēdō, āre, āvi, ātus, [sedēō], to lay to rest; settle, stop, stay, quench.
sē-dūcō, ere, dūxi, ductus, to lead away, set aside, put by; divide, separate.
sedulus, a, um, adj., persistent, busy, zealous; officious, obtrusive.
seges, etis, f., a corn-field; standing corn, a crop.
semel, num. adv., once, but once.
sēmen, inōs, [from root sa in serō], n., a seed; race, offspring, child; seed, origin, principle, element.
sēmināmis, e, [sēmi, half, + anima], adj., half-alive, half-dead.
sēmi-caper, prī, m., half goat.
sēmi-deus, i, m., a demigod.
sēmi-nēx, necis, adj., half-dead.
Semirāmis, is or idis, [Σεμιραμις], f., the celebrated queen of Assyria, consort and successor of Ninus.
sēmi-suplus, a, um, adj., half bent backward, reclining.
sēmi-vir, i, m. adj., half-man, half-human.
semper, adv., always.
senātus, ēs, [senēx], m., the senate.
senecta, ae, [senēx], f., old age.
senectūs, ētis, [senēx], f., old age.
senex, senis, adj., old; used chiefly as subs., an old man; senior = senex, an old man.
sēnī, ae, a, [sex], distri. num. adj., six each; = sex, six.
sentōlīs, e, [senēx], adj., of an old man, of old age, aged, senile.
sēnsus, is, [sentiō], m., perception, feeling, sensation, sense, consciousness.
sententia, ae, [sentiō], f., an opinion, way of thinking, view; sentence, decision, judgment.
sentiō, ire, sēnī, sēnsus, to perceive by the senses, feel; in somewhat broader sense, perceive, see; understand, know.
sentis, is, m., mostly in pl., thorns, briers, brambles.
sentus, a, um, adj., thorny, rough.
sē-pārō, āre, āvi, ātus, to disjoint, part, divide, separate.
sē-pōnō, ere, posui, positus, to lay apart, set aside, select.
septem, num. adj., seven.
septemflusus, a, um, [septem + fluō], adj., with seven mouths.
septemplex, plicis, [septem + plicō], adj., sevenfold, with seven layers, with seven mouths.
septem-triō, or septem triō, ōnis, m., the seven stars of the Great Bear; the northern regions, the north.
septimus, a, um, ord. num. adj., the seventh.
sepulcrum, i, n., a tomb, grave; burial.
sepuitus, a, um, [part. sepeliō, to bury], adj., buried; overwhelmed, destroyed, ruined, undone.
sequor, i, secūtus, to follow, follow after or behind; chase, pursue; follow, go towards, seek after.
sequēns, entis, [part. sequor], adj., next, following, subsequent.
serra, ae, f., a bar, bolt.
serōnus, a, um, adj., clear, fair, cloudless; serene, calm.
seriēs, (no gen. or dat.), em, s, [serō, to join together], f., series, succession, order, course; line, lineage.
sermō, ōnis, [serō, see seriēs], m., conversation, talk, discourse, speech; report, rumor.
serō, ere, sēvi, satus, to sow, plant; bring forth, produce, beget; in perf. pass. part., satus, begotten of, sprung from, the son of.
sērō, adv., comp. sērīus, late.
serpēns, entis, [part. serpō], m., a serpent.
serpentigena, ae, [serpēns + root gen in gignō], m., serpent-born, sprung from a serpent.
sæpo, ere, sī, tus, to creep, crawl with a winding motion, wind.
serras, ae, f., a saw.
serta, ōrum, [part. serō, to join together], n. pl., wreaths, garlands.
serum, I, n., whey.
sērūs, a, um, adj., late, too late.
servātor, ōris, [servō], m., a preserver, deliverer.
servātrix, icis, [servō], f., she that preserves, a deliverer, protectress.
servio, ire, iver, (II), Iτus, [servus], to be a slave or servant, serve; be subject to.
servitium, iū, [servus], n., servitude, slavery, service.
servō, āre, āvi, ātus, to give heed to, watch, observe; reserve, preserve, keep; guard, keep watch over; keep, cherish, nurse; sit by, keep close to.
servus, a, um, adj., slavish, servile, subject.
servus, I, m., a slave.
seu, conj., see sēve.
sex, num. adj., six.
sextus, a, um, [sex], num. adj. ord., sixth.
sī, conj., if.
sībīlus, I, m., in pl. m., and sībīla, ōrum, n., a hissing, whistling, roaring.
sic, conj., thus, so.
Sicānia, ae, [Σικανία], f., Sicily, the land of the Sicāni, an ancient people of Italy, a portion of whom afterwards emigrated to Sicily.
siccōs, āre, āvi, ātus, [siccus], to make dry, drain, dry up.
siccus, a, um, adj., dry, dried up, parched.
Sicelis, idis, [Σικελίς], f. adj., Sicilian.
Siculus, a, um, adj., Sicilian.
sic-ut, adv., so as, just as, as if.
siderēus, a, um, [sidus], adj., starry.
Siddōnīus, a, um, [Sidon], adj., of or belonging to Sidon, Tyrian.
sidus, eris, n., a star, constellation.
Sigēlus, a, um, [Sigēum, Σιγήωρ], adj., pertaining to Sigean, the northeastern promontory of the Troad, Sigean.
significō, āre, āvi, ātus, [signum + faciō], to show by signs, show, point out, express; indicate, signify, mean.
signō, āre, āvi, ātus, [signum], to mark, mark out, designate; imprint; distinguish, adorn, decorate; point out, signify, express.
signum, I, n., a mark, signal, sign, token, indication, proof; standard, ensign, banner; a sign in the heavens, constellation, sign of the Zodiac; an image, figure, statue, picture.
silēns, entis, [part. silēs], adj., still, calm, silent; subs. m. and f. pl., the dead.
silentium, iū, [silēs], n., silence, stillness.
silēs, āre, āvi, —, to be silent, remain silent; be calm, still, motionless.
silēs, āre, āvi, —, to be silent, remain silent; be calm, still, motionless.
silex, icis, m., f., a flint; rock; crag.
silva, ae, f., a wood, forest; post, tree, shoot.
Silvānus, I, [silva], m., the god who presides over woods; in pl., wood or sylvan deities.
silvestris, a, [silva], adj., pertaining to the woods, woody, sylvan.
similes, e, adj., like, similar.
Simois, έντις, acc. έντα, [Σιμώης], m., a river of the Troad.
simplex, i, is, adj., simple, unmixed, single.
simplicitas, åtis, [simplex], f., simplicity, artlessness, frankness, candor.
simplifier, [simplex], adv., simply, plainly, naturally.
simul, adv., at the same time, when,
as soon as; simul ac, as soon as.
simulacrum, i, [simulō], n., an image, likeness; a ghost, shade, specter; a representation.
(simulänse, antis), [part. simulō],
adj., used only in comparative, imitative.
simulō, åre, åvi, åtus, [similes], to imitate; pretend, feign, dissemble, counterfeit.
sincerus, a, um, adj., clean, sound, uninjured, whole; pure, true, candid, truthful; unsotted, pure, virgin.
si-ne, [see sē-], prep. w. abl., without.
singuli, ae, a, distrib. num. adj.,
one by one, one at a time, one each;
each, separate.
(singultus, ūs), m., only abl. sing.
and pl., and acc. pl., a sobbing, panting, choking.
sinner, tre, trum, adj., left; sinis-tra supply manus, the left hand.
sinō, åre, åvi, åtus, [sinus], to wind.
sinuosus, a, um, [sinus], adj., full of curves, bent, curved.
sinus, ūs, m., a fold of a robe; a gulf, bay; a sail; the bosom, embracse; stream.
Sipylius, i, [Σιπυλός], m., a mountain on the frontier of Lydia and Phry-gia, on which Niobe was changed into stone; one of the sons of Niobe.
si-quis, indef. pron., if any one; si-quid, if in any respect, if at all.
sistō, åre, stītī, status, [root sta in stō, reduplicated, with causative force], to cause to stand, set, place;
stop, stay anything, cease; intrans., stop, stay, abide.
Sisyphus, a, um, [Sisyphus], adj.,
of or belonging to Sisyphus.
Sisyphus, i, [Σίσυφος], m., son of Aeolus, king of Corinth, famous for his cunning robberies.
sitō, åre, livi, — (li), [sitís], to be thirsty, parched; sitīōs, part.,
thirsty, parched with thirst.
sitis, is, f., thirst; drought.
situs, ūs, [sinō], m., place, situation;
sloth, sluggishness; the effect of neglect, rust, mold, roughness.
situs, a, um, [part. sinō], placed,
set, lying; laid at rest, buried, interred.
si-ve or seu, conj., or, or if; sive
(seu) — sive (seu), whether — or, either — or.
smaragdus, i, [σμάραγδος], m. and f.,
a green precious stone, emerald,
jasper.
Smintheus, el, acc. ea, [Σμίνθης],
m., an epithet of Apollo, from Smintha, a town of the Troad, the Sminthean.
socer, eri, m., a father-in-law; in pl., parents-in-law.
socius, ii, m., a companion, an associate.
socius, a, um, adj., friendly, confederate, allied.
sodalicius, a, um, [sodālis], adj.,
of fellowship, of companionship.
sodālis, is, m. and f., an associate,
comrade, companion.
sŏl, sŏlis, m., the sun.
solāctium, ii, [solār], n., a comfort,
solace, consolation.
solē, åre, itus, to be wont, accustomed.
solidus, a, um, adj., undivided,
whole, complete; massive, firm, substantial, solid.
solitus, a, um, [part. soleō], adj.,
wonted, customary, usual.
solum, ii, [from root sed in sedeō],
n., a seat, a throne.
sollemnia, e, [solus (tōtus) +
annus], adj., annual, yearly, stated; appointed; solemn, festive, religious.
solera, ertis, [solus (= totus) + ars], adj., skilled, skillful, clever.
sollertis, ae, [sollera], skill, shrewdness, adroitness.
sollicitus, äre, ävi, ätus, [solicitus], to shake, agitate, strike, excite, disquiet, disturb.
sollicitus, a, um, [solus + citus, part. cleo], adj., uneasy, anxious, troubled, disturbed; causing distress, disquieting.
solōr, ärī, ärūs, to comfort, console.
solstītium, ii, [sōl + sistō], n., the solstice; summer; midsummer heat.
solum, i, n., the bottom, base; the ground, earth, soil, land, country, region, place.
sōlus, a, um, adj., alone, only; solitary, lonely.
solvō, ère, i, solūtus, [sōl + ēluō], to loosen, unbind, separate, release, remove, set free; melt, crumble, dissolve, open; pay; weaken, relax.
somnifer, erä, erum, [somnus + ferō], adj., sleep-bringing, soporific.
somnium, ii, [somnus], n., a dream.
sommus, i, m., sleep, slumber.
somnūtus, ès, [sonā], m., a sound, noise.
sōnō, äre, ui, itus, to sound, resound, ring, roar, rattle, crackle, etc.
sonus, i, m., a sound, noise.
Sophostēus, a, um, [Sophocles, Σωφοκλῆς], adj., of Sophocles, Sophoclean, tragic.
sōplō, ire, i, itus, [sopor], to make unconscious, put to sleep, lull.
sopor, ōrius, m., deep sleep, sleep, slumber.
sorō, ère, ui, —, poet., to suck in, swallow up, drink in, absorb.
sordidus, a, um, [sordēs, filth], adj., filthy, dirty, foul, stained.
soror, ōriis, f., a sister.
sors, rtis, i., a lot cast for deciding a chance; a casting of lots, decision by lot; an oracle, prophecy, prediction; fate, destiny; lot, condition.
sortior, īrī, itus, [sors], to draw lots, get or obtain by lot.
sōpesa, itis, adj., saved, safe.
spareō, erre, sparsal, sparsus, to scatter, strewn, sprinkle; spatter, besprinkle; throw, hurl about, in all directions.
Spartē, ēs, [Σπάρτη], f., Sparta, the capital of Laconia.
spatior, ārī, ātūs, [spatium], to walk, walk to and fro, proceed in a stately manner.
spatious, a, um, [spatium], adj., ample, spacious, large; long, prolonged.
spatium, i, n., a space; size, bulk, extent; a race-course, course; space, period, time, opportunity.
speciēs, acc. em., abl. ū, i., a sight, spectacle; form, look, appearance, aspect.
specius, a, um, [speciēs], adj., beautiful, splendid, fine, shapely; in pretence, pretended, plausible, specious.
spectābilis, e, [spectō], adj., notable, admirable, remarkable, attracting attention.
spectō, äre, ävi, ätūs, [freq. *speciō, to look], to look at, gaze at, eye; watch, observe, look; examine, try, test, judge.
speculātor, ārī, ātūs, [specula, a watch-tower], to spy out, watch, observe, examine, explore, look around.
speculum, i, [*speciō, to look], n., a reflector, mirror.
specus, ès, m., a natural cave, cavern, grot.
spēlunca, ae, [σπηλαύν], f., a cave, cavern.
Sperchēs, īdis, [Spercheos], adj., of or belonging to the Spercheos.
Spercheos, i, [Σπερχεός], m., a river of Thessaly, rising on Mt. Pindus.
spernō, erre, spērū, spērus, to despise, disdain, spurn, reject, slight.
spērō, äre, ävi, ātūs, [spēs], to hope for, expect, look for, aspire to.
spēs, ēs, f., hope, expectation.
spica, ae, i, a point, ear, spike; w.
Ollæsa, the pistil of crocus, saffron.
spiceus, a, um, [spica], adj., consisting of ears of grain.
spiculum, I, [dim. spicum], n., a dart, arrow.
spina, ae, f., a thorn; the backbone, spine.
spira, ae, [spīrā], f., a fold, coil, twist, spiral.
spiritus, us, [spīrō], m., a breath of air, breath; spirit, high or haughty spirit, air; poet., spirit, soul, shade.
spirō, āre, āvi, ātus, to breathe, blow. spissus, a, um, adj., thick, dense.
spindeō, āre, —, —, to shine, be bright, gleam, glitter, glisten.
splendidus, a, um, [splendēus], adj., bright, splendid, glittering, brilliant; gorgeous, magnificent, sumptuous.
spoliō, āre, āvi, ātus, [spolum], to rob, pillage, plunder; despoil, deprive.
spolum, II, n., booty, plunder, spoil.
spōnda, ae, f., a couch, bed.
spōnsus, I, [part. spondeō, to promise], m., a betrothed man, bridegroom.
sponte, [abl. sing. fr. obsolete spōns from spondeō], f., of one's own accord, according to one's own inclination or desire.
sprōtor, ēris, [spernō], m., a disdainer, scorn, scolder.
spūma, ae, [spūd], f., froth, foam.
spūmiger, era, erum, [spūma + gerō], adj., foam-bearing, foaming.
spūmō, āre, āvi, ātus, [spūma], to froth, foam.
spūmōsus, a, um, [spumā], adj., foaming, full of foam.
squaleō, ēre, ui, [squalōr, filth], to be filthy, rough, squalid.
squallidus, a, um, [squalēus], adj., stiff, rough, foul, neglected, squalid.
squāma, ae, f., a scale of a serpent.
squāmeus, a, um, [squāma], adj., scaly.
squāmiger, ers, erum, [squāma + gerō], adj., scale-bearing, scaly.
squāmōsus, a, um, [squāma], adj., covered with scales, scaly.
stabulō, āre, —, —, [stabulus], to have one's abode, dwell, be stabled.
stabulum, I, [stō], n., a stable, stall, fold.
stāgnō, āre, āvi, ātus, [stānum], to stagnate, be stagnant.
stānum, I, n., still water, a pool, lake.
stāmen, tnis, [stō], n., the warp in a loom, a thread, string.
staticō, ēnis, [stō], f., a stopping or resting place; post, position, station.
statuō, ere, I, ātus, [status], to put, set, place, cause to stand; decide, make up one's mind, determine.
status, us, [stō and stisī], m., a station, position; posture, attitude, pose; state, condition.
stella, ae, [for sterula], f., a star.
stellāns, antis, [stella], adj., starred, starry, shining.
stellātus, a, um, [stella], adj., poet., set with stars, glittering, brilliant; many-eyed.
sterilis, e, adj., unfruitful, barren, sterile; unrequited.
sternō, ere, strāvi, strātus, to stretch out, extend; stretch on the ground, overthrown, prostrate, lay low, cover, overspread; make smooth, smooth out, spread out.
stilliō, āre, āvi, ātus, [stillis, a drop], to drop, distill, drip, trickle.
stimmō, āre, āvi, ātus, [stimulus], to prick; incite, urge on, arouse.
stimulus, I, m., a goad, a spur.
stipes, itis, m., a trunk, twig, branch; stake, club.
stipula, ae, [dim. stipes], f., straw, stubble; dried stalks.
stirps, pis, f., m., the stock of a tree; of men, stock, race, blood; offspring.
stiva, ae, f., a plow-handle.
stō, stāre, stetī, status, to stand, stand up, stand on end; stand, continue, remain; stand still, be at rest; = esse, be; depend, rest; be fixed, determined; endure, continue, last.
STOLIUS, a, um. adj., slow, dull, senex, uncultivated, rude, stupid.
STRAMEN, ima, [STERNZ], a, strum, litter.
STRATUM, i, [STERNZ], n., a bed, couch; poet., a parchment.
STRANNUS, a, um. adj., brisk, nimble, active, rigorous.
STRIDOR, oris, [STRIDO], m., any inarticulate sound.
STRIDULUS, a, um. [STRIDO], adj.; making an appropriate inarticulate sound, e.g. sputtering, hissing.
STRINGO, ere, strinx, strictus, to draw or bind tight, press inanimate; touch lightly, graze; of a sword, draw, unsheathe.
STRIX, STRIGIS, [STRI], f., a screech-owl.
STRUO, ere, struxi, stractus, to pile up; make by joining together, make, form, build, erect, construct; derive, contrive.
STRYMON, onis, [STRUV], m., a river in Macedonia, on the borders of Thrace.
STUDIOUS, [STUDIUSUS], adv., eagerly, zealously, devotedly.
STUDIOUS, a, um. [STUDIUM], adj., eager, zealous, fond; partial, friendly, devoted.
STUDIUM, i, [STUDIO], n., eagerness, zeal, eager desire, wish; pursuit.
STULTUS, a, um. adj., silly, foolish.
STUPED, ere, ui, —, to be astonished, astonished, amazed, stupefied; wonder stupidly at, be amazed at; be numbed, stiffened, stop.
STUPOR, oris, [STUPUS], m., numbness, dullness, insensibility.
STYGUS, a, um. [STYX], adj., Stygian, infernal; deadly, fatal.
STYMPHALIS, idis, [STYMPHALUS, STYMPHALOS], adj., f., of Stympalus, a lake of Arcadia, the haunt of fabled birds of prey; Styphalian.
STYX, YGIS, [STYX], f., a river of Hades.
SUADEO, ere, suasii, suasus, to advise, urge, persuade; induce, impel, incite.
SUB, prep.; w. abl., under, beneath; in, within; beneath, at the foot of; of time, in, during; of dependence, under; w. acc., of motion, under, beneath; under, up to, up towards; of time, towards, about, at.
SUBDO, ere, didi, ditus, to put under, place under; w. se, plunge under.
SUBDOCO, ere, duxi, ductus, to remove, withdraw; remove, take away by stealth.
SUBET, ere, fiti, fitus, to come or go under; come up to, approach; come up before the mind, rise up.
SUBICIO, ere, teci, lectus, [SUB + FACIO], to throw or place under; place under the control of, make subject to.
SUBIT, [SUBITUS], adv., suddenly.
SUBITUS, a, um. [part. SUBEDE], adj., sudden, unexpected.
SUBLEV, ere, avi, attus, to raise up, support, assist.
SUBLIMIS, e, adj., uplifted; high, lofty; on high, lofty, exalted.
SUBMISSUS, a, um. [part. SUBMITTO], adj., humble, reverent, submissive.
SUBMITTO, ere, misi, missus, to send under; put down, let down, lower, sink, drop; lower, bring down, yield, submit, surrender.
SUB-MOVEO, ere, movi, motus, to send away, drive off; drive back, remove.
SUBOLIS, is, f., offspring.
SUB-RIDEO, ere, risi, —, to smile.
SUBRIPIO, ere, ui, reptus, [SUB + RAPIO], to snatch away, take away secretly, steal, remove by stealth.
SUBRUO, ere, i, tua, to undermine, break down, overthrow, demolish.
| Sub-sequor, l, secútus, to follow | furrow, plow; plow the sea, sail, traverse. |
| sub-sidó, ere, sédī, sessus, to sit | sulcus, l, m., a furrow made by a plow. |
| or settle down; sink down, subside. | Submò, ònis, m., a town in the territory of the Peligni, the birthplace of Ovid. |
| sub-sístō, ere, stítī, — to stop, halt. | sulphur, uris, n., brimstone, sulphur. |
| subter, prep. w. acc., below, under, beneath. | sum, esse, fuí, futūrus, to be, exist, stay, remain. |
| sub-trahō, ere, trāxi, tráctus, to draw from under; withdraw. | summa, ae, (summus, supply rēs, f., the main thing, chief point, sum, substance. |
| sub-urbānus, a, um, adj., near the city, near Rome, suburban. | summus, a, um, adj. (superl. of superus), the highest, top of, summit of, surface of; the tip of; of rank, the highest, supreme; of time or order, last, final, extreme. |
| succēdō, ere, cessī, cessus, [sub + cēdō], to go or come under, enter, follow, follow after, take the place of, succeed; go or come to. | Sāmō, ere, psī, putus, to take, take up, assume; employ, use. |
| successor, ōris, [succēdō], m., a follower, successor. | Sāmptús, ës, [sāmō], m., outlay, expense. |
| successus, ës, [succēdō], m., a good result, success. | super, adv., above, on top, over, besides, in addition; prep. w. acc., over, above, upon, on, on the surface of; over, beyond, in addition to. |
| succidō, ere, cidī, cīsus, [sub + caedō], to cut off below, cut off, cut down, now. | Superātor, ōris, [superō], m., a conqueror. |
| succingō, ere, cinxi, cinctus, [sub + cingō], to gird or tuck up; gird about, gird. | Superbus, a, um, adj., insolent, haughty, proud; elated by, glorying in, proud of; magnificent, splendid. |
| succrēscō, ere, —, —, [sub + crēscō], to grow from below, be supplied anew. | Super-cilium, ii, n., the eyebrow; pride, haughtiness, superciliousness. |
| succumbō, ere, cubul, cubitus, [sub + cumbō], to fall or sink down; yield, submit, succumb. | Super-iliciō, ere, iēcī, lectus, [super + in + laciō], to throw over or on. |
| succurrō, ere, I, cursus, [sub + currō], to run under; run to the aid of, help, succor. | Superō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [superus], to go over, rise above, overtop, surround; be left over, remain, survive; overcome, conquer, vanquish; excel, surpass; overcome, surround, accomplish. |
| succutiō, ere, —, —, [sub + qua-tiō], to fling up from below, toss up, jolt up. | Superētes, itis, [super + stō], adj., remaining alive, surviving. |
| succus, l, m., juice, sap, moisture. | Super-stō, ēre, stētī, —, to stand upon, stand over. |
| sūdō, āre, āvi, ātus, to sweat; be wet, drenched with, reek with sweat. | Super-sum, esse, fuí, —, to be left, remain, survive. |
| sūdor, òris, [sūdō], m., sweat, perspiration. | Sulfur, uris, n., brimstone, sulphur. |
| sulfus, [sulcō], to pour under; over-spread, sulfus, fill. | Sum, esse, fuí, futūrus, to be, exist, stay, remain. |
| suī, sibi, sē or sēsē, reflex. pron. 3d per., of himself, herself, itself, themselves; in acc. as subj. of infinitive, sē = he, she, it, they. | Super-sus, esse, fuí, —, to be left, remain, survive. |
suprēmus, a, um, [superi], adj., (comp. superior, superl. suprēmus or summus), upper, higher, above, on high; subs., m. pl., Superior, ðrum, the inhabitants of heaven, the gods.
supinus, a, um, adj., lying on the back; of the hands, with palms up, extended, outspread.
supplicō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [sub + pieō, to fill], to fill up, fill out, fill.
supplicium, i, [supplix], n., supplicant, humble; subs., a supplicant.
supplicium, ii, [supplix], n., punishment, penalty.
suppōnē, ere, posui, positum, [sub + pōnō], to put or place under; substitute falsely or by stealth; w. sē, to take upon oneself, take up; w. ingō, to yoke; w. tumulō, to bury; w. terrae, to sow or plant.
supprimō, ere, presai, presus, [sub + premō], to keep back, withhold, check, stop, restrain.
suprā, [for superā, supply parte], prep. w. acc., above, over.
suprēmus, a, um, [superl. supermus], adj., of place, the highest; of time, the last, final.
surdus, a, um, adj., deaf.
surgō, ēre, surrēxi, surrēctus, [for subrigō, from sub + regō], raise one's self up, arise; of things, rise, spring up, grow.
sūs, suis, m., f., a hog.
suscipiō, ere, cāpi, cepitus, [sub + capiō], to take or lift up; take upon one's self, assume, undertake.
suscipīō, ere, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [sub (subes) + citō], to stir up, rekindle.
suspendō, ēre, ē, pensus, [sub + pendō], to hang up; hang, suspend.
suspicīō, ere, speci, spectus, [sub + speciō, to look], to look up at; look askance at, mistrust, suspect.
suspicior, ēri, ētus, [suspicio], to mistrust, suspect, apprehend; surmise, conjecture, believe.
suspiriō, ii, [suspirō], n., a deep breath, sighing, sigh.
suspirō, ēre, ēvi, ētus, [sub + spirō], to breathe deeply, sigh.
sustineō, ēre, ui, tentus, [sub + teneō], to hold up, uphold, bear up, support, sustain; carry, wear; bear, endure, tolerate, allow, withstand; take upon one's self to do something out of the way or difficult.
susus, a, um, poss. reflex. pron., his or his own, hers, its, theirs; appropriate.
symaethus, idis, [Symaethum, Σύμαθος], f. adj., Symaethian, of Symaethum, a river and town on the east coast of Sicily.
symaethus, a, um, [Symaethum], adj., Symaethian.
syracosius, a, um, [Syracosae, Συρακοσαι], adj., of Syracuse, a city in Sicily, Syracusan, Sicilian.
syrinx, ingis, [Σύριγης], f., a nymph changed into reeds.
syrtes, is, [Συρτης], f., a sand bank, quicksand; pl., the Syrtes, two sand banks on the northern coast of Africa.

T

tabellā, ae, [dim. tabula, a board, plank], f., a waxed tablet for writing, writing, tablet.
tābes, is, f., a wasting away; consumption, decay.
tābescō, ere, tābui, —, [inch. tābeō, to melt, from tābēs], to waste away, melt; pine, languish.
tabularium, i, [tabula, a plank], n., a public registry, archives.
taceō, ēre, ui, itus, to be silent, say nothing, hold one's peace.
tacitā, [tacitus], adv., silently, imperceptibly.
tacturnus, a, um, [tacitus], adj., quiet, silent, in silence.
tactus, a, um, [part. taceō], adj., concealed, hidden, secret; silent, quiet; in silence.
tactus, us, [tangō], m., a touch, contact.
VOCABULARY

Taedia, ae, f., pine wood, pitch pine; a pine-torch; a nuptial torch, marriage, wedlock.

Taeidum, i, [taeat, it disgusts, wearies], n., weariness, irksomeness, tediousness.

Taenarius, a, um, [Taenarus], adj., of or belonging to Taenarus, a promontory on the southern extremity of Laconia, where was a cavern, one of the fabled entrances to the infernal regions; Taenarian; (also meton.) Spartan, Laconian.

Taeuter, tra, trum, adj., soul, loathsomely.

Tagus, i, m., a river in Lusitania, celebrated for its golden sands.

Talia, um, [Tālius], n. pl., winged shoes or sandals fastened to the ankles.

Tālis, e, adj., such, of such a kind, nature or quality; tālia, such things, as follows or as aforesaid.

Tālus, i, m., the ankle.

Tām, adv., so, to such an extent.

Tamen, conj., nevertheless, however, yet, still.

Tamquam, adv., just as, just as if.

Tanaeus, is, [Tānaīs], m., the river Tanaeus, now the Don.

Tandem, adv., at length, at last; pray, pray now, now, then.

Tangō, ere, tetigō, tactūs, to touch; reach, arrive at, come to; of the mind, touch, move.

Tantalidēs, ae, [Tantalus], m., a male descendant of Tantalus, e.g. his great grandson, Agamennon.

Tantalis, idis, [Tantalus], f., a female descendant of Tantalus, e.g. Niobe.

Tantalus, i, [Tāntalos], m., an ancient king of Phrygia, son of Jupiter. For having disclosed the secrets of the gods he was sent to the infernal regions, where he stood up to his chin in water, which ever receded as he strove to quench his thirst.

Tantum-modo, adv., only, merely.

Tantus, a, um, adj., so great, so much; n. tantum, w. gen., so much of; adv., tantum, so far; so, so much; only, merely.

Tardē, [tardus], adv., slowly.

Tardō, āre, āvi, āstus, [tardus], to hinder, delay, retard, impede.

Tardus, a, um, adj., slow, tardy, sluggish.

Tarpēius, a, um, adj., Tarpeian, referring to the rock on the Capitoline Hill, from which criminals were thrown headlong; arx Tarpēia, the citadel on the Capitoline Hill; in general, Capitoline.

Tartarus, I, m., and pl., Tartara, Ōrum, [Tērpēōs], n., Tartarus, the infernal regions, the abode of the lost; the abode of the dead; death.

Tauricus, a, um, [Tauri], adj., of, or belonging to the Taureans, a Thracian people living in what is now Crimea.

Taurus, I, m., a bull, ox; the Bull, a constellation in the Zodiac.

Taurus, I, m., a high mountain range in the southeastern part of Asia Minor.

taxus, i, f., a yew tree.

tectum, i, [tego], n., a roof; (meton.) a house, dwelling, abode, home, habituation.

tēgmen or tegumen, [tego], ēnis, n., a covering.

tēgō, ere, tēxi, tectūs, to cover; shut up; shelter; conceal, keep secret; protect.

Tēgula, ae, [tego], i, f., a tile, roof tile.

Telamōn, ōnis, [TELAMŌN], m., son of Aeacus, brother of Peleus, and father of Ajax and Teucer.

Telamonidēs, ae, [Telamōn], m., a descendant of Telamon, i.e. Ajax.

Telamonius, i, [Telamōn], m., adj., the Telamonian, son of Telamon, Ajax.

Telégonus, i, [TELĒGONOS], m., the son of Ulysses and Circe, the mythical founder of the city of Tusculum.

Tēlemus, i, [TELĒMOS], m., a soothsayer.

Tēlephus, i, [TELĒPHOS], m., a king of
VOCABULARY

Mysia, son of Hercules and the nymph Auge.
tellus, Cris, f. poet., the earth, globe; the earth, land, ground; a land, country, region, district.
tēlum, I, n., a missile, dart, spear, weapon of any kind.
tēmerārius, a, um, [tēmerē], by chance, at random, adj., rash, heedless, thoughtless, indiscreet.
Tēmesaeus, a, um, [Tēmesa], adj., of Temesa, a town in the territory of the Bruttians where there were copper mines.
tēnē, ounis, m., a pole, beam; tongue of a wagon.
Tempē, [Tēmē], n. pl. indecl., a vale in Thessaly, through which runs the river Peneus, between Olympus and Ossa.
temperēs, acc. em, abl. 5, [tem-perēō], f., a due mingling, proper mixture, tempering.
temperō, äre, āvi, ātus, [tempus], to mix in due proportion; allay, calm; rule, regulate, manage, control, govern, sway.
tempestās, ātis, [tempus], f., time, season.
tempestivus, a, um, [tempestās], adj., at the proper time, timely, opportune.
templum, I, n., a sanctuary, temple, shrine, fane.
temptāmen, inis, [temptō], n., trial, attempt, effort.
temptō, äre, āvi, ātus, [intens. tendō], to make trial of; try, attempt, test, essay.
tempus, oris, n., time, period of time, season; the time at which anything happens, occasion; the right or fitting time, proper occasion; in pl., the temples of the head.
tenāx, ācis, [teneō], adj., tenacious, persistent.
tendō, ere, tetendi, tentus, to stretch, stretch out, spread out, dis-tend, extend; of a course or way, to direct, pursue, turn, proceed; at m at, be inclined toward, tend.
tenebrae, ārum, f. pl., darkness, gloom, obscurity, shades, night; the shades, gloomy abodes.
tenebrōsus, a, um, [tenebrae], adj., dark, gloomy.
Tenedos, I, [Tenedos], f., an island off the coast of Troas.
teneō, āre, ui, tentus, to have or hold, keep, retain; have, hold, possess, inhabit; hold in sway, rule over, control, hold by force of interest; get or take possession of; hold, keep, detain, stop, check; hold fast to, cling to; restrain, keep back; reach, gain, get hold of; w. iter or cursum, hold on one’s way or course, proceed.
tener, era, erum, adj., tender, soft, delicate, youthful; slender.
tenor, oris, [teneō], m., a continuous, uninterrupted course or motion.
tentōrium, iū, [tendō], n., a tent.
tenula, e, adj., of form, thin, fine, slender; of substance, thin, rare; of power, light, gentle.
tenus, prop. w. abl., as far as, up to, to.
tepeō, āre, —, —, to be moderately warm, tepid; to be warm.
tepēscō, ere, —, —, [inch. tepeō], to become warm, be warmed. tepidus, a, um, [tepeō], adj., lukewarm, warm.
ter, num. adv., thrice, three times.
ter-centum, num. adj., three hundred.
terebrō, äre, āvi, ātus, [terebra, a boring instrument], to bore through, perforate.
teres, etis, [terō], adj., rounded, smooth, polished.
ter-geminus, a, um, adj., three-formed, threefold, triple.
tergō, āre, terēs, terēsus, to rub off, wipe off, wipe away, cleanse.
tergum, I, and tergus, oris, n., the back of man or animal; the hide or fleece of an animal; a tergō, in the rear, behind.
terni, ae, a, [ter], distrib. num. adj., three each; poet. = trēs, three.
terō, ere, trivī, tritus, to rub, tread upon, wear, tread; graze, brush.
terra, ae, f., the earth as opposed to the sky; the land as opposed to the sea; the ground; a land, country.
terrēnus, a, um, [terra], adj., earthly, earth born.
terreō, ēre, ui, itus, to terrify, frighten, scare; frightened away.
terribilis, e, [terreō], adj., frightful, terrible, horrible.
terrificus, a, um, [terreō + faciō], adj., terror-causing, awe-inspiring.
terrigena, ae, [terra + root gen. in gignō], m., one born of the earth, earth born.
terror, ōris, [terreō], m., great fear, dread, terror.
teritus, a, um, [ter], adj., the third.
tesca, ōrum, n. pl., rough places, wastes; wilderness.
testa, ae, [= tosta, part. terreō], f., a piece of burned clay; a tile, earthen vessel; a broken piece of earthenware, potsherd.
testificor, āri, ātus, [testis + faciō], to call to witness; attest, prove by testimony.
testis, is, m., f., a witness.
testor, āri, ātus, [testis], to call to witness, invoke, appeal to.
Tēthys, yos, [Τήθης], f., an ocean goddess; (meton.) the sea.
Teucer, crii, [Τευκρός], m., the son of Tē-thom, and half-brother of Ajax.
Teuthrāntēs, a, um, [Teuthras], adj., of Teuthras, a king of Mysia; Myssian.
texō, ere, ui, tus, to weave, interweave, intermingle; join together, frame; build, construct.
textum, i, [texō], n., that which is woven, a web, cloth.
thalamus, i, [θαλάμος], m., a bedchamber; a marriage bed, marriage, wedlock.
Thalla, ae, [Θάλλα], f., the muse of comedy or of lyric poetry; in gen., muse.
Thaumantias, adis, [Thaumāsis], f., the daughter of Thaumas, Iris.
theātrum, i, [θέατρον], n., a theater.
Thēbae, ārum, [Θῆβαι], f., a city of Greece, the capital of Boeotia; a city in Mysia, destroyed by Achilles.
Thēbais, idis, [Θῆβαι], f., a Theban woman.
Thēbānus, a, um, [Θῆβαι], adj., Theban.
Themis, idis, [Θήμις], f., the goddess of justice and of prophecy.
Thermōdōn, ontis, [Θέρμωδων], m., a river of Pontus, on which dwelt the Amazons.
Thermōdontiacus, a, um, [Thermōdōn], adj., of the Thermodon, Thermodontean; (meton.) Amazonian.
Thēromedōn, ontis, m., a barbarōus Scythian king.
Thersitēs, ae, [Θερσίτης], m., a Greek before Troy, famous for his ugliness and scurrility.
Theseclus, i, m., one of the friends of Phineus in the fight against Perseus.
Thēseus, a, um, [Théseus], adj., of Theseus, Theseean.
Théseus, (dissyl.), el and eos, [Θησεῖς], m., a king of Athens, son of Aegeus and Aethra.
Thessalus, a, um, [Thessalia], adj., of Thessaly, Thessalian.
Thestoridēs, ae, [Thestor], m., the son of Thestor, Calchas.
Thisbē, ës, [Θισβή], f., a maiden beloved by Pyramus.
tholus, i, [θόλος], m., a dome, rotunda.
Thoön, ënis, m., a Trojan warrior.
Thrāx, ācis, [Thrácia], adj., Thracian; subs., a Thracian.
Thrōcē, ës, [Θρόκη], f., Thrace.
Thrācius, a, um, [Θρακή], adj., Thracian.
Thybris, is or idis, m., poet. for Tiberis, the river Tiber.
Thyestēs, a, um, [Thyestēs], adj., Thyestean, of Thyestes, the brother of Atreus, who set before him for food the flesh of his own son.
thymum, l. [θύμον], n., thyme.
thyrsus, l. [θύρσος], m., a staff armed with thy and rite shoots, borne by Bacchus and his worshipers: the thyrsus.
tília, ae. [τιλία], n., Oriental headdress; turban.
Tiberinus, a, um. [Tiberis], adj., of or belonging to the Tiber; subs., the Tiber.
tibiscen, inis. [τιβίσκος, πέτρα + κανό],
m., a piper, flute player.
Tibullus, L. m., a Roman elegiac poet,
a contemporary of Ovid.
tignum, l. n., a piece of timber, log,
born.
tigris, is or ida, f., a tigeress.
tilia, ae. f., the tamar tree.
timē, ère, ui, —, to fear, be afraid of, dread; intr., fear, be fearful, opprehensurate, anxious.
timidē. [timidus], adv., timidly, hesitatingly.
timidus, a, um. [timeō], fearful, timid, afraid, faint-hearted, cowardly.
timor. òris. [timeō], m., fear, dread;
fear, cowardice.
tingō [-guō], ère, tinxi, tinctus,
to wet, moisten, bathe, dip, imbue;
color, tinge, stain.
tinnitus. òs. [tinnīō, to ring], m., a ringing, jingling.
Tiphys, yos. [Tīphyn], m., the pilot of the ship Argo.
Tiresiās, ae. [Tīreisias], m., a celebrated blind soothsayer of Thebes.
Tirynthiūs, L. [Tiryns], m., Hercules, so called from Tiryns, an ancient town in Argolis, where he was brought up.
Tisiphone, ës, [Tisiphóne], f., one of the Furies.
Titān, ãnis, [Tītān], m., son of Caelus and Vesta, elder brother of Saturn; also the sun god, grandson of the above: the Titans were descended from these, and contended with Saturn for the sovereignty of Heaven. They were hurled to Tartara by the bulls of Jove.

Titānis, ae. [Titān], f., Pyrrha, descended from the Titan Epimetheus.
Titānis, ida. [Titān], f., Titan born; Latona, daughter of the Titan Coeus.
titulus, i. m., title, inscription, epiti-aph, title of honor, glory; repute, renown, fame.
Tityos, i. [Tītys], m., a giant slain by Apollo for offering violence to Latona.
Tityrus, i. m., the name of a shepherd in Vergil's Eclogues; a designation of the Eclogues themselves.
Tmōlis, i. [Τμόλος], m., a mountain of Lydia in which the Pactolus rises.
toga, ae. [tégō], f., the outer garment of a Roman citizen in time of peace; (meton.) peace.
tolerō, ère, ēvi, ētus, [lengthened form of root in tollō], to take up;
bear, endure, sustain.
tollō, ère, sustulī, sublātus, to lift, take, raise up; take up and bear away, carry off, remove.
Tomītae, òrum. [Tomī], m., the inhabitants of Tomi, a town on the Pontus Euxinus, the place to which Ovid was banished.
tondeō, ère, totondi, tōnsus, to shear, mow, cut closely; graze, crop, feed upon.
tonītrus, òs. [tonītrus], m.; in pl., tonītrūs, m., or tonītrua, n., thunder.
tonō, ère, ui, itus, to thunder, resound, roar, crash, rumble; part.
as subs., Tonāns, antis, m., Jove,
the thunderer.
torpeō, ère, —, —, to be stiff, numb;
to be stupefied, dull, inactive.
torpor, òris. [torpeō], m., numbness, stupefaction, torpor.
torqueō, ère, torsi, tortus, to turn, turn about, turn around;
cause to revolve, keep whirling;
twist; fling, hurl, whirl, drive with a rotary motion; torture, torment.
torrēns, antis, m., a torrent.
torrō, ère, ui, tostus, to parch,
roast, scorch, burn.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>English</th>
<th>Latin</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>torridus, a, um, [torreō], adj., burning; parched.</td>
<td>trāns-eō, ire, i vi (II), itus, to go across; pass through, pass beyond, pass by; of time, elapse, pass.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>tortilis, e, [torqueō], adj., twisted, winding.</td>
<td>trāns-ferō, ferre, tall, ēatus, to bear or carry across, transfer.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>torus, I, m., a swelling, fleshy part, muscle; cushion, couch, bed; bier; bridal-bed; (meton.) marriage.</td>
<td>trānaillō, ire, ui, —, [trānēs + salīō, to leap], to leap across; hasten over, skip over, omit.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>torvus, a, um, adj., lowering, grim, stern, savage.</td>
<td>trānsitus, —, acc. um, abl. a, [trānēs], m., a going over, passage; transition.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>tot, num. adj., indecl., so many.</td>
<td>trāns-mittō, ere, misi, missus, to send across, send.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>totidem, num. adj., indecl., just as many, the same number.</td>
<td>trecenti, ae, a, [trēs + centum], num. adj., three hundred; innumerable.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>totiēns, [tot], adv., so often, so many times.</td>
<td>treme bundus, a, um, [tremō], adj., trembling, quivering, shaking.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>tōtus, a, um, adj., all, the whole, entire; altogether, wholly, entirely, absorbed.</td>
<td>tre molō, ere, ui, —, [inch. tremō], to quake, tremble.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>trabs or trabēs, trabēs, f., a beam, timber; a tree trunk.</td>
<td>tremēscō, ere, —, —, [tre molō], to tremble, quiver, totter, stagger, quaver, shake; quake before, tremble at.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>trāctō, āre, āvi, ātus, [freq. trabēs], to touch, take in hand, handle.</td>
<td>tremor, ēris, [tremō], m., a trembling, shaking, shudder.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>trāctus, us, [trahō], m., a drawing, drawing out, trailing; a tract, region, quarter; track, train, course.</td>
<td>tremulus, a, um, [tremō], adj., shaking, quaking, quivering, wavering.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>trādō, ere, didi, ditus, [trānēdō], to deliver over, surrender, yield; deliver, commit, intrust, confide; hand down, relate, recount.</td>
<td>trepidō, āre, āvi, ātus, [trepidus], to be in a flurry of alarm, be confused, agitated.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>tragōedias, ae, [tragōedia], f., tragedy; person., Tragedy, the art or Muse of Tragedy.</td>
<td>trepidus, a, um, adj., confused, alarmed, agitated, trembling, frightened.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>trahō, ere, trāxi, trāctus, to draw, drag; lead, draw, take along; draw out, pull out, extract; draw in, quaff, inhale; take on, assume, acquire, get; draw out, spin, draw, attract, allure, influence; lead, bring; get, obtain, derive, acquire; protract, drag out, prolong, lengthen.</td>
<td>trēs, tria, num. adj., three.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>tragōdie, ere, iēci, lectus, [trānēs + iaciō], to throw over or across; transfer, cause to pass; throw or strike through, pierce.</td>
<td>tribulus, I, [trīboulos], m., a thorn bush, thistle.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>tragōdiēs, ēs, m., a bypath, a path, way.</td>
<td>tribuō, ere, i, itus, [tribus, a division of the people], to assign, allot, give, grant, bestow.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>trānes, prep. w. acc., across, over, beyond.</td>
<td>tricopsis, cipitis, [trēs + caput], adj., three-headed; of three forms, triformed.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>trānescribō, ere, scripsi, scriptus, [trānēs + scribō], to transcribe; transfer.</td>
<td>tricuspis, idis, [trēs + cuspis], adj., with three points or prongs.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>trānes, prep. w. acc., across, over, beyond.</td>
<td>tridēns, entis, [trēs + dēns], adj., having three teeth, three-forked, three-pronged; subs., a three-forked spear, trident.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>trīfidus, a, um, [ter + findō], adj., three-cleft, three-forked.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Vocabulary

triformis, e, [ter + fórma], adj., in three forms, triform; of three elements.
Trinacria, ae, [Trýnákria, three-cornered], 1., the island of Sicily, so-called from its triangular shape.
Trinacris, idis, [Trýnákria], adj., Sicilian.
Trîôns, um, [see septemtrîôs], m. pl., the constellations of the Great and Little Bear.
tríplex, icis, [ter + plîōs, to fold], adj., threefold, triple.
tristis, e, adj., sad, mournful, gloomy, melancholy, dark, stern; dire, deadly, fell.
tríticus, a, um, [tríticum from trítus, part. tertîo], adj., of wheat, wheaten.
Tríôtn, õnis, [Trýônu], m., a sea god, son of Neptune.
Tríôns, idis, [Trýôtn], 1., Pallas, Minerva, so named because of her fabled birth near Lake Triton in Africa.
triumphâ, âre, âvi, âtus, [triumphâs], to triumph over, conquer; exult, triumph, rejoice.
triumphus, ũs, [trºmφus], m., a triumph, victory.
Trôia, ae, [Trôs], 1., the city of Troy in Phrygia.
Trôîâns, a, um, [Trôia], adj., Trojan.
Trôicus, a, um, [Trôs], adj., of Troy, Trojan.
Trôs, ōs, [Trôs], m., a Trojan, used mostly in the pl.
trúculo, uculus, a, um, [trux], adj., savage, fierce, ferocious.
truncô, âre, âvi, âtus, [truncus], to mutilate; cut off, lop off, trim.
truncus, ūs, [see truncus, adj.], m., the stem or trunk of a tree.
truncus, a, um, [from root in tor-queô], adj., mutilated, disfigured; undeveloped, imperfect.
trux, uculs, adj., wild, fierce, ferocious.
tû, pers. pron., thou, you.
tuba, ae, ūs, a trumpet.
tueor, ūrī, itus, [titūs], to look at, gaze at, watch, view, consider, examine; guard, defend, protect.
tum, adv., then, at that time, thereupon.
tumeō, âre, — —, to swell or be swollen.
tumâscô, ere, — —, tumulî, [inch. tumûs], to swell up, become swollen.
tumidus, a, um, [tumûs], adj., swollen, swelling; swollen with pride, puffed up; swollen with anger, incensed, enraged.
tumulo, āre, āvi, âtus, [tumulus], to bury, entomb.
tumulus, ūs, [tumûs], m., tumulûs, uproar, noise, bustle; an uprising, insurrection, rebellion.
tumulus, i, [tumûs], m., a mound of earth, hill, hillock; a mound of a tomb, grave, sepulcher.
tunc, adv., then, at that time.
tunica, ae, ūs, an undergarment, shirt, tunic.
turba, ae, ūs, confusion, uproar; a crowd, throng, multitude, crew, gang, pack.
turidus, a, um, [turba], adj., wild, confused, troubled, agitated.
turbô, âre, âvi, âtus, [turba], to disturb, agitate, throw into confusion, throw out of order; trouble, perplex, agitate.
turbô, inis, [turbô, verb], m., a whirlwind, hurricane; storm, tempest: whirl, spiral, twist.
turgeois, âre, — —, to swell out, swell.
turgidus, a, um, [turgûs], adj., swollen, inflated, turgid.
Turnus, i, m., a king of the Rutuli, in Italy, killed by Aeneas.
turpis, e, adj., foul, filthy, ugly; base, disgraceful, unseemly.
turpiter, [turpis], adv., disgracefully, in disgrace.
turris, is, ūs, a tower, turret.
turtur, urîs, m., the turledove.
tûs, túris, [tûs], m., incense, frankincense.
Tûscus, a, um, adj., Tuscan, Etruscan.
VOCABULARY

ulūδ, ārē, āvi, atus, to howl, shriek, bay.
ulva, ae, f., sedge grass.
umbra, ae, f., a shade, shadow; a shade, ghost of the dead.
unbōsus, a, um. [umbra], adj., shady.
ūmēns, entis, [part. āmeō], adj., damp, humid, moist, dewy.
ūmerus, i, m., the shoulder.
ūmidus, a, um, [ūmeō], adj., damp, dewy, moist, humid, of vapor, liquid.
ūmor, ōris, m., moisture, liquid, fluid.
unquam, adv., at any time, ever.
ūnā, [Ūnus], adv., together, at the same time, in company.
unciō, a, um, adj., hooked, crooked, curved, barbed, bent.
unda, ae, f., a wave, surge, billow, water.
unde, adv., whence; whence?
ūndēnī, ae, a, [for āundecēnī from āundecim], adj. num., eleven each, eleven.
undique, [unde + que], adv., from all sides, on all sides.
unghis, is, m., a nail, talon, claw.
unghula, ae, [unguis], f., a hoof.
unguō (ungō), ere, ūnxi, ūnectus, to smear or anoint.
ūnicus, a, um, [ūnus], adj., only, sole, just one; alone of its kind, unique.
ūnus, a, um, (gen. īus, dat. i), num. adj., one, a, an; = sōlus, alone, only.
urbe, is, f., a city.
urgeō, ēre, ursi, —, to press, push, drive, impel, force; burden, oppress, weigh down; press upon, follow up, pursue.
ūrna, ae, f., a jar, urn.
ūro, ere, uesti, īstus, to burn, burn up; vex, annoy, harass; pass, burn with passion, glow, be inflamed, be enamored.
ursa, ae, f., a she-bear, a bear.
ūsquam, adv., anywhere.
ūsque, adv., all the way, all along,

tūtēsia, ae, [tueor], f., a watching, care, protection; a keeper, guardian, protector.
tūtus, a, um, [part. tueor], adj., safe, secure, out of danger.
tūus, a, um, poss. pron., thy, thine, your, yours.
Tydidēs, ae, [Tydeus], m., the son of Tydeus, Dion-dē.
Tyndaris, idis, [Tyndarus], f., the daughter of Tyndarus, Helen.
Typhoēus, (trisyl.), eos, [Typhoēus], m., Typhoëus, a giant overthrown by the thunderbolts of Jove.
tyrannus, i, [rōs-], m., a king, ruler; a cruel ruler, a tyrant.
Tyrius, a, um, [Tyrus], adj., Tyrian.

U

ūber, eris, n., a teat or udder.
ūber, eris, adj., rich, fertile.
ubī, adv. rel., where, when; interrog., when? where? when?
ubī-que, adv., anywhere; everywhere.
ūdus, a, um, [for ūvidus from ūveō, to be wet], adj., wet, damp, moist, humid.
uliscor, i, ultus, to avenge one’s self on; take vengeance for or in behalf of some one, avenge.
Ulīxēs, is, ei or i, m., king of Íthaca, son of Laërtes.
ullus, a, um, adj., any; subs., any one.
ulumus, i, f., an elm-tree.
ultimus, a, um, [superl. of ulterior], adj., of place, furthest, most distant, remotest, last; of time, latest, last; of degree, extreme, utmost.
utor, ēris, [uliscor], m., an avenger.
ultra, adv. and prep., further, more, beyond.
ultrō, adv., on the other side, beyond; besides, too; of one’s self, of one’s own accord, spontaneously, voluntarily.
ululātus, ēs, [ululō], m., a howling, shrieking, wailing.
all the time; constantly, continually.

ventus, lus, [litor], m., use, employment, exercise, experience; enjoyment, society.

ut or uti, adv., how, in what manner, as; in comparisons, just as, as; of time, as, when; conj. w. subj., that, in order that; after vbs. of fearing, that not.

uter-que, utraque, utrumque, pron. adj., each, both.

uterus, i, m., the womb; child, offspring.

utilis, e, [litus], adj., useful, serviceable, profitable.

utilitas, atis, [utilis], f., use, profit, advantage, welfare.

utiliter, [utilis], adv., usefully, profitably, advantageously.

ut-num, conj., O that! would that!

itor, i, usu, to use, make use of, employ; enjoy.

utrique, [uterque], adv., on both sides.

utraque, [uterque], adv., in both directions, from side to side.

uva, ae, i., a grape, cluster of grapes.

uxor, oris, f., a wife.

vacca, ae, i., a cow, heifer.

vacō, ärē, āvī, ātus, to be empty, free from, without.

Vacūna, ae, f., the goddess of rural leisure, an old Sabine goddess.

Vacuūna, ae, [Vacūna], adj., of or belonging to Vacuna.

vacuus, a, um, [vacō], adj., empty, vacant, void, deserted.

vādō, ere, —, —, to go, walk, proceed, rush, advance.

vādum, i, n., a shallow, shoal; the bottom of the sea, the depths; the waves, the waters.

vaev, interj., woe! alas!

vāgitus, lūs, [vāglō, to wait], m., a waiving, crying.

vagor, āri, ātus, to stroll about, roam, wander, rove.

vagus, a, um, adj., rambling, roving, wandering; uncertain, fitful, inconstant.

valēns, entis, [part. valeō], adj., strong, powerful.

valēō, āre, āre, ātus, to be strong, able, avail, prevail; imperat., valē, farewell.

validus, a, um, [valeō], adj., stout, strong, staunch, vigorous, robust, sturdy.

vallēs (vallis), is, f., a vale, valley.

vālē, āre, āvī, ātus, [vāllum, a wall, rampart], to fortify with a rampart; to protect, defend.

valvae, ārum, f. pl., a pair of doors, folding doors.

vānus, a, um, adj., empty; idle, vain, fruitless, groundless, unmeaning; false, delusive, untrustworthy.

vapor, oris, m., steam, vapor; poet., fire.

varius, a, um, adj., variegated, many-colored; different, various, changing, ever-changing, diverse.

Varrō, ōnis, m., P. Terentius Varro Atacinus, a Roman poet, who translated into Latin verse the "Argonauts" of Apollonius Rhodius.

varus, a, um, adj., bent, crooked.

vāstātor, ōris, [vāstō], m., a devastator, ravager.

vāstō, āre, āvī, ātus, to make empty; lay waste, devastate, ravage.

vāstus, a, um, adj., empty; vast, immense, huge, enormous, mighty.

vātēs, is, m., f., a prophet, seer, soothsayer; a bard, a poet.

vāticinor, āri, ātus, [vātēs], to foretell, prophesy, forebode; warn as a prophet.

-vē, enclit. conj., or.

vehō, ere, vexi, vectus, to bear, carry, convey; pass. w. rate, to sail.

vel, [old imperat. of volō], conj., or; vel — vel, either — or.

vēlāmen, inis, [vēlō], n., a covering, robe, garment.

vēlō, ere, veli, velae, to pluck,
pull, tear away; pluck, pull or tear up.

cellus, eris, n., a fleece or skin, generally of a sheep; by meton., a sheep.

cīmō, āre, āvī, ātus, [cīlum], to cover, wrap, veil, envelop; bind around, crown; deck, adorn.

cūlō, ōcis, adj., swift, flying, fleet, rapid.

velum, I., n., a sail; a canvas, curtain; a veil or screen.

vel-ut, vel-uti, adv., even as, just as, as.

cēna, ae, f., a blood-vessel, vein; a vein of rock or metal.

vēnābulum, I., [vēnor], n., a hunting-spear.

venēficium, I., [venēnum + facĭō], n., a poisoning; magic, sorcery.

venēnifer, er, erum, [venēnum + ferō], adj., venomous.

venēnum, I., n., poison, venom; a charm, magical potion, incantation.

veneror, āri, ātus, to worship, venerate, adore.

venia, ae, f., favor, grace, indulgence.

venīō, ēre, vēni, venus, to come.

vēnor, āri, ātus, to hunt.

venter, tris, m., the belly, the maw, stomach; appetite.

ventīō, āre, āvī, —, [ventulus, dim. ventus], to toss in the air, to wave, sway.

ventus, I., m., the wind.

Venus, eris, f., Venus, the goddess of Love; the passion of love, love.

veprēs, is, m., a thorn bush, bramble bush.

vēr, vēris, n., the spring.

verbēna, ae, (usually in pl.), f., foliage for the altar, as olive, laurel, or myrtle; sacred boughs.

verber, eris, n., (used mostly in pl.), a lash, whip, scourge; a stroke, blow.

verberō, āre, āvī, ātus, [verber], to lash, beat, strike.

verbēsus, a, um, [verbērum], adj., wordy, verbose.

verbūm, I., n., a word; dare verba, to give mere words, to cheat.

verēcundus, a, um, [verēor], adj., bashful, shy, modest.

verendus, a, um, [part. verēor], adj., to be feared, venerable, reverend.

verēor, ēri, ētus, tr. and intr., to fear, be afraid of, be afraid.

Vergilius, I., m., P. Vergilius Maro, celebrated Roman poet.

vernō, āre, —, —, [ver], to appear like spring, be verdant; to bloom, grow young.

vērō, [vērus], adv., in truth, in fact, certainly; but indeed.

Verona, ae, f., a city in northern Italy, the birthplace of Catullus.

verō, ere, I., versus, to sweep, sweep over; sweep or drive along.

versō, āre, āvī, ātus, [freq. vertō], to turn, turn over, turn round, disturb, vex, agitate; in pass., to be engaged in, occupied with, to live.

versus, ēs, [vertō], m., a line, row; line of poetry, verse.

vertex, icis, [vertō], m., a whirlpool, eddy; the crown of the head, the head; the top, peak, summit of anything.

vertīgō, inis, [vertō], f., a turning round, whirling.

vertō, ere, I., versus, to turn, turn around, turn about; change, alter, transform.

vērum, [vērus], adv., truly; but, but yet, but indeed.

vērus, a, um, adj., true, genuine, real; subs., vērum, I., n., usually in pl., the truth.

vēscor, I., to feed upon.

vesper, eris and erī, [vesperō], m., the evening star; the west.

Vesta, ae, [Vestā], f., the daughter of Saturn, goddess of flocks and herds and of the household; in her temple the holy fire was kept constantly burning, attended by Vestal Virgins; she represents ancient purity and simplicity of life.

vestor, tra, trum, [for voster, from vōs], poss. pron., your.
vāstībulum, I., n., an entrance court, a vestibule, entrance.
vestigium, II., [vestīgō], n., a footstep, step; trace, print, impress; trace, sign, token.
vestīgō, āre, āvi, ātus, to search after, seek out.
vestis, is, f., clothing, vesture, attire, a garment, robe, dress.
vētō, āre, uī, itūs, to forbid, prohibit, hinder, prevent.
vētus, eris, adj., old; ancient; former.
vētustās, ālis, [vētus], f., old age; a long lapse or period of time, time.
vētustus, a, um, [vētus], adj., old, ancient.
vīa, ae, f., a way, path, road; a journey, voyage; an entrance, passage, way; a way, method, manner.
vibrō, āre, āvi, ātus, to set in motion, agitate, cause to flutter; quiver, vibrate, dart.
viciānis, ae, [viciānis], f., neighborhood, nearness, proximity.

viciānus, a, um, [vicius, a quarter of a city, a village], adj., near, neighboring, hard by, adjoining.
vicius, (gen., no nom.), vicēm, vice; pl. viciēs, vicēbus, f., change, interchange, succession; in vicēm, in viciēs, vicēbus, in turn, by turns.

victima, ae, f., an animal offered in sacrifice, a victim.
victor, āris, [vīcō], m., victor, conqueror; adj., victorious, conquering, exultant.
victōria, ae, [victor], f., victory, conquest.
victrix, icsis, [victor], adj., victorious, conquering.
vīctus, ūs, [vīvō], m., food, nourishment, support, living, sustenance.
videō, āre, vidi, visus, to see, perceive by the senses; of the mind, perceive, observe, reflect upon, consider, watch; in pass., be seen; more often seem; impers., seem best, fit, proper.
viduus, a, um, adj., bereft, destitute, without, empty; widowed, mateless.
vigeō, āre, uī, —, to thrive, flourish, grow strong.
vigilis, līs, [vigeō], adj., watchful, awake, wakeful, alert; w. ignem, perpetual, never dying; subs., a sentinel, watchman, guard.
vigilō, āre, āvi, ātus, [vīgīlī], to awake from sleep; watch, be watchful, on the alert.
vigor, ēris, [vigeō], m., vigor, strength, energy, life.
villa, ae, [prob. from vicula, dimin. vicus, a village], f., a country house, cottage, villa.
villōsus, a, um, [villus], adj., hairy, shaggy, rough.
villus, I, m., shaggy hair.
vimen, inis, [vieō, to weave], n., a pliant or limber twig or shoot.
vinciō, ire, vinxi, vincitus, to bind, tie, fetter; bind around, lace.
vincō, ēre, vici, victus, to conquer, overcome, defeat, vanquish, subdue, surpass, excel.
vinculum (vincium), [vincō], I, n., used chiefly in pl., a bond, chain, cable, fetter, cord, rope.
vindex, icsis, m. and f., a defender, protector, champion; avenger, punisher.
vindicō, ēre, āvi, ātus, [vīnex], to deliver, rescue, save.
vindicator, ae, [vindicō], f., a liberating rod by the touch of which a slave was freed; a protection, defense; revenge, punishment, redress.
vīnetum, I, [vinum], n., a vineyard.
vīnosus, a, um, [vinum], adj., fond of wine, wine-bibbing.
vīnum, I, n., wine.
viole, ae, f., a violet.
violentia, ae, [violentus], f., violence, fierceness.
viententus, a, um, [vis], adj., violent, boisterous, fierce.
violeō, ēre, āvi, ātus, [vis], to violate, injure, abuse, profane, defile.
viperā, ae, [vivus + parsīs], f., a snake, serpent.
VOCABULARY

vipereus, a, um, adj., of a viper or snake, snaky.
vir, i, m., a man; a husband; a hero.
vireō, ire, —, —, to be green.
virga, ae, f., a branch, bough, twig; a wand, staff.
virgineus, a, um, [virgō], adj., of a maiden, maiden’s, maidenly.
virginītās, ātis, [virgō], f., virginity, maidenhood.
virgō, inis, f., a maiden, virgin; a constellation, Virgo, the Virgin.
viridis, e, [vīreō], adj., green, verdant; fresh, blooming youth.
virilis, e, [vīr], adj., of a man, manly, brave, heroic.
virtūs, ātis, [vīr], f., manliness, courage, strength, excellence, virtue, valor, brave or heroic deed.
virus, i, m., poison, venom.
vīs, vis, f., force, strength, power; destructive force, violence.
viscātus, a, um, [vīscō, to smear], adj., smeared with bird-lime, limed.
viscus, eris, n., generally in pl., the internal organs, the vitals; flesh; the bowels of the earth.
vīsō, ere, ī, us, [freq. videō], to view closely, get a good look at, examine.
vīta, ae, f., life, existence.
vītālis, e, [vīta], adj., vital, life-giving.
vītō, āre, āvi, ātus, [vītum], to injure, weaken, taint, corrupt, infect.
vītōsus, a, um, [vītum], adj., defective, faulty.
vītis, is, f., a vine.
vītum, i, [from root in videō, to weave, twist], n., a fault, defect, blemish, break.
vītō, āre, āvi, ātus, to avoid, shun.
vitreus, a, um, [vītrum], adj., glassy, clear, bright, shining.
vītrum, i, [root vid in videō], n., glass.
vītta, ae, [vīdeō, to weave], f., a band, chaplet, fillet.
vītulus, i, m., a he-calf, a young bullock.
vīvāx, ācis, [vīvō], adj., tenacious of life, long-lived.
vīvō, ere, vixi, victus, to live, be alive; live on, pass one’s life, live.
vīvus, a, um, [vīvus], adj., alive, living; green, fresh; of water, running, fresh; of fire, burning; of rocks, living, in natural condition, unheaven; subs. m., a living man.
vīx, adv., hardly, scarcely, barely, with difficulty.
vōcālia, e, [vōx], adj., vocal, speaking; singing, tuneful.
vocō, āre, āvi, ātus, to call or summon; call upon, invoke; call by name, name.
vōlātus, ās, (only in abl. sing. and acc. and abl. pl.), [vōlō], m., a flying, flight.
vōlās, entis, [part. vōlō], adj., willing, ready.
vōlitō, āre, āvi, ātus, [freq. vōlō], to fly or flit about.
vōlō, velle, volui, —, to will, be willing; command, ordain, order, will; wish, desire.
vōlō, āre, āvi, ātus, to fly, used of a bird or any swiftly moving object in the air.
vōlūbilis, e, [vōlō], adj., turning, rolling, revolving.
volucer, crīs, cre, [vōlō], adj., flying, winged, swift; subs., volucris, is, f., a bird.
volūmen, inis, [vōlō], n., a coil, fold, roll; revolution.
voluntās, ātis, [vōlō], f., wish, desire, consent.
voluptās, ātis, [vōlō], f., pleasure, joy, delight.
vōlūtō, āre, āvi, ātus, [freq. vōlō], to roll back and forth; of mental action, ponder, reflect, consider.
vōlō, ere, ī, vōlūtus, to roll, roll along, sweep along; roll round, revolve; pass. w. reflex. meaning, roll along, glide.
vōmer, eris, m., a plowshare.
vomō, ere, ui, itus, to pour forth, discharge, vomit, belch forth.
VOCABULARY

vōtum, I, [voveō], n., a vow, solemn promise, supplication, prayer; a votive offering.

voveō, ōre, ōvī, vōtus, to vow; compare vōtum, (a thing) vowed.

vōx, vōcis, [vocō], f., the voice, cry, sound, tone; a word, saying, speech.

Vulcānius, a, um, [Vulcānus], adj., of Vulcan, Vulcanian.

Vulcānus, I, m., Vulcan, the god of fire, the son of Jupiter and Venus; (meton.) fire.

vulgō, āre, āvi, ātus, [vulgus], to spread abroad, make known, divulge, herald, publish.

vulgō, [vulgus], adv., everywhere, all around, on all sides.

vulgus, I, n., the multitude, the people, the common people; a mass, throng, crowd, herd; the rabble, mob.

vulnerō, āre, āvi, ātus, [vulnus], to wound, hurt, injure.

vulnus, eris, n., a wound, hurt, injury.

vultur, uris, m., a vulture.

vultus, īs, m., the countenance, visage, features, aspect, expression, air, mien.

X

Xanthus, I, [Xanthos], m., a river in Troas.

Z

Zephyrus, I, [Zēphūs], m., the west wind.

smaragdus, I, [σμάραγδος], m. and f., a green precious stone; emerald, jasper.

sōna, ae, [sōna], f., a woman’s girdle, belt; zone, region.
THE BORROWER WILL BE CHARGED AN OVERDUE FEE IF THIS BOOK IS NOT RETURNED TO THE LIBRARY ON OR BEFORE THE LAST DATE STAMPED BELOW. NON-RECEIPT OF OVERDUE NOTICES DOES NOT EXEMPT THE BORROWER FROM OVERDUE FEES.

Harvard College Widener Library
Cambridge, MA 02138  (617) 495-2413

[Stamp: WIDENER FEB 00 1998 CANCELLED]

[Stamp: WIDENER MAR 01 93 2004 BOOK DUE CANCELLED]

[Stamp: WIDENER MAR 25 1998 BOOK DUE CANCELLED]

[Stamp: WIDENER JUN 01 1998]